ART. II. The object of the said convention being thus fulfilled, that convention is hereby declared to be cancelled and annulled, save and except the second article of the same, which has already been carried into execution by the Commissioners appointed under the said convention, and save and except so much of the third article of the same as relates to the definitive list of claims, and has already likewise been carried into execution by the said Commissioners.

ART. III. The said sum of twelve hundred and four thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars shall be paid at Washington to such person or persons as shall be duly authorized, on the part of the United States, to receive the same, in two equal payments, as follows:

The payment of the first half to be made twenty days after official notification shall have been made by the Government of the United States to his Britannic Majesty's minister in the said United States of the ratification of the present convention by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof; and the payment of the second half to be made on the first day of August, 1827.

ART. IV. The above sums being taken as a full and final liquidation of all claims whatsoever arising under the said decision and convention, both the final adjustment of those claims and the distribution of the sums so paid by Great Britain to the United States shall be made in such manner as the United States alone shall determine, and the Government of Great Britain shall have no further concern or liability therein.

ART. V. It is agreed that, from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention, the joint commission appointed under the said convention of St. Petersburg of the twelfth of July, 1822, shall be dissolved, and, upon the dissolution thereof, all the documents and papers in possession of the said commission relating to claims under that convention shall be delivered over to such person or persons as shall be duly authorized, on the part of the United States, to receive the same; and the British Commissioner shall make over to such person or persons so authorized all the documents and papers (or authenticated copies of the same where the originals cannot conveniently be made over) relating to claims under the said convention which he may have received from his Government for the use of the said commission, conformably to the stipulations contained in the third article of the said convention.

ART. VI. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in London in six months from this date, or sooner if possible.

In witness whereof, the plenipotentiaries aforesaid, by virtue of their respective full powers, have signed the same, and have affixed thereunto the seals of their arms.

Done at London this thirteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six.

[L. S.] ALBERT GALLATIN.
[L. S.] WILLIAM HUSKISSON.
[L. S.] HENRY UNWIN ADDINGTON.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 442. [2D SESSION.

BRITISH COLONIAL TRADE.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 22, 1826.

To the House of Representatives of the United States:

I communicate to the House of Representatives a report from the Secretary of State, with a copy of the three articles, marked A, requested by the resolution of the House of the 19th instant. The third of those articles relating to a subject upon which the negotiation between the two governments is yet open, the communication of all the other documents relating to it is reserved to a future period, when it may be closed.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, December 22, 1826.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 21, 1826.

The Secretary of State, to whom the President has referred the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 19th instant, requesting him to furnish the House with "a copy of the three articles (marked A) referred to in the protocol of the third conference of the American and British plenipotentiaries on the 5th of February, 1824," has the honor to report herewith a copy of the three articles requested. The first two of those articles relate only to the British colonial trade, and it was a clerical omission that they were not among the other documents relating to that subject communicated by the President to Congress at the commencement of the present session. The third article relates to another subject which is still under negotiation between the Governments of Great Britain and the United States, and the propriety is therefore submitted of its being communicated at this time to the House of Representatives.

All which is respectfully submitted.

H. CLAY.

A.

I. Whereas by the trade as it now exists under the respective laws and regulations of the two high contracting parties, between certain enumerated ports of his Britannic Majesty's colonies in America and the West Indies and the ports of the United States, discriminating duties and charges are reciprocally imposed and levied upon the vessels and cargoes of each nation in the ports of the other as aforesaid; and whereas it is the desire of the contracting parties, for the reciprocal advantage of their subjects and citizens, to abolish all such discriminating duties and charges: It is therefore agreed, that upon the vessels of the United States admitted by law into all and every one of his Britannic Majesty's colonial ports as aforesaid, and upon any goods, wares, and merchandise lawfully imported therein in the said vessels, no other or higher duties of tonnage or impost, and no other charges of any kind, shall be levied or exacted than upon British vessels, including all vessels of the colonies themselves, or upon the like goods, wares, or merchandise imported into the said colonial ports from any other port or place whatever, including Great Britain and the colonial ports themselves; and that upon the vessels of Great Britain admitted by law into all and every one of the ports of the United States, and upon any goods, wares, and merchandise lawfully imported therein in the said vessels, no other or higher duties of tonnage or impost, and no other charges of any kind, shall be levied or exacted than upon vessels of the United States, including vessels of each and every one of the said States, or upon the like goods, wares, or merchandise imported into the United States from any other port or place whatever.

II. For the more perfect fulfilment of the intentions of the high contracting parties, as expressed in the foregoing article, it is agreed that the trade to which it has reference shall continue on the footing upon which it now stands by the laws and regulations of the two countries respectively, with the exception of the removal by Great Britain of the duties specified in the schedule C of the act of Parliament passed on the twenty-fourth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-two, in the third year ment passed on the fifth day of August in the same year and reign, chapter one hundred and nineteen, of his present Majesty's reign, chapter forty-four, and those specified in schedule B of the act of Parliaand of the removal by the United States of all additional duties of tonnage in the light of foreign tonnage duty, and of all additional duties of impost in the light of foreign impost, existing against British vessels and merchandise coming to the United States from any of the colonial ports aforesaid; and the high contracting parties pledge themselves to remove reciprocally the duties herein recapitulated, as well as all other discriminating duties and charges, of whatever kind they may be, intending by this and the foregoing article to be removed, it being the desire and intention of the parties to place the aforesaid trade upon a footing of perfect equality in all respects.

III. It is agreed by the high contracting parties that the navigation of the river St. Lawrence shall be at all times free to the citizens of the United States, as to the subjects of Great Britain, in its whole breadth and length to and from the sea, and that the vessels belonging to either party shall not be stopped, visited, or subjected to any let, impediment, or hindrance whatsoever by the other; nor shall they be liable to the payment of any duty whatever for this right of passage on the said river. But respecting such moderate and reasonable tolls as either party may claim and appear entitled to, the high contracting parties agree to treat at a future day, that the principles regulating the same may be adjusted to mutual satisfaction.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 443. [2D SESSION.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS OF MINISTERS AT PANAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 22, 1826.

To the House of Representatives of the United States:

I transmit to the House of Representatives a report from the Secretary of State, with sundry documents containing the information requested by two resolutions of the House of the 15th instant, relating to the proceedings of the Congress of ministers which assembled last summer at Panama. The occasion is taken to communicate, at the same time, two other despatches from the minister of the United States to the Mexican Confederation, one of which should have been communicated at the last session of Congress, but that it was then accidentally mislaid, and the other having relation to the same subject.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, December 26, 1826.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 21, 1826.

The Secretary of State, to whom the President has referred two resolutions of the House of Representatives, adopted on the 15th instant, by the first of which the President is requested to furnish to the "House any information in his possession, which, in his opinion, may be communicated without detriment to the public service, concerning the nature of the stipulations contained in the treaty of league and perpetual friendship, the convention respecting contingents, and the special convention and compact which were concluded and signed at Panama on the 15th July last," and, by the second, to communicate "any information in his possession relative to the organization, proceedings, and adjournment of the Congress lately held at Panama, which, in his opinion, may be communicated without detriment to the public interest," has the honor now to report to the President:

1. Copy of a despatch from Mr. Poinsett, (No. 53,) under date the 20th August, 1826, with the accompanying documents.

2. An extract from a despatch from the same minister, (No. 55,) under date the 26th August, 1826, with the accompanying documents.

3. Copy of a despatch from the same minister, (No. 56,) under date the 6th September, 1826. Extracts.

4. Copy of a despatch from the same minister, (No. 58,) under date the 23d September, 1826.

5. Copy of a despatch from the same minister, (No. 59,) under date the 4th October, 1826, with the accompanying document; and

6. Copy of a note from Mr. Salazar, under date the 20th day of November, 1826.

These papers and documents supply all the information in the possession of the Department of State called for by both the above-mentioned resolutions.

During the last session of Congress a despatch from Mr. Poinsett was accidentally mislaid. In order to replace it a note was addressed to him, and a copy of the last despatch was obtained. It is laid before the President, at this time, for his decision upon the propriety of his taking this occasion to communicate it to the House of Representatives. With the same view, a copy of a despatch from Mr. Poinsett, (No. 43,) under date the 6th day of May last, is reported to the President.

All which is respectfully submitted.

H. CLAY.

No. 53.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, Mexico, August 20, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to send herewith the translation of a note received late last night from the Secretary of State ad interim, together with the Gazette to which it alludes.

The Government received this intelligence only yesterday, and I doubt whether the terms of the treaties and conventions concluded at Panama are yet known here. Nothing relating to them has yet transpired.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

[Translation.]

PALACE, Mexico, August 19, 1826.

MOST EXCELLENT SIR: The most excellent President of this Republic, desirous that your excellency should be gratified with the intelligence, no less important than flattering, contained in the Gazette Extraordinary of to-day, and that you should communicate the same to your Government, has directed that ten copies of it should be remitted to your excellency; and the undersigned, while he fulfils with pleasure this supreme order, has the honor to renew to your excellency the assurances of his distinguished consideration.

JUAN JOSÉ ESPINOSA DE LOS MONTEROS.

His Excellency J. R. POINSETT,
Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary from the United States of North America.

[Translation.]

Extraordinary Gazette of the Supreme Government of the Mexican Federation.

The official document, which, by order of the most excellent President, is copied below, imparts the most glorious political event that posterity will ever celebrate in the annals of the new American States, which, intimately connected by the indissoluble bonds of fraternity, met together in the famous Assembly of Panama to sustain their independence against their ancient oppressor.

We refer with pleasure to the plain tenor of the document itself, without making a mystery of any of its clauses; nor, by pompous annunciations, depriving the inhabitants of the happy Anahuac of the ineffable pleasure of regarding themselves the honor which, in so happy an event, has fallen to the lot of the Federal Republic of the United Mexican States. Blessed be Providence, that has deigned so bountifully to extend to them its favors; praise and immortal glory to the learned, zealous, active, and patriotic ministers plenipotentiaries of that assembly, who have discharged with so much ability the most high, serious, and important object of their mission, and to the Governments of the States concerned, who have evinced so much judgment in their delicate choice!

"Legation of Mexico to the Assembly of the New American States.

"MOST EXCELLENT SIR: We arrived at this port to-day in the brig-of-war Constante, having left Panama the 21st of the past month, and have the satisfaction of announcing to your excellency that, on the 15th of the same month, were concluded and signed a treaty of league and perpetual friendship between the Republics represented, a convention respecting contingents, a secret convention, and an agreement which, within a few days, we shall have the honor of delivering, personally, into the hands of your excellency.

"In conformity with this agreement, the Assembly of Plenipotentiaries is transferred to the village of Tacubaya, there to continue its sessions; and, for this purpose, a minister of each Republic proceeds to Mexico, whilst the others have gone to communicate what has been done by the Congress to their respective Governments. His excellency Don Pedro Gual, minister for Colombia, will leave here for the capital within three days. His excellency Don Antonio Larrazabal, minister for Central America, has arrived in company with us, and likewise proceeds to Mexico. His excellency Don Manuel Tudela, minister for Peru, and the secretaries of that legation, and of that of Central America, are expected in a few days in the brig Treshermanos for the same purpose.

"All which we communicate to your excellency that you may be pleased to arrange what you think expedient, in order that the plenipotentiaries may find the succors they require, and that every possible facility may be afforded them, suited to the dignity of our Republic, and likewise that this interesting intelligence may be laid before the most excellent President.

"May God preserve your excellency many years. Acapulco, August 15, 1826.

"JOSÉ MARIA MICHELENA.
"JOSÉ DOMINGUEZ.

"His Excellency the MINISTER OF STATE AND OF INTERIOR AND EXTERIOR RELATIONS."

NOTE.—By a private letter of the 15th of this month we learn the following, viz :

Ministers Plenipotentiaries of the Assembly.

For Colombia: Señor Gual, who left Acapulco on the 16th instant for the capital. Señor Briseño, who returned with the treaties.

For Peru: Señor Tudela, who will arrive at Acapulco in eight or ten days. Señor Bidaurre, who returned with the treaties.

For Guatemala: Señor Larrazabal, who comes with our ministers plenipotentiaries. Señor Molina, who returned with the treaties.

The minister of Holland comes via Vera Cruz.

The minister of England will not come until November.

(Tacubaya is two leagues from this capital.)

Extract of a letter (No. 55) from Mr. Poinsett to Mr. Clay, dated Legation of the United States of America, Mexico, August 26, 1826.

"The plenipotentiaries from Panama have not yet reached this city. It is now confidently asserted that those from Mexico were instructed to propose the removal of the Congress to Yucatan, or some other point in these States. Upon their arrival I shall endeavor to learn the precise nature of the secret convention concluded at Panama. In all probability it relates to the invasion of Cuba and Porto Rico.

"I send herewith a translation of the speech of the President of the Congress of Panama on the installation of that assembly."

PANAMA.

Installation of the American Congress the 22*d of June*, 1826.

This day may be called the day of America. From this day the people enjoy freely their political liberty, and each individual conforms to his social compacts. A strict and eternal bond unites the four Republics of Colombia, Guatemala, Mexico, and Peru. All engage mutually to assist each other against their foreign oppressors, and against those who may attempt to infringe the rights they have recovered. To preserve a perfect equality the Presidency was decided by lot, as was the order of signatures. The names of the most excellent Señors Pedro Gual, Minister of State and of Exterior Relations of Colombia; Antonio Larrazabal, Penitentiary of the Holy Cathedral Church of Guatemala; Don Manuel Lorenzo de Vidaurre, President of the Supreme Court of Justice of Peru, and decorated with the medal of Benemaritos of his country; Don José de Michelena, Brigadier General in the Armies of Mexico; Pedro Briceño Mendez, Brigadier General in the Armies of Colombia, and of the Liberators of Venezuela and Cundinamarca; Pedro Molina, Plenipotentiary from Central America; Don Manuel Perez Tudela, Attorney General of the Supreme Court of Justice of Peru; and Don José Dominguez, Regent of the Tribunal of Justice of Guanaxuato, will be repeated forever with respect, as the most eminent defenders of our liberty and independence. Blessed be the God of Justice, who, in recompense of our toils and slavery, has vouchsafed to us forever the means of being happy.

Address of Don Manuel Lorenzo de Vidaurre to the Plenipotentiaries of the American States assembled at Panama.

The inhabitants of the Americas which were formerly Spanish will cover themselves with infamy in the eyes of all known nations if they fail to promulgate such wise, equitable, and just laws as will insure their present felicity, and that of their descendants for many generations. Restored to the state of nature, free and independent, in perfect possession of all their rights, and of that free will given to them by the Sublime Author of all beings, they are more perfect than in the early days of the creation. Then man could not be prudent, because he had no experience; he could not avoid evil, because he knew it not; he was incapable of enjoyment, because he was ignorant of pain or pleasure. Now, in the exercise of his perfected faculties, he distinguishes that which is justice and that which is injustice; the useful and agreeable from the pernicious and troublesome; security from danger; the fruition of continued moderate pleasures from delights momentary though intense. The overthrow of a thousand empires, the flux and reflux of riches throughout all parts of the known world, the destruction of some cities and the elevation of others, the rise and fall of States, all are lessons of which he may profit, all are rules offered to him for his present conduct.

Among the many physical, moral, and political revolutions which history relates and philosophers have examined, our own is unexampled. Dynasties succeeded each other in China from the time of Fo-hi until the Tartar seized the throne; the Egyptians number three hundred and forty-one generations to the days of Lethon; the Persians succeeded the Medes, as these had succeeded the Assyrians; the Romans took the place of all; a cloud of locusts sallies forth from the North and takes possession of the South of Europe; the infant Henry and Columbus discover a new world; Cortez, Pizarro, and other criminal adventurers dethrone sovereigns, and seize upon a fourth part of the globe; human nature has not advanced; she is every day more a slave to the shameful passions of a few, and an accomplice in their crimes by a stupid passive obedience, which blinds her to a sense of her degradation, and almost causes her to forget her noble origin; dynasties are changed, but not the vices of government. Even when the Greek, the Roman, the Carthagenian of antiquity, appear devoted to liberty, they are unsteady, inconstant, suspicious, envious, discontented with their own territories; great warriors, but bad citizens. I only see in them vices under different aspects, and a chain of evils and of misfortunes. Let them rejoice in Marathon and Salamis, still the Athenian is panic struck at hearing that the walls of the Pireus are doomed to destruction, and to be levelled with the earth; the sons of Thebes weep over their fallen country; the Emilian sheds tears in seeing Carthage in ashes, because it prognosticates that barbarians are to sack Rome; her precious monuments will be delivered over to the flames, and her famished sons will rush through her streets seeking for bread or death. The time had not yet come when men were to be happy. The sublime theory of rights and obligations had not yet been discovered—countries were defended, but not individuals.

I look upon the English as the first who labored for the rights of man. Their ancient charter, extorted by force from John Santerre, and their progress through several centuries, to the time of William the Third, show that we ought to consider them as the discoverers of the great political system. The Anglo-American must confess that the lights he received from his fathers directed him in his struggle, and conducted him to the haven where he reposes under the shade of the tree of just and moderate liberty.

Our situation, however, is still more fortunate. We have before us, in pictures perfectly executed, the errors and the knowledge, the virtues and the vices, of seventy-two centuries. The union of the Swiss, the constancy of the Dutch, the prudence of the North Americans, the atrocities of the French revolution, the parties of the Belgic provinces, and even our own, are models which we are to keep in view, that we may follow the examples of some and detest those of others.

The great American Congress, which is to be a council in great conflicts, a faithful interpreter of treaties, a mediator in domestic disputes, and charged with the formation of our new international law, finds itself invested with all the powers necessary to accomplish the noble, grand, and singular object for which it is convoked. All the precious materials have been collected beforehand. The whole world is about to witness our labors, and to examine them with deliberation. From the first sovereign to the last inhabitant of the Austral regions, there is not one indifferent to our task. This, perhaps, may be the last experiment that will be tried to ascertain whether mankind is capable of being happy. Fellow laborers, the field of glory has been laid open to us by Bolivar, San Martin, O'Higgins, Gaudalupe, and many other heroes, superior to Hercules and Theseus. Our names are to be written either with immortal praise or eternal opprobrium. Let us elevate ourselves above a thousand millions of inhabitants, and may a noble pride inspire us, assimilating us to the Deity himself on that day when he gave the first laws to the universe.

Warmed by a divine fire, and fixing my eyes steadily on the Author of the universe, the most enormous difficulties appear to me trivial. Few, but solid, are the bases on which our confederation is to be founded. Peace with all the world; respect to the established Governments of Europe, although they be diametrically opposite to those generally adopted in our America; a free commerce with all nations, and a great diminution of duties in favor of those which have recognized us; religious toleration towards such as observe different rites from those which we have established by our several constitutions. Ah! nearly thirty-three millions of victims sacrificed by fanaticism from the time of the Hebrews to the beginning of the present century! These teach us to be humane, pacific, and compassionate, even towards those who walk in very different paths. Let the stranger come; whatever may be his mode of worship, he will be admitted, respected, protected, if his morality, which is true religion, is not contrary to that taught by our Christ. Let them be our masters in agriculture and the arts; let the sad and despairing countenance of the African, oppressed with the chains of force and power, disappear from our fields; let him see at his side a man of that color which he had believed a mark of superiority. He begins to be rational when he perceives that he is distinguished in nothing from other men. Immortal Pitt! eloquent Fox! interrupt for a moment your repose, lift your heads from the tomb, and behold with admiration that the countries formerly enslaved are those which most venerate your philanthropic maxims.

With respect to ourselves, there are two terrible hidden rocks—one, the desire of aggrandizement of some States at the cost and to the injury of others; the second, the risk that some ambitious man may aspire to tyrannize over his fellow men and enslave them. I fear both cases as much as I despise the threats of the feeble Spaniards. I cannot extinguish the passions, nor would it be well to extinguish them. That man forever aspiring to something above him—that man never content with what he possesses—he has ever been unjust, and shall we convert him suddenly to a love of justice? I trust so. He has experienced the ravages caused by extravagant desires.

Sully and Henry the Fourth formed the project of a tribunal, in order to prevent, in Europe, the first of these dangers. In our days Gordon wrote a treatise upon the same subject. This Diet realizes the praiseworthy intentions of the Kings and of philosophers. Let us avoid war by reducing everything to mediations. The effect of war is conquest; one State is augmented by reducing that of the vanquished. Montesquieu explained what it really was; Debonaire what it ought to be. Napoleon, by every fresh victory, acquired new territories for France. An arrow cast into our fields or mountains will be an horrid sound, which will be heard throughout the continent and over all the islands. And about what shall we dispute? Our productions are the growth of every soil; our territories are immense; our ports secure and excellent. One Republic need not envy the other. Will the shepherd of a thousand sheep go forth to rob the little flock of his neighbor? What injustice! The Diet will not consent to it.

As it frequently happens that wars spring from alliances, it appears that America will only enter into them with the common consent of all the contracting parties. I suspend my opinion, because that would be to prejudge the decisions.

The second danger is provided for by very simple rules. First, let the confederated Governments guaranty each other's liberty and independence. Second, never let an individual be intrusted with more power than what is necessary to accomplish the purpose for which it was granted. Third, the greater the power the shorter the time it ought to be enjoyed, if this is compatible with its intent. Fourth, that he to whom power is confided be made to depend upon that part of the nation which is disarmed. Fifth, not to maintain standing armies, except in time of actual war. Sixth, to avoid this dreadful evil, irreconcilable with the domestic tranquillity of society, by every means in our power, and which honor and prudence dictate.

It does not escape me that, in a corner of the Escurial or of Aranjuez, plans are forming for new expeditions—an event I deem almost impossible. The history of Spain furnishes us with proofs. Could Philip II, his son, or grandson, subject Holland? Could Philip IV recover Portugal? Could Catalonia have been restored had it not been for the generosity of France? Has Gibraltar returned into the hands of the Spaniards? Has Jamaica been restored? The history of treaties may be called that of the renunciation of Spain. What was gained in Pavia and San Quintin was lost in that of Vervins, Westphalia, the Pyrenees, Nineguen, Aix-la-Chapelle, and all that have been concluded up to the present day. The Floridas, which were acquired by that of Paris, the United States compelled her to cede by force.

Let us call to mind some circumstances. Philip the Second consented that his troops should live at free quarters, and drive the Dutch to desperation. Charles the Second had to take up loans at 15 per cent., and to sell the vice royalties of Peru and Mexico to carry on his wars. This was when the sun never went down in the dominions of the Kings of Spain, and when they were obeyed implicitly. Of what importance are they now, without colonies, without internal union, and the peninsula garrisoned by an hundred thousand French? I am well aware in what manner the expedition against us was formed which sailed in Cadiz in the year 1820. In that were employed the indemnities paid by the French, the private purse of the King, and their last resources. All have been exhausted. There are no vessels; the last rotten hulks have been sent to the Havana. There are no arms, nor any disposition on the part of the Spaniard to come and perish in these countries by the lance or the rigor of the climate.

It is not my wish that we persuade ourselves to disarm; quite the contrary. Let our land and naval forces be increased; but do not let this be done that they may remain in inaction in garrison. Let us strike a blow against this obstinate nation which shall make her tremble. To wait until she attacks is to wait for the Messiah; it is to be eternally armed. Let us compel our enemy to abandon his rashness and caprice. All Europe disapproves his conduct. Even the Princes of the house of Bourbon do not flatter him on this subject. No nation feels an interest that Spain should continue the war. The general wish is for peace. Without this, the uniform course of commerce is frequently interrupted, to the great prejudice of all industrious and commercial nations. How different was the position of England when she recognized the independence of the United States. May the prudent English lead the blind Spaniards!

So long as he resists the mediation of those Powers that protect us, let the products of his soil and manufactures of every sort be entirely prohibited. Let them be confiscated wherever they may be found; and let those who may be convicted of having broken a law which we are compelled to adopt lose the cargo.

Destroy completely the manufactures of Valencia and Barcelona. Without a market, let the industry of Spain be paralyzed. Let Ferdinand the Seventh be persuaded that if, by withholding his recognition, he compels us to incur prodigious expenses by maintaining armies, he likewise destroys the remnant of a miserable kingdom, torn to pieces as it is by discord, and prostrated under the yoke of a foreign nation.

If ever he was accessible to reason founded in strict justice; if he can persuade himself that ill can he recover what he knew not how to preserve; if he be convinced that he has in the Americas neither factions nor places of asylum, then the feeling American would express himself in a different manner. We never will buy our independence. The name of Liberti is shocking to us. We are constituted into States, with rights equal to those possessed by the European. We are men voluntarily united in society, and subject only to those compacts which, in the exercise of our free will, we have formed. If Ferdinand the Seventh recognizes them, let him enter into a generous reconciliation which is offered him. Let us forget the immense evils he has occasioned us, and the period of peace be that of the sincerest union. We continue the war against our inclination and against our character; if not dishonorably, we will terminate it with the liveliest pleasure.

But, gentlemen, this recognition is not the circumstance which most interests us. Holland became very wealthy and achieved conquests before she was acknowledged. The Swiss formed alliances with the sovereigns of Europe before the house of Austria recognized them. The existence of a State does not depend upon being recognized; that serves only to open foreign relations. The existence of a nation depends upon its interior political organization. Let us possess that, so that it may be the interest of the whole world to hold communication with us. Let us preserve our dignity; let us not admit foreigners who do not come authorized in due diplomatic form; let us not consent that other flags shall be displayed in our ports than those of the Kingdoms and Republics where ours are admitted.

Above all, let us form one family; let the names which distinguished our respective countries be at an end, and let us adopt the general one of brothers; let us carry on commerce without obstacles and without prohibitions; let American goods pass every custom-house unexamined; let us give to each other continued proofs of confidence, disinterestedness, and sincere friendship; let us form one code of public law, which may become the admiration of the civilized world. By that, an injury done to one State is understood to be done to all; as, in a well organized society, what is committed against one citizen interests the rest of the Republic. Let us solve the problem of which is the best of Governments; each individual enjoying, in ours, the greatest portion of good, and the nation the most perfect prosperity, it is beyond doubt that which reaches the climax of that happiness which human nature is capable of enjoying.

And when, having concluded our labors, we retire to our homes, surrounded by our sons and grandsons, let us take the youngest of them in our arms, and, lifting him up as an offering to the Supreme Being, our cheeks bathed in rivers of tears, let us make him, in his innocent language, pronounce a thanksgiving for the immense benefits we have received from His sovereign justice. Let the Greek boast of his deeds in having left Troy in ashes; the representatives of the Republics may glory in having promulgated laws which provide for universal peace with all nations, and the internal felicity of those States which have this day met together, and which will endure to the end of ages.

MANUEL DE VIDAURRE.

PANAMA, June 22, 1826; (First of the great Diet of America.)

Extracts of a letter (No. 56) from Mr. Poinsett to Mr. Clay, dated Legation of the United States, Mexico, September 6, 1826.

I saw the Mexican deputies to the Congress of Panama this morning for the first time since their return.

One of the articles of agreement between the new States is, that whenever the safety of America shall require a large force to be kept on foot, the expense shall be defrayed by all parties.

A meeting of the plenipotentiaries of the allied Republics is to take place once in every year, in the month of September, so long as the common war continues, and every two years in time of peace. The plenipotentiaries are to remain in the place agreed upon for three months, which term may be prolonged for two months more, at the end of which period the sessions may be renewed; but, during the war, these plenipotentiaries cannot leave the territory of the Republic wherein the meetings are held, so that they may meet together immediately if any extraordinary circumstance should require it.

The Congress will continue its negotiations in Tacubaya so soon as the ministers arrive who carried the treaties from Panama to their respective Governments. (Eight months is the time fixed for exchanging these ratifications; six will probably elapse before these plenipotentiaries reach Mexico.)

The following is the substance of an additional article of the treaty of union, league, and perpetual confederation concluded and signed at Panama: "Whereas the contracting parties, desiring ardently to live at peace with all the nations of the universe, by avoiding all motives of misunderstanding which might arise from the exercise of the legitimate rights in peace and war, have agreed, and hereby agree, that, immediately on the ratification of the present treaty, they will proceed to fix, by common agreement, all those points, rules, and principles which are to govern their conduct in both cases; for which purpose they will renew their invitation to the neutral and friendly Powers, that, if they deem it expedient, they may take an active part in these negotiations, and may be present, by means of their plenipotentiaries, in order to adjust, conclude, and sign such treaty or treaties as may be made for so important an object."

It would appear from this article that, although the sessions of the Congress of Panama have been removed to Tacubaya, the invitation is to be renewed to the neutral and friendly Powers. At all events, our plenipotentiaries need not be here before the month of February next.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries told me that they found no difficulty to induce a majority of the deputies of the Congress of Panama to remove to Tacubaya.

The Isthmus is so sickly that they were all glad to remove from Panama.

I adverted, in the course of conversation, to the very extraordinary sentiments contained in Vidaurre's speech on the opening of the Congress. They assured me that Vidaurre never delivered that discourse, but published it without the knowledge of his colleagues; that, on the following day, they, the Mexican plenipotentiaries, remonstrated, verbally, both against the publication of that discourse and against the sentiments it contained, and the Colombian plenipotentiaries delivered in a written protest to the same effect.

I suggested the propriety of publishing a notice of what took place on that occasion, as the whole tenor of Vidaurre's discourse is calculated to produce an unfavorable impression. I believe this will be done. Might it not be well to do so in our papers?

I shall probably learn the whole of the proceedings at Panama in a few days, and I will continue to send the information as I collect it.

Mr. Poinsett to Mr. Clay.

No. 58.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, Mexico, September 23, 1826.

SIR: I have been assured that, although the present condition of the islands of Cuba and Puerto Rico was considered by the American plenipotentiaries at Panama to be incompatible with the safety of these countries, and the policy of subduing them by force formed a frequent topic of conversation in that Assembly, still no decisive measures with respect to them were resolved upon, nor are they mentioned in the secret convention concluded between the Spanish American States.

The plenipotentiaries were probably deterred from acting upon this very important subject, both by the language which has been held by the President with regard to these islands, and by the inability of the Governments of Mexico and Colombia at this time to undertake any expensive expedition. The American plenipotentiaries at Panama followed in their discussions the order of matters as laid down in General Bolivar's proclamation. The defence of these countries formed the first and most important subject of their deliberations, and they founded the basis of their system on the ground that Spain had lost the means of protecting or holding her American colonies at St. Vincent's and Trafalgar, where her fleets were beaten and destroyed; that those disastrous defeats and the subsequent events of her revolutions having almost entirely annihilated her maritime power, the most obvious method of defending the Americas will be to augment their naval forces, so as to enable them to intercept and destroy on the ocean any expedition that might be sent by Spain against them.

On this reasoning the offensive and defensive treaty between the Spanish American States is formed, and it embraces two objects: first, the ostensible one above recited; and, secondly, that, by this arrangement, the Governments concerned may be enabled gradually to diminish their land forces. A well-grounded jealously appears to have been entertained by the plenipotentiaries assembled at Panama with respect to these large standing armies, and it entered into their views that, by this convention, the Governments concerned should be compelled to develop their intentions in this respect. By Governments is meant here those military chieftains who direct the civil as well as military affairs of their respective Governments.

As it was understood that Mexico and Colombia must defray the expenses to be incurred in building and equipping the proposed naval force, it is provided that the other States shall pay a contingent for the purpose of supporting it.

The agent sent to Panama by his Majesty the King of the Netherlands is arrived here, but his Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, Mr. Dawkins, is returned to England. These gentlemen were not present at the deliberations of the Congress. The American plenipotentiaries communicated to them, from time to time, accounts of such of their proceedings as were of great interest, or as they judged proper.

I have gathered these particulars in conversation with the plenipotentiaries, but have not yet had a sight of the treaties; whenever I do see them I will immediately give you a more detailed account of their import.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

Mr. Poinsett to Mr. Clay

No. 59.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, Mexico, October 4, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith the translation of a report made by the Secretary of State of this Republic to the Senate, in reply to a call for information, directed to ascertain the causes of the removal of the Congress of Panama from that place to Tacubaya.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

Communication from the Government to the Chamber of the Senate, on the motives of the removal of the Congress of Panama to Tacubaya.

[Translation.]

MOST EXCELLENT SIRS: The most excellent ministers plenipotentiary of the Republic, in the Assembly of the New American States, under date of the 22d instant, make to this Department the following communication: "In order to gratify the wishes of the most excellent President, which you express to us in your note of the 18th of the present month, we have solicited and obtained the public papers referred to, and it is only in the Gazette Extraordinary of the Isthmus of the 22d of June, in the Sun of the 22d August, and in the supplement to the Royal Gazette of Jamaica, number 32, that we have found any notice or articles having reference to the Assembly of the New American States which met at Panama. The mistakes and political errors which those papers contain on this subject will be demonstrated and removed by the simple exposition we here make of all that occurred in the said Isthmus during the forty-eight days we remained there. To do this in regular order we shall have to repeat here the relation of some events of which the most excellent President will have been already informed by the respective protocols which we have placed in your hands.

"We arrived at Panama on the 4th of June of this year after a passage of twenty-two days. Compliments and visits of etiquette being concluded, we began to treat of the labors which formed the object of our mission, and, although all the ministers of the Republics resident there were most anxious that we should assemble formally, we could not do so on account of the illness of Don Manuel Vidaurre, plenipotentiary from Peru. While waiting his recovery we held various private conferences which facilitated the course of the negotiations when the time arrived to hold formal sessions. With this object we met on the 22d of June, and, from that date to the 15th of July, by means of the painful labor of ten and eleven hours daily, we proposed, discussed, adjusted, and concluded a treaty of friendship, league, alliance, and perpetual confederation, in peace and in war, between the Republics present; a convention on the quotas of men, ships, and money, to make the treaty effective; an arrangement by which the allied Governments only should combine their military operations by sea and land; and an agreement for the removal of the Assembly, most necessary, as well on account of the insalubrity and of the absolute want of resources experienced at the place fixed upon, as because of the difficulty of communication with the respective Governments, and the scarcity of intelligence of events in Europe, so important to an Assembly whose principal care it was to propose and negotiate the means of preserving the independence of the New American States, by agreeing upon measures proper to disconcert and resist those which, with opposite views, either by themselves alone, or with the aid of the Holy Alliance, might be taken by our oppressors. It is scarcely credible that during the four months of our absence neither did we receive any communication from Mexico, nor did the Government know anything whatever of our operations, although, on our part, no opportunity was lost of making them known, and sending successively the corresponding documents. The most frequent communication at Panama is that which that city maintains with the capital of the Republic of Colombia, (Santa Fé de Bogota,) and letters to go and return again require seventy-five days at least. On the same day on which the plenipotentiaries assembled in form, an address appeared in the Gazette of the Isthmus which is supposed to have been spoken to that Assembly. The Assembly not only did not hear this harangue, nor approve this measure, but did not agree with the views it contained of the business that had been concluded, nor in the designation of those subjects which were intended to form the object of their future sessions. The minister himself who subscribed that paper was satisfied of the propriety of this conduct. The Republic of Chile offered to send her ministers so soon as her attention should be relieved from the war of Chilœ, which at that period had not terminated. Buenos Ayres had shown no disposition to attend. Upper Peru or Bolivar is not yet recognized as a Republic independent of its former metropolis. The United States of the North appointed their ministers, of whom one has not yet set out for his destination, and the other was in Bogota. They were to unite and to join the Assembly to agree upon such matters as might not infringe the neutrality which that Republic observes and wishes to continue to observe towards Spain. In the same situation, but under different circumstances, the Empire of Brazil is placed. These considerations, the faculty possessed by a majority of the Republics, in virtue of the treaties made by Colombia with Mexico, Guatemala, and Peru, to commence their labors and select a place proper for their sessions, the liberty remaining to the Republics, which may be allies, to join the confederation on condition that they ratify the treaties already concluded, and the option left to the neutral and friendly Powers to attend as witnesses, (signatarias,) the succeeding sessions, at which is to be negotiated all that may contribute to the establishment of a system of public law, which shall render uniform the conduct of the American continent in peace and in war, determined the Assembly to commence at once the negotiations, and pursue them to their termination, and to propose a change of place; when, after some discussion, Tacubaya was agreed upon by the majority. At the period of our arrival at Panama the dissensions excited by General Paez had already commenced, but neither had he, nor the Government he had disobeyed, assumed a hostile attitude, but both waited until General Bolivar, in person, or in such other manner as he might think best, should terminate those disturbances which, although they threatened a revolution in the form of Government, had not effected this object. In this state the affair remained when we left Panama to return to this Republic. During the time we remained at Panama the most perfect tranquillity prevailed, and the only disagreeable incident which occurred was the imprisonment of two or three of the principal inhabitants, men of good reputation, on an accusation made against them at Lima by an individual known to be an impostor and evil-minded man, of their being connected with the Spaniards. At the same time there appeared off Carthagena, an Atlantic port at a great distance from Panama, the ship-of-the-line Guerrero and two Spanish frigates; whereupon the commanding general declared his district under martial law, assuming the powers which the laws gave him, and assembled a meeting of the inhabitants to demand supplies. Those persons who had been imprisoned justified themselves, and obtained their liberty in a short time, and the ships disappeared in two days. The plenipotentiaries, in the midst of these occurrences, continued assembled, made no alteration in their arrangements, and took no part in matters that did not concern them, and which they only learned in familiar conversations. Nothing was communicated to us officially by the authorities of that country which, at the time of our departure, enjoyed the most perfect order, repose, and tranquillity."

And, by order of the President, I have the honor to communicate the same to your excellencies for the information of the Senate, until the treaties concluded in that Assembly are laid before it, which will be done in due time by this Department.

God preserve your excellencies many years. Mexico, September 26, 1826.

JUAN JOSÉ ESPINOSA DE LOS MONTEROS.

The Most Excellent SECRETARIES to the Chamber of the Senate.

Don José Maria Salazar to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

LEGATION OF COLOMBIA, Washington, November 20, 1826.

SIR: I have received an order from the Government of Colombia to communicate to that of the United States that the Great American Assembly was installed on the 22d of June last by the plenipotentiaries of Peru, Mexico, Central America, and Colombia. The necessity for the concurrence of the Legislature of Chile, which was not in session, to the nomination of plenipotentiaries had retarded their arrival at Panama.

The Assembly being installed, it was determined by lot in what order the confederated States should be named, and by common consent it was determined that the representatives of each should alternately hold the presidency for the direction of the discussions. These were conducted with that perfect harmony and concord which the great and important object in view should inspire; and the preparatory conferences and labors which preceded enabled the plenipotentiaries, on the 15th of July last, to sign—

1st. A treaty of union, league, and perpetual confederation, between the four States represented, to which the other Powers of America might have an opportunity to accede within one year. 2d. A convention for the renewal of the Great Assembly annually in time of common war, and biennially during peace. 3d. A convention which fixes the contingent which each confederate should contribute for the common defence. 4th. An agreement concerning the employment and direction of those contingents; and 5th. Divers declarations that the treaties which Colombia had formerly concluded with the United Mexican States, Central America, and Peru, should be included in those treaties with certain reservations.

Although the labors of the Congress were already so far advanced, the hazards occasioned by the climate of Panama to the plenipotentiaries admonished them to resolve upon a removal of the Congress to the town of Tacubaya, near the city of Mexico, where they expect the minister whom the Government of the United States has resolved to send.

I have the honor to renew to you the assurances of the high consideration and respect of your most obedient servant,

JOSÉ MARIA SALAZAR.

Mr. Poinsett to Mr. Clay.

No. 15.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, Mexico, August 17, 1825.

SIR: I received this day a note from the Secretary of State, dated on the 16th instant, a translation of which accompanies this letter, together with my reply, marked A and B. The intelligence communicated by the agent of this Government at Jamaica of a large French force being collected at Martinique, and of the appearance of a squadron of French vessels-of-war off the western cape of the island of St. Domingo, directing their course towards Havana, has produced a great sensation here, and a strong disposition exists on the part of the Executive and of Congress to take very decisive measures against the French residents and against the commerce of that nation; a disposition which I shall use every exertion to soften and restrain within due bounds.

The Chargé d'Affaires of his Britannic Majesty despatches this evening a courier for London, by the way of New York, to convey intelligence of these events to his Court. He waits for my letters, and I have not time, therefore, to write so fully by this opportunity as I could have wished.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

A.

Mr. Alaman to Mr. Poinsett.

NATIONAL PALACE OF MEXICO, August 16, 1825.

MOST EXCELLENT SIR: I have the honor to enclose to your excellency, numbered 1 to 5, copies of the communications received by this Government from their agent in Jamaica, and of a paragraph from a Kingston Gazette, which he sends with them. Whatever degree of credit may be given to the intelligence of the union of French maritime forces in Martinique, to the number of 28 sail, and which is founded on two notices, confirmatory of each other, the fact appears undoubted that a French squadron, composed of two ships-of-the-line, seven frigates, and two brigs, passed Cape St. Nicholas, sailing in the direction of Havana, since, as your excellency will see by the copy No. 4, the commander of the Colombian schooner-of-war, the Zulma, gives official notice to his Government of his having fallen in with it, and of having spoken one of the frigates. By the paragraph of the Jamaica Gazette, copied in No. 5, your excellency will see that it is said, although on information less certain, that French troops had disembarked in the island of Cuba, and that its capital was about to be garrisoned by French troops. Supposing only so much of all this to be true as is absolutely incontestable, which is, that a French squadron, composed of nine large vessels and two smaller, has appeared off the coast of the island of Cuba, sailing in the direction of the Havana, and immediately the question occurs, What is the object of this force? Undoubtedly, it will not be pretended that it is to protect the French commerce in the West Indian seas, for it is very well known that in them it has no other enemies but the pirates, who are enemies to all nations, and against these, it is clear, there would not be sent large vessels united in squadron; neither can it be said that these vessels have for their object the island of St. Domingo, because it would always be asked wherefore they were directed towards the Havana? And even should such excuses be alleged instead of an admissible explanation, they would only, in the present state of these countries, call to mind the cordon sanitaire, under pretext was organized on the frontiers of Spain, the very Army which was to invade it. If it is pretended that a French squadron may go to the Havana without causing well founded alarm, because that place is in the possession of Spain, it should be remembered that Havana is the headquarters of the Spanish forces in the present war against the American continent. From thence have issued the reinforcements and every description of supplies for the Spanish Army which fought in Colombia, and from thence the Spanish garrison of the Castle of San Juan de Ulloa still maintains itself; so that even in the case when the Spaniards of the Havana would receive no direct aid from the French forces, these, by placing that bay under shelter, give to the former the means of attacking us, by leaving them at liberty to dispose of their ships-of-war against us, and even of their land forces. This reasoning would be much stronger, if, as reported, the fortresses of the Havana have been garrisoned by French troops, under whatsoever pretext those may have been delivered up to them; for such a measure can produce no other effect than to leave the Spanish forces free to undertake expeditions against the continent. Under whatever aspect this extraordinary and secret union of French forces in Martinique be considered, and, much more, their employment on the island of Cuba, the President of this Republic can do no less than see in it an act positively hostile against the independent States of America, or, at least, so suspicious that it justly demands the attention of this Government. That of your excellency has declared, in the most solemn manner, that it will never consent that any third Power interfere in the existing question between Spain and the independent States of America which formerly were part of her dominions. The conduct of France, in the step to which I refer, is certainly an interference which, for being dissembled, is not more excusable. The President, therefore, directs me to inform your excellency of these important events, and to request that you will be pleased to bring them to the notice of your Government, from whose friendship he hopes that it will ask of that of his most Catholic Majesty such explanations as the case requires, which may serve also as a rule of proceeding to these States, which, in the meantime, under these circumstances, will find themselves obliged to adopt that line of conduct with respect to France which may be dictated by prudence and the necessity of preserving their dignity and political existence.

The President flatters himself that the Government of your excellency will see in this step a new and distinguished proof of the confidence and reciprocity of interests which happily exists between both nations.

I have the honor to reiterate to your excellency the assurances of the high consideration with which I am your obedient servant,

L. ALAMAN.

His Excellency JOEL R. POINSETT,
Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary from the United States of North America.

B.

Mr. Poinsett to Mr. Alaman.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Mexico, August 17, 1825.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's note of the 16th instant, together with the copies of the communications which this Government has received from its agent in Jamaica, and of a paragraph from the Gazette of Kingston, numbered from one to five.

In compliance with his excellency the President's desire, I shall immediately transmit them to my Government, not doubting that the President of the United States will take measures to obtain the explanations which his excellency the President of these States solicits him to ask from his most Catholic Majesty.

I beg your excellency to assure the President that in the declaration made by the late President of the United States, in his message to Congress of the 2d of December, 1823, respecting the policy it would become the United States to adopt in the event of any interposition of the Powers of Europe in the contest between Spain and the independent States of America which formerly formed a part of her dominions, he spoke the sentiments of the whole nation; and that the present President cherishes the same feelings towards these countries, and entirely coincides in the views and principles laid down in that message.

Although the reunion of so large a French force in the island of Martinique, and the information received by this Government of the appearance of a numerous squadron of the ships-of-war of that nation in the vicinity of the island of Cuba, are certainly calculated to alarm the fears and to excite the suspicions of this Government as to the ulterior views of his most Catholic Majesty, and not only justify but call for measures of precaution, I cannot abstain from observing to your excellency that these movements do not necessarily imply hostile intentions on the part of France towards these countries, and that it will be politic that the measures this Government proposes to take with regard to France should not be of a nature to give just cause of complaint to his most Catholic Majesty, if it should hereafter appear that the reunion of so large a force in Martinique and the movements of the French squadron in the West India seas were entirely unconnected with any designs of that Government against the Americas.

I trust his excellency the President will attribute this expression of my opinion to the only motive which can actuate me—my earnest solicitude for the peace and security of this country.

I have the honor to be, with respect, sir, your obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

His Excellency Don LUCAS ALAMAN,
Secretary of State and of Interior and Exterior Relations.

Mr. Poinsett to Mr. Clay.

No. 43.] LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, Mexico, May 6, 1826.

SIR: I have this instant seen Washington papers of the 20th and 30th of March, containing the debate upon a resolution offered by Mr. Wickliffe, and directed to learn upon what authority I had declared that the United States had pledged themselves not to permit any other Power than Spain to interfere with the independence or form of Government of the new American Republics.

This inquiry was avowedly made in order to ascertain whether I was expressly authorized by the President of the United States to make such a declaration; and although you have no doubt been able clearly to show that no such authority, implied or direct, was ever given to me, I cannot rest satisfied without stating explicitly that, in the observations I made during my conference with the Mexican plenipotentiaries, I alluded only to the message of the President of the United States to Congress in 1823.

That message, dictated, in my opinion, by the soundest policy, has been regarded, both in Europe and America, as a solemn declaration of the views and intentions of the Executive of the United States; and I have always considered that declaration as a pledge, so far forth as the language of the President can pledge the nation, to defend the new American Republics from the attacks of any of the Powers of Europe other than Spain. That the people of the United States are not bound by any declarations of the Executive is known and understood as well in Mexico, where the Government is modelled upon our own political institutions, as in the United States themselves. I need scarcely, therefore, disclaim all intention to have deceived the Mexican plenipotentiaries by the argument I used on that occasion.

But, in order to correct any erroneous impression these words might have made upon the minds of the Mexican plenipotentiaries, I explained to them, in the course of our conference this morning, their precise meaning; that the declaration of Mr. Monroe, in his message of 1823, to which I had alluded, indicated only the course of policy the Executive of the United States was disposed to pursue towards these countries, but was not binding upon the nation unless sanctioned by the Congress of the United States; and that when I spoke of the United States having pledged themselves not to permit any other Power than Spain to interfere with the independence or form of Government of the new American Republics, I meant only to allude to the above cited declaration of the President of the United States in his message of 1823, and to nothing more. Don José Ignacio Esteva, one of the plenipotentiaries at that period of our negotiations, replied, that he had so understood it, but it was not thought by the Mexican plenipotentiaries at the time that such a disposition, nor even a more solemn pledge so to act, entitled us to any special privileges, as it was so obviously the interest of the United States to assist in defending the Americas against the attacks of United Europe.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 444. [2D SESSION.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH MEXICO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES DECEMBER 28, 1826.

To the House of Representatives of the United States:

I transmit to the House of Representatives a report from the Secretary of State, containing the information requested by two resolutions of the House, relating to certain negotiations with the Government of the United Mexican States.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, December 28, 1826.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 26, 1826.

The Secretary of State, to whom the President has referred two resolutions of the House of Representatives, under date the 19th instant, the first requesting the President to inform the House, "if he deem it not incompatible with the public interest, whether any instructions have been given to our minister at Mexico relative to the ascertaining and running of the boundary line between that Government and the United States, and, if such instructions have been given, whether an answer has been received to the same, and what that answer is;" and the second requesting the President, under the same qualification, to inform the House "whether any measures have been taken, by instructions to our minister at Mexico, or otherwise, to obtain the runaway negro slaves from Louisiana, and elsewhere, which have taken refuge in the territories of that Government, and also whether any measures have been taken with the Government of Mexico to enable citizens of the United States to recover debts from those who have fled from the United States to the territories of Mexico," has the honor to report that the subjects, both of the boundary between the territories of the United States and those of the United Mexican States, and of slaves who have escaped from their proprietors in the United States and taken refuge in the territories of the United Mexican States, have formed topics of instruction to the minister of the United States at Mexico, and of negotiation between the two Governments, and a treaty has been signed by their plenipotentiaries, embracing, among other stipulations, an article in relation to one of those two subjects, but, as the treaty has not been ratified or rejected (as far as information has yet reached this Department) by either Government, it is respectfully submitted that it would be premature now to disclose the purport of that article; and it would be still more premature, as is also respectfully submitted, to communicate, at this time, what has passed between the two Governments in relation to the other of the two subjects above mentioned, there being yet in progress a negotiation concerning it.

In respect to the recovery of debts from those who have fled from the United States to the territories of Mexico, although reports have reached this Department that the laws in the adjoining province of Texas interposed obstacles to such recovery, those reports have not been substantiated in such manner as appeared to the Secretary of State would justify a formal application to the Mexican Government to remove those obstacles.

All which is respectfully submitted.

H. CLAY.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 445. [2D SESSION.

DISCRIMINATING DUTIES—SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 5, 1827.

Mr. TOMLINSON, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred so much of the message of the President of the United States as relates to the commerce of the United States with foreign nations and their colonies, made the following report:

That the commercial treaty of the 4th of September, 1816, between the United States and his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, expired on the 25th of September last. The note of the Secretary of State, hereto annexed, marked A, explains the causes of the failure to renew that treaty.

On the 26th of September last the Baron de Stackelberg, Chargé d'Affaires of the King of Sweden and Norway, at Washington, announced to the Secretary of State that his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway had "resolved to maintain, with regard to American commerce, and till a new order, the dispositions of the late treaty." A translation of the official note of the Baron de Stackelberg, marked B, is annexed to this report.

On the expiration of the treaty aforesaid, Swedish and Norwegian vessels, and the merchandise imported in such vessels, arriving in the United States, became liable to pay discriminating duties of tonnage and impost. In the opinion of the committee, the frank and friendly conduct of the King of Sweden and Norway in this emergency ought to be reciprocated on the part of the United States, and provision ought to be made, by law, that Swedish and Norwegian vessels, and the merchandise imported therein, if the same be the produce and manufacture of the territories of the King of Sweden and Norway, shall be exempted from the payment of alien or discriminating duties of tonnage and impost while a negotiation in relation to the renewal of that treaty is pending. Presuming that a renewal of the treaty will have been accomplished before the termination of the next session of Congress, the committee deem it expedient to limit the exemption aforesaid to that period.

From the subjoined document, marked C, it appears that alien duties of tonnage and impost may have been exacted and paid, or secured to be paid on certain Swedish vessels, and the merchandise imported therein, in the ports of the United States, since the date of the Baron de Stackelberg's official note above mentioned. The alien duties which may have been paid or secured to be paid, under such circumstances, in the opinion of the committee, ought to be promptly refunded or remitted.

The committee, therefore, report a bill to effect the aforesaid objects.

A.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 25, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the information of the committee, the translation of an official note, under date the 26th September last, received at this Department, from the Baron de Stackelberg, Chargé d'Affaires of his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, announcing the determination to observe, in the ports of those Kingdoms, the stipulations of the treaty of the 4th of September, 1816, until a new treaty shall have been concluded. Negotiations for this object, prior to the expiration of the treaty, were prevented by the sickness and subsequent death of Mr. Somerville, and the unavoidable delay in the arrival of his successor at Stockholm, and by expectations that Baron de Stackelberg would have been charged, on the part of the Government of Sweden, with the conduct at Washington of those negotiations.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

H. CLAY.

G. TOMLINSON, Esq., Chairman of the Committee on Commerce, House of Representatives.

B.

The Baron de Stackelberg to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

WASHINGTON, September 26, 1826.

SIR: The late treaty of commerce with Sweden and Norway and the United States of America expiring, and nothing being yet stipulated between the two Governments for the renewal of the treaty, his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, to give a new proof of his sentiments of sincere friendship towards the Government of the United States of America, and in the intimate conviction that it will adopt, on its part, analogous measures, has resolved to maintain with regard to American commerce, and till a new order, the dispositions of the late treaty, in order to have the power of concluding in the interval another treaty in its place, without there being, in this manner, any hindrance in the mutual relations.

The undersigned having received orders from his Government to announce, officially, to his excellency Mr. Clay, Secretary of State and of Foreign Affairs, the contents of this note, is also authorized to propose to the American Government to give similar orders in the ports of the United States in regard to the Swedish and Norwegian commerce.

The undersigned has also the honor, officially, to acquaint the Secretary of State that the King, his august sovereign, is desirous that a new treaty be signed at Stockholm, and, in order to accelerate its conclusion, the King wishes that the President would send some one as soon as possible to treat of this affair; without wishing in any way to influence his choice, the undersigned is persuaded that his Majesty would see, with pleasure, that Mr. Hughes was charged with that honorable commission.

The undersigned, Chargé d'Affaires of his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, prays his excellency Mr. Clay, Secretary of State and Foreign Affairs, to be pleased to lay this note before the President of the United States, and to communicate, as soon as possible, to the undersigned the answer of the President.

The undersigned has the honor to renew to his excellency Mr. Clay the assurance of his high consideration.

BARON DE STACKELBERG.

C.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 5, 1827.

SIR: Referring to our conversation of yesterday, I beg to send you herewith a copy of the letter of which I spoke, received from the Collector of Charleston. It is inferred from it that a Swedish vessel has probably arrived at that port. No instructions have yet been given to the Collector in reply to his letter, but they can only be, as the law now stands, to charge foreign duties.

I have the honor to remain, with great respect, your obedient servant,

RICHARD RUSH.

Hon. G. TOMLINSON, Chairman of the Committee on Commerce.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 446. [2D SESSION.

IMPRESSMENT OF SEAMEN FROM AMERICAN VESSELS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 15, 1827.

To the House of Representatives of the United States:

In compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 20th of May last, I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State touching the impressment of seamen from on board American vessels, on the high seas or elsewhere, by the commanders of British or other foreign vessels or ships-of-war, since the 18th of February, 1815, together with such correspondence on the subject as comes within the purview of the resolution.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, January 15, 1827.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, January 12, 1827.

The Secretary of State, to whom has been referred by the President the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 20th May, 1826, requesting him to cause to be laid before the House "any information in his possession touching the impressment of seamen from on board American vessels, on the high seas or elsewhere, by the commanders of British or other foreign vessels or ships-of-war, since the 18th of February, 1815, together with any correspondence on the subject with any foreign Government, so far as the communication of the same be not inconsistent with the public service," has the honor to report:

That on the 8th day of May last, having then just received at this Department the letter of which a copy, marked A, is herewith reported, a correspondence was opened with Mr. Vaughan, the British minister, in relation to the instances of alleged impressment which are stated in that letter; that a copy of the notes which passed on that occasion is herewith also reported, marked B. No further explanation of the circumstances which attended the taking of the two seamen from on board the brig Pharos has been yet received at this Department; that it will be seen, from an inspection of the correspondence, that the captain of that vessel had sailed from the United States before the Attorney for the district of Massachusetts could obtain his deposition, and information of his return has not reached this Department. But it is proper to add that Mr. Vaughan has verbally stated that his Government, having received a copy of the note above mentioned, of the 8th of May last, has given the proper orders to procure from Africa all the information necessary to enable it to decide on the conduct of Captain Clavering, and that he presumes the distance of the place whence it was to be obtained has hitherto prevented the receipt of instructions adapted to the state of the case.

No other instances of impressment falling within the scope of the resolution are known at this Department, except one which is stated in a recent despatch from Mr. Raguet, from which an extract is herewith reported, marked C.

All which is respectfully submitted.

H. CLAY.

A.

Consul Samuel Hodges, jr., to the Secretary of State.

CONSULATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
Cape de Verde Islands, Villa du Praya, St. Jago, March 16, 1826.

SIR: I had the honor to inform you, on the 12th of August last, of the outrage committed by Captain D. C. Clavering, commander of his Britannic Majesty's ship Redwing, on this station, by firing into the brig Ruby, of Bucksport, and now acquaint you of his impressing two seamen from the brig Pharos, of Boston, on the 6th of December last, while that vessel was at anchor in the harbor of Freetown, Sierra Leone, one of whom, Studson Roberts, of Portland, was given up, after a detention of eleven days, by order of Commodore Bullen, who arrived in the meantime, and the other detained under a plea that he was a British subject.

I have the honor to remain, with sentiments of the highest consideration, your most obedient, humble servant,

SAMUEL HODGES, JR.

B.

Copy of a letter from Mr. Clay to Mr. Vaughan.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, May 8, 1826.

SIR: I have just received intelligence that Captain D. C. Clavering, commander of his Britannic Majesty's ship Redwing, on the 6th day of December last impressed two seamen from on board the American brig Pharos, of Boston, while she was at anchor in the harbor of Freetown, Sierra Leone, on the coast of Africa; that after ten days' detention of one of them he was released; and that the other is still detained in the British service. Although these facts have been communicated through an official channel, the surprise which they justly excite creates an unwillingness to credit them. If, as we are bound at present to believe, they are well founded, Captain Clavering must not only have acted without, but contrary to the orders of his Government; for it is, otherwise, impossible to believe that the outrage which they disclose should have been attended with the aggravating circumstance of being perpetrated in a season of profound peace between Great Britain and the rest of Christendom. Assuming, however, the information which we have received to be correct, the President cannot doubt that the conduct of that officer has been unauthorized, nor that the Government of his Britannic Majesty will promptly animadvert upon it in such signal manner as will prevent, by the example, the recurrence of similar enormities in future. If you are without instructions on this subject, I have the honor to request that you will, with as little delay as possible, transmit this note to your Government.

I seize the occasion to tender to you assurances of my high consideration.

H. CLAY.

Right Honorable CHARLES RICHARD VAUGHAN,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from Great Britain.

Mr. Vaughan to Mr. Clay.

WASHINGTON, May 10, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note complaining of the impressment of two American seamen on the coast of Africa by Captain Clavering, commander of his Britannic Majesty's ship Redwing. I shall lose no time in transmitting a copy of your note to his Majesty's Government, and I shall anxiously await an explanation of this disagreeable event.

I beg you will accept the assurance of my highest consideration.

CHARLES R. VAUGHAN.

HON. HENRY CLAY, &c., &c., &c.

Mr. Vaughan to Mr. Clay.

WASHINGTON, May 22, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to you a copy of a letter which I have this day received from Mr. Manners, his Majesty's Consul at Boston, containing certain facts which he has collected from the master of the American ship Pharos, relative to the impressment of two sailors from the vessel under his command, off the coast of Africa, by Captain Clavering, of his Majesty's ship Redwing.

It appears by the enclosed letters that Mr. Merchant, the master of the Pharos, has distinctly admitted that neither of the men taken on board the Redwing were natives of the United States. One of them was an Englishman, whom he had picked up at the Cape de Verde islands, and the other a native of Norway, and that they had both of them volunteered to serve his Majesty on board the Redwing. When the boats of the Redwing went alongside of the Pharos an inquiry was made which were the two men who had volunteered to serve his Majesty; they were pointed out, and told by the person in command of the Pharos at the time to go into the boat from the Redwing, which they did voluntarily. It being found, afterwards, that the seaman who was a native of Norway had an American protection, he was sent back to the Pharos.

When I had the honor to receive your note of the 8th instant, relating to this alleged impressment of two American sailors, I had no doubt but that in due time I should receive a satisfactory explanation of the transaction complained of, as I am not aware of any act being now in force, at this period of peace, which justifies the impressment of British seamen by his Majesty's forces.

I invite you, sir, to institute an investigation into the facts stated in the enclosed letter; and should that investigation satisfactorily prove that the master of the Pharos has misled the Government of the United States by a misrepresentation of the occurrence in question, that he may be punished, in order to deter others from a similar offence, and that the utmost publicity may be given to the real facts of the case, in order to allay the irritated feelings which have been manifested by the public.

I request, sir, that you will accept the assurances of my highest consideration.

CHARLES R. VAUGHAN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, &c., &c., &c.

Mr. Manners, his Majesty's Consul at Boston, to Mr. Vaughan.

HIS MAJESTY'S CONSULATE, Boston, May 13, 1826.

SIR: The master of the American brig Pharos, recently arrived at this port from Africa, having published a statement in which he accused Captain Clavering, of his Majesty's ship Redwing, of having forcibly taken from on board his brig two seamen; and the circumstance having excited some sensation, I felt it my duty to ascertain the real state of the case, and, with this view, called, in company with a friend, on the author of the accusation, Captain Merchant. As the affair may, probably, be misrepresented to you, I have the honor to communicate the result of the interview. After much evasion and evident embarrassment at being called upon to explain, Captain Merchant distinctly admitted that neither of the men taken on board the Redwing were native Americans; that one of them was an Englishman whom he had picked up at the Cape de Verde islands; that they had both volunteered to serve his Majesty on board the Redwing; that when the boat from the Redwing came alongside the Pharos, Sailing-master Taylor, who commanded her, inquired which were the men who had so volunteered to serve his Majesty; that they were pointed out, when they were told to go into the boat, which they did voluntarily; that no opposition whatever was made to their leaving the Pharos by the mate, who commanded, Captain Merchant being absent, on shore; and that one of the men, a native of Norway, having an American protection, was subsequently sent back to the Pharos. I am happy in having thus detected a falsehood calculated to injure the character of a gallant British officer, and trust that you will not consider this communication either unnecessary or intrusive.

I have the honor, &c.

GEORGE MANNERS.

Right Hon. C. R. VAUGHAN, &c., &c., &c.

Mr. Clay to Mr. Vaughan.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, June 15, 1826.

SIR: As soon as I recovered from an indisposition which confined me at the receipt of your note of the 22d ultimo, transmitting a statement by the British Consul at Boston of the circumstances attending the impressment of two seamen from on board the American brig Pharos, represented by him to have been obtained from the commander, Captain Merchant, I addressed a letter to the United States Attorney for the district of Massachusetts, requesting him to exhibit the statement to the captain, in order to ascertain if it were a full and fair account of the transaction, and, if necessary, to take his deposition. I regret to have to inform you that it appears from a letter just received from Mr. Blake, the Attorney, that, on or about the 15th ultimo, only two days after the date of the Consul's letter, Captain Merchant had sailed from Boston, on a voyage to the Cape de Verde islands. We shall not be discouraged by this disappointment from a further prosecution of the investigation, and it will afford much satisfaction if it should issue in an acquittal of the British officers concerned of all blame. In the meantime it is necessary to make some observations on the statement which the British Consul has forwarded. And the first is, that if he felt himself officially authorized to interrogate Captain Merchant on the occasion, it would have been better to have called in a magistrate, qualified to administer an oath, and to take the examination of the witness. A deposition taken under that solemnity, by a qualified and responsible officer, would have enabled us to judge how far the imputation to the witness of evasion and embarrassment which the Consul permits himself to make was well founded. It would, probably, have been also more full and explicit than the Consul's statement on two or three important particulars. For example: it would, most likely, have detailed the circumstances under which the two seamen are alleged to have volunteered to serve his Britannic Majesty, and, particularly, by whose order it was that, when demanded by the boat from the Redwing, they left the Pharos and went on board the boat. But, passing by the imperfections of this ex parte statement, unverified by any oath, and giving to it the fullest credit, it does not furnish anything like a satisfactory explanation, as you seem to suppose, of the conduct of the British officers.

Certainly it is not necessary to remark that, if the fact be true that neither of the seamen were natives of the United States, it could constitute no justification of Captain Clavering, unless the British Government is prepared to assert the extraordinary claim that all seamen found on board a foreign vessel, who are not natives of the country to which the vessel belongs, may be taken or impressed into the British service.

The case, then, appears to be, that two seamen, part of the crew of an American vessel, in a distant foreign port, and where it was difficult, if not impracticable, to supply their places, volunteer to serve on board a British vessel-of-war; but when, and under what circumstances, they volunteered, does not appear; and that a boat is sent, (most probably with armed men, at any rate in the presence of an armed force ready to sustain her,) alongside the American vessel, and, in the absence of her captain, the seamen are demanded, and being pointed out, they are told to go into the boat, which they do voluntarily, and without any opposition from the mate, who had been left in the command of the ship. If no actual force were applied in the seizure of the men, the circumstances attending the affair superseded the necessity of its direct use. The demand being made in the absence of the commander of the American vessel, the mate, who represented him, and, probably, had no instructions for such an occurrence, no doubt saw how unavailing any resistance would be, and hence forbore to make any opposition. The mischief would be manifest, of allowing an armed vessel to obtain seamen from a foreign merchantman under color of their volunteering. Such a practice would lead to every species of abuse; and if, after seamen are thus suffered to volunteer, or are enticed from their duty, they may be lawfully demanded of the unarmed merchantman in the presence of a man-of-war, and by a boat, for that purpose sent from her, with a crew armed or unarmed, whatever name may be given to the transaction, it is, in fact, if not in form, an instance of impressment. The actual presence of a competent force may be sufficient to attain all its purposes without a direct application of it, and the moral and legal responsibility of him who commands it is as great in the one case as in the other. Should, therefore, the statement of the British Consul turn out to be true in all its particulars, the President indulges the confident expectation that the Government of his Britannic Majesty will not fail to require an immediate restoration of the seaman yet detained in the British service, and cause such punishment to be inflicted on the officers who were concerned in the impressment as will effectually prevent the recurrence of similar outrages.

I avail myself of the occasion to renew assurances of my distinguished consideration.

H. CLAY.

Right Hon. C. R. VAUGHAN, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from Great Britain.

Mr. Vaughan to Mr. Clay.

WASHINGTON, June 22, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, on the 20th instant, of your note, dated the 15th, containing some observations upon the letter which I communicated to you from his Majesty's Consul at Boston, giving me some information which he had acquired respecting the alleged impressment of two American seamen, by a British officer, off the coast of Africa.

I should have willingly abstained from making any further observation upon the subject of this supposed impressment until the result of the investigation which I invited, upon the report made to me by the British Consul, should have put us in possession of the real facts of the transaction.

As you have concluded, however, your observations upon the Consul's letter with expressing the confident expectation of the President that his Majesty's Government will not fail to require the restoration of the seaman who remains on board the British sloop, and to punish the officer concerned in the impressment of him, "though the statement of the British Consul should turn out to be true in all its particulars," as I cannot acquiesce in the justness of this demand, some observations seem to be required of me.

Should the circumstances, as stated to me by the Consul, turn out to be correct, surely no outrage can be alleged against the officer of the Redwing sloop. Having been informed that two British seamen, aboard the American brig Pharos, volunteered to enter on board his ship, he sent a boat to inquire for them, when, without force or menace, excepting such as you are pleased to imply from the vessel-of-war being in sight, the two seamen leave the Pharos, and are conveyed on board the Redwing. It was then found that one of them only was a British seaman, and he remained on board, while the other, being a native of Norway, with an American protection, was sent back to the American brig. This part of the conduct of the British officer ought to do away all apprehension expressed in one part of your note, that "the British Government may be prepared to assert the extraordinary claim, that all seamen found on board a foreign vessel, who are not natives of the country to which the vessel belongs, may be taken or impressed into the British service."

I trust that you will do me the justice to believe that I have been induced to protract my correspondence with you upon the subject of this alleged impressment, with the imperfect information which has hitherto reached me, from an anxious desire only to calm the irritation which complaints of such a nature are too apt to excite in the feelings of the public.

Anxious to seize the first opportunity of doing away any misrepresentation which might aggravate those feelings, I was glad to have been enabled to communicate to you the report of the Consul; and I beg leave to express the satisfaction with which I learned from your note of the 15th that you had already instituted an inquiry into the circumstances of this transaction, and that the investigation would be continued, though rendered unfortunately fruitless, at present, on account of the captain of the American brig having sailed from Boston for the Cape de Verde islands.

I shall anxiously await the final issue of the inquiries instituted into this transaction; and I cannot but entertain a confident expectation, from what has already transpired, that the British officer concerned will be acquitted of all blame.

I seize this opportunity to renew to you the assurances of my high consideration.

CHARLES R. VAUGHAN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

C.

Extract of a letter (No. 17) from Mr. Condy Raguet, Chargé d'Affaires of the United States at Rio de Janeiro, to the Secretary of State, dated Rio de Janeiro, October 31, 1826.

"Mr. Bond* relates three instances of recent impressment of American seamen, and says, 'I am well convinced that there are others on board the fleet† who have been impressed, but they are prevented from coming ashore. I have understood that those who have been impressed, and who refuse to enter the service, are compelled to do heavier duty than the rest; are sometimes put on short allowance, and are paid less than the others, in order to induce them to accept of the bounty; in consequence of which, some have entered, after refusing to do so for a long time.' He states one case of an American being severely beaten by a press-gang, and carried off, after having been released from a former impressment a few days before."

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 447. [2D SESSION.

PAYMENT OF INDEMNITY BY GREAT BRITAIN FOR SLAVES CARRIED AWAY IN 1815.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 16, 1827.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

I communicate to both Houses of Congress copies of a convention between the United States and Great Britain, signed on the 13th of November last, at London, by the respective plenipotentiaries of the two Governments, for the final settlement and liquidation of certain claims of indemnity of citizens of the United States which had arisen under the first article of the treaty of Ghent. It having been stipulated by this convention that the exchange of the ratifications of the same should be made at London, the usual proclamation of it here can only be issued when that event shall have taken place, the notice of which can scarcely be expected before the close of the present session of Congress. But it has been duly ratified on the part of the United States; and by the report of the Secretary of State, and the accompanying certificate herewith also communicated, it will be seen that the first half of the stipulated payment has been made by the minister of his Britannic Majesty residing here, and has been deposited in the office of the Bank of the United States at this place, to await the disposal of Congress.

I recommend to their consideration the expediency of such legislative measures as they may deem proper for the distribution of the sum already paid, and of that hereafter to be received, among the claimants who may be found entitled to indemnity.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, January 16, 1827.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, January 15, 1827.

The Secretary of State has the honor to report to the President that payment to the United States has this day been made by the British minister of the sum of $602,480, agreeably to the third article of the convention with Great Britain, signed on the 13th day of November last; that sum being the first moiety of the gross amount stipulated in the first article of the convention to be paid by Great Britain in lieu of and in full and complete satisfaction for all sums claimed or claimable from Great Britain under the decision of the late Emperor of Russia, and the convention to carry it into effect, which was concluded at St. Petersburg on the 12th day of July, 1822. A procés verbale was made of the manner in which the payment was effected, of which a copy accompanies this report. The sum thus paid has been deposited in the office of the Bank of the United States at Washington, to the credit of the United States, and subject to the order of Congress.

All which is respectfully submitted.

H. CLAY.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, January 15, 1827.

On this day, in consequence of an appointment made by an exchange of official notes between H. Clay, Secretary of State, and the Right Honorable Charles R. Vaughan, his Britannic Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, Mr. Vaughan attended at the Department of State, and, in pursuance of the third article of the convention, concluded and signed at London on the 13th day of November last, between the United States and Great Britain, paid to the Secretary of State the sum of six hundred and two thousand four hundred and eighty dollars, being the first moiety of the gross sum which Great Britain, in the aforesaid convention, stipulates to pay to the United States; which payment, in the presence of Daniel Brent, Chief Clerk of the Department of State of the United States, and Charles Bankhead, his Britannic Majesty's Secretary of Legation, was made by a transfer of a check or order for that sum, drawn by the Bank of the United States on its Office of Discount and Deposit, in the city of Washington, in favor of said Vaughan. Whereupon the said Clay, Secretary of State as aforesaid, executed, in duplicate, a receipt for the said sum and delivered it to the said Vaughan.

* Consul of the United States at Montevideo. † That of Brazil.

In testimony of all which, this procés verbale has been made and signed by the said Clay and Vaughan.

H. CLAY.
CHARLES R. VAUGHAN.

Done in presence of—
DANIEL BRENT.
CHARLES BANKHEAD.

Convention between the United States and Great Britain, concluded at London November 13, 1826.

Difficulties having arisen in the execution of the convention concluded at St. Petersburg on the 12th day of July, 1822, under the mediation of his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, between the United States of America and Great Britain, for the purpose of carrying into effect the decision of his Imperial Majesty upon the differences which had arisen between the said United States and Great Britain on the true construction and meaning of the first article of the treaty of peace and amity concluded at Ghent on the 24th day of December, 1814, the said United States and his Britannic Majesty, being equally desirous to obviate such difficulties, have respectively named plenipotentiaries to treat and agree respecting the same, that is to say:

The President of the United States of America has appointed Albert Gallatin their Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to his Britannic Majesty:

And his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Honorable William Huskisson, a member of his said Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council, a member of Parliament, President of the Committee of Privy Council for Affairs of Trade and Foreign Plantations, and Treasurer of his said Majesty's Navy, and Henry Unwin Addington, Esq., late his Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to the United States of America:

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland agrees to pay, and the United States of America agree to receive, for the use of the persons entitled to indemnification and compensation, by virtue of the said decision and convention, the sum of twelve hundred and four thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars, current money of the United States, in lieu of and in full and complete satisfaction for all sums claimed or claimable from Great Britain, by any person or persons whatsoever, under the said decision and convention.

ARTICLE 2. The object of the said convention being thus fulfilled, that convention is hereby declared to be cancelled and annulled, save and except the second article of the same, which has already been carried into execution by the Commissioners appointed under the said convention; and save and except so much of the third article of the same as relates to the definitive list of claims, and has already likewise been carried into execution by the said Commissioners.

ARTICLE 3. The said sum of twelve hundred and four thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars shall be paid at Washington, to such person or persons as shall be duly authorized on the part of the United States to receive the same, in two equal payments, as follows:

The payment of the first half to be made twenty days after official notification shall have been made by the Government of the United States to his Britannic Majesty's minister in the said United States of the ratification of the present convention by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof.

And the payment of the second half to be made on the first day of August, 1827.

ARTICLE 4. The above sums being taken as a full and final liquidation of all claims whatsoever arising under the said decision and convention, both the final adjustment of those claims and the distribution of the sums so paid by Great Britain to the United States shall be made in such manner as the United States alone shall determine, and the Government of Great Britain shall have no further concern or liability therein.

ARTICLE 5. It is agreed that, from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention, the joint commission appointed under the said convention of St. Petersburg of the 12th of July, 1822, shall be dissolved, and, upon the dissolution thereof, all the documents and papers in possession of the said commission relating to claims under that convention shall be delivered over to such person or persons as shall be duly authorized on the part of the United States to receive the same; and the British Commissioner shall make over to such person or persons so authorized all the documents and papers (or authenticated copies of the same where the originals cannot conveniently be made over) relating to claims under the said convention which he may have received from his Government for the use of the said commission, conformably to the stipulations contained in the third article of the said convention.

ARTICLE 6. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in London in six months from this date, or sooner if possible.

In witness whereof, the plenipotentiaries aforesaid, by virtue of their respective full powers, have signed the same, and have affixed thereunto the seals of their arms.

Done at London this thirteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six.

[L. S.] ALBERT GALLATIN.
[L. S.] WILLIAM HUSKISSON.
[L. S.] HENRY UNWIN ADDINGTON.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 448. [2D SESSION.

DISCRIMINATING DUTIES—NETHERLANDS.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 19, 1827.

To the House of Representatives of the United States:

In compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives of the sixth instant, I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State, together with copies of the correspondence with the Government of the Netherlands relating to discriminating duties.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, January 18, 1827.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, January 17, 1827.

The Secretary of State, to whom has been referred the resolution of the House of Representatives of the sixth instant, requesting the President to communicate to the House, if compatible with the public interest, the correspondence with the Government of the Netherlands referred to in his message, and relating to discriminating duties, has the honor to report, that, in conformity to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the twenty-first January, 1825, a report on the tenth February, 1825, was made from this Department, submitting copies of the correspondence which had taken place up to the latter period upon the subject-matter of the present resolution, to which report a reference is respectfully requested. Copies of the correspondence in relation to the same subject which has since taken place are now herewith reported. All which is respectfully submitted.

H. CLAY.

Papers accompanying report.

Mr. Clay to Chevalier Huygens, December 10, 1825. (Copy.)
Mr. Huygens to Mr. Clay, December 12, 1825. (Translation.)
Mr. Clay to Mr. Huygens, December 24, 1825. (Copy.)
Mr. Huygens to Mr. Clay, December 27, 1825. (Translation.)
Mr. Clay to Mr. Hughes, April 27, 1826. (Extract.)
Mr. Huygens to Mr. Clay, September 15, 1826. (Translation.)
Mr. Clay to Mr. Huygens, October 25, 1826.
Mr. Huygens to Mr. Clay, November 11, 1826. (Translation.)
Mr. Clay to Mr. Hughes, December 12, 1826. (Extract.)

Mr. Clay to the Chevalier Huygens.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 10, 1825.

SIR: According to the respective regulations of the United States and the Kingdom of the Netherlands, each professes to act towards the other, in regard to navigation, upon the basis of perfect reciprocity and equality. The United States have not deviated from their professions. The vessels of the Netherlands and their cargoes, consisting of the produce and manufacture of that Kingdom, or of such produce and manufactures as are most usually first shipped from its ports, pay no higher duties in the ports of the United States than their own vessels and their cargoes of similar produce. On the 7th of March, 1823, at Brussels, Mr. Everett, then representing the Government of the United States in the Netherlands, addressed an official note to the Baron de Nagell, stating that several articles of the Dutch tariff established a difference of duties in favor of goods imported in Dutch vessels; and, in particular, that the law of the 26th of August, 1822, creates, in the form of a drawback, a general discrimination to the same effect, according to which one-tenth of the duties paid upon the importation or exportation of all goods in Dutch vessels is to be returned, with the exception of those articles the importation or exportation of which, in Dutch vessels, is otherwise favored specifically by the tariff. On the 27th of May, 1823, the Baron de Nagell returned an answer to the note of Mr. Everett, in which he does not contest the existence of the above provisions of the laws of the Netherlands. The Baron labored under a misconception of the views of the American Government in supposing that it contemplated an abolition of the principle of equality which it had adopted in the ports of the United States between American and Dutch vessels, as Mr. Everett showed in his reply of the 31st of the same month of May. The limitation of the duration of the acts of Congress, by which that equality had been established, to the 1st of January, 1824, having been prescribed for the purpose of bringing the whole subject under the review of our Legislature, it was accordingly again taken up, and on the 7th of January, 1824, a new act was passed, (which takes effect on the first of that month,) according to which the principle of equality is applied to all foreign Powers who may be disposed to adopt it; and the continuance of this new act, as to time, is indefinite. The Congress of the United States supposed that the Kingdom of the Netherlands had done away all discriminations unfavorable to the vessels of the United States in a fair competition with Dutch vessels in the ports of the Netherlands, and accordingly, in enumerating the foreign Powers to which the act is to be extended, first designates that Kingdom. By the third section of the act it is declared, in effect, that its operation is to cease as to any of the nations enumerated which shall not continue to apply to vessels of the United States the principle of equality between them and its own, of which the act is predicated. A copy of this new act of Congress was communicated to the Chevalier de Reinhold, by Mr. Everett, on the 22d of March, 1824.

It is not my intention to discuss the question presented by Mr. Everett to the Government of the Netherlands. Whatever may be the form of the law, it is manifest that if in the ports of that Kingdom vessels of the United States pay, in export or import duties, ten per cent. more than Dutch vessels, or Dutch vessels pay ten per cent. less than those of the United States, there does not exist an equality between them. This proposition is too clear to be considered as open to argument. If the Government of the Netherlands thinks proper to originate such a difference, or, having created it, thinks proper to continue it, we shall not controvert its right to do so. But we are entitled to know its dispositions in this respect. I am directed, therefore, by the President, to inquire of you if you are authorized to state that the vessels of the United States and all goods and merchandise of the produce and manufacture of the United States laden therein and imported into any of the ports of the Netherlands are now exempted from all and every discriminating duty of impost and tonnage, direct or indirect, whatsoever, other or higher than is levied upon the vessels and similar goods and merchandise therein imported belonging to the subjects of the Netherlands; and, especially, if the laws referred to in Mr. Everett's note, hereinbefore mentioned, of the 7th of March, 1823, so far as they have an unequal operation upon the vessels of the United States, in comparison with Dutch vessels, have been modified or repealed. It will afford the President much satisfaction to find in your answer that the contingency provided for in the third section of the act of the 7th of January, 1824, has not arisen, and, consequently, that it is not his duty immediately to withdraw from Dutch vessels the privileges which they now enjoy in the ports of the United States equal with their own vessels.

I pray you, sir, to accept assurances of the distinguished consideration of your obedient servant,

H. CLAY.

The Chevalier Huygens to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

WASHINGTON, December 12, 1825.

The undersigned, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of his Majesty the King of the Netherlands near the United States of America, has had the honor to receive the note which Mr. Clay, Secretary of State, addressed to him, dated the 10th of this month, relative to representations made in 1823 and 1824 by the Chargé d'Affaires of the United States near the Government of the Netherlands, against a deviation from the admission, at duties equal with the national ships, of American vessels in the ports of the Netherlands, caused by certain fixations of duties in the tariff of the Netherlands.

The undersigned, not being furnished with instructions in regard to this question, regrets exceedingly his inability to answer, in a positive manner, the demand contained in the aforesaid note: "If the laws which gave rise to the representations of Mr. Everett in 1823, so far as they operate unequally upon American vessels, in comparison with the vessels of the Netherlands, have been modified or repealed?"

The undersigned thought that the differences in this regard had been discussed or explained between Mr. Everett and Mr. Reinhold, charged at that time with the Port Folio of Foreign Affairs, and that the result of this discussion was not of a nature to suppose that an uniformity of measures between the two Governments was far distant. It may be that the change of persons in the mutual missions, and the interruption of diplomatic relations, have been the cause that the state of the question is such as is represented, without being removed or decided.

The undersigned, however, believes to a certainty that his Government, having adopted a system of reciprocity in its commercial relations with friendly Powers, is always disposed to apply this system in regard to the United States.

The undersigned ought to confine himself to the preceding answer to the above-mentioned note of the Secretary of State, but he hastened to inform his Government, whose instructions upon the subject he has demanded.

He prays Mr. Clay to accept the assurances of his high consideration.

THE CHEVALIER HUYGENS.

Mr. Clay to the Chevalier Huygens.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, December 24, 1825.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 12th instant, which has been laid before the President. Some surprise is felt that you have no instructions on the subject of the inequality of duties against which Mr. Everett remonstrated both to Mr. Reinhold and his predecessor. Considering the nature of that inequality, and the time which has elapsed since its injustice was clearly demonstrated by Mr. Everett to the Government of his Majesty the King of the Netherlands, it was expected that you would have been fully authorized to give the requisite assurances of its being done away. Since you have no such authority, and have referred home for instructions, the President, willing to give a new proof of his desire to cultivate the most amicable relations with the Government of the Netherlands, will refrain, until he receives an answer, from exercising the power with which he is invested by the act of Congress referred to in my former note. That act leaving him no alternative in the event of the persistance of your Government in maintaining the inequality alluded to, it is expected, after all that has occurred, that you will lose no time in obtaining and communicating to this Department information whether it be intended so to persist or not.

I pray you to accept the renewed assurances of the distinguished consideration of your obedient servant,

H. CLAY.

The Chevalier Huygens to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

WASHINGTON, December 27, 1825.

The undersigned, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of his Majesty the King of the Netherlands, has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the note which Mr. Clay, Secretary of State addressed to him on the 24th of this month, to communicate to him the friendly intentions of the President with regard to the expectation of an answer or decision of his Government on the representations made by Mr. Everett respecting an inequality of the duties of tonnage borne by American ships in comparison of those borne by vessels of the Netherlands. The undersigned returns his thanks for this communication, and for the desire which it expresses of cultivating the most friendly relations with the Government of the Netherlands, and will hasten to transmit it, as he has not failed to do with the preceding note of the Secretary of State, of the 10th of this month, upon the same subject; and sure of the reciprocal sentiments entertained by his Majesty the King of the Netherlands for the United States, the undersigned flatters himself that he will receive, with the least possible delay, the instructions required.

He prays Mr. Clay to accept the repeated assurances of his high consideration.

C. D. E. J. BANGEMAN HUYGENS.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Clay to Mr. Hughes, Chargé d'Affaires of the United States to the Netherlands, dated Department of State, Washington, April 27, 1826.

"I have received no assurance from Mr. Huygens that the inequality in the ports of the Netherlands between American and Dutch vessels, which forms the topic of my letter to him, under date of the 10th of December last, has been removed. You will again bring that subject before the Government of the Netherlands, and express the just expectation of the President that it should be forthwith done away, if it yet continues in operation."

The Chevalier Huygens to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

WASHINGTON, September 15, 1826.

SIR: Furnished with instructions relative to the demands which you did me the honor to address to me, of the 10th and 24th of December, 1825, in regard to an article in the tariff of the Netherlands, of the 22d of August, 1822, which grants a restitution of 10 per cent. on the duties of merchandise imported and exported under the national flag, I am now authorized to explain to the Government of the United States the system which governed that of the Netherlands in this matter.

When, in 1817, negotiations were commenced between the two Governments to relieve the languishing and interrupted commerce between the two nations, and to favor their relations, it was intended to obtain, by mutual concessions, reciprocal advantages. At this period the flag of the United States already enjoyed in the Netherlands all the advantages which flowed from the liberal system which was then predominant. This system preceded what the United States wished to obtain; for, by the legislation of the Netherlands, the Americans were permitted to import and export any productions, without exception of origin, upon paying the same duties as national vessels, with the exception of only a few articles. The Americans were, besides, permitted to navigate to the colonies of the Netherlands.

The Government of the Netherlands does not think new concessions necessary to strengthen the existing grievances against the discriminating duties which press upon its commerce in America. It is also authorized to think that the report of the American Commissioners upon the fruitless issue of the above-mentioned conferences directed Congress in its deliberations on the passage of the act of 20th of April, 1818.

This act was considered in the Netherlands as a commencement of a system of reciprocity; and they flattered themselves, it is true, that the advantages granted by this act to the national flag, over the flags of other nations, would have a salutary effect upon the navigation, and produced the hope that it would pave the way to the establishment of the ancient commercial relations between the two countries.

But experience has proved that the direct relations continue languishing, and that the American flag alone possessed the advantages which the liberal system in the Netherlands presented to it. It was observed that, during six years, no amelioration took place in the direct navigation of the Netherlands in the United States, and that during this time the flag of the Netherlands had scarcely participated in it.

From Rotterdam, where formerly the commerce with America had been very active, not a single vessel under the national flag had been despatched; from Amsterdam and Antwerp the number was confined to a few. On the contrary, these ports had been visited by a number of American ships.

These, therefore, have alone derived the advantages of the equality of duties, whilst the ships of the Netherlands have obtained, if I may so speak, no benefit from the act of April 20, 1818; and if this act was not sufficient to encourage new speculations, and to excite emulation in the flag of the Netherlands, it ought to be still less expected from that of the 7th of January, 1824. This act, instead of fulfilling the concession which might, in justice, be expected, diminishes the advantages stipulated by the former. This general measure, granting to almost all the commercial nations of Europe rights which had been granted lately to the Netherlands alone, by generalizing them, dispelled the illusion, if I may so speak, of the advantages which the act of the 20th of April, 1818, had produced.

In this state of affairs the Government of the Netherlands did not expect a renewal of the representations against the tenth article of the law of August 26, 1822. It flattered itself that the Government of the United States had admitted the explanation, "that by the tariff of the Netherlands the duties of entry and clearance are, in general, the same for all foreign and the national flags, and that the reimbursement of the ten per cent. only aimed at the encouragement of maritime building, and can only be considered as a premium or gratification."

In effect, this ten per cent. is not a diminution of the duties of navigation, properly speaking, because it is not calculated by the capaciousness of the ships, but is granted upon the duties of entry for merchandise loaded on national ships, and is, consequently, entirely conformable with the duties of the tariff; the amount of reimbursement depending upon the nature of the objects of which the cargo is composed, so that it may be more considerable for a small vessel than for a large ship, according as the merchandise loaded thereon is liable to pay more or less duties. It is not, then, in reality, from the duty of tonnage, on which, in the first instance, the reciprocity is applicable, that the representations of the United States can draw the question. Upon consideration, the Government of the Netherlands cannot help thinking that they have demonstrated that the representations of the Chargé d'Affaires of the United States, in 1823 and 1824, were not based upon a system of reciprocity; and it is probable that, if Mr. Everett had not gone away during the deliberations on a new report which was about to be made upon this matter, he would have understood that there were no reasons for granting the reimbursement of ten per cent. of the duties of entry and clearance to American ships, which he claimed.

These were the circumstances, sir, when the notes which you did me the honor to address me on the 10th and 24th December last arrived in Holland, and they caused the matter to be taken into consideration anew.

In order to understand with certainty if the state of the navigation between the Kingdom and the United States could actually admit of a more favorable reception of the above-mentioned representations than in 1823 and 1824, the state of the ships and their cargoes which sailed between the Netherlands and the United States in the last three years was taken.

It is evident, from this table, that there were entered in the ports of the Netherlands under the American flag—

In 1823	136 ships.
In 1824	98 "
And during the first six months of 1825	55 "
Under the flag of the Netherlands—
In 1823	2 "
In 1824	5 "
And during the first six months of 1825	5 "
And cleared under the American flag—
In 1823	65 "
In 1824	97 "
And during the first six months of 1825	66 "
Under the flag of the Netherlands—
In 1823	6 "
In 1824	11 "
During the first six months of 1825	7 "

This disproportion in the number of American and national ships engaged in the commerce between the two countries is too striking not to recognize in it the inequality of advantages which exist in the reciprocal relations, and ought to convince the Government of the Netherlands that the legislative provisions of the United States in favor of its flag had produced no benefit to it.

The cause of this difference in the navigation of the two nations ought to be principally attributed to the tendency of the tariffs of duties in the two countries, by which, although the ships of the Netherlands and their cargoes are treated in the American ports on the same footing as the national vessels, they are still in a worse condition than the American ships and their cargoes in the ports of the Netherlands, even if they were considered only as foreign vessels.

And how could the ships of the Netherlands transport their merchandise to the United States when they find there the principal productions of the Kingdom, as, for example, Geneva, sail-cloth, cheese, and many other articles charged so high as to pay, calculated from the original price, from 50 to 100 per cent. of the value. These articles, justly including a part of the provisions and necessaries of the crews, with which it may be useful sometimes for the captains to part with, or which they are often obliged to sell, the impost upon them presses essentially upon the navigation, as also the dues of pilotage upon the footing of foreign ships, as they have been demanded and paid, even recently, at Norfolk, by the brig Mary, Captain James Almeida. But another disadvantage to the ships of the Netherlands in the ports of the United States is found in the facility of desertion and the power which the tribunals claim in the differences between the crews, without admitting the claims of the Consuls on this subject, or acknowledging their right of decision. In fine, in the limitation of the cargoes which the ships of the Netherlands are permitted to bring to America to duties equal with the Americans.

It is easy to conclude from hence, on one side, that the reciprocity of duties of navigation for the ships of the Netherlands to an equality with those of the United States in American ports is of little or no utility to the former, because the merchants of the Kingdom can find no profit to charge upon the merchandise entering into their commerce, and more especially the products of the national industry, on account of the excessive duties imposed upon them, and that the owners or captains cannot be tempted to offer facilities in the freight. On the other hand, it is evident that, in consequence of the liberal stipulations of the tariff of the Netherlands, especially in regard to the products of the United States and the equality of the duties of tonnage, the American ships may bring continually their merchandise, with advantage, to the Netherlands, although some articles, as coffee, sugar, &c., are subjected to a heavier duty than national vessels pay, and although they do not receive a restitution of ten per cent. To this it may be added that, by a law of 24th March last, which was put in force on the 1st of April following, and which I take the liberty of enclosing, the duties of entry upon cotton, tobacco, and sugar, all prime articles of importation for Americans, have been fixed so low that they amount scarcely to one per cent. of the value. Besides, it is to be observed that the ships of the United States do not pay, in the ports of the Netherlands, higher pilotage dues than national ships. Moreover, the Consuls of the United States are in full possession of the rights and prerogatives which the Consuls of the most favored nations enjoy in the Netherlands. Their decisions in point of differences between American crews are respected, and the authorities comply, without difficulty, to their claims for the restoration of deserters.

All these advantages to the American flag ought not to be forgotten, and it must be acknowledged that the navigation and commerce under this flag, anything appearing to prove a different treatment, are much more favored in the Kingdom than the navigation and commerce under the flag of the Netherlands are in the United States, although it be treated on the footing of the national flag.

From this explanation one must justly be convinced that the Government of the United States has no subjects of real complaint in regard to the treatment which its flag experiences in the Netherlands; but it may see, on the contrary, in the new dispositions of the tariff, the liberality of the custom-house system of the Netherlands. It will be observed, at the same time, that an equal treatment of American ships with the national, with regard to the premium of 10 per cent., could be based only upon a reciprocal advantage for the commerce of the Netherlands relative to the duties of importation in America.

In consequence of this system I am authorized to express to the Government of the United States the desire and good will of his Majesty the King of the Netherlands to have, ulteriorly, a fellow feeling with the President, in case of a similar disposition, and a wish to consent to a reciprocal diminution of the duties of entry upon the original merchandise of the Netherlands, or brought with ships under its flag, so that, in consenting to new advantages to American ships in the Netherlands, its flag may also reciprocally receive a more advantageous treatment than at present in the ports of the United States, and that, on this hypothesis, agreements may be adopted, in regard to merchandise, as well as to the subject of navigation, all which, by favoring the prosperity of the two nations, may, at the same time, draw closer the bonds of amity which exist between the two Governments.

Be pleased to accept, upon this occasion, the assurances of the high consideration with which I have the honor to be, sir, your most humble and most obedient servant,

C. D. E. J. BANGEMAN HUYGENS.

Mr. Clay to the Chevalier Huygens.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, October 25, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 15th ultimo, communicating, according to instructions received by you from the Government of the Netherlands, the explanation which it has to offer of the inequality existing in the ports of that Kingdom between the duties to which vessels of the United States and national vessels are subjected. The President, to whom I have submitted your note, has been anxious to find, but has been unable to perceive in it, a satisfactory explanation of that inequality.

The negotiations in 1817, to which you refer, had in view, among other objects, that of placing the vessels of the two countries, in their respective ports, upon a footing of perfect equality in regard to impost and tonnage duties, so as to leave a fair competition between them in the transportation of the subjects of commerce. The act of Congress of the 20th of April, 1818, was founded upon express assurances from the Government of the Netherlands that no inequality existed in the ports of the Netherlands between the vessels of the two countries in the above particular; and it accordingly repeals the discriminating duties of the United States in regard to Dutch vessels, the repeal to take effect from the time the Government of the Netherlands abolished the discriminating duties on its part. All that had passed between the Governments of the two countries on this subject prior to the article in the tariff of the Netherlands of the 22d August, 1822, entitled us to conclude that there was a perfect understanding between them that no discriminating duties should exist in the ports of the one operating to the disadvantage of the vessels of the other. This mutual understanding ought to have all the effect of a solemn contract, and the United States have accordingly so treated it from the passage of their act of Congress in 1818 to the present time. For more than four years have their vessels been subjected to a charge, in the ports of the Netherlands, of ten per cent. on their cargoes greater than is paid by Dutch vessels. We have, again and again, remonstrated against this inequality, and now we are informed in your note, as a reason for not fulfilling the engagement, that the navigation of the Netherlands has not derived all the benefit which its Government anticipated from the equalization of duties. If that even were the result of experience, it certainly could afford no justification for the non-execution of an arrangement which ought to be regarded as guarantied by national faith.

The Government of the United States demands no new concessions from that of the Netherlands. It requires only that the equality which had been stipulated by their mutual laws, and which had existed prior to the tariff of August, 1822, shall be fairly enforced. It can perceive no reason for not giving effect to that stipulation in the state of the trade between the United States and the ports of Rotterdam, Amsterdam, and Antwerp, which is described by you. The President would be happy to see the greatest commercial activity prevailing between those and all other ports of the Netherlands and the United States; but that is a matter beyond the control of either Government, and must be left to the wants of consumption and to individual enterprise. Nor can it be admitted that the Government of the Netherlands is justified in making the discrimination which exists in its ports by the fact of the act of Congress of January, 1824, having extended to other Powers the same liberality which our laws dispensed to the Netherlands. We came under no such restriction in that respect to your Government; and it is the desire of the United States to place their navigation with all countries on the liberal and equal footing of perfect reciprocity.

We can comprehend very clearly that the aim, as you state, of the restitution of ten per cent. of the duties levied in the ports of the Netherlands in behalf of Dutch vessels, is to encourage them. The object of our discriminating laws was to encourage our navigation. Relinquishing that object, and depending on equal competition, we abolished them in regard to the Netherlands, and placed the vessels of the two countries, in that respect, in our ports, in a condition of entire equality. And it is precisely because the tendency of the tenth article of your tariff is that of encouragement to Dutch vessels, and discouragement to all foreign vessels, including American, that it disturbs the equality which ought to exist between Dutch vessels and those of the United States, that we are authorized to expect its repeal. The fact of the existence of the inequality cannot be affected by the form of the privilege which is enjoyed. Whether it be that of a direct bounty to the native vessel, or compels the foreign vessel to pay more, and allows the native to pay less duty, or be laid upon the cargo, or upon the tonnage, the effect is the same. The object of a mutual abolition of discriminating duties in the ports of the two countries was to leave to their vessels a fair and equal competition in the transportation of commodities between them. But can such an equality of competition exist, if, in the ports of one country, its vessels pay ten per cent. less than those of the other; or, what is in effect the same thing, after paying a like amount of duty, receive back ten per cent. of that amount?

You remark that the ten per cent. is not a diminution of the duties of navigation, because it is calculated, not upon the capacity of the vessel, but on the amount of duties on the cargo with which she may be laden. But its effect is the same; that is, to favor the Dutch tonnage employed in the trade between the Netherlands and the United States.

Protesting against the principle that a nation is absolved from the duty of fulfilling its engagements because it has been disappointed in the degree of benefit which it expected to derive from them, the table which you exhibit, of the relative amount of tonnage employed in the trade between the United States and the Netherlands, admits of several observations. Assuming the facts which it presents to be correct, it shows a gradual increase of the Dutch and a diminution of the American tonnage during the two years and a half which it comprises. The marine of the Netherlands was almost destroyed during the long wars which originated out of the French Revolution. The ten years which had intervened since their conclusion, were not sufficient to restore it to its ancient flourishing condition. The first object of the Government, and of the enterprise of the Dutch merchants, was probably to revive the intercourse with their distant colonies, and in that their marine was principally employed. Time is necessary to establish the habits and to create the mercantile marine necessary to a foreign trade; and, accordingly, the table shows that time is working, slowly but certainly, its usual effects.

It cannot be admitted that the state of our tariff operates more to the disadvantage of the tonnage of the Netherlands than to that of the United States. If it prevents some exchanges which might take place on a lower scale of duties, that affects alike the tonnage of both countries. Whatever may be the amount of transportation between them, if the vessels and their cargoes of both are liable only to the same duties, the equality of the competition between them, so far as it depends upon legislation, will be preserved; and those of each will have a fair opportunity of sharing in the transportation, whether it be chiefly from the ports of the one country or of the other. As to the application of the American tariff to the produce of the Netherlands, it must be remarked that it is received upon the footing of that of the most favored nation. It unfortunately happens that the articles of Geneva, sail-cloth, and cheese, which you particularize, are similar to those which our own country produces; and our tariff was not arranged with any reference to its particular operation on Dutch produce, but with the general purpose of protecting American industry. The articles, on the contrary, of cotton, sugar, and tobacco, not being products of the Netherlands, may be admitted at a low rate of duty, not only without injury, but, as it respects the first especially, with great encouragement to the industry of the Netherlands.

The understanding which existed between the two Governments in relation to the abolition of discriminating duties did not embrace the subjects of pilotage and the jurisdiction which ought to be exercised by the Consuls of the two countries over seamen deserting from their respective flags. Pilotage is regulated, under the authority of an act of Congress, by the laws of the several States. It is not known that those laws generally make any discrimination between a foreign and a native flag; and if such difference were made in the case of the brig Mary, we have no other information of it but that which is contained in your note. If no higher duties are paid by American vessels than those of the Netherlands in the waters of the latter, the Government of the United States would readily apply the principle of equality, adopted in reference to discriminating duties, to the demand for pilotage. As to the control of the Consuls of the Netherlands over deserting seamen, the Government of the United States would be willing to enter into any agreement founded on mutual convenience and reciprocity.

With respect to the desire of the Government of the Netherlands, which you are authorized to express, to treat with the United States for a mutual reduction of duties of impost, I have the honor to state that the policy which this Government has hitherto adopted has been to reserve to itself, exclusively, the judgment of the proper rate of those duties. In fixing it, equality has been alike dispensed to all nations. The circumstances of no two given countries are of such exact resemblance as to admit of the same rate of duty for both. The United States are not, therefore, prepared to change their established policy. There is a manifest distinction, however, between the standard of duties which is applied to the articles of a commerce between the two countries, and the principle of equality in the transportation of those articles by the vessels of the same countries. Leaving each free to impose such duties as the state of its revenue, of its institutions, and of its domestic industry may seem to require, there is nothing to prevent the operation of a rule of fair competition between the vessels of the two countries, by each being allowed to export or import at the same rates of duty for vessel and cargo. The laws of the United States and of the Netherlands professed to establish such a rule. The Dutch tariff of 1822 violates it; and I am therefore directed anew to express the expectation of the President that the equality will be restored, and the hope that your instructions will spare him the necessity of performing the duty which is enjoined by the act of Congress of January, 1824.

I avail myself of this occasion to tender you assurances of my high consideration.

H. CLAY.

The Chevalier Huygens to the Secretary of State.

[Translation.]

WASHINGTON, November 11, 1826.

SIR: I have had the honor to receive, on the 1st day of this month, the note which you addressed to me, under date of the 25th ultimo, in answer to the explanation which I was charged to make to you, on the 15th of September last, in respect to the system which directs my Government in the claim of the Government of the United States in favor of their flag, touching the restitution or premium which the tenth article of the tariff of 1822, of the Netherlands, grants to national vessels on the duties of importation and exportation of merchandise.

The President not being satisfied with the explanations given, and not admitting the reasons alleged for considering this article as not applicable to the duties of tonnage equalized between the two countries, I think, for the interest of the reciprocal relations, that I ought to add to the above cited explanation the following observations:

From the commencement of the relations between the United Provinces of the Netherlands and the United States of America, founded and stipulated by the treaty of 1782, and faithfully maintained until the war of Europe, and, in fine, the invasion of the United Provinces of the Netherlands by a foreign Power, suspended these happy relations, the American flag was there treated on an equality with the national flag, which enjoyed a perfect reciprocity in the United States. At that time, however, the tariff of the United Provinces of the Netherlands granted advantages to certain branches of the national navigation. For example, the national vessels destined to the whale fishery, at that time very numerous, paid 8½ to 12 per cent. less than foreign vessels on their cargo. The vessels of the India Companies were equally, but otherwise, favored. This circumstance proves that, at all times, and when a formal treaty between the two countries, based upon a system of liberality and reciprocity, was in force, such advantages were admitted, without appearing to derogate from that system. The present Government of the Netherlands, in making the tariff of 1822, only acted on the same principle, without thinking that it was restrained in the formation of the law by that which admits the equality of the duties of tonnage in favor of the American flag.

The United States find themselves, in this regard, in the same predicament with all the Powers which have equalized the duties of tonnage with the Netherlands, by the consideration that the tariff in question does not derogate from their rights, and there would, therefore, occur a particular concession to the United States in applying the tenth article of the tariff of 1822 to the merchandise loaded on American bottoms. In this acceptation the Government of the United States do not pretend to it; yet that of the Netherlands cannot grant it but by considering it thus, and against some conventional equivalent.

The desire of his Majesty the King of the Netherlands to favor and extend the navigation and commerce between his Kingdom and the United States is well known, and of the sincerity of his dispositions the President cannot be in doubt. His Majesty has given unequivocal proofs of it, from his coming to the throne. To the time when Belgium was united to the Kingdom of the Netherlands, his Majesty, without knowing the reciprocal dispositions of the Government of the United States, admitted, without hesitation, the bases of the treaty of 1782, and caused them to be applied to the navigation and commerce of the United States. The Americans were immediately placed in the position of the most favored nation. This was in the confidence and hope of finding their intentions reciprocal; but still encountering, in the system of legislation of the United States, difficulties in this respect, his Majesty only obtained, at first, from their Government, promises, and, especially on the subject of the existence or renewal of the treaty of 1782, evasive answers. Nevertheless, his Majesty did not relax in his system of concessions, and the constant instructions to his legation prove the value which he set upon the re-establishment of the ancient relations between the two countries. I can cite, on this subject, the notes sent by his Chargé d'Affaires on the 4th of April and 16th of September, 1816. But the hesitation of the Government of the United States, on its side, to adopt a system of liberality and reciprocity towards the navigation and commerce of the Netherlands continued. In the month of August, 1817, when the conferences commenced for the making of the treaty of commerce, no change was effected, and the flag of the Netherlands was always treated in the United States as a foreign flag. The American plenipotentiaries, however, were convinced that the navigation and commerce of their country were in the full enjoyment, not only of all the rights which the second article of the treaty of 1782 granted them, but, over and above, of new advantages. Among these advantages may be ranked, as one of high importance, the navigation to the King's possessions in the Great Indies, against which a direct equivalent could not be given by the United States, they not having colonies.

His Majesty might have expected to learn, by the agency of plenipotentiaries, that their Government had, or would, apply the act of Congress of March 3, 1815, to the flag of the Netherlands; but, instead of this weak act of reciprocity, the plenipotentiaries commenced by demands to which his Majesty was not authorized to subscribe. In fine, it was only on the 20th of April, 1818, that Congress especially abrogated "the discriminating duties imposed upon the flag of the Netherlands, in regard to the duties of tonnage, as well as in relation to the produce or manufactures of the territories of the King in Europe, or such produce and manufactures as can or ought to be considered as habitually loaded originally in the ports of the Kingdom."

The Government of the Netherlands considered that law as an act of reciprocity as to the duties of tonnage, and as a partial and limited concession in regard to the duties of importation on merchandise loaded under its flag. It was satisfied to see in the act of Congress that disposition to favor the navigation and commerce between the two countries, even beyond what the President thought he was able or ought to propose. The news of it was received in the Netherlands with that feeling which so voluntarily appears in a nation which had the recollection of ancient relations advantageous to the two countries, and which saw in the act of Congress a disposition favorable to their entire renewal. It was agreeable to recognize in it the commencement of the application of the basis of the treaty of 1782, and it was hoped that the United States would continue to remove the restrictions which were contrary to them. This treaty did not limit the merchandise which might be imported into America to equal duties by the ships of the United Provinces of the Netherlands, nor restrain them to a direct navigation; and if the treaty were no more in force, it was expected, from the principle of reciprocity proclaimed by different acts of the United States, since it had been formally communicated that no limitation restricted the American flag in the Netherlands. But this expectation was deceptive. After having, for a long time, given to the American flag the enjoyment of the advantages which they had in the ports of the Netherlands, and, above all, to the Great Indies, from which it was formerly excluded, and where there was no obligation to admit it, the flag of the Netherlands continued, during four years, to navigate, with a disadvantage too evident to admit of an illusion, upon the unequal position of the privileges of the two flags; that of America being able to import and export all merchandise whatever in the Netherlands, from all parts of the world, and to all its ports, and that of the Netherlands being limited in the cargo, and to a direct navigation to the American ports, conjoined with other inconveniences existing for it in these ports, could no more enter into competition with the former in the commercial movement between the two countries.

If, then, in 1822, the Government of the Netherlands adopted a general measure in its tariff, by a restitution, at the expense of the Treasury, and which was not imposed upon commerce, to countervail the inequality of the position between the national and foreign navigation, in its own ports as in foreign ports, this was only a consequence of that inequality.

After the enumeration of the disadvantages to the flag of the Netherlands which, antecedently, I have taken the liberty to submit to your consideration, and to discuss in the conference which you granted me, it appears to me conciliatory on the part of my Government to have taken the measure in question, instead of recriminating means, which it might have adopted to remedy the false position of the national flag. If it has preferred the measure, the expenses of which it alone bears, it is not for foreign Powers, which have been the cause of it, to complain. It is the Netherlands that have suffered and still suffer by not receiving elsewhere, for the national flag and its commerce, the advantages which the other flags reap in her ports. The patience and perseverance which the King has employed in waiting for the display of the liberal system which ought to extend the navigation and the commerce of the world, of which the Netherlands have given the first example, will be surely appreciated, one day, by all the commercial nations which, long fearing, from different motives, to pursue this system, appear now disposed to give it fulfilment. The conventions recently concluded between the United States and Denmark, as well as with Guatemala, leave no doubt that the Government of the United States wishes to put said system into execution, and the King, my master, will see with pleasure, I think, laid down in these acts the same principles which form the basis of the treaty of 1782, and of his commercial legislation.

In this state of things, can it be that the commercial relations between the two countries present differences to be discussed? Yet, as long as the application of a system of perfect reciprocity is retarded or refused in the United States, in regard to the navigation and commerce of the Netherlands, it appears to me that there is no room for insisting on the application of the tenth article of the tariff of 1822, in favor of American ships.

It is unquestionable that the commercial relations between the two countries, before being settled, render voluntary every act of concession on either side; and it is for each Government to judge if that which it receives is analogous to that which it grants. In the present position I know of no other engagements between the two Governments. There are between them, for the moment, only acts of reciprocity, which are characteristic of justice, equity, and friendship.

The Government of the United States is not supposed bound to maintain the act of Congress of April 20, 1818, which granted a particular concession to the navigation and commerce of the Netherlands above other nations; and the Government of the Netherlands has not objected to the act of the month of January, 1824. Yet it was no less true that this latter act lessened the advantages which accrued to the flag of the Netherlands from the former. On the other hand, there is no obligation on the Government of the Netherlands not to lessen the advantages which the flag of the United States enjoys in her ports. It would certainly be more advantageous to the two nations to leave that precarious legislation, and to be bound by liberal and reciprocal conventions, and it must be hoped that the increasing and generally felt interest to favor, by all reasonable concessions, the relations between the nations, will soon bring about this state of things between two nations whose prosperity can only be a mutual benefit.

Besides, sir, I have transmitted the above mentioned note, with which you honored me, to my Government, and have submitted to it the considerations which it demands.

I pray you, on this occasion, to accept the renewed assurances of my high consideration.

C. D. E. J. BANGEMAN HUYGENS.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Clay to Mr. Hughes, dated

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, December 12, 1826.

"The departure of Mr. Huygens, the son of the Dutch minister, affords an opportunity of acknowledging the receipt at this Department of your despatches, numbered and unnumbered, to the 18th of October last, inclusive; and of transmitting the President's message, with the documents from the Department of State, communicated to Congress at the commencement of the present session. I add copies of such correspondence, not previously put in your possession, as has passed between the Dutch minister and me since your departure from the United States.

"From the message and that correspondence you will observe that the two Governments have not been able to come to any agreement on the subject of the discrimination made in the ports of the Netherlands in behalf of Dutch vessels, to the disadvantage of those of the United States, and that the President has referred the whole affair to Congress. It is probable that Congress will, during the present session, provide by law for the inequality. What may be the nature of the enactment which they may think proper to make, it would be premature now to intimate. We regret very much the perseverance of the Government of the Netherlands in a system which is manifestly at variance with their professions, and with that fair reciprocity which had been promised on both sides, but which has been enforced by us only. We might be more disposed to acquiesce in the present state of the Dutch law, if the example would not have an injurious effect upon our relations with other maritime Powers, with all of which it is our anxious desire to adopt the liberal principle of equal competition and perfect reciprocity."

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 449. [2D SESSION.

COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE WITH THE BRITISH PROVINCES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 24, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the undersigned, Chairman and Secretary of a meeting of delegates from the twenty towns in the county of St. Lawrence, and State of New York, assembled in convention in pursuance of previous public notice, to represent and express the views and interests of the citizens of said county, in pursuance of a resolution unanimously adopted at said convention, do hereby, in behalf of said convention and of the citizens represented in it, beg leave respectfully to lay before your honorable body a brief statement of the grievances under which they labor, and of the causes which produce them.

Your honorable body need not to be informed that the Imperial Parliament of Great Britain, in and by its several acts passed on the 5th of August, 1822, and on the 27th of June, 1825, have imposed upon the introduction into their North American provinces of breadstuffs, ashes, lumber, and various other articles of American produce, such duties of impost as, in most cases, practically to amount to a prohibition of trade and intercourse therein; and that, in and by the latter act, it has actually prohibited, among other things, the introduction into the said provinces of salted provisions from the United States, thereby effectually depriving the inhabitants of this extensive and hitherto growing frontier of its accustomed trade in the channels traced out by the finger of Nature herself, and heretofore freely used, under the high sanctions of the Government, by amicable treaty regulations—measures tending in their effects, if not seasonably and effectually counteracted, to impoverish the natural resources, undermine the prosperity, alarmingly to reduce the population, and consequently to sap the strength of this important border of the Union; which acts and all their provisions, whether they have their origin in the predetermined hostility of the British Government, which recent developments in relation to her general colonial policy, as it regards the United States afford some grounds to fear, or whether they are to be attributed to a total disregard of our unquestionable rights, when their exercise may be deemed to come in collision with the interests of that Government, ought to be met by calm yet determined opposition, and to be counteracted by all the means which either Providence or fortune may have placed within our reach.

The National Legislature is also well advised of the fact that, by the final establishment of the boundary line between the United States and Canada, which lies between the point where the 45th degree of north latitude strikes the river St. Lawrence and Lake Superior, as settled by the Commissioners of both Governments, under the 6th article of the treaty of Ghent, the several islands in that river, known on the maps or charts thereof by the names of Upper Long Sault island, Lower Long Sault island, and Barnhart's island, belong to the United States; whereby, and by the nature of the navigation, the only practicable route for loaded boats descending the said river is through and upon exclusively American waters, on the southerly side of said islands, for distance of about fifteen miles, thereby enabling this Government to control the use of those waters, and to impose, by law, such countervailing duties or burdens on foreign vessels and their cargoes entering the same as sound policy and the ends of equal justice may require.

If the undersigned have a just conception of the intended operation of the late British order in council in relation to the colonial trade, the trade of this frontier with the provinces immediately adjoining the United States is not directly prohibited by the terms of that order. But the undersigned need only to refer your honorable body to the provisions of the aforementioned acts of the British Parliament to bring to every mind the assured conviction that the practical effect of those provisions of exaction and of prohibition is, and must continue to be, the entire destruction of that trade—a destruction much more complete and absolute than that of the trade between the seaboard of the United States and the British West Indies, by reason of that order; inasmuch as, in the case of your memorialists, nature has forbidden them any resort to circuity of voyage to a market through any intermediate neutral port, and the efforts of art have not yet, by overcoming the obstacles of nature, opened any internal communication to any of our own domestic markets.

The order in council and the aforesaid restrictions imposed on the articles of trade passing down the St. Lawrence are only different means to attain the same end—the destruction of our trade with the British West Indies, and with or through the Canadian ports—and seem to call for equally strong measures to countervail their effects.

Your memorialists, reposing the most entire confidence in the wisdom of Congress to devise the best measures of redress for the unexampled sufferings which they endure, by reason of their utter exclusion from all foreign or domestic markets for the bountiful and rich productions of their forests, their ores, their quarries, and their fertile soil, inhabited by sturdy freemen, destined to become, in times of peril, the defenders of this exposed frontier, are content to abide the decisions, and to support the measures which that wisdom shall adopt. But they cannot forbear, respectfully, to suggest to that body whose acknowledged duty it is to extend equal protection to all, that satisfied, as they must assuredly be, that further negotiation affords no reasonable prospect of relief, it is the deliberate opinion of your memorialists that it is the undoubted right, if not the incumbent duty of the National Legislature to impose, by law, upon British products passing through or upon the aforesaid American waters of the St. Lawrence river, duties of transit, corresponding in amount with those imposed by the British act of June 27, 1825, on American products passing into the Canadas, and in every respect countervailing the provisions of the said act of Parliament; thereby visiting upon our commercial rival the evils of her own policy, and making a strong appeal to her interests and convenience.

Your memorialists therefore pray your honorable body that such law may be passed; or that your honorable body, as well with a view to the future military defence as to the permanent prosperity of this frontier, will adopt such other measures as shall, by affording an interior communication with the markets of the United States, produce the desired relief to this suffering section of the Union. And your memorialists, as in in duty bound, will ever pray.

JABEZ WILLES, Chairman.

DAVID C. JUDSON, Secretary.

OGDENSBURG, January 1, 1827.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 450. [2D SESSION.

COMMISSIONS OF AMERICAN MINISTERS TO THE CONGRESS AT PANAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE JANUARY 24, 1827.

To the Senate of the United States:

In compliance with a resolution of the Senate of the 23d instant, I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State with the accompanying documents.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, January 29, 1827.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, January 26, 1827.

The Secretary of State, to whom has been referred the resolution of the Senate of the 23d instant, requesting the President to communicate to the Senate a copy "of the commission and credentials granted to John Sergeant, Esq., as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to the Assembly of American Ministers, said to be transferred from Panama to Tacubaya, in Mexico; also, any information he may possess tending to show what are the objects proposed to be accomplished by the said Assembly, whether the United States have been invited to be represented by a minister at the same, and if so, for what purposes," has the honor to report herewith a copy of the commission and letter of credence desired, and also copies of certain documents which have been communicated to the House of Representatives* during its present session, relating to the Congress at Panama, and which may be acceptable to the Senate. These documents, together with those heretofore communicated to Congress, furnish all the information in this Department (except the instructions which have been prepared for the ministers intended to represent the United States at the contemplated Congress) tending to show its objects and purposes. Those instructions originally destined to be used at Panama are equally applicable to the Congress at Tacubaya. No invitations to the Government of the United States to send ministers to the proposed Assembly, other than those which were communicated to the Senate at its last session, have been received at this Department.

All which is respectfully submitted.

H. CLAY.

John Quincy Adams, President of the United States of America, to Richard C. Anderson and John Sergeant, greeting:

Reposing especial trust and confidence in your integrity, prudence, and ability, I have nominated and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, do appoint you, jointly and severally, Envoys Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary of the United States, to the Assembly of American Nations at Panama, or at such other place on the continent of America as it may adjourn to or convene at; authorizing you hereby, jointly and severally, to confer and treat with ministers duly empowered from all or any of the nations of America, of peace, friendship, commerce, navigation, maritime law, neutral and belligerent rights, and all other matters interesting to the American nations, or which may be duly given you in charge hereafter; and the said office to hold and exercise during the pleasure of the President of the United States for the time being.

In testimony whereof, I have caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed. Given [L. S.] under my hand, at the city of Washington, the fourteenth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America the fiftieth.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

By the President:
H. CLAY, Secretary of State.

[Credential and full power.]

John Quincy Adams, President of the United States of America, to all whom these presents shall concern, greeting:

From the especial trust and confidence reposed in the integrity, prudence, and ability of Richard C. Anderson, minister plenipotentiary of the United States to the Republic of Colombia, and of John Sergeant, a distinguished citizen of the United States, I have nominated and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof, have appointed them, jointly and severally, Envoys Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary of the said United States to the Assembly of American Nations at Panama, or any other place on the continent of America at which the said Assembly may convene, or to which it may adjourn; and I have authorized them, jointly and severally, to confer and treat with ministers of that Assembly, duly empowered, from all or any of the nations of America, of peace, friendship, commerce, navigation, maritime law, neutral and belligerent rights, and all other matters interesting to the American nations, or which may be duly given them in charge; and I do hereby give them, jointly and severally, full power and authority to conclude with the said ministers, jointly or severally, who may be furnished with the like full powers, a treaty or treaties, convention or conventions, touching the premises, transmitting the same to the President of the United States for his final ratification, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the said United States. I have, therefore, to pray all whom it may concern to give full credence to whatsoever the said ministers of the United States, jointly or severally, shall do or say in the name and on the behalf of this Government; more especially when they shall declare and make known its earnest desire to cultivate and promote the friendship of all the other Governments and nations of America.

* For the documents communicated with this report vide antecedent No. 443, communicated to the House of Representatives December 26, 1826.

In testimony whereof, I have caused the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed. Given [L. S.] under my hand, at the city of Washington, the eleventh day of May, A. D. 1826, and of the Independence of the United States of America the fiftieth.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

By the President:
H. CLAY, Secretary of State.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 451. [2D SESSION.

CLAIMS OF AMERICAN CITIZENS ON FRANCE, NAPLES, HOLLAND, AND DENMARK, ON ACCOUNT OF SPOLIATIONS SINCE THE YEAR 1805.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES JANUARY 31, 1827.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, January 30, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor herewith to transmit a report prepared in obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 19th of May, 1826, and to be, with the highest respect, your obedient servant,

H. CLAY.

JOHN W. TAYLOR, Esq., Speaker of the House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, January 30, 1827.

In obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 19th May, 1826, directing the Secretary of State to submit to the House, at the present session of Congress, "a schedule of the claims of American citizens which have been or shall, previous to October 1, 1826, be filed in his Department, on the Governments of France, Naples, Holland, and Denmark, for illegal captures, spoliations, confiscations, or any other illegal acts, since the year 1805, in such manner as to present, in a tabular statement, the name of the claimant, the date of the act complained of, the name of the vessel which was the subject of the injury, the amount of the loss sustained, and any other circumstance essential to the understanding of the general nature of the claims, discriminating, as far as practicable, between such cases as were, and such as were not, subjected to adjudication in the courts of the aforesaid Governments," the Secretary of State has now the honor to report a digest prepared accordingly. He respectfully requests a reference to an explanatory memorandum by which it is preceded. The execution of the work has been delayed by the inattention of claimants to the punctual transmission of their claims to the Department of State by the time (the 1st of October last) specified in the resolution of the House. They continued to forward their claims some time after that day, and up to within a few days past. It would not be safe to assume that the digest comprehends all the claims comprehended in the terms of the resolution. Others no doubt exist which have not, from accident, inattention, or other causes, been transmitted to the Department of State.

All which is respectfully submitted.

H. CLAY.

CONTENTS.

Memorandum.
Index to the names of vessels.
Claims on France, and index	$6,005,648 99
Supplemental claims on France, and index	1,775,246 88
Claims on Naples, and index	1,784,990 32
Supplemental claims on Naples, and index	247,949 56
Claims on Holland, and index	422,312 88
Supplemental claims on Holland, and index	292,746 96

Claims on Denmark, and index	$2,172,518 44
Supplemental claims on Denmark, and index	489,761 92½
Appendix and index	1,854,436 30½
Total amount of claims against the Governments of France, Naples, Holland, and Denmark,	15,045,612 26

MEMORANDUM.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, January 30, 1827.

Many claims of American citizens on the Governments of France, Naples, Holland, and Denmark, were transmitted to the Department subsequently to the day limited by the resolution of the House of Representatives under which the following schedules are prepared. It being supposed, however, desirable to the House as well as to the claimants themselves, that a view, approaching to being complete, should be exhibited of their losses, such claims are stated in the form of supplements to the schedules of claims on the foreign Governments on which respectively they are made. For the same reason, such claims as have been filed for losses arising from acts of those Governments committed prior to 1805 are stated in the form of an appendix.

Some claimants advance the same claim against more than one Government, and others against one or another Government in the alternative. In such cases, though the description of the claim is preserved, it is generally reported in the schedule of claims against that Government only of which the name is first mentioned by the claimant.

In stating "the date of the act complained of," the date is given, generally, of the original act only which led to the loss; and the dates of interventing acts are, when material, mentioned in the column of explanatory remarks, or in some other part of the record of the claim.

Under the column headed "name of the vessel captured or injured," the name of the vessel is given with which the loss is connected, though the loss may not involve capture of, or injury to, such vessel.

In stating the "amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where," some claimants mention the original cost of their property, others its value or its proceeds in market, and others both such amounts. In transferring one of these amounts to the index, it has been endeavored to select that one on which the claimant himself seemed to rely. Some claimants add interest on the amount of original loss, and others claim without extending such interest. In these cases, though the charge for interest is inserted in the report, only the amount of original loss is transferred to the alphabetic indexes of the different schedules, as some claimants do not claim interest at all; and the design of those indexes is to exhibit, as nearly as possible, an aggregate, founded on uniform grounds, of the claims against each Government. This aggregate must, however, be regarded as only approximating to accuracy; the number of parties interested in a particular loss, and a want of precision in their statements, sometimes (and especially where insurance offices are concerned) rendering it doubtful whether a claim for it is not urged oftener than once. When claims for the same loss are evidently repeated, only one is transferred to the index. It may be remarked that any errors in the aggregates, arising from defective information, do not perhaps increase them beyond what would appear the true amount of the losses of American citizens, if all their claims had been filed. Many papers referred to by some of them as being in this Department have at different time been forwarded to our ministers abroad. In fixing, when necessary, on the foregoing principles the amount of loss in any case, in order to transfer it to the index, such calculations as may have been used do not appear in the record of the claim; that record exhibiting for the most part only the statement of the claimant himself.

The entries under the column "subjected or not to legal adjudication, &c.," are made on the supposition that the House of Representatives contemplated decisions under judicial forms. Proceedings mentioned merely as "condemnations," &c., are, therefore, generally referred to in the explanatory column. Under this column the remarks of the claimants are preserved, except in particulars obviously superfluous, or otherwise immaterial; and throughout the record their language, especially when doubtful in its meaning, is preserved. The most frequent imperfection of their papers is the omission to state whether the claim arises from an interest in the vessel, or in her cargo, or shipments. When it has been found advisable to place any statement under some other than its appropriate head, reference is made, under this head, to the column containing that statement.

Index to the names of vessels, referring to their numbers, in the following schedules.

Name of vessel.	Claims on France.	Supplement, &c., on France.	Claims on Naples.	Supplement, &c., on Naples.	Claims on Holland.	Supplement, &c., on Holland.	Claims on Denmark.	Supplement, &c., on Denmark.	Appendix.
A.
Aurora	4, 8, 23, 104, 106, 181, 304, 363, 395						111
America	19, 145, 190, 214, 240, 278, 357	9, 147						15
Anderson	63
Andrew	71, 73, 120, 351	484
Alpha	84, 169
Adventure	112
Ann	114	11, 46, 94, 115, 131							30, 34
Arrow	137, 159, 194, 252, 287	26
Ann Ballan	152
Alianza	158
Ariel	186, 348						42, 50, 88, 89, 97, 102, 122
Acteon	189
Augusta	193
Apollo	197, 229, 236, 238
Alleghany	222, 234
Asia	224
Asturiana	228
Ant	302
Anna	328	12, 102, 115, 131							27
Ardent	335								66, 78
Antelope	344, 346						128	1
Abigail	358
Alert		10, 95							14
Anna Maria		99
Abaelino		105
Atlantic		113						26
Anna Christina		146
Amherst			21
Alexander				48			58	16
Admittance				11
Annawan							46, 85, 91, 95, 96, 99
Argo							71	14
Andromache							114
Adamant							139
Ann Louisa								23
Abbe Thule									43, 66, 78
Amiable Creole									61, 65
B.
Brutus	7	41, 74					5, 74, 106, 118
Betsey	75, 221, 255, 340, 385, 387	149	37				27		48
Bordeaux Packet	77, 79	1					124
Baltimore	129
Bacchus	168
Bald Eagle	183, 375
Britannia	338
Buckskin		21
Brothers		115, 131							84
Berry		115, 131
Bel Air							39
Bel Air								34
C.
Citizen	228
Charlotte	76, 196	62						9, 17, 73, 138
Catharine	94	60						10, 77
Connecticut	123
Cados	131	43
Catharine	138, 160, 263							34
Clementine	209
Clio	219	58
Clarissa	274
Cupid	277, 352
Carolina	286
Caroline	288, 374
Charleston	354
Charleston Packet	355
Cornet	378	13, 90, 106

INDEX—Continued.

Name of vessel.	Claims on France.	Supplement, &c., on France.	Claims on Naples.	Supplement, &c., on Naples.	Claims on Holland.	Supplement, &c., on Holland.	Claims on Denmark	Supplement, &c., on Denmark.	Appendix.
Comm. Rogers		49
Camelia		50
Camilla		59
Collector		101
Cubano		143
Commerce							15, 16, 38, 93, 100, 110, 130	27
Cygnet							29, 67	28	35
Cremer							52, 64, 117
Cornelius							68
Columbia							129	31
D.
Diamond	77, 79
Dean	247
Dyott	342
Defiance		14, 97
Dolly		114
Dove			7						32, 61, 65
Despatch			20
Drummond							41
Doris							57
Devotion								5
Delaware									82
E.
Equator	9
Express	10
Eleanora	18
Exchange	22, 187, 201
Eleanor	58, 125, 156, 174, 310
Eleanora	67
Enterprise	89, 124
Eliza	95, 127, 149, 195, 206, 285	45, 72							66, 78
Eagle	121
Ezra and Daniel	135
Experiment	142, 147
Endeavor	171, 311						53
Elizabeth	205						40, 45, 49, 78, 79, 86, 92, 98
Edward	241	136, 140
Exertion	260
Eliza Haley		8
Emily			83
Ellen Maria							63	10
Egeria							82
Elesenor									88
F.
Franklin	33, 144, 148, 261, 293, 323, 386, 388.
Factor	37
Fox	69, 70, 118, 119	3, 82
Fortitude	115, 117
Falcon	133
Fame	150, 151, 275, 326	15, 69, 103, 115, 131.					103
Fair American	179, 365
Floret	220, 356
Four Brothers	248								50
Friendship	296				5, 6
Fawn	319
Fleetwood		25
Francis			26, 36, 39, 56.
Fortune			50, 78
Tair Trader							32, 43, 51, 90, 101.	4
Frederick									2, 25
Freeman									8
Favorite									13
Fair Lady									23
G.
Grace	14, 56, 81, 96, 256, 282
George	34	27, 37							27

INDEX—Continued.

Name of vessel.	Claims on France.	Supplement, &c., on France.	Claims on Naples.	Supplement, &c., on Naples.	Claims on Holland.	Supplement, &c., on Holland.	Claims on Denmark.	Supplement, &c., on Denmark.	Appendix.
Good Friends	42, 46, 51	136, 140
Globe	21
Grotius	103
Good Intent	134, 324
Good Catherine	202
George Washington	204	34
General Balesteros	237
Governor Gore		64, 80
General Eaton		132
Gersham		132
Golden Age				15
Governor Strong					2
Georgia Planter							81
Grand Seignior							120
George Albert							120
Ganges								30
H.
Hawk	12, 27, 44, 62, 74, 85, 122, 244, 245, 272, 283, 306, 353, 396.	5, 54, 136, 140
Harriet	41	115, 131					137
Hero	57, 173								56
Helena	78, 79						124
Hette	88, 341
Hiland	126
Happy Couple	177
Hercules	249	142	19, 82				35, 75
Harmony	265				7, 8
Hannah	266	111				5, 8	11, 18, 31, 47, 69.	13	53
Henrietta	289
Hope	292						1, 12, 23, 28, 115.		27
Hitte	321, 389
Hypsia and Jane	381, 384
Hyram		17
Horace			1
Henry			10, 13, 61, 69, 73, 77.	29					9, 36, 86
Hound			60
Harriet							4
Herschell							62
Hesper							72	8
Herald							80
Hunter									1
Hopewell									61, 65, 66, 78
Hyram									79
I.
Isis	1
Imperial	11, 329	91
Indian Chief	99
Independence	191
Industry							14	25
Iris							83, 104
Indian Queen							126
J.
Julius Henry	24, 65, 370
John Adams	35	135
Joseph	59, 61, 92, 210, 309, 361, 366.	7					127	32	49, 51, 61, 65
Juniati	66, 167, 180, 362, 368
Juno	143
James Adams	157, 213, 369	136, 140, 148
John	176	16	6	5					58
Jefferson	215, 232
Julian	218, 233, 273, 367, 372						48, 87
Jane Maria	377
James Cook		38
Joana		39
Jersey		42
Juliet		56
Julius Cæsar		78, 110
Jane		115, 131					6, 134		3

INDEX—Continued.

Name of vessel.	Claims on France.	Supplement, &c., on France.	Claims on Naples.	Supplement, &c., on Naples.	Claims on Holland.	Supplement, &c., on Holland.	Claims on Denmark.	Supplement, &c., on Denmark.	Appendix.
Janus						1, 4, 9		11
Jeremiah							132
Jorgan							133
John and Henry									28
K.
Kite	320
L.
Lydia	55, 93, 254, 264						66, 107		66, 78
Ladson	102
Louisa	105
Lucy	253								10
Little John	300
Little Dromo	322
Luna	333
Lear	345								29
L'Eloe	394
Louisiana			63
Live Oak							8
Laura								20
Lark									7
Lion									44
M.
Mercury	31, 136	108
Mentor	52, 230
Mary Ann	54, 128	51
Margaret	97		54, 72
Marianna	111
Maria Louisa	161
Mariner	162
Maria	200	2, 61, 63	3, 22, 31, 45, 49, 57.						17, 37, 38
Minna	207
Molly	217
Mary	225, 268, 281, 290, 334	22, 89, 115, 131, 153.	8, 17, 32, 53, 67.				84, 108, 131		47
Morning Star	294
Mehitable		31
Minerva		71					65, 135		60
Mars		115, 131
Mount Peltier		145
Matilda					10
Magnet							3
Minerva Smith							44, 125	2
Mary Pike								7
Martha									27
N.
Neutrality	141
North America	155, 337						120, 121, 136
North Star	163
Nancy and Katy	212, 280
Nancy	343	23, 36, 88	42, 52, 68	12, 14, 16				19	45, 66, 78
Neptune		104			4			17	18, 66, 78
Nancy and Mary		144
Nimrod								622
New Jersey									15, 16, 22, 24
Nathaniel									54
O.
Orion	146
Olive Branch	226, 295, 112								19
Ocean	239, 291	87
Ohio	316
Oceanus			12, 24, 30, 70, 74, 76	3, 10
Orozimbo			25, 59
Ousetonack			81
Oscar							94, 109, 112
Orange								29
P.
Pallas	15, 267, 364
Pocahontas	16
Postboy	39, 242, 319	6, 136, 140, 154

INDEX—Continued.

Name of vessel.	Claims on France.	Supplement, &c., on France.	Claims on Naples.	Supplement, &c., on Naples.	Claims on Holland.	Supplement, &c., on Holland.	Claims on Denmark.	Supplement, &c., on Denmark.	Appendix.
Perseverance	83, 87, 259, 284, 314	75	18
Prosper	107	65
Ploughboy	182, 301, 318						25
Peace and Plenty	192
Pilgrim	235
Philander	258
Port Mary	307
Paulina		28
Polly		33					22		21, 59
Phœnix		73	65
Peace				7
Pompey							61
Packet							76
Pacific							105, 119
Pearl									5
Prudent									20
Peggy									39, 57
Paragon									85
R.
Robert Hale	3
Reward	20, 40
Roebuck	68
Radius	91, 198	57, 151	16, 64	17			113
Rose in Bloom	108	66
Resort	132, 246, 371	53, 81
Robinson Nova	140
Random	184
Rolla	276
Republican	330	115, 131
Rising Sun	373	134
Roboreus		159
Romp			27, 29, 31, 32, 33, 35, 43, 46, 71.
Ruth and Mary			79, 80
Resolution							13, 20	21
Rachel							19, 30, 54
Rebecca							24	3	4
Rainbow									27
Ruby									41, 66, 78, 87
Rockland									61, 65, 66, 78
S.
Sally	6, 164, 211, 262, 305	47, 77, 115, 131			1, 9				66, 78, 83
Salem	36, 392
Sumner	38, 53
Spencer	64, 72	83
Sally Ann	98	30
Susan	154, 312
Saratoga	170
Sukey and Polly	203
Shadow	216		38
St. Michaels	223					10
Smilax	243
Success	250, 269
Science	257
Susanna	271
St. Michael	331
Satellite	332	18, 100, 115, 131
Spring Bird	359
Stranger	376						123
Sophia		19, 99, 115, 131	5
Samuel		35
St. Tammany		52, 98, 115, 131, 158.
Speculator		86
Stephen		93, 115, 131
Severn		96
Shakespear		109
Swift		115, 131
Sukey and Betsey			28, 48	1
Syren				6
Suwarrow							26
Sterling									6
Saucy Jack									11

INDEX—Continued.

Name of vessel.	Claims on France.	Supplement, &c., on France.	Claims on Naples.	Supplement, &c., on Naples.	Claims on Holland.	Supplement, &c., on Holland.	Claims on Denmark.	Supplement, &c., on Denmark.	Appendix.
Sukey									31,66,78...
Superb									42,81.....
Swift Packet									52.....
Surviving Brother									66,78,80...
Suffolk					11.....
T.
Trim	17,298
Tarantula	29
Triphena	45
Two Sons	60,86,172,308,360
Tantivy	110	68
Two Marys	130	76,156,157..
Three Friends	165.380,390	150
Traveller	166,251
Trial	188
Three Sisters	208,379
Two Friends	270,317	70
Triumphant	297
Tickler	327,346	115,131
Three Brothers	349
Three Apprentices	350
Twin Brothers		20
Triton		55
Telegraph		107
Two Betsys			4,9,47,55..
Trent			62
Two Sisters					3				26
Topaz							37,55	9
Temperance							120
Tarter									40
Tartar									66,78
U.
Unity		24
Urania		48	23
Union									12
V.
Victory	30,313	40,44	14, 40, 41, 44, 51, 66.	13
Virgin	100,101
Venus	175								46,55
Vigilant	347	92
Vermont		79
W.
Windham	5,43,82
Weymouth	13,299
Washington	26						56	18
Wells	90,339
William King	113
William Wilson	178,227	155					2
William	185	152	11,15					33
Wilmington	279
Whampoa	303
Welcome Return	325,391,393
Wonolanset							7,59
William Gray							36,60,116	12,24
Y.
Young Lion	25
Young Connecticut	109	67
Z.
Zebra	32
Zeno	80,139,199	32,141					21,33,70
Zephyr			2

INDEX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Abbe, Elisha	5	$19,354 65
Amory, Jonathan, surviving, &c	80	5,214 44
Do do	81	11,654 03
Armistead, William, and others	148	1,066 67
Brown & Ives	1	44,652 00
Do	3	109,875 20
Branu, Robert P	12	24,844 25
Belknap, John	14	967 30
Beall, Elijah	37	7,000 00
Boyle, estate of Thomas	106	4,082 20
Boston Marine Insurance Company	158	15,000 00
Do do	159	14,694 28
Do do	160	7,436 65
Do do	161	13,720 23
Do do	162	1,000 00
Do do	163	1,747 35
Do do	164	8,000 00
Do do	165	10,000 00
Do do	166	3,120 00
Blackler, William, and others	173	21,000 00
Bernadon, John B	238	18,909 42
Byerly, Andrew, &c	243	15,579 59
Bell, Joseph, and others	271	1,090 11
Do	272	1,312 05
Do	273	5,000 00
Bradbury, Charles, for self and others	287	6,854 00
Do do	288	5,500 00
Do do	289	10,000 00
Do do	290	2,713 48
Do do	291	3,000 00
Do do	292	3,400 00
Do do	293	1,000 00
Do do	294	3,000 00
Do do	295	7,000 00
Do do	296	7,000 00
Do do	297	260 70
Do do	298	2,178 80
Do do	299	552 51
Bell, representatives of John	312	9,450 00
Briggs, Jeremiah	325	13,137 00
Barker, George	358	18,495 88
Barker, George, administrator	359	10,144 58
Do do	360	303 60
Bartlett, Hannah, administratrix	361	16,559 55
Baltimore Insurance Company	362	30,180 84
Do do	363	17,140 00
Do do	364	26,410 00
Do do	365	5,319 92
Do do	366	5,208 50
Barney, John	396	10,000 00
Coolidge, Samuel F., and others	15	14,000 00
Caton, Richard, and others, assignees, &c	22	52,509 28
Chesapeake Insurance Company of Baltimore	23	14,826 93
Do do	24	15,000 00
Chase, Theodore, and others	29	13,802 80
Coursault, G	45	32,900 00
Coursault, G., (see No. 42)	46	36,050 00
Coxe, D. W., (see No. 42)	47	8,600 00
Curcier, A	62	1,156 87
Do	63	2,275 76
Do	64	57,042 20
Crowninshield, John	97	35,000 00
Curtis, Henry B., and others	112	10,500 00
Clarke, Jacob B	114	7,000 00
Chenborough, Ephraim	117	1,702 40
Cooke, Francis	123	11,416 10
Coxe, Daniel W., and others	241	80,005 64
Carpentier, executors of Lewis D	244	5,900 00
Cooke, James	321	1,963 27
Do	322	500 00
Do	323	2,000 00
Clapp, Asa, and another	337	188,620 50
Day, William	10	1,800 00
Dutelh, heirs of Stephen, (see No. 42)	48	14,100 00
Duval, James S	49	10,590 00
Dubarry, John	69	3,738 18
Dumas, John F	73	15,495 83
Do	74	34,411 15
Delano, Abisha, and others	75	$7,300 00
Delafield, executor of John	107	5,188 21
Do do	108	5,000 00
Do do	109	6,521 95
Do do	110	8,000 00
Dickson, executors of William	147	1,722 25
Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia	368	3,000 00
Do do	369	14,149 92
Do do	370	15,606 77
Do do	371	11,384 00
Do do	372	3,920 00
Do do	373	6,020 15
Do do	374	2,113 59
Do do	375	11,760 00
Do do	376	5,140 42
Do do	377	4,900 00
Do do	378	9,037 94
Do do	379	1,845 90
Dodge, Pickering, and others	380	38,454 34
Dutch & Deland	385	8,363 29
Do	386	961 67
Elderkin, Eleazar	7	2,502 44
Ellicott, T., and others	65	1,681 52
Do	167	33,450 00
Do	168	11,446 00
Fettyplace, William	20	14,000 00
Faxon, Richard	21	18,000 00
Fournier, H	68	24,323 54
Fournier, H., assignee of Anthony Laussat	70	19,033 71
Do do	71	6,245 00
Do do	72	2,415 98
Fogerty, heirs of Butler	338	24,966 25
Do	339	1,200 94
Do	340	16,532 87
Do	341	14,323 07
Graf, Frederick C	8	2,992 35
Gray, estate of William	84	5,000 00
Do	85	1,000 00
Do	86	5,043 00
Do	87	860 00
Do	88	6,450 00
Do	89	6,000 00
Do	90	30,000 00
Do	91	60,000 00
Do	92	500 00
Do	93	10,905 45
Gilmor, Robert, and Sons, and another	99	720 00
Do do	100	5,028 93
Gilmor, Robert, and Sons	101	5,993 00
Gilmor, Robert, and Sons, and others	102	7,191 00
Gilmore, Robert, and Sons, and another	103	3,298 00
Do do	104	3,741 00
Gilmor, Robert, and Sons, and others	105	13,386 87
Gray, Henry	198	1,000 00
Do	199	1,000 00
Gray, heirs of Samuel	254	7,971 68
Gray, William R	282	10,963 57
Do	283	4,100 00
Do	284	500 00
Do	285	1,540 00
Do	286	1,800 00
Hatch, Henry, administrator, &c	13	19,649 20
Henderson, legal representatives of R. A	16	8,000 00
Head, James W	38	10,921 40
Hollingsworth, William, and others	39	49,913 37
Harlow, Winslow, (see No. 42)	51	2,150 00
Hollins, Robert S., and others, (see No. 167)	66
Higginson, Stephen, and others	113	17,357 30
Hattin, Robert	154	3,276 45
Hooper, John, jr	169	19,500 00
Hooper, Robert	170	12,000 00
Hooper, R. and J., and others	171	25,000 00
Horton, Samuel	174	44,000 00
Hooper, Robert	176	26,000 00
Hutchinson, George, agent	336	40,000 00
Hedge, Barnabas	395	20,000 00
Jones, Samuel W., surviving partner, &c	44	15,000 00
Insurance Co. of North America and others	77,78,79	479,350 60

INDEX—Continued.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
James, John	157	$9,100 00
Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania	342	3,637 90
Do.....do	343	5,569 25
Do.....do	344	2,450 00
Do.....do	345	1,716 60
Do.....do	346	5,006 88
Do.....do	347	3,920 00
Do.....do	348	686 00
Do.....do	349	490 00
Do.....do	350	1,926 88
Do.....do	351	980 00
Do.....do	352	12,824 73
Do.....do	353	980 00
Do.....do	354	19,600 00
Kurtz, John, surviving partner, &c., (see Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria)	2	21,189 47
Karthaus, Peter A	4	7,217 73
Keith, Samuel	367	1,158 00
Long, George, and another	9	15,255 55
Lathrop, executors of Daniel, and others	43	6,645 62
Lowder, Jonathan, estate of	76	17,290 00
Laval, John, and another	118	2,300 00
Lancaster and Susquehannah Insurance Co	232	3,400 00
Do.....do	233	7,000 00
Do.....do	234	1,000 00
Do.....do	235	5,000 00
Do.....do	236	10,000 00
Do.....do	237	8,000 00
Laval, John	245	19,000 00
Lenox, Robert, and another	307	20,000 00
Mactier, Alexander	11	30,940 59½
McKim, Isaac	18	6,216 00
Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria	25	5,500 00
Do.....do	26	8,000 00
Do.....do	27	10,000 00
Do.....do	28	12,000 00
Maine Fire and Marine Insurance Co. of Portland	53	5,000 00
Do.....do	54	10,000 00
Do.....do	55	1,000 00
Mayer & Brantz	67	3,158 68
Meade, R. W	94	14,000 00
Do	95	10,000 00
Morgan, Jacob	127	10,444 00
McLellan, Arthur, and others	128	21,825 55
Marine Insurance Company of Norfolk	142	6,000 00
Do.....do	143	2,466 00
Do.....do	144	3,137 55
Do.....do	145	4,028 40
Do.....do	146	2,904 31
Do.....do	151	1,104 95
Myers, Moses, and Sons	150	24,530 73
Do	153	4,687 50
McPherson, Hugh	239	6,407 39
Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company of Boston	248	3,465 00
Do.....do	249	5,440 53
Do.....do	250	4,950 00
Do.....do	251	3,603 30
Do.....do	252	3,401 15
Do.....do	253	6,430 00
Maryland Insurance Company, assignees, &c	300	36,000 00
Do.....do	301	30,000 00
Do.....do	302	18,100 00
Do.....do	303	36,240 00
Do.....do	304	2,170 00
Do.....do	306	.....
Marblehead Social Insurance Company	308	2,000 00
Do.....do	309	4,000 00
Do.....do	310	4,000 00
Do.....do	311	150 00
Murray, John B	313	52,849 90
Marine Insurance Company	326	1,000 00
Do.....do	327	14,545 00
Do.....do	328	7,100 00
Do.....do	329	6,000 00
Do.....do	330	8,000 00
Do.....do	331	13,749 00
Do.....do	332	8,375 00
Do.....do	333	800 00
Do.....do	334	800 00
Marine Insurance Company	335	$2,500 00
Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia	355	4,000 00
Do.....do	356	6,300 00
Do.....do	357	10,000 00
Nichols, William, and another	98	1,358 68
New England Marine Insurance Company	134	4,500 00
Do.....do	135	8,029 60
Do.....do	136	10,000 00
Do.....do	137	5,733 33
Do.....do	138	8,000 00
Do.....do	139	15,517 50
Do.....do	140	10,000 00
Do.....do	141	13,000 00
North, William, and another	242	21,440 00
Neale, Jonathan, and others	381,384	55,816 82
Oliver, Robert and John, and others	394	95,407 60
Phelps, Elisha	19	5,691 22
Paul, Gabriel	42	10,686 79½
Paul, Gabriel, (see No. 42)	50	12,060 00
Pedrick, John, 3d	57	30,238 47
Do	58	1,920 23
Do	59	3,520 00
Do	60	2,500 00
Do	61	6,533 33
Piesch, Abraham	119	48,097 45
Do	120	19,204 45
Do	121	52,534 20
Do	122	69,358 35
Pepin, Augustine	130	12,700 37
Parrot, John F., and others	133	27,277 89
Prince, Henry, and another	314	17,603 25
Ralston, Robert	32	139,308 32
Roberts, Edmund	30	19,096 29
Roberts, executors of Robert	31	30,793 85
Do.....do	32	28,670 44
Renwick, William	83	16,161 16
Roulet, John S., and others	131	67,130 74
Roulet, J. S., and others	132	69,272 93
Reed, William	172	30,000 00
Ritchie, James S., and another	240	3,805 00
Russell, Nathaniel P., agent	255	.....
Do.....do	256	4,500 00
Do.....do	257	4,400 00
Do.....do	258	2,000 00
Do.....do	259	7,300 00
Do.....do	260	7,000 00
Do.....do	261	5,000 00
Do.....do	262	3,000 00
Do.....do	263	9,000 00
Do.....do	264	9,600 00
Do.....do	265	6,200 00
Do.....do	266	2,200 00
Do.....do	267	600 00
Do.....do	268	7,000 00
Do.....do	269	6,500 00
Do.....do	270	3,000 00
Stiles, George, (see Union Bank of Maryland)	.....	.....
Stocker, administrator of E., and others	33	114,723 35
Sheafe, James, and another	35	16,060 00
Sheafe, James	196	7,575 70
Do	197	19,031 20
Schieffelin, Jacob, and Son	246	2,223 00
Do.....do	247	14,670 00
Silver, James, and others	324	20,000 00
Social Insurance Company of Salem	387	8,000 00
Do.....do	388	8,000 00
Do.....do	389	1,500 00
Do.....do	390	1,500 00
Do.....do	391	4,153 46
Thorndike, Israel	192	40,000 00
Do	193	19,445 00
Taylor, trustees of Lemuel	315	42,542 25
Do.....do	316	50,000 00
Do.....do	317	102,812 50
Do.....do	318	250,000 00
Do.....do	319	57,000 00
Do.....do	320	10,000 00
Union Bank of Maryland and others	17	50,059 50
Union Insurance Company of New London	34	1,700 00
Do.....do	82	2,565 00

INDEX—Continued.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Union Insurance Company of Maryland	177	$13,000 00
Do.....do	178	5,000 00
Do.....do	179	9,063 28
Do.....do	180	23,540 10
Do.....do	181	21,779 20
Do.....do	182	20,000 00
Do.....do	183	25,500 00
Do.....do	184	13,000 00
Do.....do	185	16,000 00
Do.....do	186	17,400 00
Do.....do	187	18,000 00
Do.....do	188	19,400 00
Do.....do	189	2,252 00
Do.....do	190	5,356 22
Do.....do	191	4,366 59
Union Insurance Company of Boston	194	8,144 47
Do.....do	195	10,000 00
United States Insurance Co. of Philadelphia	200	9,800 00
Do.....do	201	580 00
Do.....do	202	2,254 00
Do.....do	203	11,613 00
Do..... do	204	5,932 80
Do.....do	205	9,800 00
Do.....do	206	8,330 00
Do.....do	207	1,078 00
Do.....do	208	14,700 00
Do.....do	209	11,760 00
Do.....do	210	5,009 47
Do.....do	211	1,960 00
Do..... do	212	7,500 00
Do.....do	213	13,047 13
Do.....do	214	8,475 56
Do.....do	215	13,660 59
Do.....do	216	11,308 98
Do.....do	217	9,600 00
Do.....do	218	9,280 59
Do.....do	219	6,619 25
Do..... .....do.....	220	6,174 00
Do.....do	221	16,170 00
Do.....do	222	1,470 00
United States Insurance Co. of Philadelphia	223	$3,500 00
Do.....do	224	26,342 00
Do..... .....do	225	11,760 00
Do.....do	226	21,163 44
Do.....do	227	7,056 35
Do.....do	228	10,000 00
Do.....do	229	15,000 00
Do.....do	230	5,000 00
Do.....do.... (see No. 77–79)	231	....
Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia	274	2,673 26
Do.....do	275	5,477 40
Do.....do	276	3,287 85
Do.....do	277	1,106 14
Do.....do	278	1,857 06
Do.....do	279	8,783 68
Do.....do	280	959 20
Do.....do	281	5,880 00
Union Marine Insurance Company of Salem	392	10,000 00
Do.....do	393	8,200 00
Van Kapff & Brune	155	11,956 66
Van Kapff & Brune and others.	156	24,929 93
White, Joseph, and others	36	23,279 18
Watson, Benjamin F	40	653 94
Watson, John	41	37,400 00
Waterman, Stephen	52	27,000 00
Wheeler, Moses, surviving, &c	56	36,644 00
Welsh, Francis	96	5,100 00
Williams, William	115	8,000 00
Williams, William, and others	116	13,484 72
Winchester, David, surviving partner	129	69,325 18
Whittle, Conway and F., and others	149	108,000 00
Waln, William, and others	175	32,100 00
Walter, Lynde	305	18,402 00
Young, Joseph	111	71,606 97
Yeaton, William, and another	124	12,220 76
Do.....do	125	16,789 50
Do .....do	126	10,378 59
Young, James	152	2,250 00
Total	.....	6,005,648 99

CLAIMS ON FRANCE.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
1. Brown & Ives, of Providence, Rhode Island.	France	May 1, 1812	The ship and cargo were scuttled and sunk at sea by a French squadron, commanded by Commodore Feretier.	Ship Isis, James Donnison master.	Value of cargo, as per invoice. $26,652 Value of ship..... 12,000 Freight ..... 6,000 $44,652 The loss took place in lat 36° N. and long. 15° 10′.	No legal adjudication	The ship sailed, on March 30, 1812, from Providence, bound for Gibraltar, fell in with and was captured by a French squadron. The cargo consisted of flour and rice. Tonnage 318 40-95, and no insurance.
2. John Kurtz, surviving partner of Bowie & Kurtz, of Georgetown, D. C.	....do	Jan. 14, 1813	The ship was sunk at sea by the French national frigate La Gloire.	Ship Citizen, of Georgetown, D. C., James Crowdhill master.	The value of the ship and cargo, sunk at sea, was $24,189 67, exclusive of $12,000 insured on the ship by the Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria, and by them since paid. See last column.	No legal adjudication appears...	The ship Citizen was, at the time of her capture and destruction, coming from St. Ubes, loaded with salt, and bound for Alexandria, D. C. The French commander said that his orders were to destroy every American vessel either going to or coming from any port belonging to the enemies of France. The burden of the ship was 303 15-95 tons.
3. Brown & Ives, of Providence, Rhode Island.	....do	The seizure was made Feb. 28, 1810.	The ship and cargo were sequestrated and condemned, after seizure by the French custom-house officers.	Ship Robert Hale, Charles Randall master.	Value of cargo, as per invoice. $80,880 00 Value of ship ..... 12,000 00 Expenses incurred in defending the property before Prize Courts, at the rate of 40 cents per guilder..... 8,995 20 Freight ..... 8,000 00 109,875 20 The capture was made on the side of the river Jahde, opposite Rusterzeil.	Condemnation, on October 24, 1810, by the Prize Court at Paris, whose sentence was, on July 14, 1811, confirmed by the Council of State.	The ship Robert Hale was loaded with a full cargo of cotton and coffee, and sailed from Providence, December 27, 1809, bound for Rusterzeil, a permitted Dutch port, on the river Jahde. After she had commenced discharging, she was driven from her moorings to the opposite side of the river by stress of weather, and seized by the French custom-house officers. There was no insurance. The tonnage was 291 36-95.
4. Peter A. Karthaus, of Baltimore, Md.	....do	The capture was made Jan. 24, 1808.	The ship and cargo were captured by the French privateer L'Incomparable.	Ship Aurora	The cost of the goods shipped at Baltimore was $2,377 04. Their gross proceeds, when sold at Morlaix, were as follows, viz: 2 bales of snakeroot..... frs. 10,351 22 2 bales of seneca root ..... 8,747 64 4 bales of deer skins..... 4,806 80 16 hhds. of tobacco, about.. 14,587 00 38,492 66 The capture was made off St. Malo.	Proceedings in this case were had before the Tribunal of Commerce at Morlaix and the Commission of Prizes at Brest, and were referred to the Council General of Prizes at Paris. That council decreed condemnation on June 8, 1808, and the Emperor final condemnation on December 8, 1810, after an appeal to him in his Council of State.	The ship Aurora left Baltimore December 14, 1807, three days before the date of the Milan decree. The vessel was captured on January 24, 1808, and carried into Morlaix, where, in September and October, 1808, the ship and cargo were sold for the sum, in gross, of frs. 885,303 83.
5. Elisha Abbe.....	....do	Feb. 21, 1808	The vessel was captured by a French frigate; the principal part of the cargo taken out, and the residue thereof, together with the vessel, were burnt.	Schr. Windham....	$19,354 65. The capture and destruction took place at sea, lat. 26° N., long. 68° W. from London.	No legal adjudication	The captain, mate, and one mariner, were, at their request, taken aboard the capturing frigate, and carried to France, for the purpose of obtaining redress. On their arrival, they handed their papers to Aaron Vail, Commercial Agent for the United States at the port of L'Orient, giving him a full power of attorney to make the necessary protests, and pursue the other means proper to obtain redress. But this has never yet been granted. The remainder of the crew were sent to Halifax. The tonnage of the schooner was 117.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
6. Robert Ralston, of Philadelphia, for himself and others.	France.....	In the spring of 1808.	Seizure by the officers of the French customs, and subsequent sale, by the French authorities, of the vessel and cargo.	Brig Sally, Michael Brown master.	The cargo was sold by the French authorities at Antwerp, and produced, by account of sales, dated June 30, 1808, francs 726,977 72. The value of the brig was $6,000. The seizure was made at the mouth of the river Scheldt, the brig having been obliged by stress of weather to put in there.	The only adjudication in this case was a decision of the Emperor Napoleon, ordering the vessel and cargo to be disposed of.	The cargo was held by separate shipments, as follows, viz: about one-half by the claimant, and the remainder by James and John Hemphill, Joshua and Thomas Stroud, W. and J. Leedom. On the entire cargo there was a recovery of £2,895 sterling, the amount of insurance effected in London. A cession to this amount was there made to the underwriters by the claimant out of his part; as a reimbursement for which the other three shippers made a cession to him of their interest in the recovery, to the amount of £1,492 15s. 7d. The amount, therefore, of the original investments of the other three shippers, and about one-half of frs. 726,977 72, are claimed by Robert Ralston for himself. The brig was bound to Rotterdam.
7. Eleazar Elderkin, of Providence, R. I.	....do.....	March —, 1808	Capture by the French frigates La Harmoine and Hortense, of forty guns each, burning at sea.	Ship Brutus, Jonathan Smith master.	£563 1s. sterling, the cost of the goods in Liverpool, equal to $2,502 44. The capture was made about lat. 48° N. and long. 16° W.	No legal adjudication.....	The cargo consisted of one hundred crates of earthenware, and was shipped by the claimant, at Liverpool, aboard the ship Brutus. The ship, when taken, was bound for Boston.
8. Frederick C. Graf, of Baltimore Md.	....do.....	The capt're was made Jan. 24, 1808.	Capture by a French privateer, and subsequent sale of the vessel and cargo.	Ship Aurora.....	The cost of the goods shipped at Baltimore was $2,992 35. The gross proceeds, at Morlaix, of 45 hhds. of tobacco, were about 41,000 francs. The capture was made off St. Malo.	In this case proceedings were had before the Tribunal of Commerce at Morlaix and the Commission of Prizes at Brest. On a reference to the Council General of Prizes at Paris, there was a decree of condemnation on June 8, 1808, from which an appeal was taken to the Emperor, in his Council of State. Final condemnation was decreed by the Emperor on December 8, 1810.	The ship Aurora left Baltimore on December 14, 1807, three days before the date of the Milan decree, under which she was condemned. On January 21, 1808, she was boarded by the British sloop-of-war Rose, which put one officer aboard her, with orders to carry her to Plymouth. She was taken on January 24, 1808, by the French privateer L'Incomparable, and carried to Morlaix, where the ship and cargo were, in September and October, 1808, sold. They produced, in gross, francs 885,303 83.
9. Geo. Long and Titus Salter, of Portsmouth, N. H.	....do.....	Aug. 9, 1809	Capture and condemnation.	Brig Equator, Wm. Tullock master.	Value of the brig..... $8,000 00 Value of the freight, £1,462 19s. 10d. sterling, or..... 6,502 21 Value of stores belonging to the owners of the vessel, &c.... 200 00 Captain's expenses while waiting at Amsterdam; his wages for one year, and passage home..... 553 34 $15,255 55 On this sum, the claimants claim interest from the date of the injury. The capture was made at the entrance of the Texel.	Condemnation at Paris, but the date of it is not stated.	The Equator was laden at New York with a cargo of rice and tobacco, belonging to Messrs. Lawrence & Whiting, on freight and staves, belonging to the claimants, her owners. She was captured by the French armed cutter L'Hebe, Captain Jolie, at the entrance of the Texel, and carried to Amsterdam, whither she was bound. The master was dispossessed of the vessel and her papers, which were sent to Paris; and there the whole property was eventually condemned on the ground that the vessel was denationalized in consequence of passing the English coast.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
10. Wm. Day, of Philadelphia.	France	Sept, 8, 1811	The sloop was met by a French frigate, which forcibly took from her $1,500, (Spanish,) and took and destroyed other property on board to the value of $300.	Sl'p Express (plundered.)	$1,800. The loss was sustained in lat. 30° 26′ N. by observation, eastward of the Azores.	No legal adjudication known of.	The plundering frigate was supposed to be the Clorinde, and to be one of the vessels which had escaped from the Isle of France. She was filled with troops; was first seen to the southward; and after showing English colors, ordered on board the papers of the sloop.
11. Alexander Mactier, of Baltimore, Md.; Chesapeake Insurance Co.; Marine Insurance Co.	....do.....	April 23, 1805	Capture	Schooner Imperial, Nicholas Everson, now dec'd, master.	$8,444 09½ on the vessel; $22,496 50 on the cargo—amount, $30,940 59½. The capture was made off the coast of North Carolina.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Imperial, a new vessel, coppered and copper fastened, was, on her first voyage, captured on her return from Jeremie to Baltimore, at the custom-house of which city she had been cleared. She was captured by a French privateer, called the Matilda, Captain Crassen, and carried into Guadaloupe.
12. Robert P. Branu, of Philadelphia.	....do.....	The seizure was made February 5, 1810.	Seizure, sale and appropriation.	Ship Hawk, Mich'l Brown master, was the vessel aboard which was claimant's property.	24 boxes Havana sugar..... $2,741 00 20 boxes of indigo..... 15,139 25 — $17,880 25 To this sum the claimant adds his commission as supercargo, including premium of insurance thereon; which amount was not paid by the insurers, the insurance being against sea risks only..... 6,964 00 24,844 25 The whole cargo of the Hawk was sold for francs 557,156 56, or $104,465. The claimant's property was seized at Port Passage.	No legal adjudication.....	The claimant's property was seized aboard the ship Hawk, in consequence of an order from the Emperor Napoleon, issued December 22, 1809, and afterwards sold along with the cargo of said ship, on December 11, 12, and 13, 1809, by the Collector of the custom-house at Bayonne, agreeably to the imperial decree of Rambouillet, dated March 25, 1810, and the proceeds of the sale were deposited in the sinking funds at Paris.
13. Henry Hatch, administrator of Crowell Hatch, dec'd.	....do.....	July —, 1809	Capture	Ship Weymouth, Shubael Gardner master.	$19,649 20. The capture and recapture were made in the Mediterranean.	The ship was condemned at Malta to pay one-eighth part of her value and of that of her cargo as salvage. The date of the condemnation is not stated.	The ship Weymouth left Boston, on a voyage to Palermo, in the year 1809, and, in July of that year, was captured by a French privateer. She was afterwards recaptured by the English frigate Hydra, George Mundy commander, and carried into Malta, where, after being detained a considerable time, she was condemned to pay, as salvage— One-eighth part of $12,000, the value of the ship..... $1,500 00 One-eighth part of the value of the cargo, which consisted of 474 boxes of Havana sugar, and cost, in Boston, $20,325 69 .... 3,149 20 4,649 20 To this sum the claimant adds the total loss arising from the capture and detention of the freight, at half profits, as to the residue of the cargo, estimated at..... 15,000 00 19,649 20

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
14. John Belknap.....	France	Jan. 27, 1808	Capture and detention....	Ship Grace, R. T. Lunzee master.	$967 30. The capture was made in the Mediterranean.	A decree of condemnation, under the Berlin and Milan decrees, was made at Paris on July 6, 1808.	The ship Grace was captured by the French private armed vessel Cosmopolite, and carried into Porto Ferrajo, in the island of Elba, where she was detained. Four hhds. of coffee had been shipped aboard her, for Leghorn, on account and risk of the claimant, the amount of the invoice being $926 76. To this sum he adds charges paid after the capture, viz: $14 04 on May 6, 1809, and $26 54 on March 5, 1812. No insurance had been effected.
15. Samuel F. Coolidge and others.	....do.....	Jan. 31, 1812	The vessel was captured by three French privateers.	Brig Pallas, of Boston, Benj. Hollbrook master.	The vessel was valued in the policy at..... $8,000 00 The value of the freight was near..... 6,000 00 ——— $14.000 00 The capture was made near San Lucar.	The claimants state that it is understood the vessel was condemned at San Lucar.	The brig Pallas sailed from Baltimore on December 12, 1811, with a cargo belonging to citizens of that place, and after being captured by the three French privateers was carried into San Lucar. She was never restored, but became entirely lost to the parties. When captured the brig was bound for Cadiz. In this case a claim was made under the treaty with Spain, February 22, 1819, but rejected as being a proper claim against France. Samuel F. Coolidge was the owner of the brig. It was insured by the North American Insurance Company, of which Jesse Putnam was President. Benjamin Rich, Thos. B. Wailes, Francis Welsh, and others, were insurers on freight; and Henry Orne, of Boston, is agent for the claimants.
16. R. A. Henderson, legal representative of Robt. Henderson, deceased.	....do.....	June, 1811, and Jan., 1812.	The vessel was totally lost by shipwreck, while passing from Boulogne to Dunkirk by order of the French Government.	Brig Pocahontas ...	$8,000, the value of the brig. The loss took place by the shipwreck of the vessel, on January 21, 1812, between Calais and Gravelines.	There was no legal adjudication.	The brig Pocahontas was purchased by the late Robert Henderson at Boulogne, whither she had been carried by the captors, and where, by a compromise with them, she had been released. Mr. Henderson, who purchased her as a means of conveying his family out of France, where they had been detained longer than two years for want of a conveyance, fitted her out, and prepared to sail for the United States in June, 1811, when orders were issued to detain the vessel. By the intervention of the American minister at Paris a promise of release was procured, and the vessel was, meanwhile, ordered to proceed to Dunkirk. She left Boulogne on January 20, 1812, in charge of a French pilot and French crew, which the authorities of Boulogne obliged Mr. Henderson to receive, the vessel being still considered as detained. On the succeeding night she perished.
17. The President, Directors, and Company of the Union Bank of Maryland, John S. Stiles, legal representative of G. Stiles, dec'd, and Christ. Ueshon.	France or Spain.	The date of the loss is not stated by the agent of the claim'ts, but it was shortly after November, 1809. The property was sold August 1, 1810.	The vessel was taken possession of at St. Sebastian, in Spain, by the French authorities, and, with her cargo, transported to Bayonne and sold.	Schooner Trim	The cost of the cargo, as per invoice, was..... $29,682 41 The cost of the vessel..... 13,372 09 Premiums of insurance on vessel and cargo..... 7,005 00 ——— $50,059 50 The loss was sustained at St. Sebastian.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	The schooner Trim left Baltimore in November, 1809, bound for St. Sebastian, in Spain, where she arrived in safety. After her seizure there by the French authorities, and the transportation of herself and cargo to Bayonne, they were at the latter place sold. The cargo produced 231,635.25 francs, and the vessel was taken at a valuation of 50,000 francs, making, in the whole, 281,635.26 francs. This property was owned by Hollins & McBlair, George Stiles, and Christopher Deshon, each party being one-third owner. Hollins & McBlair subsequently transferred their interest to the Union Bank of Maryland. W. H. Murray, assistant Cashier of that bank, is the agent for all the claimants.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
18. Isaac M'Kim, of Baltimore, Maryland.	France	Dec., 1807.....	One hundred and forty-one chests of Company and Souchong tea were seized by the French custom-house officers at Hamburg and sold, and the proceeds of the sale retained by the French authorities at that place.	The tea which was seized was shipped aboard the ship Elenora, William Taylor master.	The value of the property lost to the claimant was 18,648 marcs banco, which, at 33½ cents, are equal to $6,216 of the money of the United States. The loss took place at Hamburg.	There was no legal adjudication.	One hundred and eighty-one chests of tea were shipped by the claimant, about June 23, 1807, on board the Elenora, bound for Tonningen. The ship arrived there in August, 1807, consigned to L. H. Van Hollen, of Hamburg, who kept it for safety in the Danish territory adjoining to Hamburg. In December, 1807, the French douaniers crossed the line and seized one hundred and forty-one chests of tea, which were kept and sold by the French authorities at Hamburg, and the claimant has received nothing for them.
19. Elisha Phelps.....	....do..	Not stated.....	Capture.....	Sloop America, of New York, John Smith master.	Value of cargo..... $3,691 22 Value of vessel ..... 2,000 00 5,691 22 Place of capture not stated.—See last column.	The vessel and cargo were condemned 11 Pluviose, sixth year of the Republic, by the Tribunal of Commerce, at Guadaloupe.	The vessel on her voyage from Newbern, North Carolina, to Marigalante, was captured by three privateers.
20. William Fettyplace..	....do..	January, 1808.	The vessel and cargo were captured on the high seas by the English brig Conflict, and afterwards recaptured by a French privateer and carried to Paros, a small port on the coast of France.	The schooner Reward, of Marblehead, Wm. Soss master.	The value of the vessel and cargo at the time of departure from the United States are stated by the claimant to have been about $14,000, but he supposes that they were sold for not less than $25,000. The recapture was made near the coast of France.	There was no legal adjudication, except a rejection by the Council of Prizes of the claim of the owners of the privateer.	The scoooner Reward sailed from Marblehead December 6, 1807, bound direct for Rochelle, her cargo consisting of codfish, cod oil, potash, Georgia cotton, all of the produce and manufacture of the United States, accompanied with regular documents from the French Consul. At the time of her sailing neither the French decrees nor the British orders in council were known in the United States. On the 1st of January, 1808, the Reward was captured, near the coast of France, by the English Government brig Conflict, and on the ninth day of the same month was recaptured by a French privateer. The vessel and cargo were sold by order of the French government, and no compensation made to the claimant.
1. Richard Faxon, formerly of Boston, and now a resident merchant at Bordeaux, in France.	....do..	Seizure made in Feb., 1812, and the property sold in June, 1812.	Seizure made by French authorities, and sale of 215 cases of white Havana sugar which had been imported into Santander or St. Andero, in Spain, by the American ship Globe, Capt. Wm. Austin, and purchased from him by the claimant; and of four sacks of cocoa also purchased by him there.	The property was seized on land.	The amount claimed is 356,713 reaux 16 maravedis, equal to $——, the proceeds of the sale, and the value of 43 quintals of sugar deficient, making, together, the sum of $18,000. Interest from the date of the seizure is also claimed. The seizure was made at Santander.	There was no legal adjudication.	Payment for the property was demanded of the French Government, and refused on the presumption that it might have been the property of Spaniards; but on the books of the receivers of the contributions of the province of Santander the sum of 52,811 francs 79 centimes is credited, as arising from a part of the sales of sugar and cocoa belonging to Mr. Richard Faxon, American merchant, seized in the store of Mr. Joachim Murat, at Santander, February 13, 1812. This store had been broken open by the French authorities, in order that they might seize the property.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
22. Richard Caton and George Tyson, assignees and trustees, and James McFadon, assignee and trustee.	France.....	Dec. 29, 1809...	The vessel and cargo were seized and sequestered.	Schooner Exchange.	The cargo was sold at Bayonne, at public auction, for 201,936.16 francs, to which the claimant adds 14,113.38 francs, the cost of 1,043 bars of iron, amounting together to 280,049.54 francs, or $52,509 28. He also claims nearly $2,000 for the expenses of the vessel and crew during the sequestration. The seizure appears to have been made at Passage, a port of safety.	There was no legal adjudication.	The schooner Exchange was fitted out at Baltimore in October, 1809, laden with a cargo of cotton, tobacco, and logwood, bound to St. Sebastian, in Spain, where she arrived about the 9th of December following; and after performing the usual quarantine was discharged, ballasted with iron, and sent round to Passage, there to wait until a return cargo could be procured. With the exception of twenty-one hogsheads of tobacco, which had been previously sold, the whole cargo was seized by the French Government and disposed of as aforesaid. The vessel was taken into the French service at a valuation of 64,000 francs, and afterwards attached in Philadelphia by the original owners, but finally released by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. Caton and Tyson claim, as assignees of Greetham and Devereaux, original part owners of the vessel and cargo; and James McFadon, as assignee of John McFadon, the other original part owner of the same.
23. Chesapeake Insurance Company of Baltimore.	....do.....	The capture was made January 25, 1808.	Capture and condemnation.	Ship Aurora, Levin Dashiel master.	Loss on ship..... $10,054 45 Loss on cargo..... 4,772 48 $14,826 93 The place of capture not stated.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes at Paris, June 8, 1808; and, on an appeal to the Emperor, the sentence was, on December 8, 1810, approved under the Milan decree.	The ship Aurora left Baltimore on December 14, 1807, and on January 3, 1808, in a gale, the captain was lost, and the command devolved on William Bowen. On the 21st of January the ship was overhauled by a British sloop-of-war, which put an officer on board and ordered her to Plymouth, and on the 25th was taken by the French privateer L'Incomparable, who carried her to Morlaix. The cargo, insured by the claimants, and paid for by them, produced the gross sum of $12,195 24.
24. Chesapeake Insurance Company of Baltimore.	....do.....	Seizure was made October 21, 1807.	Seizure, sale, and appropriation.	Ship Julius Henry, James D. Woodside master.	$15,000 on the cargo. The seizure was made at Cushaven.	There was no legal adjudication; but the seizure was confirmed by the Emperor, who ordered the Council of Prizes not to take cognizance of the case.	The ship Julius Henry sailed from Baltimore for Tonningen on August 23, 1807, and on October 20, off Heligoland, was boarded by a British sloop-of-war, and warned not to proceed to Tonningen. She sailed to Cushaven, where she was taken possession of by the French douaniers about the 21st of October, and finally discharged at Hamburg. Part of the cargo, as it was verbally, but officially stated, by order of the Emperor, was sent to Paris, to be sold there for consumption. The claim of the company is the sum which they paid for insurance made on the cargo; but, from the state of the markets at the time of the loss, it might be properly estimated at $30,000.
25. Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria.	....do.....	May 31, 1805...	Capture.....	Schooner Young Lion, Daingerfield master.	$5,500. The capture was made in the West Indies.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Young Lion was taken by the French privateer Superb, and carried into Buracoa. The captain and crew were detained prisoners aboard the privateer until shipped in a vessel bound to Baltimore.
26. Marine Insurance Co'y of Alexandria.	....do.....	September, 1806	Capture.....	Brig Washington, Crowdhill master.	$8,000. The capture was made in the West Indies.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Washington was taken by the French Government schooner Dolphin, and afterwards lost on the French Keys.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
27. Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria.	France.....	October, 1810..	Sequestration and sale, by order of the French Government.	Ship Hawk.....	$10,000. The vessel was sequestered and sold at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	None.
28. Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria.	....do.....	Jan. 14, 1813...	The vessel was sunk at sea.	Ship Citizen, Crowdhill master.	$12,000. The loss was sustained at sea.....	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Citizen was on her passage from Lisbon to the District of Columbia, and was boarded by the French national frigate La Gloire, which, after taking out her ship stores, provisions, sails, rigging, &c., scuttled and sunk her.
29. Theodore Chase, estate of Joseph Chase, deceased, and John Riley.	....do.....	The capture was made Feb. 2, 1808.	Capture	Brig Tarantula, of Portsmouth, N. H., John Riley master.	The value of the vessel was 44,000 francs, to which add 29,970 francs for freight, primage, and gratifications, and the amount of loss sustained is 73,970 francs, or $13,802 80. The place of the capture is not stated.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes at Paris, July 6, 1808.	The brig Tarantula was captured by the French privateer Le Pere de Famille. The capture and condemnation were made under the first article of the Milan decree, on the ground that the brig had been visited by a British vessel-of-war.
30. Edmund Roberts	....do.....	Sept., 1807, date of the seizure.	Seizure and condemnation.	Ship Victory, of Portsmouth, N. H., Caleb Hopkins master.	The claimant claims the insurance, the premium, and the expenses of a lawsuit instituted to recover the insurance; part of freight not insured, $598 50; the expenses at Cherbourg and Paris of the trial, and of maintaining the captain and crew, amounting to $1,297 79, and the value of the vessel, $16,500. These several items he states to amount to $19,096 29, on which he claims also 19 years' interest, at 6 per cent., making, in the whole, the sum of $40,865 92. The seizure was made at Cherbourg.	Condemnation under the Berlin and Milan decrees, at Paris, in 1808.	The ship Victory sailed from New York in July, 1807, bound for Cherbourg, in France. On her passage she was captured by a British vessel-of-war and sent into Plymouth, England, and, after a few hours' detention there, was released. She then proceeded on her voyage. On her arrival at Cherbourg she was quarantined four days; at the expiration of which time she was seized for having come from a British port, and, after nearly a year's detention, was condemned under the Berlin and Milan decrees. The ship was partly insured, out only; and in consequence of her not having been seized within twenty-four hours after her arrival the claimant lost the insurance, was obliged to pay the premium and the expenses of a lawsuit instituted for the purpose of recovering the insurance. The freight was partially insured, and the deficiency amounts to $598 50.
31. Robert Roberts' executors.	....do.....	Jan. 7, 1808....	Capture and detention....	Brig Mercury.....	Loss on cargo ..... $21,416 14 Freight..... 4,650 75 Detention of the vessel for 130 days .... 3,900 00 Expenses..... 826 96 ——— $30,793 85 The capture was made in the Bay of Alicante.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Mercury and her cargo were, at the time of their capture, owned by Robert Roberts, of Plymouth, Massachusetts, since deceased, of whom Nathaniel Curtis and Isaac Clapp were the executors. They were captured by the French privateer Josephine, Captain Babistro, and the cargo, with the exception of thirty boxes of sugar, was sold at Alicante. The brig was, after one hundred and thirty days' detention, delivered up to the captain, empty, and in a very bad condition. On October 29, 1807, Mr. Roberts had insured, at the New England Marine Insurance Office, at Boston, $5,000 on the vessel and $10,000 on the cargo. He having afterwards received from the office $10,000 on the loss of the cargo, the office is to that amount interested in the present claim.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
32. Robert Roberts' executors.	France	Jan. 15, 1811	Capture	Schr. Zebra, John Burgess master.	Cost of cargo at Boston ..... $3,207 22 Expenses ..... 316 30 Vessel and outfits ..... 4,000 00 Freight ..... 2,872 00 Detention of vessel 793 days .. 19,825 00 — $30,220 52 Deduct $1,211 65, received from Messrs. Daumas, and $338 43, received from the sale of the vessel ..... 1,550 08 Amount of loss ..... 28,670 44 The capture was made in the Mediterranean, about seven leagues from Cape St. Martin.	After a detention of two years and seventy-three days the vessel and cargo were, by legal adjudication at Paris, ordered to be restored in 1813.	The schooner Zebra and her cargo were captured by the privateer Jean Bart, owned by Messrs. Daumas Brothers, of Marseilles, and carried to that place. When she was restored, her crew had left her, and she was in such a condition as to make it necessary that she should be sold at Marseilles. She was accordingly sold by the agents of the owners, and produced the sum of $338 43. The cargo had previously, while in the hands of the captors, been sold by order of the legal tribunals. At the time of the capture, Alanson Tucker, of Boston, owned half of the vessel and cargo, and he is interested in the same portion of the present claim.
33. Ebenezer Stocker's administrator and others, enumerated in the last column.	....do	The seizure was made March 10, 1810.	Seizure and confiscation..	Ship Franklin, (was seized,) Chas. L. Hyatt master.	Value of ship and freight ..... $49,376 90 Value of cargo ..... 65,346 45 Amount of loss ..... 114,723 35 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication	The ship Franklin was an American vessel, and, together with her cargo and freight, belonged to citizens of the United States. She sailed from Boston, February 7, 1810, for the port of St. Sebastian, where she arrived on the 10th of March following, not having violated the laws of neutrality. She was, however, seized by order of the French Government, sent round to Bayonne, and there sold at public auction in August, 1810, without any trial, under the Rambouillet decree. The cargo alone was sold for francs 845,164 89, which sum was paid into the French Treasury. The cargo was owned as follows, viz: Richards & Jones, Oliver Putnam, Judah Hayes, Thomas C. Amory & Co. } tobacco and cotton. $23,135 00 John and Samuel Welles ..... cotton ..... 5,465 26 James and Thomas H. Perkins ..... tobacco ..... 3,394 08 Benjamin Bussey ..... tobacco ..... 1,910 58 Ebenezer Stocker & Lem'l Pope, jr.. cotton and logwood. 2,156 72 John C. Jones ..... cloves ..... 660 00 Peter Wainwright ..... tobacco ..... 2,299 48 Cornelius Coolidge ..... cotton ..... 3,391 13 Ezra Davis ..... cotton ..... 5,965 09 Abraham Touro ..... tobacco ..... 525 00 William Coffin ..... tobacco and cotton .. 3,727 71 J. and S. D. Harris & Co ..... potash and logwood. 5,583 00 Oliver Keating ..... cigars 559 44

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
33. Continued	.....	.....	.....	.....	....	.....	Colburn & Gill.....cotton and tobacco.. $3,017 80 John Jones and Joseph H. Pope.....indigo..... 496 20 Charles L. Hyatt..cotton, tobacco, indigo, and whalebone. 3,059 95 65,346 45
34. Union Insurance Company at New London, Conn.	France	The capture was made in August, 1808.	Capture and condemnation.	Brig George, Josiah Douglass master.	$1,700. The place of capture is not stated.....	Condemnation at Guadaloupe, under a French decree. The date of the condemnation is not stated.	The ship and freight were owned by Ebenezer Stockton, Lemuel Pope, jr., and John Gray. The brig George sailed from New London, August 11, 1808, bound for St. Lucia, Antigua, and Turk's Island. On her passage she was captured and carried into Guadaloupe, where she was condemned for having been bound for an English port. The claimants had insured, and have since paid, on the above brig, $1,300 for J. Huntington, and $400 for Henry Trueman.
35. James Sheafe and the estate of Matthew S. Marsh.	....do	The capture was made August 15, 1809.	Capture	Brig John Adams...	Value of the brig..... $10,000 00 Value of freight..... 6,060 00 Amount, &c..... 16,060 00 The expenses of the master and crew and charges in France are also claimed, but not stated. The capture was made in the English channel.	Condemnation of vessel and cargo by the Council of Prizes at Paris, May 23, 1810.	The John Adams sailed from Richmond, Virginia, June 28, 1809, with a cargo of tobacco, bound for Hamburg and a market, and was captured by the French privateer the Grand Duke of Berg, Drosier master. Without any examination of papers she was ordered for France, and arrived at the port of Dieppe on the 17th of August. She was condemned on the alleged ground that she was bound for England, and on English account. The money arising from the sale of the vessel and cargo was ordered to be deposited in the chest of the invalids of the marine, no part of it being allowed to the captors, on the ground of their imputed misconduct in capturing the brig under English colors. The owners appealed to the Council of State, which made no final decision. Against the supposition that the John Adams was bound for England, the claimants remark that she had aboard 33 hogsheads of broken tobacco, which, in such case, would, on her arrival in that country, have subjected both vessel and cargo to condemnation.
36. Joseph White, estate of Robert Stone, Robert Stone, and Nathaniel Silsbee.	....do	About July 30, 1809.	Seizure	Schooner Salem ...	Cargo, per invoice ..... $13,279 18 Vessel and outfits..... 4,500 00 Freight .... 4,000 00 21,779 18 Counsellor's fee ..... 1,500 00 Amount, &c..... 23,279 18 Seizure made at St. Sebastian.	Condemned by the Commander of Marines at St. Sebastian; sentence annulled by the tribunal at Madrid, March 27, 1810.	This vessel was seized on her arrival at St. Sebastian, about July 30, 1809. In August she was condemned by the Commandant of Marine at St. Sebastian, in consequence of her having been visited at sea by a British frigate. From this decision an appeal was made to the tribunal at Madrid, by which the sentence of condemnation was annulled, and an order issued March 27, 1810, to the Commandant of Marine at St. Sebastian to liberate the vessel and cargo, and to deliver the same into the custody of the captain; but the French general, Thouvnot, then military commandant of the province, acting

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
36—Continued							under the authority of the Emperor of France, would not allow this order of the court of Madrid to have any effect, and gave directions for the removal of the property to Bayonne, in conformity, as he alleged, with orders which he had received from the Director General of Custom-houses at Paris. This order for the removal of the property was put in execution in June, and the cargo was sold at Bayonne some time in September, 1810, and the proceeds of both vessel and cargo retained by persons acting under the authority of the Government of France. The cargo of this vessel consisted of 213 bales of cotton, which weighed 58,071 pounds, and sold for 37 cents per pound ..... $21,486 27 Twelve hogsheads of tobacco, 14,300 pounds, sold for 40 cents per pound ..... 5,720 00 Twenty-four casks of rice, 16,026 pounds, at 8¼ cents per pound ..... 1,377 51 Sales of cargo ..... 28,583 78 The vessel, although new, of about 107 tons, was sold (in consequence of the impracticability of using vessels, either under the French or Spanish flags at that time) at the trifling price of 6,500 francs, equal to 1,238 00 29,821 78
37. Elijah Beall, of Hingham, Massachusetts.	France	September 19, 1811.	Piratical plunder	Brig Factor, Elijah Beall master. (Was plundered.)	Specie dollars ..... $6,000 00 Other property ..... 1,000 00 Amount, &c ..... 7,000 00 The loss was sustained at sea.	The claimant knows of no legal adjudication.	Joseph White is interested one-third in this claim; the estate of Robert Stone and Robert Stone one-third, and Nathaniel Silsbee one-third. Property belonging to the claimant of the kind and value hereinbefore mentioned, aboard the brig Factor, was forcibly taken from her, on her passage from Lisbon to Boston, by the French frigate L'Orient, under English colors.
38. John W. Head, of Warren, Maine.	....do.....	About the 18th of Feb., 1811.	Capture and destruction ..	Brig Sumner	Value of the brig ..... $7,500 00 Amount of the freight of wheat ..... 3,000 00 5 per cent. premium on the wheat ..... 150 00 Value of ten tierces of rice on claimant's account ..... 251 40 Freight of ten tierces of rice ..... 20 00 Amount, &c ..... 10,921 40 Add 15 years' interest, from February, 1811, to February, 1826 ..... 9,829 20 20,750 60 The loss was sustained on the passage of the brig from Liverpool to Lisbon, but it is not stated where.	No legal adjudication	The cargo of the brig Sumner consisted of wheat and ten tierces of rice. On her passage from Liverpool to Lisbon she was captured by three French frigates, La Benommee, La Nereide, and La Clorinde, which were from Brest, about eight days out, and had troops on board. It was understood that they were bound to the Isle of France. The boarding officer came into the cabin of the Sumner, took her papers and scattered them about the table, knocked off the gripes of the long-boat, and took off the hatches. The Sumner being a deep waisted vessel, with a low deck, soon filled and sunk.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
39. Wm. Hollingsworth and others, named in the last column.	France	Dec. 28, 1809	Seizure and sequestration.	Schooner Postboy, (seized,) Alex. Adams master.	Value of the vessel..... $17,000 00 Value of the cargo..... 32,913 37 49,913 37 Add freight. The loss was sustained at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Postboy belonged to John F. Kennedy, of Baltimore. Her cargo consisted of 30 hhds. of tobacco, which were sold before the seizure, and 146 bales of cotton. The schooner was, together with her cargo of cotton, seized and sequestered at St. Sebastian, by order of the French Government. The cotton was owned by the following persons, and in the following proportions, viz: William Hollingsworth, of Elkton, Md., four-tenths, equal to $13,165 34; Levi Hollingsworth, now dec'd, of Baltimore, five-tenths; Briscoe & Partridge, one-tenth; the captain, six bales of cotton. William Hollingsworth is the executor of Levi Hollingsworth, and represents the interest of Briscoe & Partridge; James Mosher and Lemuel Taylor, both of Baltimore, represent the interest of John F. Kennedy. Captain Adams is believed to be dead. The freight on the cargo was to be one-half thereof to John F. Kennedy, on its safe delivery at St. Sebastian. No insurance had been made by the shippers. The 146 bales of cotton were sold after the seizure for 175,538 francs, equal to $32,913 37, and weighed 44,487 lbs. Spanish weight.
40. Benjamin F. Watson, of Boston.	....do.....	Dec., 1807, or Jan., 1808.	Capture and confiscation..	Schooner Reward, Wm. Goss master.	The captured and condemned property, consisting of 15 bales of Georgia cotton, net weight 4,571 lbs., at 14 cents per lb., was worth $653 94. The claimant is unacquainted with its value at the port of destination, or with the proceeds of its sale. The vessel was captured on her passage from the United States to La Rochelle, but it is not stated where.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Reward, having on board an adventure of 15 bales of Georgia cotton, owned by Fettyplace & Watson, merchants, of Boston, of which firm the claimant is the representative, sailed in December, 1807, bound for La Rochelle, in France. She appears to have been captured by a British cruiser, recaptured by a French privateer, and carried into the port of Paros, in France. The cotton was sold under a decree of the Emperor Napoleon, and the proceeds of the sale placed in the caisse d'amortissement.
41. Jno. Watson, of East Windsor, Conn.	....do.....	The vessel was captured Feb. 22, 1811.	Capture and plunder.. ...	Brig Harriet, of East Windsor, Conn.	The amount of the loss sustained and the value of the property captured are $37,400. The capture was made on the high seas, lat. 32° 50′ E., long. 20° 48′.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Harriet was captured, on her homeward bound passage from Lisbon to New York, by the French frigates Renomme, Nereide, and Clorinde, each carrying 40 guns, and robbed of 66 of the Merino sheep, which constituted her cargo; also of her small stores, most of her provisions, her sails, spars, rigging, furniture, money, spy-glasses, &c., &c. The commanders of the French frigates forcibly put on board the Harriet Captain Malcolm and crew of the brig Sumner, and Captain Powers and crew of the brig Endeavor, said commanders having sunk the vessels of these captains. There being then thirty souls on board the Harriet, and only three barrels of bread and three barrels of beef, the captain of the Harriet was, in order to prevent starving, obliged to kill most of the Merino sheep which had not been captured; and these were then worth, in New York, more than $200 a head.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
42. Gabriel Paul, for himself and others.	France.....	Oct. 30, 1810	The vessel and cargo were seized and confiscated.	Brig Good Friends, Winslow Harlow master.	The value of the property confiscated, as paid for in Philadelphia, was..... $6,733 89 Premium of insurance..... 750 00 Expenses of suit, &c..... 1,309 53 Claimant's commission, as supercargo, of 5 per cent. on amount of sale..... 1,893 37½ 10,686 79½ The loss was sustained at Morlaix.	There was no special legal adjudication in this case, the property being sold under a decree of the Emperor Napoleon, confiscating a number of American vessels, including the Good Friends.	The brig Good Friends, owned by Edward Coursault, a citizen of the United States, and merchant of Philadelphia, was loaded with 49 hhds. brown sugar, 42 cases of white sugar, 76 bags of coffee, 4 seroons of indigo, 99 bales of cotton, 20 hhds. of tobacco, 46 tons of logwood, 20 tierces of cocoa, 71 bags of gum, 30 seroons of Peruvian bark, 5 hhds. of cassia, 19 quarter chests of tea, 100 bags of pepper, and 1,800 lbs. of Brazilletto wood, shipped by citizens of the United States. On December 8, 1809, the Good Friends cleared from Philadelphia for Tonningen, and, after thirty-five days of a very boisterous passage, was, in consequence of her leaky condition, obliged to take refuge in the port of Bas, near Morlaix. She entered this port on January 19, 1810; and the claimant, as supercargo, (he being also part owner,) informed the Commissary of Marine of said port of the causes which had compelled the vessel to take refuge in it, and requested to be permitted to unload the cargo, repair the vessel, and proceed to her port of destination. The supercargo's communication was despatched to the Maritime Prefect at Brest, who answered it on January 22, directing that every assistance which he might need should be given to him. The captain went ashore, and made his declaration of distress before the Collector of the custom-house, on the 24th, and began to unload on the 6th of February, when orders were received by the Inspector of Customs at Morlaix, from the Director General at Paris, to seize on the vessel and cargo as American property; which was accordingly done. After various attempts, on the part of the claimant and captain, to obtain justice from the French tribunals, and after the ineffectual interposition of the American minister, the vessel and cargo were sold at Morlaix, August 20, 1810; and the Emperor, to whom the Minister of Finances had made a favorable report of the case, confiscated, on the ensuing 30th of October, a number of American vessels, including the Good Friends. Besides others, not mentioned by Mr. Paul, Daniel W. Coxe, Stephen Dutilh, James S. Duval, and the claimant, were shippers of the cargo.
43. Daniel Lathrop's executors and others, for the Norwich Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	Feb. 21, 1808	A part of the cargo was seized, and the residue, together with the vessel, was destroyed by two French frigates, under the Berlin and Milan decrees.	Schr. Windham, Berachiah Paine master.	The loss on the vessel was ..... $2,500 00 The loss on the cargo was..... 2,500 00 5,000 00 These were the sums insured on the vessel and cargo, respectively. One half of the aggregate was paid	The claimants know of no legal adjudication.	The schooner Windham was owned by Elisha Abbe, a citizen of the United States, who subsequently abandoned to the Norwich Marine Insurance Company. She sailed from Demarara, bound for Norwich, Connecticut, February 4, 1808, laden with 106 hhds. of rum, 40 hhds. of molasses, 1,000 lbs. old copper, sugar, coffee, &c. On February 17, was spoken off St. Croix by the British frigate Stag, who permitted her to proceed without endorsing her papers. On

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
43. Continued	.....	.....	.....	.....	by the office to Elisha Abbe, August 21, 1808, and the other half December 21, 1808. The claimants claim also, for the master's expenses home, $219 72; for notarial expenses in France, $25 90; for wages of master and crew, $1,400. The loss was sustained at sea, about 26° N. lat., and 66° W. long.	.....	February 21, was captured by the French frigates La Italienne and La Syren, who had sailed from St. Maloes, in France, December, 1807, bringing with them the Milan decree. After taking on board the rum, masts, &c., they burnt the vessel and the residue of the cargo. Redress was afterwards, but ineffectually, sought before the Council of Prizes at Paris. The claim appears to be made for the Insurance Company, by Charles Huntington, Cushing Eells, and F. T. Lathrop, executors of Daniel Lathrop, deceased, and Joseph H. Strong, Joseph Williams, and Benjamin Coit.
44. Sam'l W. Jones, surviving partner of James Smith & Co.	France	Dec. —, 1809	Seizure and sale of sugar and cotton, under the Rambouillet decree.	The property seized, &c., had been shipped in the ship Hawk.	Eighty boxes of white sugar, seized in port, sold at 113 francs, free of duty; 120 bales of fine cotton, seized in port, sold at 295 francs, free of duty. The aggregate of these sums is $15,000, and constitutes the present claim. The cargo was sold by the custom-house at Bayonne, and the proceeds placed in the sinking fund.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	None.
45. G. Coursault, for himself, and as administr'r of Amable Coursault, dec'd.	....do.....	Dec. 14, 1809	Seizure and confiscation .	Triphena, of Philadelphia.	$32,900. This amount appears to be claimed for the vessel, and for the whole or a part of her cargo, but the respective values of the same are not stated. The loss was sustained at Cherbourg.	There was no legal adjudication.	The Triphena cleared at Philadelphia for Tonningen, and in December, 1809, put into Cherbourg in distress, where she was seized and sequestered. She was afterwards confiscated under an imperial order, dated October 30, 1810, and, on January 16, 1811, was publicly sold at Cherbourg.
46. G. Coursault, for himself, and as administr'r of Amable Coursault, dec'd.	....do.....	Jan. —, 1810	Seizure and confiscation .	Brig Good Friends, Winslow Harlow master.	$36,050. The loss was sustained at Morlaix.	There was no legal adjudication.	This claim appears to be connected with that numbered 42 in this schedule. See explanatory remarks of No. 42.
47. Daniel W. Coxe.....	....do.....	Jan. —, 1810	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Good Friends, Winslow Harlow master.	$8,600. The loss was sustained at Morlaix.	There was no legal adjudication.	See No. 42, explanatory remarks. G. Coursault is the agent for the claimant.
48. Step'n Dutilh's heirs.	....do	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Good Friends, Winslow Harlow master.	$14,100. The loss was sustained at Morlaix.....	There was no legal adjudication.	See No. 42, explanatory remarks. G. Coursault is the agent for the claimants.
49. James S. Duval, for himself and another.	....do	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Good Friends, Winslow Harlow master.	$10,590. The loss was sustained at Morlaix.....	There was no legal adjudication.	See No. 42, explanatory remarks. G. Coursault is the agent for the claimants.
50. Gabriel Paul.....	....do	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Good Friends, Winslow Harlow master.	$12,060. The loss was sustained at Morlaix.....	There was no legal adjudication.	See No. 42, explanatory remarks. G. Coursault, the claimant's agent, states no particulars in regard to this claim; but it is probably the same as the claim numbered 42 in this schedule, though there is some difference in the amounts, as estimated by the two claims.
51. Winslow Harlow....	....do	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Good Friends, Winslow Harlow master.	$2,150. The loss was sustained at Morlaix.....	There was no legal adjudication.	See No. 42, explanatory remarks. G. Coursault is the claimant's agent.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
52. Stephen Waterman.	France	March, 1808....	The vessel was captured by two French frigates, and after being plundered of her cargo was burnt.	Ship Mentor of New York, the claimant master.	The value of the vessel when burnt was... $16,000 The value of the part of her cargo belonging to claimant ..... 4,000 The freight, &c., on about 310 tons of goods. 7,000 27,000	There was no legal adjudication.	The ship Mentor was boarded by the British frigate Guerriere about the 20th of February, 1808; but as she had left the United States before the date of the orders in council she was released. About the 2d of March, 1808, she was taken by the French frigates Hortensie and Hermione, plundered and burnt. Captain Waterman was taken from Brest to the prison at Verdun, where he was confined about four months.
53. Maine Fire and Marine Insurance Co., of Portland.	....do	Feb. 11, 1811...	The vessel was captured, scuttled, and sunk, by three French frigates, called Renomme, Nereid, and Clorinda.	Brig Sumner, of Warren, State of Maine.	The place where the loss was sustained is not stated. $5,000 was the amount insured on the vessel. The capture and loss took place in 47° 30′ north latitude, and 13° west longitude.	There was no legal adjudication.	None.
54. Maine Fire and Marine Insurance Co., of Portland.	....do	Feb. 8, 1811....	The vessel was captured by a French privateer and carried into a port in France.	Ship Mary Ann, of Portland, Maine.	$10,000 was the amount insured on the vessel. The vessel was captured in the British channel, on her voyage from Charleston, South Carolina, to London.	There was no legal adjudication.	None.
55. Maine Fire and Marine Insurance Co., of Portland.	....do	April 19, 1812..	The vessel was captured by a French cruiser and sent into the port of St. Mark's, in the island of Hispaniola.	Brig Lydia, of Cape Elizabeth, Maine.	$1,000 was the amount insured on the cargo. The place of capture is not stated.	The vessel and cargo were condemned April 22, 1812. The place (which was probably St. Mark's) of condemnation is not stated.	A prizemaster and three men were put aboard the Lydia, and the captain, mate, and most of the crew, were taken out.
56. Moses Wheeler, surviving partner of Stackpole & Wheeler.	....do	Jan. 28, 1808...	The vessel was captured by the armed French vessel the Cosmopolite, and carried into Porto Ferrajo, in the island of Elba.	Ship Grace, R. J. Linzee master.	Value of the ship..... $12,000 Value of the freight..... 5,355 Value of the merchandise belonging to Stackpole & Wheeler..... 18,117 Their proportion of expenses in endeavoring to recover the property..... 1,172 36,644	The claimant states that this case was adjudicated by the Council of Prizes July 6, 1808, and registered at Paris October 5, 1808.	The ship Grace sailed from Boston November 20, 1807, for Leghorn. She was owned and freighted by American citizens residing in Boston, and her voyage and acts were legal. An appeal was claimed from the decision at Paris, but no new trial was had.
57. John Pedrick, 3d	....do	The capture was made August 8, 1811.	The vessel was captured by a French privateer.	Schooner Hero, of Marblehead, Hen. Blackler master.	The place of capture not stated. The value of the vessel and cargo was $30,238 47, including freight and premium of insurance. Of this sum $12,000 were insured. The cargo sold for $35,233, as the exchange stood in England at the time of the sale. The precise place of capture is not stated.	The vessel and cargo were subjected to legal adjudication by the Consular Prize Court of Paris at Copenhagen. Its decision, dated September 25, 1811, was confirmed by the Emperor Napoleon January 17, 1812.	The Hero sailed from Marblehead June 26, 1811, bound for St. Petersburg, with a cargo of coffee, cotton, logwood, and indigo. She was not boarded on her passage by any vessel, and on the 29th of July arrived at the quarantine ground of Gottenburg, whither she had been ordered for information. She sailed on the 1st and arrived at Elsinore on the 5th of August; sailed thence on the 6th but was obliged, by bad weather, to put back. She sailed again on the 8th at 5 p. m., and at 8 p. m. of the same day was captured by the French privateer La Minute. In this and the four following cases E. Copeland, jr., is the claimant's agent.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
58. John Pedrick, 3d.....	France	The capture was made July 1, 1810.	Capture.....	Schooner Eleanor, of Marblehead, Thos. Williams master.	The invoice cost of cargo was $10,477 78. The claimant owned one-sixth part of all the cargo, except the pepper, making..... $1,572 35 He owned also one-third part of the pepper, making..... 347 88 1,920 23 The cargo sold at Seville for $38,345 53. The capture was made at sea, 9 or 10 miles from St. Lucar.	The vessel and cargo were subjected to legal adjudication, August 7, 1810, by the Commission of Sequestration and Prizes at Seville.	The Eleanor sailed from Marblehead May 22, 1810, bound for Tangiers and a market, but intended to go to a port in France, or to one occupied by the troops of France, if the commercial regulations of the Empire should, meanwhile, have become such as to allow her to do so. Her cargo consisted of coffee, cotton, tobacco, pepper, and dyewood. At the time of her capture she had not, after leaving Marblehead, been visited, nor had she touched at any port.
59. John Pedrick, 3d.....	....do.....	The capture was made Dec. 26, 1809.	The vessel was captured by a French privateer.	Schooner Joseph, of Marblehead, Samuel Stacy master.	The invoice value of 100 bags of cocoa was $2,596 65. It sold in France for $3,520. The claimant states that it would have brought in Spain, to a port in which it was destined, $80 per cwt. at the time of the capture. The vessel was captured on her passage from St. Anthony's to Bilboa.	The vessel and cargo were condemned by the Prize Court of Paris July 4, 1810.	The Joseph sailed from Marblehead November 11, 1809, with a cargo of sugar, coffee, cocoa, pepper, and fish. She cleared for Gigon, in Spain; met with bad weather at sea and put in to repair leaks, &c., and for shelter, to St. Anthony's. Hence her papers were sent to St. Andero, and there examined by the French general, who sent them back with permission that she should go to Bilboa. For this place she sailed from St. Anthony's on the 26th of December at 4 o'clock p. m., and about 10 o'clock of the same day was captured by the French privateer L'Entreprenant and sent into St. Jean de Luz.
60. John Pedrick, 3d.....	....do.....	The date of the act complained of is not stated.	The claimant's property was sequestrated.	Schooner Two Sons, of Marblehead, John Warner master.	Two thousand five hundred dollars.....	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	The property of the claimant, consisting of pepper, sugar, and tobacco, was sequestered at Bilboa after it had been landed and partly sold, but not delivered. The tobacco was worth 46¼ cts. per pound in Bilboa, and the pepper much more than it brought in France. The sugar was worth about the same in both places. The claimant claims as assignee of Joseph Lindsey & Co
61. John Pedrick, 3d.....	....do.....	May, 1810.....	The vessel was captured and detained a long time.	Brig Joseph, of Marblehead, Jos. Pedrick master.	The indemnification claimed by the claimant appears to be for the loss of a return freight from the Baltic, estimated at 1,200 pounds sterling, and for expenses in procuring the release of the vessel, estimated at $1,200. The injury was sustained at Forsand, in Norway.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	The brig Joseph was chartered to go to Gottenburg from Charleston, S. C. On her passage she was captured and carried into Forsand, Norway, where she was detained a long time. Her voyage was thus broken up and she lost the opportunity (being too late in the season) of proceeding to the Baltic for a return freight. The property of the claimant consisted of logwood, sugar, and cotton.
62. A. Curcier, of Philadelphia.	....do.....	October, 1810..	Sequestration and confiscation.	Ship Hawk, M. Brown master, (property seized was on board.)	Value of shipment..... $1,156 87 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 1,105 19 Amount, &c..... 2,262 06 The loss was sustained at Bayonne.	No legal adjudication.....	The property of the claimant on board the ship Hawk was sequestrated under the Rambouillet decree, and sold by order of the Collector of Customs at Bayonne.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
63. A. Curcier, of Philadelphia.	France	January, 1810	Sequestration and confiscation.	Claimant's property which was seized and sold was on board the brig Anderson, Isaac Coggins master.	Value of shipment..... $2,275 76 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 2,276 52 Amount, &c..... 4,552 28 The loss was sustained at Bayonne.	No legal adjudication.....	The property of the claimant on board the brig Anderson was sequestrated under the Rambouillet decree, and sold by order of the Collector of Customs at Bayonne.
64. A. Curcier, of Philadelphia.	....do	Nov., 1809	Seizure and detention....	Schooner Spencer, D. Maffit master.	Value of vessel and freight.. $20,000 00 Value of shipment..... 37,042 20 $57,042 20 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 57,631 64 Amount, &c..... 114,673 84 The place of seizure is not stated, but was probably St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Spencer was seized with her cargo, detained in port upwards of twelve months, and finally given up to the owner on condition of serving as a transport. But she had been so much stripped and injured by the detention as to be, on her arrival in New York, of no more value than the estimate of her freight.
65. T. Ellicott and J. Meredith, trustees of Smith & Buchanan, for themselves and others interested in the claim.	....do	Jan. 27, 1808	Seizure and confiscation..	The Julius Henry, Capt. Woodside, had on board the cargo which was seized.	$1,681 52. The loss was sustained at Cuxhaven roads.	No legal adjudication.....	The Julius Henry sailed from Baltimore for Tonningen, which port she found blockaded. Having no pilot to carry her to another Danish port on the coast, and having suffered much damage by severe weather, she went into the river Elbe, and anchored in Cuxhaven roads, which he deemed her nearest port of safety. There she purposed refitting for sea, and obtaining a coast pilot to take her, after being repaired, to some Danish port on the coast. On her anchoring, however, though without the lines of the French custom-house, she was seized by its officers, and, with her cargo, taken to Hamburg, where the cargo was confiscated by the Emperor.
66. Robert S. Hollins, David Hoffman, Benj. C. Howard, and Charles F. Mayer, trustees of Hollins & McBlair, of Baltimore. See No. 167.	....do	Jan. 27, 1808	Seizure and confiscation..	The Juniata, Capt. Mazick, had on board the cargo which was seized.	Value of sugars and coffee..... $13,946 00 Value of teas..... 19,130 00 Amount, &c..... 33,076 00 This amount is the cost of the articles. Their value at their port of destination is estimated at $52,000. The seizure was made near Cuxhaven roads.	No legal adjudication..	The Juniata left Baltimore for Tonningen in October, 1807, and arrived in December off the river Eyder in distress. She was there, for the first time, apprised of the blockade of that river, and that, of course, she could not be admitted to her port of destination. Being unable to find a pilot for any other Danish port, she was, on that account, and in consequence of her disabled condition, compelled to put into the river Elbe, where she anchored at three leagues from Cuxhaven, and at a considerable distance without the French custom-house lines. Nevertheless, while she was providing herself with a pilot, in order, so soon as she should have repaired her

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
66. Continued	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	damages, to go to some Danish port on the coast, she and her cargo were seized by French custom-house officers and carried to Hamburg. The cargo was there confiscated by the Emperor.
67. Mayer & Brantz, of Baltimore.	France.....	Jan. 27, 1808	Seizure and confiscation.	The ship Eleonora, William Taylor master, had carried the property which was seized.	$3,158 68. The seizure was made at Humburg Berg, a suburb of Hamburg.	No legal adjudication.....	The Eleonora left Baltimore in June, 1807. The claimants' property, consisting of 54 boxes white and 17 boxes brown Havana sugars, was stored at Hamburg Berg, which was considered as being without the French custom-house lines. The consignee at Hamburg, L. H. Von Hollen, refused to deliver the keys of the warehouses, but they were forcibly taken from him, and the French custom-house officers seized the goods; which were afterwards confiscated by the Emperor.
68. H. Fournier, of Philadelphia.	....do	January, 1810	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Roebuck, William Sloan master.	Value of vessel and freight..... $10,800 00 Value of shipment..... 13,523 54 Interest to October 1, 1826 ..... 24,331 65 Amount, &c..... 48,655 19 The seizure was made at Port Passage.	No legal adjudication.....	The claimant's property was sequestered under the Rambouillet decree, and on August 20, 1810, the cargo was sold at Bayonne by the Collector of the Customs. The cargo produced 206,297.36 francs, equal to $39,294 73.
69. John Dubarry, of Philadelphia.	....do	December, 1809	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Fox, Thos. Cullen master, had carried the property which was seized.	Value of shipment..... $3,738 18 Interest to October 1, 1826 ..... 3,758 12 Amount, &c..... 7,496 30 This amount includes charges and insurance. The seizure was made in the port of St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The claimant's property was sequestered under the Rambouillet decree. It was sold at Bayonne by order of the Collector of Customs.
70. H. Fournier, assignee of Anthony Laussat.	....do.....	December, 1809.	Seizure and confiscation..	The property seized had been carried by the brig Fox, Thomas Cullen master.	Value of shipment..... $19,033 71 Interest to October 1, 1826 ..... 19,128 87 Amount, &c..... 38,162 58 This amount includes charges and insurance. The seizure was made in port.	No legal adjudication.....	The property was sequestered under the Rambouillet decree, and was sold at Bayonne under the order of the Collector of Customs.
71. H. Fournier, assignee of Anthony Laussat.	....do.....	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	The property seized had been carried by the brig Andrew, Isaac Coggins master.	Value of shipment..... $6,245 00 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 6,245 00 Amount, &c..... 12,490 00 This amount includes charges and insurance. The seizure was made in port.	No legal adjudication.....	The property was sequestered under the Rambouillet decree, and was sold at Bayonne under the order of the Collector of Customs.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
72. H. Fournier, assignee of Anthony Laussat.	France.....	November, 1809	Seizure and confiscation..	The property seized had been carried by the schooner Spencer, David Maffet master.	Value of shipment..... $2,415 98 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 2,440 13 Amount, &c..... 4,856 11 This amount includes charges and insurance. The seizure was made in port.	No legal adjudication.....	The property was sequestered under the Rambouillet decree, and was sold at Bayonne under the order of the Collector of Customs.
73. John F. Dumas, of Philadelphia.	....do.....	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	The property seized had been carried by the brig Andrew, Captain Coggins.	Value of the property..... $15,495 83 Interest for 16½ years..... 15,340 87 Amount, &c..... 30,836 70 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	About November 24, 1809, the claimant shipped, on board the brig Andrew, bound from Philadelphia to St. Sebastian, a cargo of cotton, containing 48 bales. On the arrival of the brig at her port of destination she and her cargo were seized, under the authority of the French Government, and, after lying there a considerable time, were carried to Bayonne. The claimant's shipment was there sold at public auction, and the proceeds of sale deposited in the caisse d'amortissement. The cotton had weighed at Philadelphia 15,766 pounds, from which, if 10 per cent. be deducted for difference of weight, &c., a balance remains of 14,190. This was sold, on an average, at 588 francs per hundred, and produced, according to the duties on cotton existing in France when the Andrew arrived at St. Sebastian, 81,253.45 francs, or $15,495 83. But, about two months after the arrival of the Andrew at St. Sebastian, the French Government ordered a new duty of 300 francs per hundred, instead of the former, which, if admitted, will reduce the present claim to $7,782 28, exclusive of interest.
74. John F. Dumas, of Philadelphia.	....do.....	February, 1810.	Seizure and confiscation..	The property seized had been carried by the ship Hawk, Captain Michael Brown.	Value of the property ..... $34,411 15 Interest for 16½ years..... 34,072 00 Amount, &c..... 68,483 15 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The claimant's property was, about December 9, 1809, shipped aboard the Hawk, bound from Philadelphia to St. Sebastian. The circumstances of seizure, detention, and sale, in this case, are the same as those in the next preceding case. The property consisted of 117 bales of cotton, which, after a deduction of 10 per cent. from the weight in Philadelphia, &c., weighed 32,997 pounds, and was sold at an average of 565 francs per hundred. The proceeds of sale, according to the duty on cotton existing in France when the Hawk arrived at St. Sebastian, were 180,658.58 francs, or $34,411 15. If the new duty of 300 francs per hundred, substituted by the French Government, be admitted, the present claim will be only $13,665 62, exclusive of interest.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
75. Abisha Delano, Andrew Swain's estate, B. Hammond, and Sam'l Benney.	France or Spain.	1805.....	Capture	Schooner Betsey, B. Hammond master.	Value of vessel..... $2,100 00 Value of claimants' property ..... 3,650 00 Value of freight..... 1,550 00	The claimants know of no legal adjudication.	The schooner Betsey and part of her cargo were owned by the claimants. She was chartered in New York for Savannah la Mer, in Jamaica, and back to New York. She arrived at Savannah la Mer, discharged her cargo, reloaded, having on board 13 hogsheads of old Jamaica rum and a quantity of logwood, sailed for New York, and on her passage was captured by a French privateer fitted out at the Havana, and was sent into Port Cabannas, in the island of Cuba; there her cargo was taken out, the captain detained about the privateer two months and twenty days, and then put aboard a schooner bound for Alexandria. The fate of the Betsey is unknown to the claimants. Abisha Delano claims four-sixteenths of the vessel and cargo; the estate of Andrew Swain seven-sixteenths; B. Hammond two-sixteenths; and Samuel Benney three-sixteenths. But such amounts as are stated do not correspond with those proportions. This case was presented to the Commissioners under the Florida treaty, (article 4th,) and by them rejected.
76. Jonathan Lowder's estate.	France	Jan. 27, 1808	Capture and condemnation.	Ship Charlotte, of Trenton Maine.	Value of vessel ..... $10,000 Freight ..... 5,000 2,290 gallons of wine..... 2,290 Amount, &c., (exclusive of interest,).. 17,290	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes at Paris, under the Berlin and Milan decrees, on August 10, 1808.	The ship Charlotte was laden, when captured, with salt on freight, and with wine. The ship and wine were owned by Jonathan Lowder, now deceased. She was bound from Plymouth to Gottenburg, and was captured by the French privateer Revanche, Cap.ain Fourmentier, and carried into Ostend.
77. 78. 79. The Insurance Co. of North America, and others, enumerated in the last column, all of Philadelphia. (See No. 231.)	....do	Spring of 1807	Confiscation	The property confiscated had been carried in the ship Bourdeaux Packet, Jacob Spofford master; in the brig Diamond, Capt. Manson; and in the ship Helena, Capt. Smith.	The capture was made in the British channel. 77. The sales of the cargo of the ship Bourdeaux Packet amounted to 920,380.62 francs, equal, at 18¾ cents per franc, to $172,571 36. 78. The sales of the cargo of the brig Diamond amounted to 1,005,090.62 francs, equal to $188,454 49. 79. The sales of the cargo of the ship Helena amounted to 631,065.28 francs, equal to $118,324 74. The amount of loss sustained in those three cases (exclusive of interest) is $479,350 60. The loss in each case was sustained at Antwerp.	No legal adjudication	The cargo of the ship Bourdeaux Packet was shipped by James Smith & Co., Montgomery & Newbold, George Smith, Watson & Paul, Coates & Randolph, James Kitchen, Smith & Wood, Richard Smith, Craig & Simmons, Thomas C. Wharton, Levi Hollingsworth & Son, T. English & C. Holland, Joshua Clibborn, Samuel Hayes, Ralph Peters, John Brown, and the master; mostly insured. The insurers were the Union Insurance Company, the Phenix Insurance Company, the United States Insurance Company, and the Insurance Company of North America. The cargo of the brig Diamond was shipped by James Smith & Co., Smith & Wood, Montgomery & Newbold, George Smith, Joseph Summere, James Olden, jr., T. English & C. Holland, Joshua Clibborn, Jacob Clement, and Benjamin R. Smith; mostly insured. The insurers were the same as in the case of the cargo of the ship Bourdeaux Packet. The cargo of the ship Helena was shipped by James Smith & Co., Montgomery & Newbold, and Barker & Annesley; mostly insured. The insurers

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
79. Continued	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	were the United States Insurance Company and the Insurance Company of North America. The voyage of the Bourdeaux Packet, and that of the Diamond, was from Philadelphia to Antwerp. The voyage of the Helena was from Charleston to Antwerp. Two of these vessels were, on their outward passage, captured by British cruisers, and sent into England, but being there immediately released, proceeded for and arrived at Antwerp, their destined port. The other put into England in distress, refitted, pursued her voyage, and arrived at Antwerp. The Government permitted their cargoes to be landed and deposited in the public stores, and the vessels to return to the United States. The property thus obtained possession of by the French authorities at Antwerp was held for nearly three years, in opposition to the reiterated demands of the consignees, Messrs. Ridgway, Mertens & Co., for its restoration, and at length sold at public auction. The proceeds of sale were deposited in the caisse d'amortissement, and thence transferred to the public treasury.
80. Jonathan Amory, of Boston, surviving partner of Thomas C. Amory & Co.	France	July, 1810, date of the capture.	Capture and condemnation.	The property captured was aboard the barque Zeno, Stone master.	The amount of loss sustained by the claimant, or the firm of which he is the surviving partner, after crediting the sums received from the insurers, appears to be $5,214 44. The place of capture is not stated.	Condemnation at Paris. The date of it is not stated.	The property lost by Thomas Amory & Co. was captured by the French privateer Figarro, and carried into Christiansand.
81. Jonathan Amory, of Boston, surviving partner of Thomas C. Amory & Co.	....do	Jan. 28, 1808, date of the capture.	Capture and condemnation.	The captured property was aboard the ship Grace, R. J. Linzee master.	The claimant's proportion of the loss sustained, including expenses, is $11,654 03. The place of capture is not stated.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes at Paris, July 6, 1808.	The ship Grace sailed from Boston November 20, 1807, for Leghorn. She was owned and freighted by American citizens; her voyage was legal, and she committed no illegal act. The principal cause assigned for her condemnation was her alleged violation of the Milan decree. She had, however, sailed near —— days before, nor did she violate that decree. An appeal was claimed, but no further trial was ever had.
82. Union Insurance Company at New London, Conn. (See No. 5.)	....do	Feb. 21, 1808	Capture and burning at sea.	Schr. Windham, Burachia Payne master.	$2,565, the amount insured by the claimants on Elisha Abbe's shipment aboard the schooner Windham, and after her capture paid by them to him. The loss was sustained at sea.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner sailed from Demarara, for New London, February 4, 1808, and, on the 21st of the same month, fell in with two French frigates, who took out part of her cargo, and the crew, and then burnt her.
83. William Renwick, of New York.	....do	1807....	Seizure and confiscation..	The property confiscated was shipped in the brig Perseverance, Glover master.	The value of the property confiscated is, by the invoice, dated New York, December 5, 1806, $16,161 16. The seizure was made at Antwerp.	No legal adjudication.....	The claimant's shipment consisted of 300 boxes of teas, consigned to D. Parish & Co., of Antwerp. They were seized by the French authorities at that port, and sold by their order. The proceeds of sale, amounting to 106,548 francs, were deposited in the caisse d'amortissement.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
84. Estate of William Gray, of Boston.	France	July 31, 1805...	Destruction of the vessel and cargo.	Schooner Alpha, Sergeant master. (Destroyed.)	Amount paid by the decedent to John Hooper 4th, insured for him, was ..... $5,000 00 Interest for 20 years..... 6,000 00 Amount, &c..... 11,000 00 The injury was committed on the passage of the vessel from Marblehead to Bilboa, whither she was bound, but the place is not designated.	Commissioners were appointed by the French Government to assess damages for the vessel and cargo, and they awarded .....frs. 104,042 34 Deduct payment of wages due the crew..... 2,802 60 101,239 74 Equal to $19,283.	The schooner Alpha and her cargo were totally destroyed by a French squadron under Admiral Allemand, which afterwards returned to Rochefort. Nothing has been received for the damages awarded. Of the amount insured and paid by the decedent, $1,250 were on the vessel and $3,750 on the cargo.
85. Estate of William Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	February, 1810.	Sequestration and confiscation.	Ship Hawk, Brown master.	Loss to decedent, who paid so much insured on the cargo..... $1,000 00 Interest for 16 years..... 960 00 Amount, &c..... 1,960 00 The loss was sustained at Passage.	No legal adjudication.	The ship Hawk arrived at Passage February 5, 1810, and, with her cargo, was confiscated in that month by order of the French Government. The principal sum claimed was issued for Dominick Lynch, jr., and Robert Kearney, of New York.
86. Estate of William Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	December, 1809	Sequestration and confiscation.	Schr. Two Sons, Warner master.	Loss to decedent, who paid so much insured on vessel ..... $1,400 00 Loss to him as part owner of cargo ..... 3,643 00 5,043 00 Interest for 16 years..... 4,841 28 Amount, &c..... 9,884 28 The seizure was made at Bilboa.	No legal adjudication.....	The schoorner Two Sons was seized by the French authorities at Bilboa, and, together with her cargo, sold at Bayonne. Joseph Lindsey, of Marblehead, was the owner of the vessel, and the decedent insured on it for him $1,400.
87. Estate of William Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	January, 1810..	Sequestration and confiscation.	Schooner Perseverance, Messervy master.	Loss to decedent, who paid so much insured on vessel and cargo..... $860 00 Interest for 16 years..... 825 60 Amount, &c..... 1,685 60 The sequestration was made at Bilboa.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Perseverance and her cargo were confiscated at Bilboa by the French authorities. Mark Messervy and Thomas Haskell, of Marblehead, were owners of half the vessel and cargo. The decedent had insured for them $1,000 and paid partial loss.
88. Estate of William Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	December, 1809	Sequestration and confiscation.	Schooner Hette, Woodberry master.	Loss to decedent as owner of two-thirds of the vessel..... $1,350 00 His proportion of the cargo, freight, and expenses ..... 5,100 00 6,450 00 Interest for 16 years..... 6,192 00 Amount, &c..... 12,642 00 The loss was sustained at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Hette and part of her cargo were confiscated at St. Sebastian by order of the French Governor. The claim was derived to the decedent from a sale and transfer to him from Messrs. Dutch and Deland, of Salem, the original owners of the property.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
89. Estate of William Gray, of Boston.	France.....	December, 1809	Sequestration and confiscation.	Brig Enterprise, Brown master.	Value of the vessel..... $6,000 00 Interest for 16 years..... 5,760 00 Amount, &c..... 11,760 00 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Enterprise, of which the decedent was owner, was seized, after her cargo was landed, by order of the French Government, and sent to Bayonne. The Inspector of Customs at Bayonne certified the sale of the vessel.
90. Estate of Wm. Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	December, 1809	Sequestration and confiscation.	Ship Wells, Lamson master.	Value of vessel..... $6,000 00 Value of cargo and freight, including expenses..... 24,000 00 30,000 00 Interest for 16 years..... 28,800 00 Amount, &c..... 58,800 00 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Wells, of which and of her cargo and freight the decedent was owner, was seized and confiscated by order of the French Government, together with her cargo, except 111 bales of cotton and ten tons of logwood, which had been landed before the act of seizure, and are not included in the present claim.
91. Estate of Wm. Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	August 8, 1811, date of the capture.	Capture and condemnation.	Brig Radius, Lander master.	Value of the vessel..... $6,000 00 Value of cargo, including expenses..... 48,000 00 Freight..... 6,000 00 Amount, &c..... 60,000 00 Interest for 15 years..... 57,600 00 Amount, &c..... 117,600 00 The capture was made at sea.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes at Paris, September 25, 1811.	The brig Radius sailed from Newport, Rhode Island, June 28, 1811, bound for St. Petersburg; was captured by the French privateer La Minute, No. 2, and sent into Copenhagen for adjudication. The decedent was the owner of the vessel, cargo, &c.
92. Estate of Wm. Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	1809.....	Capture and condemnation.	Schooner Joseph, Stacey master.	Loss to decedent..... $500 00 Interest for 16 years..... 480 00 Amount, &c..... 980 00 The capture was made on the schooner's passage to Bilboa.	Condemnation by the French Government. The time and place of it not stated.	The schooner Joseph sailed from Marblehead to Bilboa in November, 1809; was captured by a French privateer and sent to St. J. de Luz, and thence to Socoa. The amount claimed is for insurance made by decedent to George Barker, of Marblehead, to whom a total loss was paid.
93. Estate of Wm. Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	The capture was made Aug. 1, 1810.	Capture and condemnation.	Schooner Lydia, Cheever master.	Loss to decedent as insurer on the cargo. $10,000 00 Expenses for detention, &c..... 905 45 10,905 45 Interest for 15 years..... 9,814 50 Amount, &c..... 20,719 95 The capture was made on the passage of the vessel from St. Petersburg to Salem.	Condemnation by decree of the Emperor, at Paris, September 14, 1811.	The schooner Lydia was captured by the French privateer Figaro and sent to Christiansand, Norway. The claim arises from the decedent's insurance, in the sum of $10,000, for Samuel Gray, and from general average expenses of detention, &c.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
94. R. W. Meade.....	France	December 27, 1807, the date of the capture.	Capture and confiscation..	Ship Catharine, Captain Thomas Todd.	$14,000. The place of capture is not stated. The loss was sustained at St. Malo's.	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Catharine was owned in Philadelphia by Messrs. Thomas Clifford & Son, and sailed from Baltimore on or about November 1, 1807, bound for Cadiz, having aboard American property consigned to the claimant, at Cadiz. On the 18th of December, being off the Western islands, she was boarded and taken possession of by men from a vessel which they stated to be a British privateer, or private armed ship. On the 27th of December she was recaptured by the privateer Caress, Captain Dupris, and carried to St. Malo's, where the cargo was discharged and stored. On the 27th of April, 1808, it was sold by order of the French Government, and the proceeds of the sale ordered to be deposited in the chest of the marine.
95. R. W. Meade.....	....do.....	Not stated.....	Seizure and appropriation.	The property seized, &c., had been carried by the ship Eliza.	About $10,000. The loss was sustained at Port Royal, on the bay of Cadiz.	No legal adjudication.....	During the claimant's residence at Cadiz, at the commencement of the year 1810, he deposited at Port Royal a cargo of wheat, landed from the American ship Eliza. This property was lying in store as Mr. Meade's, when the French army, which invaded Spain and laid siege to Cadiz, seized it for the use of their troops. The quantity was 5,000 bushels.
96. Francis Welsh, of Boston, on behalf of the late firm of Minchin & Welsh.	....do.....	The capture was made January 28, 1808.	Capture and condemnation.	The property lost was captured in the American ship Grace, R. J. Linzee master.	$5,100. The place of capture is not stated.....	Condemned by the Council of Prizes at Paris July 6, 1808, and registered at Paris October 5, 1808.	The ship Grace sailed from Boston November 2[illegible], 1807, for Leghorn, owned and freighted by American citizens residing in Boston. She was captured by the armed French vessel the Cosmopolite and carried into Porto Ferrajo, in the island of Elba. The principal cause assigned for the adjudication at Paris was her alleged violation of the Milan decree. She had, however, commenced her voyage, which was legal, twelve days before the date of that decree, and did not violate it. The property lost by Minchin & Welsh was 100 boxes Havana sugars.
97. John Crowninshield, of Salem, Mass.	....do.....	The capture was made Aug., 1809.	The claimant's property was captured.	The capture was made in the ship Margaret, Wm. Fairfield master.	$35,000 or $40,000. The capture was made near Tunis.	There does not appear to have been any formal legal adjudication.	The ship Margaret was captured by a French privateer, carried to Gaeta, Naples, and taken possession of by the French Consul August 16, 1809. A compromise was made, sanctioned by the French Government, according to which the French Consul took one-half of the net sales of the cargo. The whole sales amounted to $70,000 or $80,000, and the present claim is for the other half. The Margaret was wrecked at sea; all her papers lost; twenty-eight passengers and seamen perished; and the captain and a few only were saved.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
98. William Nichols & John R. Hudson.	France.....	Capture was made January 31, 1808.	Capture.....	Brig Sally Ann, William Nichols master.	Value of property in Amsterdam, per sales..... $2,038 02 Deduct amount received by compromise with captors..... 679 34 1,358 68 Add interest to October 1, 1826, eighteen years and eight months..... 1,521 72 Amount, &c..... 2,880 40 The capture was made in or near Texel.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Sally Ann was captured on a voyage from Boston and Beverly to Amsterdam by the French privateer La Dunkerquois, Captain Verbrugge, and carried to Amsterdam, where the master and crew were turned on shore. The adventure belonging to the claimants, with the rest of the cargo, were taken out, the whole remaining in the hands of the captors. About eighteen months after the capture Captain Nichols and the consignees, seeing no prospect of a restoration of the vessel and cargo, and with a view to save some part of the property, consented to a compromise with the captors, by which the whole property should be sold at auction, the captors retain two-thirds of the proceeds of the sale, the owners of the vessel and cargo have one-third, and each party pay its own costs. In this distribution the claimants received the amount credited in a preceding column.
99. Robert Gilmor and Sons and Richard Dorsey, of Baltimore.	....do.....	1810 or 1811....	Oppressive mode of levying an exorbitant tariff.	The shipment on which the loss stated arose was made in the ship Indian Chief, Captain West.	$720. The loss was sustained at Hamburg.....	No legal adjudication.....	The claimants were owners, in a moiety each, of a shipment of 32 bales of cotton, made by the Indian Chief, to Gottenburg and a market, in the year 1810. The vessel arrived out safe, and was ordered by Messrs. Parish & Co., of Hamburg, who had the direction of her, to Kiel, in Holstein, for a market, where she arrived about the last of July or first of August. There being no sale at that place for the cotton, it was ordered to Hamburg, and sold in 1811. On its arrival 21 bales were taken by the French Government to satisfy the tariff of two-thirds, leaving only 11 bales to pay freight and all other charges on the whole parcel. By the magnitude of this tariff, and the manner in which it was exacted, the loss of the claimants was produced.
100. Robert Gilmor and Sons and Richard Dorsey, of Baltimore.	....do.....	1810 or 1811....	Oppressive mode of levying an exorbitant tariff.	The shipment on which the loss stated arose was made in the ship Virgin, Captain Auld.	$5,028 93. The loss was sustained at Hamburg....	No legal adjudication.....	In April, 1810, the claimants shipped aboard the ship Virgin, bound to the island of Sylt and a market, 92 hhds. of Maryland tobacco. In June she arrived at Sylt, and in April, 1821, the cargo was ordered, by a French decree, to Hamburg, where 54½ hhds. were taken to pay the French tariff, leaving only 37½ hhds. to pay the charges on the whole parcel. By this proceeding not only the whole cost of the 92 hhds. was sunk, but the owners were brought in debt to the consignees in the sum of $515 33.
101. Robert Gilmor and Sons, of Baltimore.	....do.....	1810 or 1811....	Oppressive mode of levying an exorbitant tariff.	The shipment on which the loss stated arose was made in the ship Virgin, Captain Auld.	$5,993. The loss was sustained at Hamburg.....	No legal adjudication.....	The claimants shipped 108 hhds. of tobacco aboard the same ship and under the same circumstances as in the preceding case. Of these hhds. 64½ were taken for the tariff, and only 43½, therefore, left to pay all the charges on the whole parcel. The claimants thus lost their whole shipment of 108 hhds., and were brought in debt to the consignees in the sum of $493.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
102. Robert Gilmor and Sons and Richard Dorsey, of Baltimore, and the estate of the late Washingt'n Bowie, of Georgetown, D. C.	France	1810.....	Oppressive mode of levying an exorbitant tariff.	The shipment on which the loss stated arose was made in the schooner Ladson, Capt Child.	$7,191. The loss was sustained at Hamburg.....	No legal adjudication.....	In April, 1810, the claimants, Robert Gilmor & Sons and Richard Dorsey and Washington Bowie, now deceased, shipped 181 hhds. of tobacco, partly in whole hhds., partly in half hhds., and residue in bulk to make storage, aboard the schooner Sarah Ladson, bound for Tonningen. She arrived there in the ensuing June, and the tobacco was, under the authority of the French Government, ordered thence to Hamburg, where two-thirds were taken for the French tariff, one-third only being left to pay charges on the whole cargo. The shippers thus lost the whole cargo, and were brought in debt to the consignees in the sum of $1,592. Each of the three parties claiming is interested one-third in the loss and in the claim thence arising.
103. Robert Gilmor & Sons and Richard Dorsey, of Baltimore.	....do	1810.....	Oppressive mode of levying an exorbitant tariff.	The shipment on which the loss stated arose was made in the ship Grotius, of Baltimore, Captain Sheaffe.	$3,298. The loss was sustained at Hamburg.....	No legal adjudication.....	In February, 1810, the claimants shipped aboard the ship Grotius, bound for Tonningen, 56 hogsheads of tobacco; she arrived at that port in the ensuing April, and in May the cargo was ordered to Altona. It was afterwards sold at Hamburg, two-thirds being taken for the French tariff, and one-third only being left to pay all charges on the whole. The claimants thus not only lost the 56 hogsheads, but were brought in debt to the consignees in the sum of $191. Each of the two parties claiming is interested one-half in the loss and in the claim thence arising.
104. Robert Gilmor & Sons and Richard Dorsey, of Baltimore.	....do	The capture by the French privateer was made January 29, 1808.	Capture and condemnation.	The property of the claimants was captured aboard the ship Aurora, Captain Dashiel.	$3,741. The place of capture is not stated by these claimants; but it appears from preceding numbers of this schedule to have been off St. Malo.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes at Paris, in June, 1808, and final condemation, on December 8, 1810, on appeal to the Emperor, in his Council of State.	The parties claiming were equal owners of 53 hogsheads of tobacco shipped in the Aurora, in December, 1807, bound to Amsterdam. In January, 1808, she was captured by the British ship-of-war Rose and ordered to Plymouth. She was afterwards boarded by the French privateer L'Incomparable, which took possession of her and carried her to Morlaix.
105. Robert Gilmor & Sons and Richard Dorsey, of Baltimore, and the estate of Washington Bowie, deceased, of Georgetown, D. C.	....do	Sept., 1807	Sequestration and appropriation.	The property of the claimants sequestrated had been carried in the ship Louisa, Capt. Cunningham.	$13,386 87. The loss was sustained at Leghorn....	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Louisa sailed from Baltimore in August, 1807, bound to Leghorn, with a cargo of East India piece goods, 970 bags of sugar, and 316 bags of pimento and other articles. On her arrival there in September her cargo was lodged in the lazaretto, where it was sequestered by a commission under the French general, Miollis, to pay a contribution assessed on the sugar and pimento (alleged to be the produce of British colonies) of 45 per cent. This contribution was exacted under the guaranty of the Tuscan Government that it should be repaid, which has never been done by either it or the French Government, though applications for that purpose have been made to both by the consignees at Leghorn. The sum taken was 14,874.6 pezzos, equal to the amount of loss stated. The parties claiming are interested each one-third in the loss sustained and in the claim thence arising.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
106. Estate of Thomas Boyle, of Baltimore, deceased.	France.....	The capture was made January 24, 1808.	Capture and condemnation.	The property of the decedent was captured in the ship Aurora.	The cost, at short price, at Baltimore, of the decedent's property, was $4,082 20. The proceeds of the sales, at Morlaix, were 100,086.72 francs. The capture by the French privateer was off St. Malo.	Proceedings were had before the Tribunal of Commerce at Morlaix and the Commission of Prizes at Brest, and referred to the Council General of Prizes at Paris. On June 8, 1808, condemnation was decreed by that council, and on December 8, 1810, final condemnation was decreed by the Emperor, on an appeal to him in his Council of State.	The ship Aurora left Baltimore December 14, 1807, three days before the date of the Milan decree, under which she was condemned. On January 21, 1808, she was boarded by the British sloop-of-war Rose, who put aboard her one officer with orders to carry her to Plymouth. On the ensuing 24th of January she was taken by the French privateer L'Incomparable and carried to Morlaix, where the ship and cargo were sold in September and October, 1808. The captured property of the decedent consisted of 81 boxes of white Havana and 20 boxes of brown sugars.
107. John Delafield's executors.	....do	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	Schooner Prosper, John Selby master, was seized, &c.	$5,188 21, exclusive of interest. The loss was sustained at St Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Prosper sailed from New York to St. Sebastian, where she was seized and confiscated, by order of the Emperor Napoleon, under a decree dated April 11, 1810. The present claim is founded on a policy of insurance, effected and paid by the decedent, on account of certain underwriters of the city of New York.
108. John Delafield's executors.	....do	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Rose in Bloom, J. Olcut master, was seized, &c.	$5,000, exclusive of interest. The loss was sustained at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 107.
109. John Delafield's executors.	....do	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	Schooner Young Connecticut, J. W. Rollo master, was seized, &c.	$6,521 95, exclusive of interest. The loss was sustained at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 107.
110. John Delafield's executors.	....do	January, 1810..	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Tantivy, Purley master, was seized, &c.	$8,000, exclusive of interest. The loss was sustained at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 107.
111. Joseph Young, of Charleston, S. C.	....do	The capture was made Dec. 12, 1812.	Capture and condemnation.	The claimant's property was captured in the brig Mariana, Frederick Ehlers master.	The invoice cost of the property taken was $18,739 21. The amount of loss sustained, according to the account of the sales at Brest, is 372,903.84 francs; add 9,000 francs for charges on suit, and the aggregate is 381,903.84 francs, equal to $71,606 97. On this sum the claimant demands interest from the date of the sales. The place of capture is not stated.	Condemnatian by the Council of Prizes at Paris in 1813.	The Mariana was a Dutch brig, owned by the master, who, with the whole of the crew and the papers of the vessel were also Dutch. She was freighted by the claimant in Charleston, in October, 1812, laden with 405 bales of cotton, 304 tierces and 49 half tierces of rice, and 2,000 staves. She sailed from Charleston, October 28, 1812, for Nantz, and on December 10, 1812, was captured by the French privateer brig Junon, Captain Debone, and sent into Brest, the captors taking all her papers. The vessel was condemned at Paris on the alleged but unfounded supposition that she was British property, and, on the principle that the character of the cargo is determined by the character of the flag, the cargo was condemned. On application to the Emperor Napoleon to reverse the decree, he ordered the proceeds of the sales of the cargo to be paid to the French Government, instead of the captors, and to be a subject of settlement betwen it and the United States.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
112. Henry B. Curtis, surviving partner of H. B. and Chas. Curtis, Nathaniel Curtis, and Caleb Curtis.	France	March 23, 1812.	Capture and destruction..	Brig Adventure, Caleb Curtis master.	Value of the vessel from $3,500 to..... $4,000 00 Value of the cargo..... 7,000 00 Amount, &c., from $10,500 to..... 11,000 00 The loss was sustained at sea, but the latitude and longitude are not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Adventure was captured, scuttled, and sunk by a French squadron, commanded by Com. Feretier, and consisting of two frigates, L'Andromache and L'Arianne, and the Mameluke, of 16 guns. Nathaniel Curtis and Caleb Curtis, for whom Henry B. Curtis is agent, had adventures aboard her.
113. Stephen Higginson, Sam'l G. Perkins, and the estate of George Higginson.	....do	Nov., 1810, date of the capture.	Capture and consequential loss.	Brig William King, Atkins master.	Cost at Boston of the brig and outfits.... $9,926 69 Cost of cargo aboard her when captured. 11,649 36 Extra cost and expenses in France and England .... 3,260 25 24,836 30 Deduct amount received by H. Higginson for seven-eighths sales of vessel and cargo in London ..... 11,479 00 13,357 30 Add interest from November, 1810, to November, 1826, 16 years..... 12,823 00 26,180 30 Add freight of brig, estimated at..... 4,000 00 Add interest on this sum from November, 1810, to November, 1826, 16 years..... 3,840 00 Amount, &c ..... 34,020 30 The capture was made on the high seas on the voyage of the brig to the Mediterranean for a market.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig William King, belonging to Stephen Higginson & Co., of Boston, sailed therefrom on or about the 15th of August, 1810, with a cargo of tobacco, cotton, wool, rice, and logwood, belonging entirely to that firm. Her orders were to proceed to Cork, and there wait the orders of Henry Higginson as to her final destination. On or about the ensuing 12th of November she was ordered to proceed to the Mediterranean for a market, and was proceeding thither when she fell in with the French private armed cruiser the Rodeur, Captain John Huret, owned by Messrs. Moleux, Crouy & Co., of Boulogne, who captured her, took out the captain, all the crew and papers, put a French crew aboard, and ordered the brig to France. She fell in, however, with the British sloop-of-war Gosshawk, James Lilburn commander, which recaptured her and sent her to England, where the brig and cargo were sold by order of court. The greater part of the proceeds were consumed in expenses and salvage, the voyage was broken up, and the captain, unable to procure his passports, was detained in France, at a heavy expense, from December, 1810, until March, 1811.
114. Jacob B. Clarke, of New York.	....do	The capture was made in July or Aug., 1809.	Capture and confiscation..	Ship Ann, Richard Prendergast master.	$7,000. The capture was made at the entrance into the harbor of St. Sebastian.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes at Paris. Date not stated.	The ship Ann cleared out at New York, her invoice being accompanied with a certificate of American origin, for Fayal, but she did not stop there, the French ports being declared by the British to be under blockade. On being captured the ship and cargo were carried over to St. Juan de Luz, where the papers and the character of the voyage seemed so clear that the ship and cargo were given up to the captain, who then sold the cargo. Orders then came from Paris to sequester the funds, which was done. The cargo of the ship Ann was cotton and beeswax. She had sailed from New York June 20, 1809.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
115. Wm. Williams, of Stonington, Conn.	France.....	The capture was made August 20, 1809.	Capture and condemnation	Schooner Fortitude, of New London, Conn.	Value of the vessel..... $6,000 00 Expenses of a suit instituted in a United States circuit court against the possessor of the vessel in 1811..... 2,000 00 Interest for seventeen years on the value of the vessel, and for fifteen years on the expenses..... 7,920 00 Amount, &c..... 15,920 00	Condemnation in December, 1809, by the Court of Admiralty at Gaudaloupe, then in the possession of the French Government.	The schooner Fortitude was captured two days out from St. Pierre, Martinique, and carried into the Dutch part of the island, off St. Martin's, by the French privateer Le Trepon, fitted out from Guadaloupe. The schooner was immediately sold by the captors. Charles D'Wolf, jr., of Bristol, Rhode Island, claimed the vessel as her purchaser under the French decree of condemnation, and the Supreme Court of the United States decided in his favor. The alleged ground of the condemnation at Guadaloupe was that the schooner had been and traded at an English island.
116. Wm. Williams and Jonathan Phelps, of Stonington, Conn.; Elisha Dennison, Thos. W. Williams, and Ephraim Chenborough, of New London, Conn.	....do.....	The capture was made August 21, 1809.	Capture and condemnation	Schooner Fortitude was the vessel aboard which the property of the claimants was captured.	The capture was made under the island of Dominique. Value in the West Indies of the captured part of the cargo, and the part shipped to the United States, including ship stores and provisions..... $11,494 72 Expenses of a suit in the United States for the recovery of the sirup, part of her cargo..... 2,000 00 Interest for seventeen years on the value of the cargo, and for sixteen years on the expenses..... 13,644 56 Amount, &c..... 27,139 28	Condemnation by the Admiralty Court of Gaudaloupe, in December, 1809, of part of the cargo.	See remarks, &c., in No. 115. The cargo of the schooner, at the time of her capture, consisted of 97 hhds. and 3 barrels of sirup; 40 hhds. and 32 boxes of codfish; 3 hhds., 1 tierce, and 23 barrels of whale oil; 50 boxes of candles; 3 tierces of smoked hams; 17 firkins of lard; 10 firkins of butter; 21 barrels, 17 half barrels, and 30 quarter barrels of mess beef; 4 barrels of pork, and 71 cheeses. On the schooner's arrival off St. Martin's the sirup was taken out of her and shipped in the brig St. Croix, packet, to George Armroyd & Co., of Philadelphia, against whom the claimants brought suit for the recovery. The French decree of condemnation included only this part of the cargo, and the suit was decided against the present claimants. The residue of the cargo was probably divided among the captors.
117. Ephraim Chenborough, of New London, Conn.	....do.....	The capture was made August 21, 1809.	Capture.....	The claimant's property was captured aboard the schooner Fortitude	The capture was made within sight of the island of Dominique. Value of the claimant's adventure..... $1,592 40 Value of a chest of clothing, books, and nautical instruments..... 110 00 1,702 40 Interest for seventeen years on this sum. 1,736 44 Amount, &c..... 3,438 84	No legal adjudication.....	See remarks, &c., in No. 115. The adventure of the claimant aboard the schooner Fortitude consisted of 11 hhds. of Muscovado sugar; 4 hhds. and 7 barrels of coffee; 6 barrels of cocoa; 6 boxes of sweetmeats; 1 box of Noyeau cordial; 1 box of calabash sirup; and 3 pots of tamarinds. After the capture of the schooner by the French privateer Le Trepon, a part of her cargo was, as stated in the remarks, &c., in the next preceding case, shipped to Philadelphia. But the property for which the claimant requires compensation did not arrive in the United States, and he supposes it to have been divided among the captors.
118. John Laval and John Petray.	....do.....	The seizure was made in January, 1810.	Seizure and confiscation..	The property of the claimants was seized aboard the brig Fox, Thos. Cullen master.	The capture was made under the island of Dominique. $2,300. The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The property for the loss of which the claimant seeks compensation consisted of 72 bales of Bourbon coffee, seized in consequence of an order of the Emperor Napoleon, issued December 22, 1809, and afterwards, on August 30, 1810, sold by the Collector of the custom-house at Bayonne, agreeably to the Rambouillet decree. The proceeds of the sale were ordered to be sent to Paris, and to be there deposited in the sinking fund.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
119. Abraham Piesch....	France	Dec., 1809.....	Seizure and sequestration.	Brig Fox, Thomas Cullen master, (was seized, &c.)	Value of vessel and freight..... $33,107 36 Value of shipment..... 14,990 09 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 48,337 93 Amount, &c..... 96,435 38 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	The claimant's property was seized under a decree of the Emperor Napoleon, and was sequestered, probably at Bayonne.
120. Abraham Piesch....	....do..	January, 1810.	Seizure and sequestration.	Brig Andrew, Isaac Coggins master, (was seized.)	Value of vessel and freight..... $19,204 45 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 19,204 45 Amount, &c..... 38,408 90 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 119.
121. Abraham Piesch ...	....do.....	Aug. 10, 1810..	Seizure and sequestration.	Ship Eagle, John Alston master, (was seized.)	Value of ship and freight..... $37,661 47 Value of shipment..... 14,872 73 Interest to October 1, 1826 ..... 50,695 50 Amount, &c..... 103,229 70 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 119.
122. Abraham Piesch ...	....do.....	October, 1810..	Seizure and sequestration.	Ship Hawk, Mich. Brown master, (was seized.)	Value of ship and freight..... $63,524 68 Value of shipment ..... 5,833 67 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 66,237 21 Amount, &c..... 135.595 56 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 119.
123. Thomas Cook	....do.....	Oct. 3, 1807, (date of the seizure.)	Seizure and partial confiscation.	The property seized had been shipped in the ship Connecticut, Captain McClure.	$11,416 10. The seizure was made at Leghorn.	No legal adjudication	The property on account of which the claimant requires compensation for loss consisted of India bale goods, sugar, and ginger. The ship left Baltimore June 18, 1807, and arrived at Leghorn, her port of destination, in August following, and was obliged by the commercial regulations of that port to perform quarantine. The cargo was landed in the Government warehouse. During the quarantine the French troops under General Meollis marched into Leghorn and took possession of American property to a large amount, among which was that of the claimant. His efforts to obtain its restoration resulted in his being compelled to pay 45 per cent. on the valuation of it which was made. This contribution is the foundation and amount of the present claim.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
124. William Yeaton, of Alexandria, D. C., and the estate of Robert Young, deceased.	France	Aug. 18, 1805	Capture	Schooner Enterprise.	Value of vessel, cargo, and freight, $12,220 76. Interest from the time of the capture is also claimed. The place of capture is not stated.	No legal adjudication	The schooner Enterprise was captured by a French privateer and carried to Baracoa, in the island of Cuba. The schooner and her cargo were afterwards sold.
125. William Yeaton, of Alexandria, D. C., and the estate of Robert Young, deceased.	....do	Sept. 21, 1805	Capture	Schooner Eleanor	Value of vessel, cargo, and freight, $16,789 50. Interest from the time of the capture is also claimed. The place of capture is not stated.	No legal adjudication	The schooner Eleanor was captured by a French privateer and carried to Samana, near the city of St. Domingo, and with her cargo was afterwards sold.
126. William Yeaton, of Alexandria, D. C., and the estate of Robert Young, deceased.	....do	March, 1807	Capture	Schooner Hiland	Short insured on vessel and freight $6,094 00 Short insured on cargo 4,284 59 10,378 59 Interest from the time of the capture is also claimed. The place of capture is not stated.	No legal adjudication	The schooner Hiland was captured by a French privateer and sent to Baracoa, in the island of Cuba, and with her cargo was afterwards sold. The interest in the vessel and freight is in the estate of the late General Young; the interest in the cargo is in Mr. Yeaton.
127. Jacob Morgan, of Alexandria.	....do	Aug. 10, 1809, (date of the capture.)	Capture and condemnation.	Ship Eliza	One-third of vessel and freight, $10,444. The capture was made off Plymouth.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes at Paris. The date of the condemnation is not stated.	The ship Eliza and her cargo were American property, and on a legal voyage. They were captured by the French privateer Jean Bart, and were condemned on suspicion of being English property and on an alleged secreting of papers by the captain.
128. Arthur McLelan and Ebenezer McIntosh.	....do	March 8, 1811	Capture	Ship Mary Ann, Ebenezer McIntosh master.	Value of the ship $20,000 00 Deduct amount received from the Marine Fire and Marine Insurance Company 10,000 00 10,000 00 Freight and expenses 10,608 77 Sundry articles aboard belonging to the master 927 00 Staves aboard belonging to the master 112 00 Freight 177 78 Amount, &c 21,825 55 The capture was made about eight miles to the southward and eastward of Dungeness.	The claimants know of no legal adjudication.	The ship Mary Ann was captured on her voyage from Charleston, S. C., to London, by a French privateer. The captors ran the ship on shore about a cable's length from the pier at Calais. At the flow of the tide she beat off, and, by strong southwesterly winds, was blown into Calais harbor. The prize-master informed the captain he should carry her to Dunkirk, and left a pilot on board for that purpose. The master was afterwards, with his crew, under the necessity of leaving the ship in an open boat, and arrived safe in Dover, England.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
129. David Winchester, surviving partner of the late firm of J. Ogleby & Winchester.	France and Holland.	July, 1809	Sequestration.....	Brig Baltimore, was sequestered.	Actual cost, $42,768 14; valued at the time of sequestration, $69,325 18. The place of sequestration not stated.	Not subjected to legal adjudication, but in September, 1820, was delivered to French Commissioners, in pursuance of the stipulations of the treaty of the 16th March, 1810, between France and Holland, by whom it was sent to Antwerp, where it was sold, and the proceeds paid into the caisse d'amortissement.	The brig Baltimore, of Baltimore, Captain James Phillips, laden with a cargo of sugars, coffee, a few bales of cotton, and a small parcel of staves, sailed from the Chesapeake bay on or immediately after the 10th of June, 1809, bound to Amsterdam; arrived off the Texel the 10th of July; found it blockaded by a British squadron. She then stood to the northward, and meeting with a pilot boat Captain Phillips communicated with Messrs. Hope & Co., his consignees, and continued to lay off and on the coast of Holland several days, corresponding, through the medium of pilots, with the above named house. In one of his letters he mentioned to Hope & Co. that he was annoyed by a small vessel, under the French flag, that daily chased him off. In answer to this, Hope & Co. sent him off a license, granted by the King of Holland, to protect his vessel from capture, and at the same time recommended Captain Phillips to enter the Fly Passage, which was not blockaded. Captain Phillips accordingly entered the Zuyderzee through that channel, and proceeded to the town of Harlangen, where the cargo, accompanied by certificates of origin granted by the French Consul residing in Baltimore, was landed and put into the King's warehouses for examination as regarded its origin.
130. Augustine Pepin ...	France	Seizure made in January or Feb., 1808.	Seizure and condemnation.	Ship Two Marys, James Riley master.	Loss sustained, 67,735.54 francs, equal to $12,700 37. Value of the property, according to an estimate by the agents of the French Government, in June, 1808, 53,467.32 francs. The place of seizure is not stated.	Condemned by the Council of Prizes at Paris. The date of the condemnation is not stated.	On the arrival of the ship Two Marys in France the property was seized by the French Government, and afterwards finally condemned by the Council of Prizes, on the plea of the vessel having been visited at sea by a British cruiser, in violation of the Milan decree of the 17th December, 1807. While under seizure, it was delivered to the consignees on condition of their giving bonds for its estimated value, to await the decision of the Council of Prizes. The consignees were obliged to pay these bonds, amounting to..... frs. 53,467 32 The expenses, costs, and extra charges, and interest thereon 14,268 02 67,735 34
131. John S. Roulet and others.	....do	Not stated.....	Seizure and confiscation..	Ship Cados, Bunker master.	Cargo shipped in November, 1807. One-third of it belonged to the late Joseph Icard; one-third to Gurdon S. Mumford, and one-third of it to G. Rossier and Roulet. Amount of cargo stated to have been lodged with the Caisse of Invalides, 352,436.10 francs, equal to ..... $67,130 74 Interest thereon, at 6 per cent..... 76,193 38 143,324 12 The seizure was made at Marseilles.	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Cados was bound from New York to Marseilles, where, on her arrival, she was seized, and, with her cargo, taken possession of by the French authorities. Amount of cargo stated to have been lodged with the Caisse of Invalides to await the Emperor's commands. The cargo was insured in New York, but, by compromise with the underwriters, all the rights and claims against France have been relinquished to the insured. The documents and proofs of property are lodged with James B. Icard, of Paris.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
132. J. S. Roulet, Miles R. Burke, and H. C. Duerhagen.	France	Not stated.....	Seizure and condemnation	Brig Resort, Miles R. Burke master.	Value of brig..... $8,000 00 Amount not recovered on Duerhagen's shipment from the underwriters..... 31,800 00 Amount of sales of Roulet's shipment... 14,000 00 Cost of Burke's shipment..... 7,195 16 Freight of brig..... 7,777 77 Value of logwood ..... 500 00 Amount of loss, exclusive of interest, sustained by the three claimants..... 69,272 93 The claimants claim interest on their respective losses. The seizure was made as the brig was entering the Texel.	It does not appear that there was any legal adjudication.	In June, 1809, the brig Resort, owned by Miles R. Burke, was loaded at New York, bound from that port for Bremen, with liberty to go to Amsterdam if not blockaded. Captain Burke was informed off the Texel that there was no obstacle to his admission into Holland, and accordingly entered the Texel. After passing the second buoy the brig was boarded by a row boat belonging to the French privateer L'Hebe, which took possession of the Resort, carried her to Amsterdam, where vessel and cargo were condemned by the French authorities. The cargo of the brig Resort was constituted and owned as follows, viz: 150,266 pounds of coffee, valued at 26 cents per pound, $39,069 16, owned by H. Duerhagen, who recovered from the United Insurance Co. of New York $7,269 16 thereof, leaving a balance of $31,800. 151 bales of Georgia cotton, owned and shipped by J. S. Roulet; of which the cost was $7,002 76, and the sales are supposed to have amounted to $14,000. 10 tierces, 90 barrels, and 20 bags of coffee; 16 hhds. of sugar, and 15 tons of logwood, owned and shipped by Miles R. Burke; of which the cost was $7,195 16, and the amount of the sales is unknown to the claimant. 10 tons of logwood, owned by Miles R. Burke, valued at $50 each—$500.
133. John F. Parrott, of Portsmouth, N. H., Wm. W. Parrott, of Gloucester, Mass., estate of Oliver Hamilton, of Portsmouth, N. H., deceased.	....do.....	June 22, 1810...	Capture and burning	Ship Falcon	Value of the ship and freight..... $27,277 89 Interest to October 1, 1826, at 6 per cent. 26,632 31 53,910 20 The capture was made off the port of Wismar.	No legal adjudication, as far as the claimants are informed.	The ship Falcon was bound to the port of Wismar; the cargo on board was shipped at Savannah, and on the arrival of the ship at Cork she was ordered to Wismar by the consignee, and in the performance of that voyage was captured by a French cruiser in the North Sea, on the coast of Prussia, and burnt.
134. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	....do.....	Sept., 1806.....	Capture	Brig Good Intent...	$4,500. The capture was made in the West Indies..	Condemned at Guadaloupe. The date of the condemnation is not stated.	This vessel sailed from Nova Scotia for Antigua. British property insured in Boston.
135. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	....do	Sept., 1807.....	Seizure.....	Brig Ezra & Daniel.	$8,029 60. The seizure was made at Leghorn	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was bound from Boston to Leghorn. The ginger, an article the French Government held subject to their order, was seized.
136. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	....do	Sept., 1807.....	Capture	Brig Mercury	$10,000. The capture was made in the Mediterranean.	No legal adjudication.....	The Mercury was bound from Boston to Alicant. She was sent into the latter port. The captain was wholly dispossessed of the cargo. Papers sent to Paris.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
137. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	France	Not stated.....	Seizure.....	Ship Arrow.....	$5,733 33. The place of capture is not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	The Arrow, on her voyage from Boston to the Mediterranean, was captured by the French, carried into Frejus, and sequestered.
138. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	....do.....	May, 1811.....	Capture	Brig Catharine.....	Value of property captured, $8,000. Place of capture not stated.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	The Catharine, bound from Boston to the North of Europe, was taken and carried into Denmark; she was afterwards taken by a French privateer, carried into Dantzic, and the owners dispossessed of the cargo.
139. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	....do	July, 1811.....	Capture	Barque Zeno.....	$15,517 50. The capture was made in the North Sea.	Condemned at Christiansand, January, 1812.	The barque Zeno, bound from Boston to Gottenburg, was carried into Christiansand.
140. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	....do	Dec., 1810.....	Capture	Ship Robinson Nova.	$10,000. The capture was made in the English channel.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	This ship was bound from Virginia to London, and carried into Dunkirk.
141. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	....do.....	January, 1811..	Capture	Brig Neutrality.....	$13,000. The capture was made in latitude 50° N., longitude 22 W.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	The Neutrality was bound from Baltimore to Bristol, England; she was taken and carried into France, and lost on that coast.
142. Marine Insurance Company of Norfolk, assignees of William Dickson.	....do	1807.....	Capture	Schr. Experiment..	$6,000. Place of capture not stated.....	No adjudication is known to the claimants.	Taken into St. Jago de Cuba, and sold there.
143. Marine Insurance Company of Norfolk, assignees of Wm. Pennock & others.	....do	1807.....	Capture	Ship Juno	$2,466. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Jamaica; the date of the condemnation not stated.	The Juno was captured by the French, recaptured by the British, and condemned at Jamaica in salvage.
144. Marine Insurance Company of Norfolk, assignees of W. A. Armistead and another.	....do	1809.....	Capture	Brig Franklin.....	$3,137 55. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Antigua; the date of the condemnation is not stated.	The brig Franklin was captured by the French. She was recaptured by the British, and condemned at Antigua in salvage.
145. Marine Insurance Company of Norfolk, assignees of John Bohlen and others.	....do	1809.....	Capture	Ship America.....	$4,028 40. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication	None.
146. Marine Insurance Company of Norfolk, assignees of Theodore Armistead and others.	....do	1809.....	Capture	Ship Orion	$2,904 31. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication in England. Date not stated.	Captured by the French, recaptured by the British, and condemned in salvage.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
147. The executors of William Dickson.	France	1807	Capture	Sch. Experiment	$1,722 25. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication	Taken into St. Jago de Cuba, and sold there without adjudication.
148. William Armistead and others.	do	1809	Capture	Brig Franklin	$1,066 67. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication in Antigua. Date not stated.	Captured by the French, recaptured by the British, and condemned in salvage.
149. Conway & F. Whittle and others.	do	1809	Capture	Ship Eliza	$108,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned in France. Date not stated.	Carried into a small island called Brehat, on the north coast of France, in the channel.
150. Moses Myers & Sons.	do	1809	Capture	Brig Fame	$24,530 73. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication at Paris, under Berlin and Milan decrees. Date not stated.	None.
151. Marine Insurance Company of Norfolk.	do	1809	Capture	Brig Fame	$1,104 95. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication at Paris, under the Berlin and Milan decrees. Date not stated.	None.
152. James Young	do	1806	Capture	Sch. Ann Ballan	$2,250. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication in St. Domingo. Date not stated.	Detained three months, and restored without costs or damages.
153. Moses Myers & Sons.	do	1806	Bill of exchange		$4,687 50		This bill was drawn for a cargo belonging to an American citizen, by General Ferrand, at St. Domingo, on his Government.
154. Robert Hatton	do	1809	Capture	Ship Susan	$3,276 45. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication in France. Date not stated.	This vessel was taken into Calais and condemned.
155. Von Kapff & Brune, of Baltimore.	do	Sept., 1807	Seizure	The property taken from the claimants had been shipped in the ship North America, Capt. Wm. A. Tucker.	$11,956 66. Seizure made at the mouth of the river Elbe.	No legal adjudication known to the claimants.	This vessel, laden with American and colonial produce, cleared, May 22, 1807, at Baltimore, for Tonningen, where she arrived on the 23d July same year. The cargo was destined to Bremen, the river Weser not being then within the line occupied by the French Douaniers. The greater part of the cargo reached the place of destination. The ship was compelled, by stress of weather, to take shelter in the river Elbe. Two of the lighters were taken possession of by the French at Cuxhaven, who took 497 bags of coffee aboard said lighters. The shipment of the claimants consisted of 637 bags of coffee—140 of them reached Bremen; and their proceeds, deducted from the cost of the whole, leaves the sum claimed.
156. Von Kapff & Brune and others.	do	Dec., 1809	Seizure	Sch. Eleanor, Capt. Gover.	Cost of 150 bales of cotton $9,209 30 Insurance 973 25 Freight, cost, and outfits of the vessel 13,136 42 Insurance 1,310 30 Payments to seamen and other expenses. 300 66 24,929 93 The seizure was made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication	This schooner sailed, beginning of November, 1809, from Baltimore for St. Sebastian, with 27 hogsheads of tobacco and 150 bales of cotton; arrived in the roads of St. Sebastian 2d December following, and, after performing quarantine, discharged her cargo. The 27 hogsheads were sold by the consignees at said place. The remainder of her cargo, viz: 150 bales of cotton, and the vessel, were seized in Spain by order of the French Government, sent to France, and there disposed of. At the time of the seizure the value of the cotton at St. Sebastian was 11½ reals per pound, or 57½ cents; which, for 45,218 pounds Spanish, the weight of this country, is $26,000 35. It produced at Bayonne 91,013.28 frs. The schooner was taken possession of by the Administrator of the Marine.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
157. John James, assignee of George Smith.	France	1806 and 1807..	Capture and confiscation .	Ship James Adams.	$9,100. Captured on her voyage from Philadelphia to Amsterdam.	Condemned by the Council of Prizes at Paris July 13, 1808.	This vessel was captured on her voyage from Philadelphia to Amsterdam by a French privateer, sent into Dunkirk and condemned. $3,400 of this claim is for underwriting for goods for William Page, $5,700 for Adams & Loughry.
158. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	....do	December, 1809.	Capture	Ship Alianza, Bardell master.	Value of vessel ..... $7,000 00 Freight ..... 8,000 00 15,000 00 July 31, 1810. Capture made near Beachy Head.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was captured by four French privateers near Beachy Head and sent into Dieppe. The total loss was paid to Eben. Stocker, for whom it was insured, and concerned "from Havana for London."
159. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	....do	December, 1809.	Capture	Ship Arrow, Fletcher master.	$14,694 28. Place of capture not stated.....	Not adjudicated, but compromised at Paris, and the compromise confirmed by the Council of Prizes. Date not stated.	This vessel was captured by a French privateer, L'Hirondelle, and was carried to Ville Franche. She was insured from Boston to port or ports in the Mediterranean.
160. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	December, 1811.	Capture	Brig Catharine, Ockington master.	Paid John Parker ..... $7,000 00 General average ..... 436 65 Amount, &c..... 7,436 65 Place of capture not stated.	Detained and condemned in Paris, by order of the Government. Date not stated.	This vessel was insured "from Boston to Gottenburg." After her capture she was carried into Dantzic.
161. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	Dec. 22, 1813...	Capture	Ship Maria Louisa.	Paid T. H. Perkins $1,370 23. Ransom and jettison. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication appears.....	This vessel was insured from New Haven to Lisbon, and the ransom was paid at Bordeaux. She was taken by a French privateer.
162. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	....do	December, 1813.	Capture	Schooner Mariner, Macy master.	$1,000 paid I. Colburn. Capture made in the Bay of Biscay.	No adjudication appears.....	This vessel was captured in the Bay of Biscay and sent into St. Andero. She was insured "from Boston to a port in France."
163. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	....do	Feb. 13, 1812...	Capture	Ship North Star, Peterson master.	$1,747 35 paid Jon. Davis. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication appears.....	This vessel was captured by a French lugger, was recaptured by the English, and restored on salvage one-eighth. She was insured "from Georgia or Florida to England."
164. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	....do	May 2, 1812....	Sinking at sea	Schooner Sally, Lamson master.	$8,000 paid William Leach. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication.....	This vessel was insured "from Beverley to ports in Europe, from Corunna to Gibraltar and Tangiers, inclusively." She was captured by two French frigates and a brig and sunk at sea.
165. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	....do	Nov. 14, 1811..	Capture, plunder, and burning.	Brig Three Brothers, Le Favour master.	$10,000 paid P. Dodge. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication.....	This vessel was insured "from Salem to ports in Brazil." She was captured by two French frigates and plundered and burnt.
166. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	....do	Nov. 14, 1811..	Capture	Schooner Traveller, Prince master.	$3,120. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication.....	She was insured from Boston to Cadiz for R. S. Hackley. Captured by the French privateer Meddlin Guerells and sent into Rota.
167. T. Ellicott and Jona. Meredith, trustees of S. Smith and Buchanan, and R. S. Hollins, David Hoffman, C. F. Mayer, and B. C. Howard, trustees of Hollins & McBlair. See No 66.	....do	Dec. 10, 1807 ..	Seizure and confiscation .	Ship Juniata, Joshua Mezick master.	Cost of shipment ..... $33,450 00 Reported sales of the cargo..... 60,000 00 Seizure made in the river Elbe.	No legal adjudication.....	The Juniata left Baltimore for Toning in October, 1807, and arrived in December off the river Eyder in distress. She there was apprised for the first time of the blockade of that river. On account of her disabled condition she put into the river Elbe, without the French jurisdiction. While the Juniata was providing herself with a pilot for a Danish port in the North Sea to refit, she and her cargo were seized by the French custom-house officers and carried to Hamburg. The cargo was thereupon, without any judicial investigation, condemned by the Emperor June 27, 1808.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
168. T. Ellicott and Jona. Meredith, trustees of S. Smith and Buchanan, and R. S. Hollins, David Hoffman, C. F. Mayer, and B. C. Howard, trustees of Hollins and McBlair.	France.....	Dec. 10, 1807...	Seizure and confiscation..	Ship Bacchus.....	Cost of shipment, $11,446. (See last column).....	No legal adjudication.....	The Bacchus sailed from Amsterdam in December, 1809. On her arrival she was refused entry, and in attempting to leave the port was lost, but the cargo was saved, and afterwards by treaty between Holland and France delivered over to the latter. The documents in this case, and that of the Juniata, are with La Calaghan, of Paris, and the particulars were given in June, 1813, to William Henry Crawford, Esq., then Minister to France.
69. John Hooper, of Marblehead, Mass.	....do.....	1805.....	Burning.....	Schooner Alpha, Sargent master.	$19,500. The burning took place at sea.....	No legal adjudication.....	The Alpha was from Marblehead to Bilboa. She was burnt by a French squadron. The claim was acknowledged just by the French Government, and the wages in full paid the captain and crew by them. The amount claimed was awarded by Commissioners appointed to assess damages in 1806.
170. Robt. Hooper, Marblehead, Mass.	....do.....	1809.....	Capture.....	Schooner Saratoga, Tucker master.	$12,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Guadaloupe in 1809.	This vessel was from Marblehead for the West Indies. She was captured and carried to Guadaloupe.
171. R. & I. Hooper, W. & N. Hooper, W. Reed, of Marblehead, Mass.	....do.....	1810.....	Capture and sinking.....	Schooner Endeavor, Powers master.	$25,000. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was from Lisbon for Marblehead, with Merino sheep and specie. She was captured by a French squadron and sunk.
172. Wm. Reed, of Marblehead, Mass.	....do.....	1810.....	Seizure and sequestration.	Schooner Two Sons, Warner master.	$30,000. Seizure made at Bilboa.....	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel arrived in Bilboa, then in possession of the French. Property seized and used.
173. Wm. Blackler, Wm. Blackler, jr., John C. Blackler, John Pedrick, 3d.	....do.....	1811.....	Capture.....	Schooner Hero, Blackler master.	$21,000. Capture made in the Baltic.....	Condemned at Paris in 1811....	This vessel was from Marblehead for St. Petersburg. She was captured in the Baltic by a privateer and carried to Copenhagen. Papers sent to Paris.
174. Samuel Horton.....	....do.....	1810.....	Capture.....	Schooner Eleanor, Williams master.	$44,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemnation at Seville in 1810.	The Eleanor was bound from Marblehead for Tangier. She was captured and carried to San Lucar; whence she was ordered to Seville.
175. William Waln, — Abner, S. M. Bowden, S. Graves.	....do.....	1808.....	Capture.....	Brig Venus, Bowden master.	$32,100. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was from Boston for Leghorn. She was captured and carried to Porto Ferrajo, and there sold by order of the French general.
176. Robert Hooper.....	....do.....	1809.....	Capture.....	Schooner John, Stacey master.	$26,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemnation at Bayonne in 1810.	This vessel was bound from Marblehead to Dijon. She was captured and carried to Saint John de Luce.
177. Union Insurance Company of Maryland, assignees of James Craik.	....do.....	April 26, 1812..	Capture and destruction..	Brig Happy Couple.	Amount of insurance paid by the claimants to the assured, $13,000. Capture made in latitude 35° 10′ N., longitude 22° 38′.	No legal adjudication.....	The Happy Couple, in the prosecution of a voyage from Baltimore to Oporto, with a cargo of corn, rice, flour, and shipbread, was captured by a French squadron, consisting of the Ariadne 44, Andromache 44, and brig Mameluke, under the command of Monsieur Seritine. Vessel sunk after taking out the whole or part of the cargo. The brig and cargo were American property.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
178. The Union Insurance Company of Maryland, assignees of Chas. and Peter Wirgman.	France	Dec. 30, 1812...	Capture and destruction..	Ship William Wilson, Robert Hancock master.	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $5,000. Capture made in latitude 36° 10′, longitude 18° 20′.	No legal adjudication.....	This ship was captured on her passage from Lisbon to Baltimore, laden with salt, by the French frigate La Gloire, Captain Albert Roussein, and sunk on the day of capture. The vessel and cargo were American property.
179. The Union Insurance Company of Maryland, assignees of William Lorman.	....do	Jan. 10, 1813...	Capture and plunder	Ship Fair American, Hobson master.	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured is $9,063 28. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	This ship, on her voyage from Baltimore to Cadiz, was captured by the French frigate La Gloire, Captain Roussein. After plundering her and throwing part of the cargo overboard, and threatening to destroy her, the French commander was prevailed on by Captain Hobson to give the ship up to him. The present claim is for the actual loss sustained. The vessel and cargo were American property.
180. The Union Insurance Company of Maryland, assignees of Mayer & Brantz and C. F. Karthaus.	....do	Seizure made Dec. 7. 1807.	Seizure and confiscation..	Ship Juniata.....	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $23,540 10. Seizure made in the river Elbe.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was seized by a guard of French soldiers or marines and conducted to Hamburg, where the cargo was landed and afterwards confiscated by a special decree of the French Emperor, and the proceeds appropriated to the use of the French Government.—(See document in possession of the Baltimore Insurance Company, which has a like claim.) The vessel and cargo were American property.
181. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of Mayer & Brantz, Alexander Webster & Co., G. Haskins, P. A. Karthaus.	....do	January, 1808..	Capture	Ship Aurora	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $21,779 20. Place of capture not stated.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes, which was confirmed by the Emperor. Date not stated.	The Aurora was captured by a British vessel January 21, 1808, on her passage from Baltimore to Amsterdam. She was recaptured by the French privateer L'Incomparable, and conducted to Morlaix, and condemned upon the alleged ground that she had violated the Milan decree. She sailed from Baltimore the 14th of December, 1807. The Milan decree is dated subsequently to the commencement of her voyage. Vessel and cargo American property.
182. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of Lemuel Taylor. Mem.—This claim is also included in the schedule of claims on Denmark, No. 25.	France and Denmark.	July, 1810	Seizure	Ship Ploughboy....	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $20,000. Seizure made near Sylt.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel was bound from Baltimore to Sylt, and after her arrival near to that port, and within the jurisdiction of the Government of Denmark, she was forcibly taken possession of by the French privateer armed vessel La Reciprocite and carried into Sylt, a Danish port. The protection of Denmark was solicited in vain, and a condemnation took place at Paris, without any legal course. Vessel and cargo were American property. This claim is also made against Denmark.
183. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of Jacob Le Roy & Sons.	France	May 22, 1809...	Capture	Schr. Bald Eagle...	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $25,500. Place of capture not stated.	No trial or condemnation known to the claimants.	The Bald Eagle, on her voyage from New York to Palermo, was captured by the privateer Le Constant, Captain Serra, and conducted to Bizenta, in the Regency of Tunis. The French Consul declared her to be good prize, and the captors disposed of the vessel and cargo as such. Both American property.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
184. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of John Wilmot.	France	November 12, 1807, date of seizure.	Seizure and confiscation..	Schooner Random..	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $13,000. Seizure made in the harbor of St. Bartholomew.	Supposed to have been condemned at Guadaloupe.	This vessel was bound to St. Bartholomew, where she arrived on the 9th of November, 1807, with a cargo of lawful goods. On the 12th of that month, whilst at anchor in the harbor, she was boarded from the French privateer brig General Ernouf, Captain Grassin, and a French armed cutter called Victor, Captain Vealot, and forcibly conducted to Guadaloupe, where both vessel and cargo were sold as prize. The American captain and supercargo were turned ashore and treated with great indignity and severity for asserting their rights and complaining of the illegal capture and detention of their vessel. Vessel and cargo American property.
185. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of John Wilmot.	....do	October, 1806..	Sinking at sea.....	Schooner William, Terry master.	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $16,000. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication.....	This vessel, on her voyage from St. Domingo to Baltimore, was captured by a French squadron, consisting of L'Eole and other ships, commonly called Jerome Bonaparte's squadron, and destroyed. The captain, supercargo, and crew were treated with cruelty and sent to France. Property American.
186. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of Hoskins and W. Graham.	....do	May 18, 1806...	Capture	Schooner Ariel, Jenks master.	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $17,400. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was captured, on her voyage from Cape François to Baltimore, by the French privateer Lionaise, Captain La Loupe, and conducted to Samana, May 21, 1806, where the vessel and cargo were sold, as prize, without legal adjudication. American property.
187. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of Jas. Caldwell and Jonathan Hudson.	....do	Oct. 24, 1806...	Capture	Schr. Exchange, Gould master.	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $18,000. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel, on her voyage from St. Thomas' to St. Domingo, was captured by the French privateer Superb, Captain Dominique, and conducted to Baracoa, where the vessel and cargo were sold and disposed of, as prize, without trial or adjudication. American property.
188. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of Bigelow & Proud.	....do	July 5, 1806....	Capture	Schooner Trial, Arnold master.	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $19,400. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Trial, on her voyage from Baltimore to the West Indies, was captured by the French privateer Napoleon, Captain Marie, and conducted to Samana, where she was disposed of, as prize, without trial or legal adjudication. American property.
189. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of Robert Kearney.	....do	Oct. 12, 1809...	Capture	Brig Acteon, Mason master.	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $2,252. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel, on her voyage from New York to Tonningen, was captured by the French privateer Charles, of Rochelle, and ordered to a port in France, where she never arrived. Total loss was paid by the claimants. American property.
190. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland, assignees of B. & J. Bohlen.	....do	1811.....	Capture	Ship America, Leland master.	Amount paid by the claimants to the assured, $5,356 22. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel, on her passage from the river Jade to Philadelphia, was captured by a French vessel, and sent to Dunkirk for adjudication. After a long detention the captain compromised with the captors, and was permitted to depart. Proportion of compromise and expense is all that is here claimed. The sum insured was $20,000. American property.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

	Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
191.	Union Insurance Company of Maryland, assignees of Wm. Bobinson.	France	1810.....	Capture or seizure.....	Schr. Independence	$4,366 59. Amount paid by the claimants to the assured. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	The voyage of this vessel was from Baltimore to St. Sebastian. She was captured or seized by the French, and released upon compromise. The claim is for the sum paid only. The insurance was for $12,000. American property.
192.	Israel Thorndike...	....do.....	Jan. 22, 1808...	Seizure.....	Schr. Peace and Plenty, Foster master.	$40,000. Seizure was made near Marseilles.....	Condemnation at Paris. Date not stated.	The schooner Peace and Plenty, Joshua Foster master, sailed from Beverly on the 3d December, 1807, with a cargo of sugar, pepper, cotton, indigo, and codfish, for adventures. On the 22d day of January, 1808, half a mile from Marseilles, was forcibly taken possession of and carried into the port. Vessel and cargo were finally condemned and lost.
193.	Israel Thorndike..	....do.....	1807.	Capture and detention....	Schooner Augusta, Stickney master.	$19,445. Capture made near Bilboa.....	Adjudication in the French courts in the year 1809.	The schooner Augusta, Captain Joseph Stickney, belonging to the claimant, sailed from Beverly October 30, 1807, with a cargo of cocoa, sugar, pepper, &c., bound to Bilboa, in Spain. When near the port she was taken by a French privateer, carried into a port near Bayonne, and detained there, with her crew, until June 15, 1809, 19½ months, at a great expense, and a part of the cargo was condemned.
194.	Union Insurance Company of Boston.	....do.....	1809.....	Capture	Ship Arrow.....	Amount of the net loss sustained, $8,144 47. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was captured, on a voyage from Boston to the Mediterranean, by the French, and carried into Frejus. The master compromised with the captors.
195.	Union Insurance Company of Boston.	....do.....	1811.....	Capture	Ship Eliza.....	Part of the cargo, $10,000. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication known of.	The Eliza was captured, on a voyage from James river to Spain, by a French privateer, and carried into St. Lucar. The master and crew were turned out of the vessel. The cargo was discharged and sold, under, it is believed, the order of the French Consul.
196.	James Sheafe, of Portsmouth, N. H.	....do.....	Not stated.....	Condemnation	Brig Charlotte Murdock; was condemned.	$7,575 70. Place of condemnation not stated.....	Condemnation. Date not stated.	The papers on which this claim is founded are filed in the Department of State, among the papers of the Florida treaty, under the designation of the case of the brig Charlotte Murdock.
197.	James Sheafe, of Portsmouth, N. H.	....do.....	Not stated.....	Condemnation	Ship Apollo; was condemned.	$19,031 20. Place of condemnation not stated.....	Condemnation. Date not stated.	The papers on which this claim is founded are on the files of the Department of State, among the papers of the Florida treaty, under the designation of the case of the ship Apollo.
198.	Henry Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	August, 1811...	Capture	Brig Radius, Lander master.	$1,000. This sum was paid by the claimant for insurance on commissions. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by the Council of Prizes, at Paris, September 25, 1811.	The brig Radius sailed from Newport, Rhode Island, June 28, 1811, bound to St. Petersburg. She was captured at sea the 8th August, 1811, by the French privateer La Minata. She was sent into Copenhagen for adjudication, and was finally condemned by the Council of Prizes, at Paris, September 25, 1811.
199.	Henry Gray, of Boston.	....do.....	July 20, 1810...	Capture	Barque Zeno, S. Stone master.	$1,000. This sum was paid for insurance by the claimant. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	The barque Zeno was captured by a French lugger and carried into Christiansand. The papers were sent to Paris. The vessel and cargo were condemned, at Paris, by order of Napoleon, December 4, 1811.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
200. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	France	March, 1807	Capture	Schooner Maria	$9,800. The loss took place in the West Indies	No legal adjudication appears	The schooner Maria, with a number of other vessels, was taken, under orders of General Ferrand, by French privateers, and despoiled in different ports of Cuba, St. Domingo, &c.
201. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	May, 1807	Capture	Schooner Exchange	$588. Loss sustained in the West Indies	No legal adjudication appears	Same remarks as in the preceding case of the schooner Maria, No. 200.
202. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	May, 1807	Capture	Schr. Good Catharine.	$2,254. This loss was sustained in the West Indies	No legal adjudication appears	Remarks on the Maria, No. 200, apply to this case.
203. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	May, 1807	Capture	Brig Sukey & Polly.	$11,613	No legal adjudication appears	Same remarks as in No. 200.
204. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	June, 1807	Capture	Ship George Washington.	$5,932 80	No legal adjudication appears	Same remarks as in No. 200.
205. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	June, 1807	Capture	Brig Elizabeth	$9,800	No legal adjudication appears	Same remarks as in No. 200.
206. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	July, 1807	Capture	Schooner Eliza	$8,330	No legal adjudication appears	Same remarks as in No. 200.
207. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	August, 1807	Capture	Schooner Minna	$1,078	No legal adjudication appears	Same as in No. 200.
208. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	August, 1807	Capture	Ship Three Sisters.	$14,700	No legal adjudication appears	Same as in No. 200.
209. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	Septem'r, 1807	Capture	Schr. Clementina	$11,760	No legal adjudication appears	Same as in No. 200.
210. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	February, 1808	Capture	Brig Joseph	$5,009 47	No legal adjudication appears	Same as in No. 200.
211. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	August, 1808	Capture	Brig Sally	$1,960	No legal adjudication appears	Same as in No. 200.
212. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	do	January, 1809	Seizure	Brig Nancy and Katy.	$7,500. Seizure made in France	No legal adjudication appears	Arrested in France, and sequestered under the Berlin and Milan decrees.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
213. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	France	February, 1809	Capture	Ship James Adams.	$13,047 13. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	Condemned under the Berlin and Milan decrees.
214. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	June, 1809	Capture	Ship America.....	$8,475 56. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	Condemned in Holland under the Berlin and Milan decrees.
215. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	April, 1810	Capture and destruction..	Schooner Jefferson.	$13,660 59. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The schooner Jefferson was burnt and sunk at sea by a French squadron.
216. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	May, 1810	Capture	Schooner Shadow..	$11,308 98. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	Condemned at Naples under the Berlin and Milan decrees.
217. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	July, 1810	Capture	Brig Molly.....	$9,600. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	Taken into Genoa.
218. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	...do	February, 1811	Capture	Brig Julian	$9,280 59. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	Condemned at Dantzic by the French authorities.
219. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	June, 1811	Capture	Brig Clio	$6,619 25. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The Clio was taken by a French privateer and run on shore near Cape Blanco, and lost.
220. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	July, 1811	Capture	Schooner Floret ...	$6,174. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	This vessel was taken by a French privateer and run on shore near Cadiz.
221. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	July, 1811	Capture	Ship Betsey	$16,170. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	None.
222. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	July, 1811	Capture	Schooner Alleghany	$1,470. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	This vessel was taken by a French privateer and despoiled in San Lucar.
223. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	April, 1812	Sequestration	Brig St. Michael's..	$3,500. See last column.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The brig St. Michael's was arrested in Amsterdam, sequestered under French decrees, and delivered by Holland to France.
224. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	May, 1812	Capture and destruction..	Ship Asia.....	$26,342. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The ship Asia was destroyed at sea by a French squadron.
225. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	September, 1812	Capture	Brig Mary	$11,760. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was destroyed at sea by a French squadron.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
226. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	France.....	February, 1813.	Capture.....	Ship Olive Branch.	$21,163 44. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel was carried into Nyburg and condemned at Paris.
227. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do.....	April, 1813.....	Capture.....	Ship William Wilson.	$7,056 35. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	The ship William Wilson was destroyed at sea by the French frigate La Gloire.
228. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do.....	April, 1813.....	Capture.....	Ship Asturiana.....	$10,000. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was despoiled at Santona.
229. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do.....	April, 1813.....	Seizure and burning	Ship Apollo.....	$15,000. Place of seizure not stated,.....	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Apollo was taken possession of by French troops on the French lines, and by them despoiled with fire in Cadiz bay.
230. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do.....	April, 1813.....	Capture.....	Ship Mentor.....	$5,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Mentor was despoiled by the captors at Baracoa, in the island of Cuba.
231. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia. See Nos. 77, 78, and 79.	....do.....	1812 and 1813..	Arrest and confiscation...	Brigs Bordeaux Packet, Diamond, and Perseverance, and ship Helena.	See Nos. 77, 78, and 79	No legal adjudication.....	See Nos. 77, 78, and 79.
232. Lancaster and Susquehanna Insurance Company.	....do.....	April, 1810.....	Capture and destruction..	Schooner Jefferson.	$3,400. Place of capture and destruction not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was burnt and sunk at sea by a French squadron.
233. Lancaster and Susquehanna Insurance Company.	....do.....	February, 1811.	Capture.....	Brig Julian	$7,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation at Dantzic. Date not stated, nor whether there was any legal adjudication.	This vessel was condemned at Dantzic by the French authorities.
234. Lancaster and Susquehanna Insurance Company.	....do.....	July, 1811	Capture.....	Schooner Alleghany	$1,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears...	The Alleghany was taken by the French and despoiled at San Lucar.
235. Lancaster and Susquehanna Insurance Company.	....do.....	July, 1811	Capture.....	Ship Pilgrim.....	$5,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears...	The Pilgrim was taken by the French and despoiled at San Lucar.
236. Lancaster and Susquehanna Insurance Company.	....do.....	April, 1813.....	Burning.....	Ship Apollo	$10,000. Destruction took place at Cadiz bay.....	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Apollo was burnt by French troops.
237. Lancaster and Susquehanna Insurance Company.	....do.....	December, 1812	Burning.....	Barque General Balasteros.	$8,000. Place of destruction not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was burnt at sea by French vessels-of-war.
238. John B. Bernadon..	....do.....	April, 1810.....	Burning.....	Ship Apollo.....	$18,909 42. The destruction took place in Cadiz bay.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 236.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
239. Hugh McPherson...	France.....	April, 1810.....	Capture.....	Ship Ocean.....	$6,407 39. Place of capture not stated.....	Legal adjudication in 1810. Place not stated.	The ship Ocean was taken to the Isle of France and declared good prize. In 1820 the French Government awarded in favor of owners, and full compensation has been made to them. No indemnity has been allowed Captain McPherson, because, at the time of capture, no bills of lading of his property were found on board, as is required by a regulation of France of July 26, 1778.
240. James S. Ritchie and Wm. Young.	....do.....	June, 1809.....	Capture.....	Ship America.....	$3,805. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The ship America was condemned in Holland under the Berlin and Milan decrees.
241. Daniel W. Coxe, Chas. Pleasants, Chandler Price, & G. Bryan.—See No. 136-140, Supplemental Claims on France.	....do.....	Dec., 1808.....	Capture or seizure.....	Snow Edward.....	$42,476 13 22,382 85 15,146 66 Amount, &c..... 80,005 64 Seizure made in the Isle of Rhe.	Condemned by the Court of Prizes, at Paris, December 24, 1808.	The Snow Edward put into the Isle of Rhe in distress; was taken possession of in port while seeking hospitality, and sent to Rochelle for adjudication, and condemned by the Court of Prizes at Paris, on the 21st December, 1808.
242. William North, A. Byerly, &c.	....do.....	Feb., 1810.....	Capture.....	Schooner Post Boy.	$21,440. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The Post Boy was taken by the French, and despoiled at St. Sebastian.
243. Andrew Byerly, &c.	....do.....	March, 1810..	Burning.....	Brig Smilax.....	$15,579 59. Destruction took place at Cadiz bay...	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Smilax was destroyed by fire in Cadiz bay by French troops.
244. Lewis D. Carpentier's executors.	....do.....	Dec. 22, 1809, Mar. 23, 1810.	Seizure.....	Ship Hawk carried the property seized.	$5,900. Forty-five bales of Georgia and Louisiana cotton, sold for about $5,900, at an average price. Seizure made at Port Passage.	No legal adjudication.....	Lewis D. Carpentier shipped in the American ship Hawk, Brown master, 45 bales of Georgia and Louisiana cotton. The property was seized on board said ship, at Port Passage, February 5, 1810, by order of the Emperor Napoleon, issued December 22, 1809. It was afterwards sold, along with the cargo of said ship, by the Collector of Customs at Bayonne, on the 11th, 12th, and 13th September, 1810, under the Rambouillet decree, dated March 23, 1810, ordering the proceeds of the sale to be sent to Paris, and to be deposited in the sinking funds.
245. John Laval.....	....do.....	Dec. 22, 1809, Mar. 23, 1810.	Seizure.....	Ship Hawk carried the property seized.	$19,000. Seizure made at Port Passage.....	No legal adjudication.....	John Laval is the proprietor of this claim, under a transfer from Augustine Bousquet, the shipper of 50 bales of Sea Island cotton in the American ship Hawk, Michael Brown master, of Philadelphia. This property was seized at Port Passage, on board said ship, on the 5th February, 1810, in consequence of an order from the Emperor Napoleon, issued the 22d December, 1809, and afterwards sold, along with the cargo of said ship, by the Collector of the custom-house at Bayonne, on the 11th, 12th, and 13th of September, 1810, agreeably to the imperial decree of Rambouillet, dated 23d March, 1810, ordering the proceeds of the sales to be sent to Paris, and there to be deposited in the sinking funds. This shipment of fifty bales of Sea Island cotton, being the only one of the kind on board the ship Hawk, was sold separately from the rest of the cargo, at the average price of 350 francs per fifty kilogrammes, the duties to be paid by the purchasers, and yielded, clear, ninety to one hundred thousand francs, of which a separate entry was made in the books of the Collector of the custom-house at Bayonne. The vessel had not been visited by British cruisers.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
246. Jacob Schieffelin & Son, of New York.	France	June, 1809.....	Seizure	Brig Resort carried the property seized.	Invoice cost of cargo ..... $2,223 00 17 years' interest, from August 6, 1809, to August 6, 1826, at 7 per cent. lawful interest..... 2,637 72 4,860 72 Seizure made in the Texel.	The brig Resort and cargo were sold by an order of the Council of Prizes.	On the 16th of June, 1809, Jacob Schieffelin & Son shipped on board of the American brig Resort, Miles R. Burt master, 43 packages of drugs and medicines, amounting to $2,223, and consigned the same to Widow D. Smith, Son & Co. of Amsterdam, merchants, for sales and returns. The said brig had arrived in the Texel on or about the 6th of August, having taken a Dutch pilot on board, when two French privateers, L'Hebe, Captain Jolie, and the Tilsit, Captain Collet, seized and took possession of said brig Resort and cargo, and caused the same to be sold by an order of the Conséil de Prises, though the documents in proof of the American property were complete, and no violation of the laws by the captain, since his departure from New York, had been committed. These drugs sold for more than 100 per cent. advance on the invoice cost. The proof in support of the foregoing statement, consisting of original and authenticated copies, have been deposited by the agents of the claimants at the office of the American ministers at Paris, General Armstrong and the late Mr. Barlow, and also at the office of the Consul General at Amsterdam, the late Silvanus Bourne, Esq; and also in the hands of their agents, P. & C. Van Eeghen, Esq., Amsterdam.
247. Jacob Schieffelin & Son, of New York.	France and Holland.	1809 and 1810..	Sequestration.....	Ship Dean carried the property sequestered.	64 hhds. clayed sugar, 20 tierces and 1 barrel coffee, 10 casks of cocoa; the invoice cost..... $14,670 00 17 years' lawful interest, to June 26, 1826. 17,442 00 32,112 00 Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	The cargo of the ship Dean was deposited in the King's stores (of Holland) at Amsterdam, and placed under the decree of the 30th of June, 1809, and, by special agreement with the Government of Holland, was sequestered and surrendered to the French Government.	On the 26th June, 1809, Jacob Schieffelin & Son shipped from New York, on board the American ship Dean, Barzillai Cottle master, for Bremen, sugars, coffee, cocoa, and drugs, amounting to $20,000, and consigned the same to Hickson W. Field, then on board, for sales and returns. The said ship was compelled to enter the Texel, about the 1st of August, to repair the leak which was discovered in her, and proceeded to Amsterdam, where she was detained until the embargo was removed, about the 8th of September, when she obtained an order to that effect, and sailed for her destined port. In consequence of a dreadful storm in the Texel Roads, the ship Dean and several other vessels were cast away on the South Wall, near the Helder, where lighters were sent to save the cargo, which was carried up to Amsterdam, deposited in the King's stores, and placed under the decree of June 30, 1808, and, by special agreement with the Government of Holland, sequestered and surrendered to the French Government. The sugars, coffee, and cocoa, were sent to Antwerp and there sold, and the proceeds placed in the hands of the French Government; which proceeds exceeded more than 100 per cent. of the invoice cost. The same documents, as in the foregoing case of the brig Resort, can be referred to.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
248. Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company, of Boston.	France	Feb. 11, 1810...	Capture and condemnation	Schr. Four Brothers, Joshua F. Grozer master.	$3,465. The cost of the property in the United States exceeded the amount insured and paid for by the claimants. Capture made off Malaga.	No legal adjudication.....	The vessel was owned by Jonathan Cook and others, citizens of Massachusetts. She sailed January 4, 1810, from Provincetown, bound to Oran and a market, in the Mediterranean. When she arrived off Malaga, February 11, 1810, she was captured by the French and carried into Malaga, where the vessel and cargo were confiscated by General Sebastiani, the French commander at that place, by order of Marshal Soult.
249. Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company, of Boston.	France or Denmark.	May 2, 1811....	Capture and condemnation	Ship Hercules, Snow master.	$5,440 53. The cost of the property in the United States exceeded the amount insured and paid by the claimants. Capture made near the island of Oland.	Condemned by the Imperial Council of Prizes, September 10, 1811.	The Hercules sailed from Charleston, South Carolina, February 22, 1811, for a port in the Baltic. On the 5th of April, 1811, she was captured near Elsineur by a Danish privateer, and carried to Copenhagen, where she remained till the first day of May, when she was permitted to depart. On the next day she was taken by the French privateer Little Devil and carried to Dantzic, and was finally condemned by the Imperial Council of Prizes.
250. Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company, of Boston.	France	March 27, 1813.	Capture and scuttling at sea.	Brig Success, Babson master.	$4,950. The cost of the cargo exceeded the amount insured and paid for by the claimants. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Success was owned by C. Coolidge and others, of Boston, and sailed from Boston on the 8th day of March, 1813, bound for Cadiz, and on the 27th of said month was taken by the French frigate L'Arethuse, S. Bouvet commander, scuttled and destroyed.
251. Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company, of Boston.	....do	1810 or 1811....	Capture and sequestration.	Schooner Traveller, Paine master.	$3,603 30. The value in the United States exceeded the amount insured and paid by the claimants. Place of capture not stated.	The claimants know of no legal adjudication.	The schooner Traveller was owned by citizens of Massachusetts, and sailed from Boston on a voyage to Cadiz and Gibraltar in November, 1810. She was captured on her voyage by the French, carried into St. Lucar, and there sequestered.
252. Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company, of Boston.	....do	1809.....	Capture and sequestration.	Ship Arrow, Fletcher master.	$3,401 15, being the amount of net loss sustained by the claimants in consequence of the capture and sequestration. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Arrow, on her voyage from Boston for the Mediterranean in the summer of the year 1809, was captured by the French, carried into Frejus, and sequestered. The captain compromised with the captors.
253. Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company, of Boston.	....do	Nov., 1807.....	Seizure.....	Ship Lucy, Inglee master.	$6,430. The value of the ship in the United States was $12,000.	The claimants know of no legal adjudication.	The ship Lucy was seized in the port of Hamburg, in November, 1807, by the French Military Commandant of that place, and was confiscated by order of the French Government.
254. Heirs of Sam'l Gray, late of Boston. Samuel C. Gray, agent.	....do	Aug. 1, 1810...	Capture.....	Schooner Lydia, Cheever master.	Value of vessel..... $4,000 00 Cargo..... 22,723 28 Freight..... 1,146 67 Expenses of detention at Christiansand, &c. 765 00 Expenses of supercargo to and from Paris, sent thither to defend the case before the Council of Prizes, and expenses of employing an advocate ..... 1,993 73 30,628 68 Recovered from insurers on vessel and cargo 20,357 00 Recovered a part of expenses of detention and suit..... 2,300 00 Total..... 53,285 68	The vessel and cargo were first tried by the Council of Prizes, at Paris, who referred the case to the Emperor Napoleon, and he condemned them, September 14, 1811.	The schooner Lydia, on her passage from St. Petersburg to Salem, was captured August 1, 1810, by the French privateer Figaro. The condemnation by the Emperor Napoleon was made on the unjust pretext that the vessel had navigated under the protection of the British. Amount of balance uninsured from said vessel and cargo, which the heirs claim, is, exclusive of interest, $7,991 68.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
255. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent, &c. Mem.—The claimant has, subsequently to the insertion of his claim, withdrawn it, having discovered that the Betsey was captured by a Spanish, and not by a French privateer, as he had supposed.	France	1807	Capture	Schooner Betsy, Hooper master.	$2,300. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication	This vessel, bound from Boston to Bilboa, was captured by a French privateer and carried into Bilboa, and one half of the cargo given up to save the remainder. This and the fifteen following cases are claims made for losses sustained by the claimant as agent for the underwriters.
256. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	do	1808	Capture	Ship Grace, Linzee master.	$4,500. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation at Paris. Date not stated.	The ship Grace, bound from Boston to Leghorn, was captured by a French privateer, carried to Porto Ferrajo, in the island of Elba, and condemned at Paris on an allegation that she had been boarded at sea by an English vessel.
257. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	do	1808	Capture	Ship Science	$4,400. Place of capture not stated	Not stated	This ship, bound from London to New York, was captured by the French privateer Admiral Martin, Fortis commander, and carried to Bilboa, in Spain. Total loss paid February 13, 1810.
258. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	do	1809	Capture	Schooner Philander	$2,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation at Guadaloupe. Date not stated.	This schooner, bound to the West Indies from New Haven, was captured by a French privateer, carried to Guadaloupe, and condemned.
259. Nathaniel P. Russel.	do	1809	Capture	Brig Perseverance	$7,300. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication	The Perseverance, bound from Boston to the Mediterranean, was captured by a French privateer, carried to Civita Vecchia, and detained two years; she was finally acquitted. The capture and detention caused a total loss of $6,000 on the vessel and $1,300 on the cargo.
260. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	do	1810	Capture	Ship Exertion	$7,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation in France. Date not stated.	This ship, bound from Valencia to Great Britain, was captured, carried into France, and condemned.
261. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	do	1810	Seizure	Ship Franklin	$5,000. Seizure made at St. Sebastian	No legal adjudication	The Franklin arrived at St. Sebastian, and was immediately seized by the agents of the Emperor Napoleon. Total loss.
262. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	do	1810	Seizure	Ship Sally	$3,000. Seizure made at St. Sebastian	No legal adjudication	The ship Sally was seized at St. Sebastian and acquitted. The seizure caused a total loss of the freight to the underwriters and a loss on vessel.
263. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	do	1811	Capture	Brig Catharine	$9,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Paris. Date not stated.	The brig Catharine was captured by a French privateer, carried to Dantzic, and condemned at Paris.
264. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	do	1810	Capture	Schooner Lydia	$9,600. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Paris. Date not stated.	The schooner Lydia, from Russia to the United States, was captured by a French privateer, carried to France, and finally condemned at Paris.
265. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	do	1811	Capture	Brig Harmony	$6,200. Place of capture not stated	Not stated	This vessel was captured by the French, and carried to Leghorn. The cargo was sold by the captors. The vessel was finally acquitted, but a total loss was caused.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
266. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	France and Denmark.	1811.....	Capture	Brig Hannah.....	$2,200. Place of capture not stated.....	Not stated	The brig Hannah, on a voyage from England to Russia, was captured by a French privateer and carried into Copenhagen. Total loss.
267. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	France.....	1812.....	Capture	Brig Pallas.....	$600. Capture made near Cadiz.....	Not stated	The brig Pallas was captured by a French privateer near Cadiz, carried to St. Mary's, and was there unloaded for the benefit of the captors.
268. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	....do	1812.....	Capture	Schooner Mary	$7,000. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Mary was captured by the French, on her passage from Oporto to Messina, and lost at sea while in possession of the captors.
269. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	....do	1813.....	Destruction at sea	Brig Success	$6,500. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Success, bound from Boston to Cadiz, and was destroyed at sea by the French frigate L'Arethuse, Captain Bouvet. Total loss of vessel and cargo.
270. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	....do	1810.....	Seizure	Schr. Two Friends	$3,000. Seizure made at Civita Vecchia.....	Not stated.....	This vessel arrived from the United States at Civita Vecchia, where she was seized and sequestered by the Government. Total loss.
271. Joseph Bell and Joseph Watson, for themselves and for the estate of Wm. Bell, dec'd, as his executors.	....do	May 22, 1805...	Capture	Brig Susanna, Criswell master.	$2,528 70. See last column. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Susanna was owned by William Bell, Joseph Bell, and Joseph Watson, of Philadelphia, who loaded her with a cargo of flour for their account, bound to Barbadoes, Martinique, Laguayra, and St. Jago de Cuba, consigned to Maurice Rogers, supercargo on board. After touching at the first three named ports, and on her voyage to the last, she was captured on the 22d day of May, 1805, by the French privateer La Eliose, Monsieur Dumaine master, and carried into St. Jago de Cuba as a prize on the next day, and the voyage thereby destroyed and broken up. Her cargo was discharged and placed in the public stores, under the cognizance of the Spanish authorities, where it remained so long as to become spoiled and deteriorated while the captors were seeking a condemnation elsewhere, and the vessel much injured by worms, plunder, &c. When the authorities permitted a sale, from the great expenses which the supercargo was compelled to pay, it resulted in almost a total loss. The brig and cargo were insured; the freight of $1,545 was not. On hearing of the capture, an abandonment of vessel and cargo was made to the underwriters, who paid the loss, and a cession thereof made to them by the assured. The amount of freight, with $1,946 70 interest, from June 1, 1805, to October 1, 1826, (21 years and 4 months, at 6 per cent. per annum,) make $3,491 70, from which deduct a credit of $454 89, received from proceeds of sale apportioned to the freight on the 19th of February, 1808, with $508 11 interest thereon to October 1, 1826, amounting to $963, and there remains the sum of $2,528 70 due to the claimants at that period by the Government of France. The claimants understood that proceedings were commenced at St. Jago de Cuba in 1805, but never finished, and by the intervention of the Spanish authorities sales were made when damaged or reduced in value.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.		Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
272. Joseph Bell and Joseph Watson, for themselves and for the estate of Wm. Bell, dec'd, as his executors.	France	Feb. 13, 1810	Seizure and confiscation	Ship Hawk	Value seized in Port Passage February 13, 1810	$1,300 00	No legal adjudication	The ship Hawk belonged to Abraham Piesch, of the city of Philadelphia, laden by various shippers for the port of St. Sebastian, amongst whom were Cranston, Alexander & Smith, who had on board 12 hogsheads of tobacco, two-thirds of which, that is, the interest of Cranston & Alexander, were purchased afloat by William Bell, Joseph Bell, and Joseph Watson, upon which they caused insurance to be effected, valued at $1,300, warranted free from seizure in port. She arrived at Port Passage on the 5th of February, 1810, to perform a quarantine of eight days, without speaking or meeting with any British or other vessels on her passage. Whilst there possession was taken of her by French soldiers, on or about the 13th of February, 1810, by order of their Government, as being sequestered. The cargo was confiscated and carried into Bayonne, where it was sold; which being a seizure in port, the underwriters were exonerated by the warranty of the assured. This claim is, therefore, made for the sum insured and $12 05 for a proportion of the supercargo's expenses, with interest thereon from the date of seizure to the 1st of October, 1826, being $1,309 37, making together $2,621 42 justly due by the Government of France to the said claimants to that period.
					Proportion of supercargo's expenses in Bayonne	12 05
						1,312 05
					Interest from date of seizure to October 11, 1826	1,309 37
					Due claimants	2,621 42
273. Jos. Bell and Jos. Watson, for themselves and the estate of Wm. Bell, deceased, as his executors.	do	May 4, 1811	Capture	Brig Julian, Abbott master.		$5,000 00	No legal adjudication appears	The brig Julian, her freight, and part of her cargo, belonged to William Bell, Joseph Bell, and Joseph Watson, who caused insurance to be effected in Philadelphia and New York "at and from Philadelphia to Gottenburg and a market." She sailed, accordingly, with all the usual documents and consular certificates of Denmark, Sweden, and France, on the 10th of May, 1810, consigned to William Bell, jr., supercargo on board. On the 21st of June she was captured by a Danish privateer and taken into Christiansand, libelled, and, after much detention, cleared by the Prize Court. From this decision the captors appealed to the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, which restored the vessel and cargo December 1, 1810. On hearing of this capture, the insured abandoned to the underwriters in Philadelphia, who having paid, a cession of claim upon the captors was made to them by the assured for the amount of their respective subscriptions, with the exception of George Smith, a private underwriter in James Crawford & Co.'s office, to the amount of $5,000 on cargo, which, from his insolvency, he did not pay; nor did he get a cession, thereby leaving the property in the assured. Early in April, when the Baltic opened, Captain Abbott sailed from Christiansand for Gottenburg, and from thence on the 23d for St. Petersburg, when,
					Interest from May 4, 1811, to October 10, 1826, 15 years, 4 months, and 27 days.	4,622 50
						9,622 50
					Capture made in the Baltic.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
273. Continued	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	....	on the 4th of May, he was captured by the French privateer Empress Maria Louisa, Foucherau, and sent into Dantzic. Complete possession was taken of vessel, cargo, and papers, by the owners or agents of said privateer, which papers they forwarded to Paris, where, on the 11th of September, 1811, the whole was totally condemned by a special decree of Bonaparte. This claim being, therefore, in the original shippers, and not in the said George Smith, is made, with interest thereon, from date of capture and dispossession of their property, to the 1st of October, 1826, at 6 per cent. per annum, amounting together to $9,622 50, due to the claimants by the Government of France to that period. The case of the Julian was represented to the Department of State on the 19th of January, and November, 1811; to which documents reference can be had. No abandonment could be made to the underwriters, in New York, until six months after capture, unless sooner condemned, on which they finally paid.
274. Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	France	.....	Capture	Schooner Clarissa, Townshend master.	July 1, 1806, paid loss..... $2,000 00 October 16, 1806, paid loss..... 673 26 2,673 26 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Baracoa. Date not stated.	This property was insured for Garrigues & Marshall January 6, 1806, from Philadelphia to St. Domingo, and back. On her homeward passage the schooner was captured by three French privateers, the schooners Napoleon and Reynard, and a felucca, called the Sierbo, and carried into Baracoa.
275. Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do.....	March, 1806...	Capture	Brig Fame.....	June 14, 1806, paid loss for insurance for James Lyle..... $901 60 May 4 and 5, 1806, paid loss for insurance for Wharton and Mifflin..... 3,880 00 Paid June 4, 1806, for insurance for John W. Swift..... 695 80 5,477 40 Place of capture not stated.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	The brig Fame, on her voyage from Cape François to Philadelphia, was captured by a French privateer and carried into St. Jago de Cuba. The insurance for Lyle had been made March 14, 1806; that for Wharton and Mifflin, March 15, 1806; and that for John W. Swift, March 17, 1806.
276. Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do.....	May 28, 1806..	Capture	Brig Rolla.....	Loss paid January 9, 1809, $3,287 85. Place of capture not stated.	The Rolla was tried at St. Domingo and acquitted. Date not stated.	The brig Rolla was insured for F. Dusar, for account of A. Marshall, May 7, 1806, on a voyage from New York to St. Jago de Cuba, and back. She was captured on the 28th of May, 1806, by the French privateer schooner Napoleon, Captain Ezart, under General Ferrand's proclamation, and carried into the city of St. Domingo. She was tried and acquitted, but had been plundered, while in the possession of the privateer, of a large part of her cargo.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
277. Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	France	Jan. 13, 1810	Capture	Brig Cupid	Loss paid January 19, 1809, $1,106 14	The claimants know of no legal adjudication.	The Cupid was insured for J. J. Borie, December 7, 1809, from Philadelphia to St. Sebastian, or Port Passage. She was captured on the 13th of January, 1810, by the French privateer Marshall Moncey, Captain Jean Magnes, and carried into St. Jean de Luz, and the cargo there discharged. Compromised with the captors, and the balance of loss is $1,106 14.
278. Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	1810	Capture	Ship America	Loss paid March 31, 1812, $1,857 06. Place of capture not stated.	Some judicial proceedings appear to have been had at Dunkirk. Date not stated.	The claimants insured for B. & J. Bohlen $6,000 December 15, 1809, from river Jahde to Philadelphia. The amount claimed appears to be the claimant's proportion of expenses in defending a suit on being carried into Dunkirk, &c.
279. Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	About May, 1806	Capture	Schr. Wilmington	Loss paid August 4 and Sept. 18, 1806 ... $4,900 00 Loss paid August 21, 1806 ... 1,715 00 Loss paid August 22, 1806 ... 980 00 Loss paid August 23, 1806 ... 1,188 68 Amount, &c ... 8,783 68	Condemnation at St. Thomas. Date not stated.	The claimants insured for J. W. Clements & Co., March 28, 1806 ... $5,000 00 January 15, 1806, for Lapsley & Wheeler ... 1,750 00 May 3, 1806, for John Bacon ... 1,000 00 January 17, 1806, for William Robertson ... 1,400 00 This schooner was captured on her passage from Port au Prince to Philadelphia, carried into St. Thomas, and condemned.
280. Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	About May, 1807	Seizure	Brig Nancy & Katy	Place of capture not stated. Loss paid November 23, 1807, $959 20. Seizure made at Nantz.	The claimants know of no legal adjudication.	The sum claimed is the amount of expenses paid on $14,000, insured March, 1807, for James Latimer, to procure restoration of the property.
281. Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	May 11, 1812	Destruction	Brig Mary	Loss paid August 15, 1812, $5,880. Place of destruction not stated.	No legal adjudication ...	The claimants insured $6,000 for Lewis Clapier on goods from Havana to Smyrna. The brig was captured May 14, 1812, by two French frigates, the Ariadne, Commodore Forrester, and L'Andromache, Captain Maurice, and corvette Mamaluke, Galbert, who plundered the most valuable part of the cargo and scuttled and sunk the vessel.
282. William R. Gray, of Boston.	....do	Jan. 28, 1808	Capture	Ship Grace, Linzee master.	50 bales India goods ... $10,397 69 Expenses ... 565 88 10,963 57	Condemned by Imperial Council of Prizes, at Paris, July 6, 1808.	The Grace was captured by the privateer Cosmopolite. The goods were shipped by claimant at Boston, November, 1807, for Leghorn, and carried to Porto Ferrajo, in Elba, January 28, 1808.
283. William R. Gray, of Boston.	....do	February, 1810.	Confiscation	Ship Hawk, Brown master.	Capture made off Porto Ferrajo. $4,100. Confiscation took place at Port Passage ...	No legal adjudication ...	The ship Hawk arrived at Port Passage February 5, 1810. Soon after she was confiscated by French authority. Claimant insured for Dominick Lynch and Robert Kearney, of New York. Total loss paid.
284. William R. Gray ...	....do	January 7, 1810.	Confiscation.	Schooner Perseverance, Misseny master.	$500. Confiscation took place at Bilboa ...	No legal adjudication ...	Insured for Haskell and Messeny, by Peter Lander, at Salem, agent for the claimant. Total loss paid.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
285. William R. Gray ...	France	1810.....	Capture	Brig Eliza, Macey master.	Loss paid, including premium of insurance. $1,500 00 Expenses..... 40 00 Amount, &c..... 1,540 00	There seems to be no legal adjudication.	Insured for John C. Jones, $3,000.
286. William R. Gray ...	....do	March, 1809...	Capture	Brig Carolina, Drew master.	Capture made at St. Sebastian. ..... $1,500 00 Premium ..... 300 00 Amount, &c..... 1,800 00	There seems to be no legal adjudication.	The Carolina, bound from Boston to Sicily, was captured by a French privateer and carried to Naples. One-half of the cargo was given for the release of the residue.
287. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1810.....	Detention	Ship Arrow.....	Place of capture not stated. $6,854. Detention and loss took place in France....	No adjudication appears.....	Compromised with the captors.
288. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1810.....	Detention	Brig Caroline	$5,500. Detention and loss took place in France....	No adjudication appears.....	Compromised with the captors.
289. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1809.....	Capture and burning.....	Ship Henrietta.....	$10,000. Place of capture not stated.....	No adjudication.....	The ship Henrietta, on her voyage from Liverpool to the United States, was burnt at sea by a French vessel-of-war.
290. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1810.....	Capture	Ship Mary.....	$2,713 48. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication.....	The ship Mary was captured by the French and recaptured by the English.
291. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1810.....	Seizure.....	Brig Ocean	$3,000. Seizure made at St. John de Luz.....	No adjudication appears.....	This vessel was seized by the French at the port of St. John de Luz, where she was driven by stress of weather, and carried to St. Sebastian.
292. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1810.....	Capture	Schooner Hope	$3,400. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned, but the time and place not stated.	None.
293. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1810.....	Capture	Ship Franklin.....	$1,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned; time and place not stated.	None.
294. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1810.....	Seizure.....	Schooner Morning Star.	$3,000. Seizure made at Civita Vecchia.....	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was seized by the French and confiscated.
295. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1810.....	Capture and condemnation	Brig Olive Branch..	$7,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Not stated.....	None.
296. Charles Bradbury, &c.	....do	1811.....	Capture	Schooner Friendship	$7,000. Place of capture not stated.....	No adjudication.....	This schooner was captured by the French and recaptured by the English. In consequence of her capture, a total loss was the result.
297. Charles Bradbury, for self and others.	....do	1810.....	Capture	Ship Triumphant ..	$260 70. Place of capture not stated.....	No adjudication.....	The Triumphant was captured by the French and recaptured by the English.
298. Charles Bradbury, for self and others.	....do	1810.....	Robbery.....	Schooner Trim	$2,178 80. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication.....	The schooner Trim was robbed at sea by a French privateer.
299. Charles Bradbury, for self and others.	....do	1809.....	Capture.	Ship Weymouth....	$552 51. Place of capture not stated.....	No adjudication.....	The ship Weymouth was captured by the French and recaptured by the English.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
300. Maryland Insurance Comp'y, assignees of Thos. Tenant.	France	May, 1809	Capture	Schr. Little John, Hinton master.	Cargo $26,000 00 Vessel 10,000 00 Amount, &c 36,000 00 Capture made between the islands of Cerigo and Milo.	Condemned by Jean Baptiste Fonnelly, French Consul at Navarino, in the Morea, on the 9th of June, 1809; whether by legal adjudication does not appear.	The protest states the schooner sailed from Baltimore April 14, 1809, bound for Smyrna, and was captured the 29th of May following, between the islands of Cerigo and Milo, by the French privateer Ulysses, Captain Carnagle, and carried the same day into Cerigo. On the next day sailed in company with the privateer and two other prizes, and on the 5th of June the privateer's captain, with the French Consul, opened the papers of the Little John, and after examining them took them ashore. The captain and crew were kept on board without any communication with the shore until the 18th. On the 19th condemnation was handed to Captain Hinton, dated the 9th of June, although the papers of the Little John were never opened until the 17th.
301. Maryland Insurance Comp'y, assignees of Lemuel Taylor.	France or Denmark.	August, 1810	Capture	Ship Ploughboy, Wilkins master.	Cargo, $30,000. Capture made near the island of Sylt.	Condemned at Paris, the 9th of January, 1811.	The ship Ploughboy was captured by an open French boat called La Reciprocite, commanded by Captain Masse, from Dunkirk, near the island of Sylt, in Denmark. Every exertion was made in Paris to defend the property by I. R. Wilmer, the supercargo, and others employed by him. Mr. Russel, Chargé d'Affaires, was apprised of the capture, &c., as also Mr. Barlow, minister, who, the claimants believe, communicated the circumstance to the State Department in March, 1811, or thereabouts. The papers and documents are in Paris, (where she was condemned and the condemnation confirmed by the Emperor,) probably in the hands of Mr. Luke Callaghan or Mr. Le La Grange, who was employed as counsellor for the owner of the Ploughboy. She sailed from Baltimore in June, 1810, for the port of Sylt, in Denmark.
302. Maryland Insurance Comp'y, assignees of C. F. Kalkman.	France	August or September, 1810.	Capture or seizure.	Schooner Ant, Parrish master.	Vessel $8,000 00 Cargo 10,100 00 Amount, &c 18,100 00 Seizure made near Sylt.	Condemned at Paris, January 9, 1811.	The Ant sailed from Baltimore in August, 1810, for Sylt, as the protest states. When lying off and on a boat came out of the harbor; when within two and a half miles off the shore the Ant was fired on and taken forcible possession of, and carried into Sylt by a French privateer, called La Reciprocite, Captain Masse. The captain and crew of the Ant were transported to Hussum, where, after a detention of some days, they were set at liberty, and then entered a protest. It is conjectured the condemnation took place at Paris.
303. Maryland Insurance Comp'y, assignees of Samuel Sterett, for G. Rossier and Roulet and others.	....do.....	March 30, 1810	Capture	Ship Whampoa....	Cargo $14,240 00 Freight 22,000 00 36,240 00 Place of capture not stated.	Condemnation by the Imperial Council of Prizes, at Paris, in November, 1810.	This ship sailed from New York for Tonningen in March, 1810, and was captured by the French privateers L'Hebe, Le Santour, &c., on March 30, 1810, and carried into Niewe Diep. The protest was made at the Helder the 6th of April, 1810. The cargo, as appears by a letter from W. & I. Willink, of Amsterdam, was sold at Antwerp about the middle of November, 1810. Mr. McIvers, one of the owners of the ship and cargo, being in Europe at the time of the capture, used every exertion to prevent condemnation and to get the property restored, but to no effect.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
304. Maryland Insurance Comp'y, assignees of Henry Schroeder.	France	Jan. 24, 1808, or Dec. 8, 1810.	Capture	Ship Aurora	29 hogsheads of tobacco, insured in two policies, $2,170. Gross proceeds at Morlaix, 26,439 francs, equal, at 18¾ cents in France, to $4,957 30. Capture made off St. Malo.	Proceedings were had before the tribunal at Morlaix and the Commissioners of Prizes at Brest. Condemnation at Paris June 8, 1808; and final condemnation, by the Emperor, December, 1810.	The ship Aurora left Baltimore for Amsterdam December 14, 1807. On the 21st January, 1808, she was boarded by the British sloop-of-war Rose, who put an officer on board with orders to carry her to Plymouth. On the 24th January, 1808, she was taken by the French privateer L'Incomparable and carried to Morlaix. The ship and cargo were there sold in September or October, 1808, and produced, gross, 585,303.83 francs.
305. Lynde Walter	....do	March, 1810 ...	Capture	Schr. Sally, Hollingsworth master.	Vessel and freight ..... $5,066 00 15 bags pepper, 1,200 pounds ..... 320 00 350 quintals of codfish of claimant and T. B. Wales & Co., each one-half .... 4,200 00 For Bixbly, Valentine & Co., and others, codfish ..... 8,016 00 Loss on property insured by John C. Jones and E. Hance, for T. B. Wales & Co., at 25 per cent. to be deducted from the amount claimed by claimant and T. B. Wales ..... 800 00 Amount, &c ..... 18,408 00 Capture made off Liquito.	No legal adjudication	The Sally sailed from Boston on or about February 6, 1810; arrived at Lequito, a fishing town about thirty miles to the westward of St. Sebastian. She was boarded by a fishing boat, which took possession of her and carried her in. Some days after an officer and French soldiers, from Bilboa, came on board her and carried her to St. Sebastian. She was thence carried to Bayonne, where, on the 10th of April, the cargo was discharged, and the vessel stripped and hauled up under the control of the custom-house. Finally, the Government proceeded to make sales on the 1st of August, the whole proceeds of which were placed in the French Emperor's chest of amortissement, and lost to the claimants. The claimant states that he claims for himself, as administrator of John Hollingsworth.
306. Maryland Insurance Comp'y, assignees of John Barney. Mem. This claim is also made by John Barney, but for the sum of $10,000. (See No. 396.)	....do	Dec., 1809	Capture	Schooner Hawk ...	$8,000. Capture made near St. Sebastian	No adjudication	The schooner Hawk sailed from Baltimore in October, 1809, for St. Sebastian, in Spain. When off that port, and very near it, she was boarded by some French privateers, or boats, carried into that port, and finally lost to the owners.
307. Robert Lenox and Archibald Gracie.	....do	Not stated	Condemnation	Ship Port Mary	$20,000. The place of loss not stated	Condemnation. Date not stated.	The agent for the claimant refers to papers on the Florida treaty, Nos. 1 to 8, filed in the Department of State.
308. Marblehead Social Insurance Company.	....do	Dec. 28, 1809..	Seizure	Schr. Two Sons ...	$2,000. Seizure made at Bilboa	No legal adjudication	The schooner Two Sons was sequestered by the Emperor Napoleon. The amount claimed was paid to J. Lindsay, the insured.
309. Marblehead Social Insurance Company.	....do	Dec., 1809....	Capture	Schooner Joseph...	$4,000. Capture made off Bilboa	Supposed to have been condemned at Paris in 1810.	This vessel was captured by a French launch and carried into St. John de Luz. The amount claimed was paid to S. Stacey, N. Bartlett, and G. Burke, the nsured.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
310. Marblehead Social Insurance Company.	France	July 1, 1810	Capture	Schooner Eleanor	$4,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation at Seville, in Spain, by a French commission. Date not stated.	This vessel was captured by the French privateer L'Aigle and carried into St. Lucar. The amount claimed was paid to S. Horton and T. Williams, the insured.
311. Marblehead Social Insurance Company.	do	Feb. 22, 1811	Sinking	Schooner Endeavor	$150. Place of loss not stated	No adjudication	This schooner was plundered and sunk at sea by the French frigates Renomme, Nereide, and Clorinde. The amount claimed was paid to J. Tucker, the insured.
312. Representatives of the late John Bell, of Petersburg, Va.	do	1809	Capture	Ship Susan	$9,450. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Calais. Date not stated.	This vessel was carried into Calais, in France, and condemned.
313. John B. Murray	do	1807	Seizure	Ship Victory, Caleb Hopkins master.	$52,849 90, with interest from 1st July, 1808, till paid. Seizure made at Cherbourg.		The ship Victory, bound for Cherbourg, with 896 bags of India sugar, and consigned to Messrs. V. Homberg Freres & Co., merchants at Havre, for account of claimant and another house in New York, was taken by an English privateer and conducted to anchor off the port of Plymouth, in England, but in a very short time was liberated and allowed to proceed to her original port, where she arrived and was duly entered at the custom-house. After landing a small part of the lading, the ship, with all the cargo, was seized by the officers of Government, tried and condemned for having been in the hands of the British, and on the 27th of June, 1808, were sold at public auction, when the 896 bags of sugar, net export weight of which was cwt. 1,438 0 20, equal to 73,100 kilogrammes, brought at various prices equal to an average of 420 francs per 100 killogrammes, being ..... frs. 299,710 00 From which deduct freight for bill of lading £287 12s. sterling, at 24 ..... frs. 6,903 00 Primage, 5 per cent ..... 345 00 Auction duties paid by the purchaser, 5 per cent. ad valorem ..... 15,000 00 22,248 00 Leaving net proceeds ..... 277,462 00 Which 277,462 francs, at 5.25 per dollar, is $52,849 90
314. Henry Prince and Thomas Haskell, of Salem.	do	Jan. 2, 1810	Seizure	Schooner Perseverance.	$17,603 25. Seizure made at Bilboa	No legal adjudication	In the year 1809 the claimants were joint owners with Mark Messewy, of Marblehead, of the said schooner. The cargo, consisting of fish, was also owned by the claimants, as follows: half by Prince, quarter by Haskell, and one-quarter by Messewy. The schooner sailed from Salem 15th November, 1809, bound to Bilboa, in the Kingdom of Spain, where she arrived on the 24th December, and took preparatory measures for discharging her cargo, having requested license therefor from the proper authorities. On the 2d of January, 1810, the schooner and cargo were seized and sequestered, by order, in that city, in consequence whereof the schooner and cargo were wholly lost.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
315. Thomas Tenant and Roswell Colt, trustees of Lemuel Taylor.	France	Not stated	Bills protested		226,892 francs, at 18¾ cents per franc, equal to $42,542 25.		This claim is for bills drawn by the Colonial Prefect of St. Domingo on the Paymaster General of Marines at Paris, and protested.
316. Thomas Tenant and Roswell Colt, trustees of Lemuel Taylor.	do	1809	Capture	Brig Ohio	$50,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication	The amount claimed is for three-fifths of the brig captured, in 1809, by a French privateer, carried into a port near Tunis, and property taken without condemnation.
317. Thomas Tenant and Roswell Colt, trustees of Lemuel Taylor.	do	January, 1810	Seizure	Brig Two Friends	Sales of the cargo, 495,000 francs, equal, at 18¾ cents per franc, to $92,812 50 Value of vessel 10,000 00 Amount 102,812 50 Seizure at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication	The cargo of this brig was seized by the French at Amsterdam, January, 1810, and taken by the French authorities, in conformity to the treaty signed between France and Holland, at Paris, 16th March, 1810.
318. Thomas Tenant and Roswell Colt, trustees of Lemuel Taylor.	do	1810	Capture	Ship Ploughboy	$250,000. See last column	Condemnation at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel was bound for Tonningen in 1810. She was captured near Sylt by a small French privateer, sent into Husem, and claimed for owners by the Danish Government, but finally condemned at Paris. The claim is for seven-eighths of the ship, worth $20,000, and nine-tenths of the cargo, sold for upwards of $250,000.
319. Thomas Tenant and Roswell Colt, trustees of Lemuel Taylor.	do	1810	Seizure	Schooner Fawn and schooner Postboy.	The estimated value of the schooner Fawn and two cargoes is $50,000 00 Claimant's interest in the schooner Postboy is 7,000 00 Amount of loss, &c. 57,000 00 Seizure made at St. Sebastian.	Not stated	The schooner Fawn, and her two cargoes, and the schooner Postboy, were seized under the decree of 23d of March, 1810.
320. Thomas Tenant and Roswell Colt, trustees of Lemuel Taylor.	do	Not stated	Seizure	Schooner Kite	$10,000. Seizure made at Naples	Condemnation at Naples. Date not stated.	This vessel was seized at Naples and condemned. The amount claimed is the claimant's interest, being one-third, in the schooner.
321. James Cook	do	Dec. 28, 1809	Confiscation	Schooner Hette	Amount of invoice and insurance $1,963 27 Amount of sales at St. Sebastian and Bayonne 5,476 80 Confiscation at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication	Papers, protests, &c., with heirs of William Gray, James Cook, and others, and copies with the Secretary of the Commissioners under the Florida treaty.
322. James Cook	do	Not stated	Confiscation	Little Dromo	Amount of invoice and insurance, $500. Confiscation at Marseilles.	No legal adjudication	Papers, protests, &c., with Leonard Kimball or his attorney. The claim is for insurance by George Nickolls, assigned by him to claimant.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
323. James Cook.....	France.....	March 16, 1810	Sequestration.....	Franklin	Amount of invoice and insurance, $2,000. Sequestration at St. Sebastian and Bayonne.	No legal adjudication.....	Account of sales in the hands of Lemuel Pope, of Boston. This amount is for a policy effected by Joshua Goodale for Richards & Jones and Judah Hays, and is included in their shipment. James Cook is attorney for said Goodale.
324. James Silver and others, of Salem.	....do.....	November, 1805	Capture	Schooner Good Intent.	Value of vessel..... $5,000 00 Value of cargo..... 15,000 00 20,000 00 Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication.....	The Good Intent sailed from Salem to St Thomas, in the West Indies, thence touched off Laguayra, and was not permitted to enter that port. She sailed thence for St. Jago, and was captured on her passage by a French privateer and carried into St. Jago de Cuba. The privateer took sole possession of vessel and cargo and turned adrift the captain and crew. The property American.
325. Jeremiah Briggs, for self and others.	....do.....	April 6, 1810...	Capture	Brig Welcome Return.	Value of vessel on her departure from Salem..... $9,500 00 Cargo in specie ..... 500 00 Expenses in Bourbon and Salem..... 3,137 00 13,137 00 Capture made at Mingen.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Welcome Return, Abner Briggs master, sailed from Salem the — day of October, 1809, for Mingen, a native port on the west coast of Sumatra, and arrived at the said port on the 6th of April following. After she had been about two hours at anchor a French privateer, the Lottery, from the Isle of France, boarded her and carried her to St. Paul's, in the Isle of Bourbon, where she arrived on the 7th of June following, and was sequestered. The island afterwards, or during the time the property remained in that state, was taken by the British, by which means the property was wholly lost to the owners.
326. Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	Feb. 4, 1805 ...	Capture	Brig Fame.....	$1,000. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication at St. Jago de Cuba. Date not stated.	Captured at sea by the French privateer Union.
327. Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	April 4, 1805...	Capture	Schooner Tickler..	$14,545. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication at St. Jago de Cuba. Date not stated.	Captured at sea by two French privateers.
328. Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	April 11, 1805..	Capture	Schooner Anna....	$7,100. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication at Porto Rico. Date not stated.	This schooner was captured at sea by the French privateer Mosquito.
329. Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	June 19, 1805..	Capture	Schooner Imperial.	$6,000. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication at Guadaloupe. Date not stated.	Captured at sea by the French privateer Matilsa.
330. Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	July 14, 1805...	Capture	Schooner Republican.	$8,000. Place of capture not stated	Adjudication at St. Jago de Cuba. Date not stated.	Captured by the French privateer Reynard.
331. Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	Aug. 29, 1805 ..	Capture	Schr. St. Michael..	13,749. Place of capture not stated.....	Not stated.....	Captured by two French privateers and recaptured by the British.
332. Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	Aug. 4, 1805 ...	Capture	Schooner Satellite .	$8,375. Place of capture not stated.....	Adjudicated at Baracoa. Date not stated.	Captured by a French privateer.
333. Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	Dec. 22, 1805 ..	Capture	Brig Luna.....	$800. Place of capture not stated.....	Adjudicated at Sesal bay, Campeachy.	Captured by a French privateer.
334. Marine Insurance Company.	....do.....	1805.....	Capture	Schooner Mary	$800. Place of capture not stated.....	Adjudicated at Guadaloupe. Date not stated.	Captured by a French privateer.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
335. Marine Insurance Company.	France	1805.....	Capture	Ship Ardent.....	$2,500. Place of capture not stated.....	Not stated	Captured by the French and recaptured by the British.
336. Claimant's name not stated, George Hutchinson agent.	....do.....	About 1810.....	Seizure.....	Not named.....	$40,000. Place of seizure not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	About the year 1810 a vessel was chartered and loaded in Baltimore for a French port, with 300 bags of coffee and 400 boxes of Havana sugar. The premium was paid for insurance against the seas and captures thereon, at the rate of 40 per cent. She was seized in port, under some pretext, under the Berlin and Milan decrees.
337. Asa Clapp and Richard Cobb, administrator of Matthew Cobb.	....do.....	1810.....	Seizure.....	Ship North America	732 bales cotton, 279 tierces rice, 61½ do., 116 cases Havana sugar ..... $185,620 50 Detention of the ship two months, for wages, charter, and provisions..... 3,000 00 188,620 50 Interest on this sum from April 9, 1807, to October 9, 1826, 19¼ years, at 6 per cent..... 220,685 98 409,306 48 Seizure made at Antwerp.	No legal adjudication.....	The ship North America, 354 tons burden, John Dean master, laden at Savannah, in the State of Georgia, in January, 1807, sailed from that port, for Antwerp, on the 3d day of the following February, and arrived in safety at her port of destination on the 9th day of April, 1807, consigned to Messrs. J. Ridgway, Merten & Co., merchants. The officers of the custom-house declined entering the ship without a special license from the Minister of Marine at Paris. After the ship had been detained some time for the license, the cargo was landed into the Government stores under a special promise of its being returned to the consignees. The cargo was detained about three years, and sold in 1810 by order of the Emperor of France. The ship and cargo were furnished with the necessary papers to prove the neutrality and originality of the vessel and cargo. They were not libelled. They belonged to Asa Clapp and the late Matthew Cobb.
338. Heirs of Butler Fogerty.	....do.....	Jan. 4, 1810....	Capture	Schr. Britannia, Nathan'l Bunker master.	Value at St. Andero, $24,966 25. Capture made off St. Andero.	No legal adjudication appears....	The vessel was chartered, and the cargo was on account of B. Fogerty. She was captured by a launch, manned by a French officer and soldiers. She was confiscated and sold by the French Government January, 1810. The cost of the property in the United States was about $9,312 90.
339. Heirs of Butler Fogerty.	....do.....	Dec , 1809.....	Confiscation	Ship Wells, Z. G. Lamson master.	Value at St. Sebastian, $1,200 94. Seizure appears to have been made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears....	The property was confiscated and sold by a decree of the French Government at St. Sebastian, December, 1809. The cost of the property in the United States was $1,088 89.
340. Heirs of Butler Fogerty.	....do.....	Dec., 1809.....	Confiscation	Schooner Betsey, Thomas Holmes master.	Value of vessel and cargo supposed to be, at St. Sebastian, $16,532 87. Seizure appears to have been made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears....	The property was confiscated and sold by a decree of the Emperor of France, at St. Sebastian. The property was assigned by I. I. Knapp and Archelaus Rea to B. Fogerty. The cost of the vessel in the United States was $1,000, and that of the cargo, $4,500 36.
341. Heirs of Butler Fogerty.	....do.....	Dec., 1809.....	Confiscation	Schooner Hette, Z. Woodbury master.	Vessel and cargo supposed to be worth, at St. Sebastian, $14,327 07. Seizure appears to have been made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears....	The property was confiscated and sold, by order of the Emperor of France, at St. Sebastian, December, 1809. The property was assigned by I. I. Knapp and Archelaus Rea to the claimant. The cost of the vessel in the United States was $1,000, that of the cargo, $4,008.
342. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	....do.....	1805..	Capture	Brig Dyott, Sanford master.	$3,637 90. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at St. Domingo, 29th Firmaire, year 12.	This vessel was bound from New York to Hispaniola, and back. Insured for Elisha Kane & Co. She was captured by the French privateer L'Hirondelle.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
343. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	France	Not stated	Capture	Ship Nancy, Chew master.	Amount paid July 23, 1805, $5,569 25. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears	This vessel was bound from Port au Prince to Charleston. She was captured by the British frigate Desiree, recaptured by the French privateer Perseverante, and carried to St. Martin.
344. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Capture	Schooner Antelope, Moss master.	Amount paid May 4, 1805, $2,450. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears	The Antelope, bound from Gonaives for Philadelphia, was captured by a French privateer. Insured for Reed & Forde, November 19, 1804.
345. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Capture	Brig Lear, Sulger master.	Amount paid August 8, 1805 $490 00 Amount paid May 22, 1801 1,226 60 1,716 60 Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears	This vessel was insured for Jacob Sulger, from Philadelphia to Hispaniola, and back. On her return from Port de Paix she was captured and sent to Baracoa.
346. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Capture	Schooner Antelope and schooner Tickler.	Amount paid 19th July, 1806, $5,006 88. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears	Insured for James Latimer and Welling & Cureven, from Gonaives to a port in the United States. The vessels were captured by two French privateers the day they left Gonaives.
347. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Capture	Schooner Vigilant, Clark master.	Amount paid 14th June, 1805, $3,920. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears	Insured for William H. Blodges, from St. Mark's to New York. The schooner was captured by a French privateer and sent to Gonaives.
348. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Capture	Schooner Ariel, Jenks master.	Amount paid 6th September, 1806, $686. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears	Insured for Samuel Allen, from Cape François to Baltimore. The Ariel was captured by the French schooner Lionaise and carried to Samana.
349. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Capture	Schooner Three Brothers, White master.	Amount paid 24th November, 1806, $490. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears	Insured for John White, from Bermuda to Cape François and Philadelphia. She was captured by the French privateer Napoleon and the goods taken out at sea.
350. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Plunder	Brig Three Apprentices, Graves master.	Amount paid 24th December, 1806, $1,926 88	No legal adjudication appears	Insured for Fishbourn Wharton, from Jamaica to Havana and Philadelphia, 112 doubloons plundered at sea by French privateer Alexander, Dupey master, of Guadaloupe.
351. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Seizure	Brig Andrew, Coggins master.	Paid 16th June, 1810, $980. Insured for J. S. Duval, 16th December, 1809, on 100 bags pepper. Seizure made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears	The brig Andrew, bound from Philadelphia to St. Sebastian, was seized by the French and confiscated.
352. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Capture	Brig Cupid, Brewster master.	Paid Sept. 3, 1810, Smith & Wood $4,410 00 Paid June 23, 1810, Joseph Donath & Co. 3,024 73 Paid Aug. 18, 1810, John M. Soulleir 5,390 00 12,824 73 Capture made near St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears	The Cupid was bound from Philadelphia to St. Sebastian, was captured by a French privateer boat, Mareschal Moncey, and carried to St. Jean de Luz, and a compromise with the captors made for the sums of $1,695 90, $1,299 91, $1,520 23, amounting to $4,522 04.
353. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	do	Not stated	Seizure	Ship Hawk, Brown master.	Paid 16th June, 1810, $980. Insured for James S. Duval on 100 bags pepper. Seizure made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears	The ship Hawk was bound from Philadelphia to St. Sebastian, was seized by the French, and cargo sequestered.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
354. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	France.....	Not stated.....	Capture.....	Ship Charleston Packet, Johnson master.	Paid 8th January, 1811, $19,600. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at San Lucar. Date not stated.	Insured for M. & S. N. Lewis. Bound from Philadelphia to Cadiz. This vessel was captured by a French armed boat, carried into San Lucar and condemned.
355. Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	...do.....	1810.....	Capture..	Ship Charleston Packet, Johnson master.	$4,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears...	This ship, bound from Philadelphia to Cadiz, was captured by the French, carried into San Lucar, and the cargo taken by the French commissary there for the use of the army; papers sent to Paris.
356 Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do.....	1810.....	Capture.	Schr. Floret, Shearman master.	$6,300. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears...	The schooner Floret, bound from Baltimore to Cadiz, was captured by the French, carried into St. Lucar, and the cargo taken by the French commissary there for the use of the army; the papers were sent to Paris.
357. Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do.....	1807.....	Capture	Ship America, Proctor master.	$10,000. Capture made at Rotterdam.....	Condemned by the Council of Prizes. Date not stated.	The America, from Philadelphia to Rotterdam, was captured by the French.
358. George Barker	....do.....	Nov. 29, 1809..	Capture	Schooner Abigail...	Amount of invoice..... $14,495 88 Amount of vessel..... 4,000 00 Loss sustained..... 18,495 88 Sales of schooner and cargo amounted to 187,754.45 francs. Capture made about two miles from Bilboa bar.	Condemned at Paris 13th June, 1810.	The schooner Abigail, on her voyage from Marblehead for Spain, was captured by two French launches under Spanish colors, supposed to be Spanish pilots, and carried into France.
359. George Barker, administrator.	....do.....	Nov. 26, 1809...	Capture.....	Schooner Springbird.	Amount of invoice, $10,144 58. Sales of the schooner's cargo amounted to 138,062.65 francs. Capture made about two miles from Bilboa bar.	Not subject to legal adjudication.	This vessel, bound from Marblehead to St. Sebastian, was captured by two French launches and carried into France.
360. George Barker, administrator.	....do.....	Dec., 1809.....	Confiscation.....	Schooner Two Sons	$303 60, amount of loss sustained. See last column.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was confiscated by the French, at Bilboa, after the cargo was partly sold.
361. Hannah Bartlett, administratrix.	....do.....	Dec., 1809.....	Capture...	Schooner Joseph...	Amount of invoice..... $14,059 55 Value of vessel..... 2,500 00 Loss sustained..... 16,559 55 Place of capture not stated.	Subjected to legal adjudication at Paris, 1810.	This vessel, bound from Marblehead to Spain, was captured by a French launch and carried into France. She had been into St. Antonio, and obtained a pass for Bilboa from the French general commanding there.
362. Baltimore Insurance Company.	....do.....	Dec. 7, 1807....	Seizure..	Ship Juniata.....	$30,180 84. Seizure made at Hamburg.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The ship Juniata, Joshua Mezick master, entered the river Elbe on the 5th December, 1807. On the 7th, a pilot, with a guard of French marines, came on board from Cuxhaven, immediately took charge of the ship, her papers, and letter bag, cut the hawser, and ran the ship into Cuxhaven, where two French douaniers came on board, who declared the ship and cargo were confiscated, and ordered the ship to Hamburg, where she arrived on the 13th of the same month. On the 14th, the French ordered Captain Mezick out of the ship. On

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
362. Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	the 19th, a French officer came on board with laborers, broke open hatches, and commenced discharging the cargo, which they completed on the 27th. On the 28th, Captain Mezick and his crew were examined by the director of the douaniers, who then told Captain Mezick he had nothing more against the ship, but that she was still under sequestration, like the rest of the American ships. The ship sailed from Baltimore on the 7th October, 1807, laden with sugar, coffee, tea, tobacco, tobacco stems, and fustic, bound to Tonningen. $30,180 84 is the amount actually paid by the company, without interest or damages. Cargo condemned in January, 1808, by a special decree of the Emperor of France. Ship released November 18, 1808.
363. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	Jan. 24, 1808...	Capture.....	Ship Aurora	$17,140. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned by the Council of Prizes, at Paris, June 8, 1808. Appeal to the Emperor in his Council of State, by whom it was finally condemned, December 8, 1810, under the Milan decree, although it is dated the 17th December, 1810, and the ship left Baltimore the 14th of the same month.	The ship Aurora, Captain Levin Dashiell, laden with a cargo of tobacco and cotton, left Baltimore on the 14th of December, 1807, bound to Amsterdam. On the 21st January, 1808, was boarded by a boat from a British sloop-of-war called "Rose," Captain Pisson, who put an officer on board, and ordered her to Plymouth. On the 24th of the same month she was boarded from the French privateer La Incomparable, who took possession of her and conducted her to Morlaix, where she arrived next day. That part of the ship and cargo insured and paid for by the Baltimore Insurance Company sold for 152,374.91 francs, according to the sales now in its possession.
364. Baltimore Insurance Company.	....do.....	Jan. 31, 1812...	Capture.....	Brig Pallas.....	$26,410. Place o capture not stated.....	It is said judicial proceedings were had in this case. If there were, the claimants have been unable to procure them.	The brig Pallas, Captain Holbrook, sailed from Baltimore on December 12, 1811, bound to Cadiz, laden with a cargo of flour. On the 31st of January following, was captured by three French privateers, who carried her into the port of St. Lucar, where she arrived at 5 o'clock p. m. of the same day. The crew were immediately landed and marched as prisoners, under a French guard of soldiers, to the castle. The French army then there proceeded in their usual summary way, seized upon the entire property, saying that they would hold its value at the disposal of the captors, or whom it might belong to.
365. Baltimore Insurance Company.	....do	Jan. 10, 1813...	Destruction of property at sea.	Ship Fair American.	$5,319 92. Destruction took place about latitude 35° 20′.	Not subjected to legal adjudication.	The ship Fair American, of Baltimore, George Hobson master, laden with a cargo of flour and corn, sailed from Baltimore on the 20th December, 1812, bound to Cadiz. On the 10th January, 1813, in latitude 35° 20′, at 6 o'clock p. m., was boarded by a boat from the French frigate La Gloire, Albin Roussein commander, on a cruise. Captain Hobson and all his crew, except the first mate, steward and cook, were taken on board the frigate. At 7 o'clock next morning the commander of the frigate hailed the Fair American, and ordered the prizemaster to get everything in readiness for scuttling and

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
365.—Continued	.....	.....	....	.....	.....	.....	sinking her. He immediately commenced his operations by cutting loose and throwing overboard everything on deck, including boats. By meridian the decks were completely cleared. The captors threw into the sea the cables, hawsers, &c., and forty bags of corn, and commenced cutting away the ceiling in the steerage for the purpose of sinking the ship. On the 12th, at 10 a. m., a lieutenant was sent on board, with Captain Hobson and his crew, with verbal orders to the prizemaster not to scuttle the ship, but to throw overboard all the cargo, except 1,100 or 1,150 barrels of flour, which was left for ballast. As soon as this order was executed Captain Hobson resumed the command of his ship. Prior to Captain Hobson's quitting, Albin Roussein, her commander, required a ransom of $15,000, or £3,625 sterling, for which amount Captain Hobson drew bills of exchange, in favor of Commodore Roussein, on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., of London. Captain Hobson arrived at Cadiz, and immediately wrote to London to countermand the payment of the bills. The sum claimed as above is the amount paid without interest.
366. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	Sept. 7, 1807...	Capture	Brig Joseph, Murphy master.	$5,208 50. Place of capture not stated.....	Not known	The brig Joseph, of Baltimore, Captain John Murphy, laden with a cargo of flour, bound to the island of Jamaica, was captured on the 2d September, 1807, by a French privateer, and sent into the port of St. Jago, in the island of Cuba, where the captors appropriated the property to their own use.
367. Samuel Keith, of Philadelphia.	....do	1810.....	Capture	Brig Julian	14 bales of cotton, invoice $1,158. See last column..	Condemnation by the French. See last column.	The goods were shipped by claimant 28th May, 1810. The brig was bound from Philadelphia to Gottenburg and another port. She was captured by the French, sent into Dantzic, and condemned by the French.
368. Delaware Insurance Company.	....do	Dec. 7, 1807...	Sequestration	Ship Juniatta, Messick master.	45 hogsheads of tobacco, valued at $3,000. Place of sequestration not stated.	Not stated	Insured by J. Sperry, October 19, 1807, for John Sperry, from Baltimore to Tonningen. The ship was captured by a guard of French marines and carried to Cuxhaven, and thence to Hamburg, where the cargo was forcibly taken out by the officers of the French Douane. The property of the claimants was sequestered by the French Emperor.
369. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	Dec. 31, 1807...	Capture	Ship James Adams, Bangs master.	$14,149 92. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes July 13, 1808.	Vessel insured by Adams & Loughersy, for selves and James Cooper, jr., November 6, 1807. She was captured by the French privateer La Sauvage and sent to Dunkirk. The claim appears to be for the value of the vessel.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
370. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	France	Oct. 22, 1807...	Seizure	Ship Julius Henry, Woodside master.	$15,606 77. Seizure at Cuxhaven.....	Condemnation under the Milan decree. Date not stated.	Insured by B. and J. Bohlen, August 22, 1807, for Smith & Buchanan, and C. F. Kalkman, of Baltimore, from that port to Hamburg, with liberty of Tonningen. Seized at Cuxhaven, by order of the French Emperor, by custom-house officers; carried by French officers to Hamburg, where part of the cargo was sold, and the remainder sent to France.
371. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	Aug. 2, 1809...	Capture	Brig Resort, Burke master.	Coffee; paid $11,384. Place of capture not stated....	Condemnation by Court of Prizes February 7, 1810.	Insured by B. and J. Bohlen, August 22, 1807, for H. C. Duerhagen June 20, 1809, from New York to Bremen or Amsterdam. Captured by the French privateer Hebe, Captain Jolie, and taken into the Texel, and carried by French privateer Tilsit to Amsterdam.
372. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	1810.....	Capture	Brig Julian, Abbott master.	Nankeens; paid $3,920. Place of capture not stated..	Condemnation by the French. Time and place not stated.	Insured May 31, 1810, by G. and H. Colham, Philadelphia to Gottenburg and another port. Captured by the French and sent into Dantzic.
373. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	Dec. 19, 1807...	Capture	Brig Rising Sun, Burt master.	30 casks of coffee; paid $6,020 15. Place of capture not stated.	Condemnation at Paris, June 8, 1808, under Milan and Berlin decrees.	Insured September 14, 1807, from Philadelphia to Tonningen, for B. and J. Bohlen. The brig was captured by a French cruiser and sent to Amsterdam.
374. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	June 21, 1806..	Spoliation	Schooner Caroline, Hand master.	Goods taken; paid $2,113 59. Place of loss not stated.	No proceedings	Insured by John McCara, from Alexandria to port of Spain, Trinidad, and back, May 17, 1806. The vessel was detained and goods taken out at sea for supplies by two French ships-of-the-line, Patriot and Castor.
375. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	May 22, 1809...	Capture	Schooner Bald Eagle, Hamilton master.	Goods; paid $11,760. Place of capture not stated ..	Condemnation under Berlin and Milan decrees.	Insured by G. Harrison, April 1, 1809, from New York to Palermo, in Sicily. This vessel was captured by the French privateer L'Constant, Captain Serra, and sent to Bizenta, in Tunis.
376. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	1806.....	Capture	Ship Stranger, Robinson master.	Goods; paid $5,140 42. Place of capture not stated.	Not stated.....	Insured by Savage & Dugan, August 23, 1806, from Philadelphia to Jamaica, Havana, and Philadelphia. This vessel was captured and sent into St. Domingo, and released with heavy expenses.
377. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	July 25, 1809...	Capture	Brig Jane Maria, Eldridge master.	Paid loss on vessel and goods, $4,900. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication appears.....	Insured by Wm. Dilworth for J. G. Gottsberger, from New York to Trieste, with liberty to call on way. The brig was captured by the French privateer La Fortune, Captain Marco Anthony Bartolimi, sent to Bona, in Barbary, cargo taken out, and vessel released.
378. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	Feb. 16, 1806. .	Capture	Snow Comet, Diamond master.	Paid $9,037 94. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication appears.....	Insured by John Craig, November 4, 1805, from Baltimore to Laguayra, and back. This vessel was captured by the French and recaptured by the British.
379. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	....do	1807.....	Capture	Ship Three Sisters, Juabson master.	Cargo sold to pay expenses of recapture; paid $1,843 90. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication appears.....	Insured by Joseph Lea, February 20, 1807, from Philadelphia to St. Bartholomew and St. Thomas. This vessel was captured by the French privateer brig Du Quesne, and recaptured by the British ship Euthalion and sent into Barbadoes.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.		Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
380. Pickering Dodge ...	France	November, 1811	Capture and burning	Brig Three Friends, Lefavour master.	.....	$19,965 09	No adjudication.....	The brig Three Friends sailed from Salem in October, 1811. She was captured and burnt at sea the 15th of November, 1811, by the French frigates Meduse and Nymphe. The amount of claim for the brig is $4,000, and for the goods belonging to the claimants, the invoice cost and charges.
Edward Stanley....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,250 00
Nathan Cook	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	860 00
Humphrey Devereux	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,772 00
William Proctor...	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,680 00
Endicott & Andrews	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,000 00
H. Pickering.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	4,380 00
Jonathan Gardner..	.....	.....	.....	.....	..... vessel,	4,000 00
					..... goods,	211 25
P. Dodge, for Thos. Lefavour.	.....	.....	.....	.....	..... goods,	336 00
					Amount	38,454 34
					Capture and burning took place lat. 7° 58′ N., long. 25° 20′ W.
381—384. Jonathan Neal and Gam'l Hodges.	France	December, 1807	Seizure, and subsequent condemnation of vessel and cargo.	Hypsia & Jane.....	Value of vessel on sailing, per policy of insurance.....	$4,500 00	Vessel and cargo condemned by the Council of Prizes, at Paris, in November or Decem'r, 1810.	The amount of the claim for the Hypsia & Jane is $4,500, and for the goods on board her, belonging to the undersigned, the sum at which they were bonded, and which sum was paid to the French Government by their agents, J. L. Brown & Co., Bourdeaux, in December, 1810, amounting, as per schedule, to 273,689.72 francs. The Hypsia & Jane sailed from Salem, October 28, 1807, for Bourdeaux; off which port, on the 3d of December, she was boarded by a British squadron and ordered not to enter any port in France, and her papers were endorsed to that effect; but, being in want of water, the captain succeeded in getting into Bayonne, where he arrived the 5th of December, 1807, entered regularly, landed his cargo in entrepot, and was preparing to return to the United States, when, in December, 1807, or January, 1808, the vessel and cargo were sequestered under the decree of the Emperor of December 21, 1807, which directed the seizure of all vessels spoken by British cruisers, although this decree was not issued till eighteen days after the Hypsia & Jane had been spoken, and sixteen days after her actual arrival in the port of Bayonne. The cargo was given up to the consignees on their giving the bonds mentioned in these cases; which bonds were paid, on the final condemnation of the vessel and cargo by the Council of Prizes, at Paris, in consequence of a special order of the Emperor (as is believed) that the decree of the 21st of December, 1807, should have a retroactive effect.
					Amount of bonds given, and paid on condemnation, for 17 hhds. brown sugar, the property of claimant, by J. L. Brown, of Bourdeaux..... frs.	16,926 00
Jonathan Neal.	....do	.....do	.....do.....do	.....do	Amount of bonds given, and paid on condemnation, for 1,050 bags pepper, 50 bales cotton, 10 bales frankincense, and 50 bales gum arabic.. frs.	172,052 60	.....do.....do
Moses Townsend.	....do	.....do	.....do.....do	.....do	Amount of bonds given, and paid as above, for 65 hhds. clayed sugar, 14 bbls. same, and 35 bags coffee.. frs.	65,149 70	.....do .....do.....
Edward Allen, J. J. Knapp, attorney.	.....	.....do	.....do.....do	.....do	Amount of bonds given, and paid as above, for 20 hhds. and 20 bbls. raw sugar ..... frs.	19,561 42	.....do .....do.....
					Amount of loss, &c., frs. 273,689 72, equal, at 18¾ cents a franc., to	$51,316 82
					Add value of vessel	4,500 00
					Total.....	55,816 82

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
385. Dutch & Deland ...	France, or Naples.	Dec. 8, 1809 ...	Seizure	Schooner Betsy, Holmes master.	Net proceeds of sales of whole stock in St. Sebastian belonging to claimants . $13,363 29 Received of insurers..... 5,000 00 8,363 29 Interest to December 31, 1826..... 8,028 75 Seizure made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears...	For one-half of the said schooner and effects on board, which vessel and effects, on the 28th day of December, 1809, were confiscated at St. Sebastian, under the decree of the King of the Two Sicilies of March 12, 1810, without lawful cause, and without default of the assured, master, or mariners of said schooner, but by the order of the Emperor of France, whereby the same became lost to the claimants.
386. Dutch & Deland ...	....do	December, 1809	Seizure	Ship Franklin, Hyatt master.	Net proceeds of sales and effects at St. Sebastian belonging to claimants..... $961 67 Interest to December 31, 1826..... 923 20 Seizure made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears...	Per policy dated February 14, 1810, and numbered 11, whereby said claimants assured to Richards & Jones and Judah Hayes five hundred dollars on effects on board of the ship Franklin, at and from Boston to one or more ports in the Bay of Biscay, with liberty to go to one or more ports in the North of Europe, the North and East of the Elbe, and until said effects should be safely landed. On the 27th of November, 1810, the assured abandoned to said claimants, and assigned for cause that the said ship, with said effects on board of her, at St. Sebastian were seized and confiscated without lawful cause, and without the default of the assured, or of the master or mariners, by the orders of the Emperor of France, whereby the said effects became lost to the assured. On the 22d of November, 1811, the claimants paid a total loss. The confiscation was made under the decree of the King of the Two Sicilies of March 12, 1810.
387. Social Insurance Comp'y of Salem.	France	Dec. 28, 1809 ..	Confiscation.....	Schooner Betsy....	Amount insured ..... $8,000 00 Sales..... 16,916 00 Loss sustained at St. Sebastian and Bayonne.	Not stated.....	Papers, protest, &c., with J. Cook and heirs of William Gray. Copies in the Department of State and with the Secretary of Commissioners under the Florida treaty. Dutch & Deland, &c., former owners.
388. Social Insurance Comp'y of Salem.	....do	March 10, 1810.	Sequestration.....	Franklin	Amount insured, $8,000. Sequestration made at St. Sebastian and Bayonne.	Not stated.....	Papers, protest, &c., with Lemuel Pope, J. Cook, &c. Amount sales with L. Pope. This amount included in Richards & Jones and in J. Hays' part of cargo. Richards & Jones, C. Putnam, Judah Hays, and T. C. Amory & Co., former owners.
389. Social Insurance Comp'y of Salem.	....do	Dec. 28, 1809 ...	Confiscation	Hitte	Amount insured, $1,500. Loss sustained at St. Sebastian and Bayonne.	Not stated.....	Papers, protest, &c., with heirs of W. Gray. Copies of this statement with Commissioners under the Florida treaty. Dutch & Deland former owners. This amount from J. J. Knapp & Rice.
390. Social Insurance Comp'y of Salem.	....do	Nov. 15, 1811 ..	Burning	Three Friends	Amount insured, $1,500. Burning took place 8° N. lat., 25° W. long.	No legal adjudication.....	Papers, protest, &c., with Pickering Dodge and others, owners of the cargo. This amount being part for Edward Stanley. Jonathan Gardner former owner.
391. Social Insurance Comp'y of Salem.	....do	April 6, 1810...	Capture and sequestration.	Welcome Return ..	Amount insured, $4,153 46. Capture made at Lebonajer, on the coast of Sumatra. The sequestration at Bourbon, June 6, 1810.	No legal adjudication.....	The Welcome Return was captured by a French privateer. Amount on vessel, $1,869 12, included in Jeremiah Briggs' claim. Amount on cargo, $2,284 34. Papers, protest, &c., with Js. Cook and others. Jeremiah Briggs and John Dodge, and Abner Briggs owners.

CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
392. Union Marine Insurance Company of Salem.	France	June 16, 1809..	Confiscation	Schooner Salem, Cheever master.	Insured for Robert Stone and Robert Stone, jr., $1,500 on vessel, and $3,500 on effects. $5,000 00 Insured for Nathaniel Silsbee, $1,500 on vessel, and $3,500 on effects..... 5,000 00 Amount, &c..... 10,000 00 Confiscation made at St. Sebastian.	Not stated	The claimants refer to documents in possession of the assured, whose claims they suppose may include the amount claimed by themselves.
393. Union Marine Insurance Company of Salem.	....do.....	October 18 and 27, 1809.	Confiscation.	Brig Welcome Return, Briggs master.	Insured for Jonathan Neal on effects.... $3,400 00 Insured for Jeremiah Briggs on vessel.. 3,600 00 Insured for Abner Briggs on effects..... 1,200 00 Amount, &c..... 8,200 00 Confiscation made at the Isle of France.	Not stated.	Same as in No. 392.
394. Robert and John Oliver, and Robert Gilmor and Sons.	....do.....	May, 1808	Seizure.....	Brig L'Eole.....	$95,407 60. Place of seizure not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	The brig L'Eole was bound to France; and being chased by the British into a port in Spain, she was seized, and vessel and cargo sold by the authorities then in power.
395. Barnabas Hedge....	....do.....	March, 1810	Sequestration.....	Brig Aurora, Bartlett master.	Value of vessel and cargo, $20,000..... Sequestration made at Civita Vecchia.	The claimant has been informed that the vessel and cargo were condemned at Paris. Date of condemnation is not stated.	The brig Aurora sailed from Plymouth, December, 1809, loaded with American codfish; cleared out for Cadiz and a market. The captain having liberty to go wherever he thought the cargo would do best, touched at Malaga, Alicante, and Tarragona, and proceeded to Civita Vecchia. As the vessel was entering the harbor at that place she was taken possession of by the French authorities, who took the papers from the captain and sent them to Paris. The brig and the cargo of fish were sold by the French Government.
396. John Barney. See No. 306.	....do.....	Jan. 6, 1810	Capture.....	Schooner Hawk, Goff master.	$10,000. Capture made off St. Sebastian.....	No legal adjudication.....	The schooner Hawk sailed from Baltimore in October, 1809, and, owing to stress of weather, put back to Philadelphia, whence she sailed in December, 1809, bound to St. Sebastian. She was captured by four Spanish launches or fishing boats and carried into Bermeo, in Spain, and there sequestered by the French authorities, and transported to Bayonne, in France, where the cargo was sold by an order of the Emperor, and the vessel taken into the French service without the form of a trial of either. The claimant states that the schooner Hawk was valued and insured in the Maryland Insurance Company, at $10,000; that the office refused, in consequence of no condemnation having taken place, to pay for her; that the policy was assigned to Messrs. Falls and Brown to guaranty certain advances; and that they are now to be considered the claimants in fact.

INDEX TO SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Baltimore Insurance Company	10	$19,174 96
Do do	11	18,000 00
Do do	12	12,000 00
Do do	13	15,000 00
Do do	14	2,000 00
Do do	15	1,000 00
Do do	16	8,000 00
Do do	17	9,348 20
Do do	18	6,975 49
Do do	19	1,480 00
Do do	20	17,000 00
Do do	21	6,056 25
Do do	22	20,000 00
Do do	23	6,000 00
Do do	24	16,000 00
Burbank, Abner, for self and others	145	15,000 00
Brand, David	159	360 00
Coster, Henry A. and John G	2	12,320 00
Clark & Co., John	8	13,134 91
Coffin, David, and another	27	8,650 00
Do do	32	31,000 00
Coffin, Samuel, and others	35	13,599 97
Cook, Zebedee	38	28,500 00
Chesapeake Insurance Company	88	7,480 00
Do do	89	3,000 00
Do do	90	14,000 00
Do do	91	10,000 00
Do do	93	6,900 00
Do do	64	16,000 00
Do do	95	2,100 00
Do do	96	6,350 00
Do do	97	15,400 00
Do do	98	11,000 00
Do do	99	1,500 00
Do do	100	300 00
Do do	101	9,600 00
Do do	102	15,000 00
Do do	103	8,696 00
Do do	104	10,000 00
Coxe, Daniel W	136 to 140	76,618 02
Duval, James S	3	7,625 52
Do	4	882 34
Do	5	972 58
Do	6	1,587 04
Delile, Francis, and others	33	6,175 39
Dutch, George	149	6,163 09
Delafield, executor of John, (see No. 107—110 on France)	65 to 68
Forrester, John	85	2,268 00
Felt, Ephraim	150	98 00
Goodline, Jacob	151	1,376 00
Hays, Samuel	1	16,302 80
Holmes, William	134	20,166 80
Homer, Benjamin P., treasurer, &c	141	3,000 00
Do do	142	10,000 00
Do do	143	2,677 00
Do do	144	3,296 00
Jefferds, William, and others	9	24,565 94
Jenkins, George	28	2,688 49
Do	29	872 47
Johnston, George, for himself and others	152	25,000 00
Kimball, James, and others	25	10,419 00
King, W	92	29,155 92
Lunt, Benjamin, and others	37	14,169 00
Laussat, A	82	19,033 71
Do	83	2,415 98
Do	84	6,246 00
Little, Alexander, and others	86	11,590 00
Lawrence, John, for self and others	158	8,472 34
Marine Insurance Company of New York	69	4,000 00
Marine Insurance Company of New York	70	$3,300 00
Do do	71	2,500 00
Do do	72	10,000 00
Do do	73	13,700 00
Do do	74	4,500 00
Do do	75	7,500 00
Do do	76	10,000 00
Do do	77	11,000 00
Do do	78	9,000 00
Do do	79	10,000 00
Do do	80	6,600 00
Do do	81	9,000 00
Mitchell, executor of Thomas	135	15,000 00
New York Firemen Insurance Company	105	2,900 00
Do do	106	3,909 00
Do do	107	12,000 00
Do do	108	1,000 00
Do do	109	4,500 00
Do do	110	4,500 00
Do do	111	1,024 80
Do do	112	11,641 54
Do do	113	20,224 40
Phœnix Insurance Company of New York	41	33,810 00
Do do	42	24,097 26
Do do	43	8,333 33
Do do	44	9,500 00
Do do	45	5,243 63
Do do	46	21,359 20
Do do	47	29,400 00
Do do	48	8,820 00
Do do	49	5,000 00
Do do	50	1,100 00
Do do	51	4,908 05
Do do	52	19,297 92
Do do	53	2,992 99
Do do	54	1,236 06
Do do	55	4,871 37
Do do	56	13,478 26
Do do	57	37,808 64
Do do	58	4,000 00
Do do	59	17,640 00
Do do	60	6,382 24
Do do	61	2,772 50
Do do	62	623 06
Do do	63	923 75
Philippe, Joseph	114	14,177 32
Place, John L., and others	132	33,833 40
Penniman, James	133	2,000 00
Pratt & Kinsing	146	8,009 24
Do	147	17,572 92
Do	148	30,173 71
Philadelphia Insurance Company	153	12,500 00
Do do	154	3,000 00
Rice, John, and another	87	19,500 00
Riley, James	156	6,946 80
Surasey & Rogers	36	8,996 81
Sursier, Joseph	39	3,462 60
Thomas, Thomas, and others	26	66,000 00
Toppan, Edward, and others	34	22,724 89
Tenney, Samuel, and others	40	3,000 00
Union Insurance Company of Maryland	115—131	238,944 75
White, Stephen, surviving partner, &c	7	1,782 00
Wood, Abner, and another	30	37,736 00
Wheelwright, Abraham and Ebenezer	31	15,971 10
Winthrop, William	64	12,581 25
Wirgman, administrator of Charles and Peter	155	26,712 00
Watson, John R., for self and others	157	15,591 22
Total		1,775,246 88

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
1. Samuel Hays.....	France	1807.....	Seizure.....	Ship Bordeaux Packet, Captain Jacob Spafford.	Amount per invoice..... $16,302 80 19 years 9 months interest..... 19,319 45 35,622 25 Seizure made at Antwerp.	No legal adjudication.....	Consigned to Messrs. Ridgway, Mertens & Co., of Antwerp, of whom Mr. Jacob Ridgway was the consul general of the United States. The amount was insured by private underwriters, but in consequence of no condemnation they refused payment, and before a decision could be had they all, except two, to the amount of $600, became insolvent. The property was seized under the Berlin decree. It was sold, and the proceeds put into the national chest. The voyage was from Philadelphia to Antwerp. The vessel was released and returned to the United States.
2. Henry A. and John G. Coster.	France	February, 1811.	Capture.	Brig Maria, Slater master.	Value of shipment..... $12,320 00 Interest, at 7 per cent., to Oct. 1, 1826... 13,479 78 25,799 78	Condemned at Paris by the Emperor. Date not stated.	The brig Maria was cleared from Gottenburg for New York, and stranded on the Island of Ameiland, in Holland.
3. James S. Duval.....	France	December, 1809	Sequestration.....	Brig Fox, Cullen master.	Value of shipment..... $7,625 52 Interest to October, 1826..... 7,663 65 15,289 17 Loss appears to have been sustained at St. Sebastian or Bayonne.	No legal adjudication appears...	Sequestered under a decree of Napoleon, Emperor of France. The claim includes charges and insurance.
4. James S. Duval.....	France	January, 1810..	Sequestration	Brig Andrew, Coggins master.	Value of shipment..... $882 34 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 882 34 1,764 68 Loss appears to have been sustained at St. Sebastian or Bayonne.	No legal adjudication appears ..	Same as in No. 3.
5. James S. Duval.....	France	October, 1810..	Sequestration.....	Ship Hawk, Brown master.	Value of shipment..... $972 58 Interest to October, 1826 ..... 928 81 1,901 39 Loss appears to have been sustained at St. Sebastian or Bayonne.	No legal adjudication appears...	Same as in No. 3.
6. James S. Duval.....	France	December, 1809	Sequestration.....	Schooner Post Boy, Spencer master.	Value of shipment..... $1,587 04 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 1,594 96 Loss appears to have been sustained at St. Sebastian or Bayonne.	No legal adjudication appears...	Same as in No. 3.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
7. Stephen White, surviving partner of J. and S. White.	France	1810	Seizure	Schooner Joseph, Stacey master.	$1,782. Seizure made at or near St. Jean de Luz	No legal adjudication	This vessel was taken possession of by the French, at or near St. Jean de Luz, and the cargo sold in the winter of 1809 and 1810. She sailed from Marblehead.
8. John Clark & Co	France	May, 1807	Seizure	Brig Eliza Haley, Gregerson master.	$13,134 91. Interest on the above sum Value of brig $8,000 00 Amount of freight 2,229 18 Primage 465 73 40 bales cotton 2,440 00 Amount, &c 13,134 91 Interest on this amount. Seizure made at Cherbourg.	No legal adjudication appears	The said brig was bound from Lisbon for Cherbourg, reached her port of destination in safety, and was there seized, in May, 1807, for an alleged violation of the French decree of November 21, 1806.
9. William Jefferds, estate of John Stone, and estate of Daniel Walker.	France or Holland, or both.	February, 1808.	Capture	Ship America, John Proctor master.	Ship $14,000 00 Cargo 327 66 Freight and primage 7,105 11 Expenses 3,133 17 Total 24,565 94 Capture or seizure made at Rotterdam.	Condemnation at Paris in June, 1808.	The ship America sailed from Philadelphia September 22, 1807, with a cargo of sugar, coffee, dyewood, staves, and tobacco stems, bound for Rotterdam, in Holland. She arrived in the English channel the last of December, in the same year, where she was boarded by an English cruiser, and warned not to proceed to Rotterdam. The captain then took his vessel into Portsmouth, England, and went to London, to advise with the agents of the ship. Said agents wished the cargo to be landed in England, but the agents of the consignees of the cargo in Rotterdam insisted on the ship's proceeding to that port with her cargo. She left Portsmouth for Rotterdam January 30, 1808, on the 2d or 3d of February arrived off Rotterdam, and, after taking two Dutch pilots on board, she was captured by a French privateer and carried into that port. Ship and cargo were condemned in June following, and in November were sold at Rotterdam by order of the French Government.
10. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	April 2, 1805	Capture	Brig Alert, Smith master.	$19,174 96. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication known to claimants.	This vessel, on a voyage from Jeremie to Baltimore, was captured by the French privateer Regulator, Captain John Jack, and carried into the port of St. Jago de Cuba, where she arrived on 7th April, 1805. This and the claims numbered 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 were urged under the Florida treaty, and not allowed.
11. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	April 27, 1805	Capture	Schooner Ann, Debbin master.	$18,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation in Guadaloupe, 13th Thermidor, 13th year.	Captured on a voyage from Jacmel to Baltimore by the French privateer Regulator, Captain Jack, and carried into St. Jago de Cuba, where she arrived May 3, 1805.
12. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	April 11, 1805	Capture	Sch'r Anna, Gordon master.	$12,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears	Captured on a voyage from Aux Cayes to Baltimore by the French privateer Masquito, and carried to a port in the island of Porto Rico.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
13. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	June 16, 1805	Capture	Brig Comet, Freyer master.	$15,000. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears.	Captured on her voyage from Jeremie to Norfolk by the French privateer Matilda, and ordered for Guadaloupe.
14. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	June 13, 1805	Capture	Schooner Defiance, Holling master.	$2,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Guadaloupe, February 5, 1806.	Captured on her voyage from Jeremie to Baltimore by the French privateer Rencontre, Captain Saunier, and carried to the port of Barracoa, where she arrived June 24, 1805.
15. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	Feb. 4, 1805	Capture	Brig Fame, Milroon master.	$1,000. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication known to claimants.	Captured proceeding from Cape François to Charleston by the French privateer Union, Captain John Jack Bonn, and ordered to St. Jago de Cuba, where she arrived February 7, 1805.
16. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	April 16, 1805	Capture	Schooner John, Atkinson master.	$8,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned in the city of St. Domingo, 14th Floriel, 13th year.	Captured proceeding from Baltimore to Jeremie by the French privateer Rencontre, and carried into Samana, in the island of St. Domingo, a port in possession of the French.
17. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	Jan. 26, 1805	Capture	Brig Hyram, Graisburg master.	$9,348 20. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication known to claimants.	Captured proceeding from Cape François to Gonaives by the French privateer Renard, and ordered to St. Jago de Cuba, where she arrived on the 31st January, 1805.
18. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	August 4, 1805.	Capture	Schooner Satellite, Hall master.	$6,975 49. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication known to claimants.	Captured proceeding from Cape François to Baltimore by a French privateer, and carried to Barracoa, in the island of Cuba.
19. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	June 11, 1805	Capture	Schooner Sophia, Winard master.	$1,480. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned in Guadaloupe, February 5, 1806.	Captured proceeding from Baltimore to Cape François by a French privateer, and carried into Barracoa, 8th Messidor, 13th year.
20. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	April 22, 1805	Capture	Sch'r Twin Brothers, Pitt master.	$17,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned in Guadaloupe, 13th Thermidor, 13th year.	Captured on her voyage from Baltimore to Jacmel, in the island of St. Domingo, by the French privateers L'Incroyable and L'Aimable Aimee, and carried to St. Jago de Cuba, April 26, 1805.
21. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	Feb. 7, 1806	Capture	Schooner Buckskin, Henry master.	$6,056 25. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication known to claimant.	Captured in the prosecution of the voyage from St. Jago de Cuba to one or more ports in the island of St. Domingo, and thence to Baltimore, (insured,) by a French privateer, and carried to St. Jago de Cuba, February 19, 1806.
22. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	May 9, 1805	Capture	Schr. Mary, Bunker master.	$20,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned in Guadaloupe, 17th Messidor, 13th year.	Captured on her voyage from Port au Prince to Baltimore, by a French privateer, and carried to Point Petre, Guadaloupe.
23. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	March 6, 1805.	Capture.	Ship Nancy, Brewster master.	$6,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned in Guadaloupe, 13th Germinal, 13th year.	Bound from Port au Prince to Charleston. Captured by the French privateer Perseverante, and carried into a port in the French part of the island of St. Martin's, March 24, 1805.
24. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	May 9, 1805	Capture	Schr. Unity, Hardinge master.	$16,000. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication known to claimants.	Captured proceeding from Port au Prince to Norfolk, by the French privateer Grand Decide, who took on board the privateer all the crew of the Unity, except the cook, and carried them to Guadaloupe, where she arrived June 13, 1805, and where the captain and crew were put in prison.
25. James Kimball, —— Lord & Ammi Smith	France	July 3, 1810	Capture and burning	Brig Fleetwood, Jeremiah Young master.	Vessel $6,000 00 Cargo 669 00 Freight 3,600 00 Expenses 150 00 Place of capture not stated. 10,419 00	No legal adjudication.	This vessel sailed from Cagliari June 16, 1810, with a cargo of salt and specie for Newburyport. She was captured by the French privateer Sebastiani, and ordered for Malaga. On her way she was stripped and burnt by the captors. The cargo was salt and specie for Newburyport, and, together with the vessel, belonged wholly to claimants.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.		Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
26. Thomas Thomas, Jacob Little, and Jeremiah Nelson.	France	July or August, 1809.	Capture.....	Ship Arrow, Jabez Fletcher master.	Vessel.....	$36,000 00	Subject to adjudication at Paris. There was no decision. Date of proceedings not stated.	This ship, with a valuable cargo, was captured by the French privateer Herondelle, Captain Pontrouse, and carried to Nice. Proceedings were had against her at Paris. To avoid a total loss, a compromise was made, and ⅓ of the proceeds retained by the captors. The vessel was a first rate ship, new and coppered, burden 275 tons, and was the sole property of the claimants.
					Freight.....	30,000 00
						66,000 00
27. David Coffin & John Woodwell.	France	Feb. 20, 1808...	Capture.....	Brig George, John Eveleth master.	Vessel.....	$5,500 00	Subject to adjudication at Paris, and condemned, 1808.	The brig George was captured by the British frigate Pomona, January 31, 1808. She was recaptured by the French privateer Speculator, Captain Niquet, carried into Carequet, and condemned at Paris in the summer of 1808. The vessel was the sole property of the claimants.
					Freight.....	1,940 00
					Cargo, in part.....	210 00
						8,650 00
28. George Jenkins.....	France	October 2, 1810.	Detention and appropriation.	Brig Paulina, Gray master.	Property estimated at the actual sale, $2,688 49. Loss sustained at Tonningen.		No legal adjudication.....	This property was at Tonningen, where, by a decree of the French, in agreement with the Danes, they retained, under pretence of duties, ⅓ of the goods in Holstein, in addition to 6 per cent. before paid the Danes. The French took 5,516 lbs. cotton. From the sales of the residue, the freight, Danish duties, and expenses were paid, leaving only $254 58, a sum not near sufficient to pay the outward duties.
29. George Jenkins.....	France	October 2, 1810.	Detention and appropriation.	Anna Maria, Hunt master.	Value of sales, $872 47. Loss sustained at Tonningen.		No legal adjudication.....	The remarks in the foregoing case of the brig Paulina, are applicable to this case.
30. Abner Wood and William Nichols.	France	Jan. 31, 1808...	Capture.	Brig Sally Ann, Nichols master.	Vessel.....	$10,100 00	Subjected to adjudication at Paris, but no decision. Date of proceedings not stated.	This vessel was captured by a French privateer, on her passage from Boston and Beverley to Amsterdam, and carried in there. The master and crew were turned on shore and detained. The cargo was taken out by the captors, and vessel and cargo were held by them. Eighteen months after the capture, there appearing no prospect of any restoration of the property, the claimants were induced to compromise with the captors. The vessel and cargo were sold, the captors took two-thirds, leaving one-third to the owners, out of which they had to pay costs and expenses. The vessel was first rate, new, and in complete order, burden 182 tons, and the property of the claimants.
					Property	33,871 00
					Freight.....	2,392 00
					Expenses.....	2,454 00
						48,817 00
					Interest from Jan., 1808, to Nov., 1809.	5,125 00
						53,942 00
					Deduct amount received in compromise,	11,081 00
						42,861 00
					Place of capture not stated.
31. Abraham and Ebenezer Wheelwright.	France	March, 1806 ...	Capture	Snow Mehitable, Denney master.	Vessel.....	$3,400 00	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was captured by a French privateer called Surneiliana, and schooner Jeune Estene, and carried into Barraçoa, and there sold, and the proceeds divided among the captors. The vessel and cargo belonged wholly to claimants.
					Cargo, freight, &c.....	12,571 10
						15,971 10
					Place of capture not stated.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
32. David Coffin	France	July 20, 1810	Capture	Barque Zeno, Stone master.	Vessel $14,000 00 Freight 14,000 00 Expenses 2,000 00 Property, &c 1,000 00 Amount, &c 31,000 00 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Paris, by the Emperor, December 4, 1811.	This vessel was bound from Boston for Gottenburg, with coffee, cotton, sugar, and dye-wood. She was captured by the French lugger Figaro, carried into Christiansand, and condemned at Paris by Napoleon.
David Stone
33. Francis Delile, Anthony Francis, Amos Foreman.	France	July 20, 1810	Capture	Schooner Polly, Delile master.	Vessel $800 00 Cargo 2,738 65 Freight 1,000 00 Property 1,124 00 512 40 Amount, &c 6,175 39 Place of capture not mentioned.	No legal adjudication	This vessel and cargo were wholly the property of the claimants. She sailed from Newburyport, February 9, 1812, her cargo consisted of provisions and lumber, and some goods on freight. She was captured by two French frigates and an armed brig. The crew were taken out and made prisoners; the vessel was plundered and burned.
Anthony Francis
Amos Foreman
34. Edward Tappan, Nathan Hoyt.	France	November, 1809	Capture	Brig George Washington, Dawsett master.	Vessel $4,003 00 Cargo 8,611 30 Freight 1,000 00 Goods 8,613 59 Adventure 500 00 Amount, &c 22,724 89 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Guadaloupe. Date not stated.	This vessel, on her voyage from Marigalante, was captured by two French barges, carried to Guadaloupe, and condemned. The vessel and cargo both the sole property of the claimants. The cargo was wholly the proceeds of cargo carried out.
A. A. Caldwell and others.
Florence Dawsett
35. Samuel Coffin, John Kendall, Benjamin Glazier.	France	Aug. 17, 1809	Capture	Schooner Samuel, Glazier master.	Vessel $2,000 00 Cargo 4,549 17 Freight 5,000 00 Expenses 429 00 Insurance 677 50 12,655 67 Adventure 736 50 Adventure 207 80 13,599 97 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Guadaloupe. Date not stated.	This vessel was under charter to the claimants of the cargo. She was laden at Newburyport for the West Indies; on her passage to St. Bartholomew, she was captured by two French barges, carried into Guadaloupe, and condemned.
Benjamin Glazier
Samuel Smith

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
36. Surasey & Rogers...	France	Aug. 22, 1806 ..	Detention	Schooner Nancy, Glazier master.	Loss sustained..... $8,996 81 Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.	This vessel, on her passage with a return cargo from Martinico, fell in with a French 74-gun ship dismasted and in distress; was compelled to assist her, and detained till she got into the Chesapeake. Vessel and cargo wholly the property of claimants.
37. Benjamin Lunt, Hate & Wade, and Geo. Offutt.	France	Jan. 13, 1808...	Capture.....	Brig George, Bray master.	Vessel..... $4,000 00 Cargo..... 8,109 00 Freight..... 2,000 00 14,109 00 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel was captured by a French privateer and carried into Spain, and papers sent to Paris, where vessel and cargo were disposed of by the captors. Vessel and cargo wholly American.
38. Zebedee Cook.....	France	1810.....	Capture	Ship James Cook..	Vessel..... $16,000 00 Freight ..... 12,500 00 28,500 00 Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication known to claimants.	This vessel was captured by a French privateer. She was carried into Rostack, and cut out by the British. She was wholly lost to the claimants. Vessel and cargo wholly American.
39. Joseph Sersier	France	July, 1805.....	Capture	Brig Joana, Blanchier master.	Loss $3,462 60. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication by the French.	Captured by a French privateer, and carried into Barracoa; was cut out by his Majesty's ship Hunter, and carried to Jamaica.
40. Samuel Tenney and others.	France	March, 1806....	Capture	Schooner Victory, Campbell master.	Loss $3,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication known to claimants.	Vessel and cargo American. The schooner was captured by a French privateer.
41. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	June 13, 1807 ..	Capture	Brig Brutus, Edwards master.	Estimated damages..... $33,810 00 Interest to October 1, 1826.. ..... 41,791 97 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned under decree of December 17, 1807. Date not stated.	This vessel, trading to Madras, was captured by the French brig La Dame Ernouf, and sent into Cayenne. The alleged cause of capture was that the vessel was trading to a British port. Shipment was made by Elias Kave & Co. In this and the following cases, to No. 63, inclusive, interest is claimed at the rate of seven per cent. per annum.
42. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	Oct. 2, 1807	Seizure.....	Ship Jersey, Williams master.	..... $12,296 10 7,574 42 4,226 74 Estimated damages..... 24,097 26 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 22,513 83 Seizure made at Leghorn.	Condemned at Paris, under decree of November 21, 1807. Date not stated.	This vessel cleared for Palermo and Leghorn. She was seized by French officers at Leghorn and condemned. Shipment made by H. W. & L. Philips.
43. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	Nov. 26, 1807 ..	Capture	Ship Cadoz, Bunker master.	Estimated damages ..... $8,333 83 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 10,154 83 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned under decree of December 17, 1807. Date not stated.	This vessel was captured on her voyage to Marseilles, by the French gunboat Toulouse, and sent into that port. She was captured on the alleged ground that she had been searched at sea by a British frigate. Shipment made by Rossier & Roulet.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
44. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	June 29, 1807 ..	Not stated.	Ship Victory, Hopkins master.	Estimated damages..... $9,500 00 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 10,218 82 Place of loss not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	This vessel was cleared for Cherbourg. Shipment made by Gurden S. Munford.
45. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	March 15, 1808.	Burning	Ship Eliza, Dunbar master.	Estimated damages ..... 5,248 63 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 6,821 07 Place of loss not stated.	No legal adjudication	This vessel was bound from Liverpool to Charleston. She was captured by two frigates, and burnt at sea. Shipment made by Jacob Barker.
46. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	Sept. 30, 1809..	Capture	Ship Ann, Pendergrast master.	Damages ..... 21,359 20 Interest to October 1, 1826 ..... 23,884 93 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned. Where and when not stated.	This vessel cleared for St. Sebastian, was captured by two French vessels and sent into Socoamoc, or St. Juan de Luz, and condemned. Shipment made by Jenkins & Havens.
47. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	Nov. 13, 1809..	Sequestration	Ship Sally, Scott master.	Damages, $29,400; interest to October 1, 1826, $32,242. Sequestration made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears...	This vessel cleared for St. Sebastian; she was there sequestered, and sold at Bayonne by the French. The insurance was on the cargo. The vessel was given up to General Armstrong. Shipment made by Leroy, Bayard & Co.
48. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	Dec. 18, 1809...	Capture.....	Schooner Urania, Peck master.	Damages, $8,820; interest to October 1, 1826, $9,660 58 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned, probably at Naples. Date not stated.	This vessel cleared for Naples; she was captured by the French corvette La Fame, sent into Naples, and condemned. Shipment made by Minturn & Champlin.
49. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	Nov. 24, 1809..	Seizure.....	Ship Commodore Rogers, Shaler master.	Estimated damages, $5,000; interest to October 1, 1826, $5,474 57. Seizure made at St. Sebastian.	Condemned. When and where not stated.	This vessel cleared for St. Sebastian; was there seized by the Prince of Neufchatel and confiscated. Shipment made by Ingraham, Phenix & Nexson.
50. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	Nov. 24, 1809..	Seizure.....	Brig Camelia, Shaler master.	Damages, $1,100; interest to October 1, 1826, $1,204 39. Seizure made at St. Sebastian.	Condemned. When and where not stated.	This vessel sailed for St. Sebastian; was there seized by the Prince of Neufchatel and confiscated. Shipment made by Ingraham, Phenix & Nexson.
51. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	Nov. 20, 1809..	Sequestration	Brig Mary Ann, Lawson master.	Damages ..... $24,304 31 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 26,459 95 50,764 26 Received from the French Government. 19,396 96 31,368 00 Sequestration made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears...	This vessel was taken by the French privateer Invincible Napoleon. Shipment made by Saltus, Son & Co.
52. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	Nov. 15, 1809..	Sequestration	Brig St. Tammany, Fowler master.	Damages, $19,297 92; interest to October 1, 1826, $20,956 99. Sequestration made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears...	Shipment made by Lawrence & Whitney.
53. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	July 20, 1809...	Capture	Brig Resort, Burke master.	Damages, $2,692 99; interest to October 1, 1826, $3,238 05. Place of loss not stated.	Condemned. Where and when not stated.	This vessel was bound for Bremen; she was captured by the French privateer Hebe and sent into the Texel. Shipment made by G. T. Meyer.
54. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	Dec. 9, 1809 ...	Sequestration	Brig Hawk, Bond master.	Damages, $1,236 06; interest to October 1, 1826, $1,321 41. Sequestration made at Bayonne.	No legal adjudication appears...	This vessel cleared for St. Sebastian; she was sequestered at Bayonne. Shipment made by P. T. Giraud.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
55. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	Nov. 18, 1809..	Capture.....	Brig Triton, Thompson master.	Estimated damages, $1,871 37; interest to October 1, 1826, $5,104 44. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	This vessel cleared for Amsterdam; she was captured by a French privateer and sent into Calais. Shipment made by W. A. Livingston.
56. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	Dec. 13, 1809...	Sequestration	Schooner Juliet, Miller master.	Damages, $13,478 26; interest to October 1, 1826, $13,987 03. Sequestration made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears...	This vessel cleared for St. Sebastian. Shipment made by John G. Tardy.
57. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	Dec. 16, 18, 1809	Sequestration	Ship Radius, Hartshorne master.	Damages on Minturn & Champlin's shipment..... $18,911 01 Damages on Post, Grinnell & Minturn's shipment..... 18,897 63 Amount, &c..... 37,808 64 Interest on the 1st item to Oct. 1, 1826.. 18,117 24 Interest on the 2d item to the same date. 18,119 13	Condemned. When and where not stated.	This vessel cleared for St. Sebastian. Shipment made by Minturn & Champlin, and Post, Grinnel & Minturn.
58. Phenix Insurance Company of New York.	France	April 19, 1810..	Capture.....	Brig Clio, Whitehead master.	Damages, $1,000; interest to October 1, 1826, $3,000 65. The vessel was lost near Port Blanc.	No legal adjudication...	This vessel cleared for Tonningen; she was captured by the French privateer Furet on the alleged ground of trading with the English, and while in charge of the prize crew she was lost on the coast of France. Shipment made by Isaac Moses & Sons.
59. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	Jan. 16 1810..	Sequestration.....	Schooner Camilla, Mony master.	Damages, $17,640; interest to October 1, 1826, $19,225 15. Sequestration made at Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears ..	This vessel cleared for St. Sebastian. Shipment made by H. A. & J. G. Coster.
60. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	April 24, 1810.	Capture	Brig Catharine, Ochington master.	Damages, 6,382 24; interest to October 1, 1826, $6,366 28.	Condemned, probably at Dantzic. Date not stated.	This vessel was bound for Gottenburg. She was captured on the alleged ground of being or carrying English property, by the French vessel La Jeune Adolphe, and taken into Dantzic. Shipment made by Oliver Kane.
61. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	Feb. 14, 1811...	Condemnation.....	Brig Maria, Slater master.	Estimated damages, $2,772 50; interest to October, 1826, $2,903 56. See last column.	No legal adjudication appears ..	This vessel was bound from Gottenburg to New York. She was stranded on the island Amieland, in Holland, and was condemned at Paris by the Emperor. Shipment made by John G. Astor.
62. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	Aug. 9, 1808...	Capture and plunder	Schooner Charlotte, Grantley master.	Damages, $523 06; interest to October 1, 1826, $542 62. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears ..	This vessel cleared for St. Jago de Cuba. She was captured by the French vessel St. Centinelle, plundered at sea, and suffered to proceed. Shipment made by John G. Tarby.
63. Phenix Insurance Co. of New York.	France	Feb. 13, 1811...	Condemnation.....	Brig Maria, Slater master.	Damages, $923 75; interest to October 1, 1826, $965 97. See last column.	No legal adjudication appears ..	This vessel, bound from Gottenburg to New York, was stranded on an island on the coast of Holland, and condemned at Paris by the Emperor. Shipment made by J. Lorrilard.
64. William Winthrop..	France	March, 1810 ...	Capture	Ship Govern'r Gore, Waddell, master.	Three-fourths freight..... $12,581 25 Interest to Sept., 1825, at seven per cent. 14,531 38 27,112 63 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel was captured by a French privateer, and carried into Calais, in France. The claim is for three-fourths of $16,775, the amount of freight on the cargo of the ship.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
65. John Delafield's exec'rs. See claims on France, No. 107.	France	January, 1810..	Seizure	Schooner Prosper, Selby master.	$5,188 21. Seizure made at St. Sebastian	No legal adjudication appears	Seizure at St. Sebastian, and confiscated by the order of Napoleon, under decree of April 11, 1810.
66. John Delafield's exec'rs. See claims on France, No. 108.	France	January, 1810..	Seizure	Brig Rose in Bloom, Olcott master.	$5,000. Seizure made at St. Sebastian	No legal adjudication appears	This vessel was bound from New York to St. Sebastian; seized at the latter port by order of Bonaparte, under decree of April 11, 1810.
67. John Delafield's exec'rs. See claims on France, No. 109.	France	January, 1810..	Seizure	Schr. Young Connecticut, Rollo master.	$6,521 95. Seizure made at St. Sebastian	No legal adjudication appears	Same remarks as in the preceding case, No. 66.
68. John Delafield's exec'rs. See claims on France, No. 110.	France	January, 1810..	Seizure	Brig Tantivy, Perley master.	$8,000. Seizure made at St. Sebastian	No legal adjudication appears	Same remarks as in the preceding case, No. 66.
69. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1805.	Detention and condemnation.	Brig Fame, Pansell master.	$1,000. Loss sustained at St. Jago de Cuba	Condemnation at St. Jago de Cuba by a French court. Date not stated.	J. B. Church, jr., owner. The voyage was from St. Jago de Cuba to New York.
70. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1805.	Burning	Brig Two Friends, Stevenson master.	Cargo, $3,300. Place of loss not stated	No legal adjudication	This vessel was burnt at sea by a French squadron of ten sail from Rochefort. H. Cheriate and others, owners. The voyage was from New York to Nantz.
71. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1805.	Burning	Brig Minerva, Salter master.	Cargo, $2,500. Place of loss not stated	No legal adjudication	This vessel was bound from New York to Bourdeaux, and was burnt by a French squadron of ten sail from Rochefort. Joseph Thebaud owner.
72. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1808.	Burning	Ship Eliza, Dunbar master.	Vessel, $10,000. Place of loss not stated	No legal adjudication	This vessel, bound from New York to Liverpool, was burnt at sea by the French frigates La Hortense and La Hermoine. Jacob Barker owner.
73. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1809.	Sinking	Ship Phenix, Telford master.	Vessel $13,000 00 Cargo 700 00 Amount 13,700 00	No legal adjudication	The ship Phenix, bound from New York to Lisbon, was sunk at sea by two French frigates, La Clorinde and La Renommee. James Johnston and others owners.
74. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1808.	Condemnation	Brig Brutus, Edwards master.	Place of loss not stated. Cargo, $4,500. (See next column)	Condemned at Cayenne. Date not stated.	This vessel was bound from New York to Madras. Condemned under the Milan decree. She sailed before issuing the decree. Snydom & Wyckoff owners.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
75. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1809	Condemnation	Brig Perseverance, Oliver master.	Vessel $1,800 00 Cargo 5,700 00 Amount 7,500 00 (See next column.)	Condemned at Guadaloupe. Date not stated.	This vessel was bound from Grenada to the United States. She was condemned under the Milan decree. T. N. Gautier and others owners.
76. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1809	Condemnation	Ship Two Marys, Rylie master.	Vessel, $10,000. See next column	Condemned at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel was bound from New York to Nantz. She was condemned under the Milan decree. James Watson, jr., owner.
77. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1810	Seizure	Ship Sally, Scott master.	Cargo, $11,000. Seizure made at St. Sebastian	No legal adjudication appears	This vessel sailed from New York for St. Sebastian, and was there seized by the French. Le Roy, Bayard & Co. owners.
78. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1810	Condemnation	Ship Julius Cesar, Taber master.	Cargo, $9,000. Loss sustained at Dunkirk	No legal adjudication appears	This vessel was bound from New York to London, and seized or condemned at Dunkirk. Ferguson & Day owners.
79. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1810	Seizure	Ship Vermont, Lyman master.	Cargo, $10,000. Seizure made at Leghorn	Condemned at Paris under the Berlin decree, 1810.	This vessel was bound from New York to Leghorn, and was seized at the latter port in 1807. J. Lenox and W. Maitland owners.
80. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1810	Condemnation	Ship Governor Gore, Waddle master.	Cargo, $6,600. Loss sustained at Dunkirk	Condemned at Dunkirk	Bound from New York to Tonningen. Condemned at Dunkirk in 1810. A compromise was made with the captors, at a loss of 66 per cent. Willing & Curwen owners.
81. Marine Insurance Company of New York.	France	1810	Condemnation	Brig Resort, Burke master.	Vessel $5,400 00 Cargo 3,600 00 Amount 9,000 00	Condemned at Paris under the Milan decree. Date not stated.	The brig Resort was bound from New York to Bremen. Richard Black owner.
82. A. Laussat	France	Dec. 28, 1810	Sequestration	Brig Fox, Cullen master.	Cargo, per invoice $19,033 71 Interest from October 10, 1809, to October, 1826, 17 years 19,414 38 Amount 38,448 09 Sequestration made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication	The brig Fox sailed from the port of Philadelphia 11th October, 1809, and arrived at St. Sebastian the 20th November following. She was received and admitted to an entry in the most friendly manner; the cargo landed, stored, and the duties paid on it. On the 28th December the whole was sequestered by an order of the French Government, taken out of the store, sent to Bayonne, where it was sold about the 10th August, 1810, and the proceeds thereof deposited in the caisse d'amortissement. The decree under which this property was sold was the Rambouillet decree of 23d March, 1810, but not published until the 14th May following.
3. A. Laussat	France	Sept. 28, 1809	Sequestration	Schooner Spencer, Maffett master.	Cargo, per invoice $2,415 98 Interest from September 28, 1809, to September 28, 1826, 17 years 2,464 32 Amount 4,880 30 Sequestration made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication	The schooner Spencer sailed from Philadelphia 28th September, 1809, arrived at St. Sebastian the 20th October, admitted to entry in the most friendly manner. Her cargo was landed and stored, and sixty-nine days after her arrival she was sequestered and sent to Bayonne, there sold, and the proceeds deposited in the caisse d'amortissement. This property was sold under the Rambouillet decree.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.		Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
84. A. Laussat.....	France	Nov. 24, 1809..	Sequestration	Brig Andrew, Coggins master.	Cargo per invoice.....	$6,216 00	No legal adjudication..	The brig Andrew sailed from Philadelphia November 28, 1809, arrived at St. Sebastian about the 20th of December following, was sequestered and sent to Bayonne, and there sold under the same circumstances as the brig Fox, &c., were, No. 82.
					Interest from November 24, 1809, to November, 1826, 17 years.....	6,370 92
						12,616 92
					Sequestration at St. Sebastian.	Francs.
85. John Forrester.....	France	.....	Payment of extra duties..	.....	Extra duty on cotton.....	9,669 98	No legal adjudication.....	The ship ——, owned by the claimant, proceeded from Charleston with a cargo of rice and cotton, the property of the claimant, for Cowes, in England, for orders. After a stay there of two days or less, without any change in her cargo, and without landing or receiving aboard any merchandise, she proceeded, by the advice of the claimant's friends, to Havre. After the cargo had been there entered, the claimant's friends, Messrs. Welles and Greene, were told that they must pay extra duties, because the ship had not a French consul's certificate of the growth of the cargo, but that on the production of that document the extra duties should be refunded. It was afterwards sent to France, but the extra duties not having been refunded the present claim is for the restitution of them.
					Rice.....	1,670 31
						11,340 29
					Equal to.....	$2,268 00
					Loss sustained at Havre.
86. Alex. Little, Henry Little, and Nathaniel Bryant.	France	Jan. 11, 1808...	Capture	Brig Speculator ...	Vessel.....	$10,000 00	No legal adjudication.	The brig Speculator was owned by the claimants, citizens of the United States, in the proportions of one-half by Nathaniel Bryant, of one-quarter by Alexander Little, and of one-quarter by Henry Little. She sailed from Amsterdam, bound to Savannah, in ballast, and under the command of the said Henry Little, on the 6th day of January, A. D. 1808. On the 11th day of the same month she was captured by the French privateer L'Entrepans, and taken into Calais, where she arrived the same day. The captain and his two mates then and there deposed as to the fact of their having sailed from Amsterdam as aforesaid; and to their having been hailed before the capture by a ship-of-war, supposed to be English. Some days afterwards Captain Little was obliged, for want of funds, to discharge his crew, among which were some foreigners. These latter shipped on board the capturing privateer, and there made oath that the brig Speculator had not only been hailed by the said ship-of-war, supposed to be English, but had been boarded by her, and allowed to proceed on her voyage. For this cause the Speculator was detained for trial, as having been subject to capture and condemnation by virtue of the decrees of the Emperor of France of 21st November, 1806, and of the 17th December, 1807. Captain Little remained in
					Spare duck for sails.....	200 00
					Spare sails and rigging.....	150 00
					Provisions for four months.....	300 00
					Premium of insurance on the voyage, the brig not having been insured against capture.....	170 00
					Expenses incurred in France in endeavoring to procure the release of the vessel, and expenses of agents.....	500 00
					Cabin furniture.....	200 00
						11,520 00
					Interest from January, 1808, to

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
86—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	France one year waiting a trial, but not having succeeded in procuring an adjudication of the case, he returned to the United States, leaving the business in the hands of Mr. Skipwith, then Consul of the United States at Paris. Since that time the claimants have not learned in what manner the brig was disposed of, although they have latterly taken measures to ascertain her fate. They have, however, sustained a loss of their property therein.
87. John Rice and William Savage.	France.....	Feb. 21, 1810...	Seizure.....	Brig Ocean, John Hills master.	100,400 francs, equal, at 18¾ c. per franc, to $19,500. Seizure made at St. Jean de Luz.	Proceedings were had before the Imperial Council of Prizes, at Paris, 1810. Result not known.	The claimants were sole owners of the brig Ocean, and of her cargo, consisting of fish and oil, except a small part thereof, which belonged to two freighters. She sailed from Boston January 6, 1810, for St. Andero or St. Sebastian. Having lost ports and cables in very bad weather in the voyage, the vessel, on arriving in the neighborhood of these ports, could not go with safety into either of them, but was taken by the pilot to St. Jean de Luz, in France, that being the next port to St. Sebastian, and was moored in the harbor late in the afternoon of February 12. The next morning she was seized by officers of the French Government. The vessel was unladen, and, as was the cargo, sold, the vessel for two thousand four hundred francs, on July 25, 1810, and the cargo for ninety-eight thousand francs, partly on March 31, and partly on June 9, of the same year. All the proceeds were held by the officers of said Government and the imperial Treasury, and no part thereof has been received by the claimants.
88. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	March 6, 1805..	Capture	Ship Nancy, Brewster master.	$7,480. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Bassaterre, Guadaloupe, 7th Messidor, 13.	This vessel was taken on her passage from Port au Prince to Charleston. She was captured by the French privateer Perseverante, and condemned for trading with St. Domingo. The property was disposed of at the French part of the island of St. Martin.
89. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	May 9, 1805....	Capture.....	Sch. Mary, Bunker master.	$3,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Bassaterre, Guadaloupe, 7th Messidor, 13.	This vessel, on her passage from Port au Prince to Baltimore, and to Point Petre, Guadaloupe, was captured by the French privateer Grand Decide.
90. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	June 16, 1805...	Capture	Brig Comet	$14,000. Capture made off Charleston	Supposed to have been condemned at Guadaloupe.	This vessel was captured on her passage from Jeremie to Norfolk by the French privateer Matilda, which belonged to Guadaloupe.
91. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	June 19, 1805...	Capture	Schooner Imperial, Everson master.	$10,000. Capture made off Charleston.....	Supposed to have been condemned at Guadaloupe.	This vessel was taken under the same circumstances as the foregoing, the brig Comet, No. 90.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
92. W. King.....	France.....	Feb. 8, 1810....	Capture.....	Ship Vigilant, Coombs master.	Amount of ship..... $16,000 00 Amount of freight to Gottenburg..... 9,600 00 Paid Capt. Coombs' bill for £800 sterling on —— & Booth, of Liverpool, being amount of expenses in prosecuting the claim in Holland..... 3,555 52 29,155 52 Interest from Feb. 8, 1810, to Dec. 8, 1826. 27,694 44 56,849 96 Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	The Vigilant, 343 tons burden, sailed from Hampton Roads January 6, 1809, bound to Gottenburg, and was captured by the French privateer called the Imperatrice, of Calais, sent in for adjudication, and captured under the following decree: "All vessels navigated under the American flag that are arrived, or may have arrived since 20th May, 1809, into the ports of France or its colonies, or of the countries that are garrisoned by French troops, shall be confiscated, and the amount of sales paid into the chest, except only those vessels which are in ballast, with despatches of the United States, and which have no cargoes on board, nor merchandise."
93. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	Dec. 19, 1805..	Capture	Schooner Stephen..	$6,900. Place of capture not stated.....	Supposed to have been condemned at the city of St. Domingo. Date not stated.	This vessel was taken on her passage from Baltimore to Jacmel by the French privateer Jeune Estelle, and taken to Samana, and the property disposed of.
94. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	April 27, 1805..	Capture	Sch. Ann, Dobbin master.	$16,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Basseterre, Guadaloupe, 13th Thermidor, 13.	This vessel was taken on her voyage from Jacmel to Baltimore by the French privateer Regulator. Capture made for trading with St. Domingo. The property was disposed of at St. Jago, where the vessel arrived May 3, 1805. This and the following claims, to No. 104 inclusive, were preferred under the Florida treaty.
95. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	April 2, 1805....	Capture	Brig Alert, Smith	$2,100. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication	This vessel was captured by the French privateer Regulator on her passage from Jeremie to Baltimore. She arrived at St. Jago April 7, 1805, where the property was disposed of without trial.
96. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	May 4, 1805....	Capture	Schooner Severn, Mills master.	$6,350. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Basseterre, 19th Thermidor, 13.	This vessel was taken on her passage from Cape François to Baltimore by the French privateers L'Esperance and Les deux Amis, and the property disposed of at St. Jago on arrival. The condemnation was for violating the laws interdicting the trade with St. Domingo.
97. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	June 13, 1805..	Capture	Schooner Defiance, Hollis master.	$15,400. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Basseterre, Guadaloupe, February 5, 1806.	This vessel was captured by the French privateer Rencontre on her passage from Jeremie to Baltimore, and the property disposed of on arrival at Barracoa, June 21. The condemnation was for having had intercourse with St. Domingo.
98. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	July 12, 1805...	Capture	Sch. St. Tammany, Wright master.	$11,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Basseterre, February 5, 1806.	This vessel was taken on her passage from Miraquana, in St. Domingo, to Baltimore by the French privateer Renard, and the property disposed of on arrival at St. Jago. Condemned as in No. 97.
99. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	June 11, 1805..	Capture	Schooner Sophia, Winard master.	$1,500. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Basseterre, Guadaloupe, February 5, 1806.	This vessel was captured on her passage from Baltimore to Cape François by the French privateer Superb, and the property disposed of without legal form on her arrival at Barracoa. Condemned as in No. 97.
100. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	August 4, 1805.	Capture	Schooner Satellite, Hall master.	$300. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication	This vessel was taken on her passage from Cape François to Baltimore by a French privateer, and the property disposed of at Barracoa.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication: where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
101. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	May 13, 1807...	Capture	Schooner Collector, Snow master.	$9,600. Place of capture not stated.....	Supposed to have been condemned at Guadaloupe, or the city of St. Domingo.	This vessel was taken on her passage from Baltimore to New Orleans, by the French privateer Juan Marie. Property disposed of at Barracoa.
102. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	April 11, 1805..	Capture	Schooner Anna, Gordon master.	$15,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Supposed to have been condemned at the city of St. Domingo.	This vessel was taken on her passage from Aux Cayes to Baltimore, by the French privateer Musquito, and carried into Moyauquez. The cargo was sold, and the vessel sent out of port.
103. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	Feb. 4, 1805....	Capture	Brig Fame	$8,696. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel, on her passage from Cape François to Charleston, was captured by the French privateer Union, and the property disposed of without legal adjudication, on arrival at St. Jago, February 7, 1805.
104. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France.....	Jan. 23, 1805...	Capture	Brig Neptune, Carew master.	$10,600. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Basseterre, Guadaloupe, 28th Messidor, year 13.	This vessel was taken on her passage from Alexandria to the island of St. Domingo, by the French privateer Aventure, and property disposed of on her arrival at Barracoa, January 25, 1805.
105. New York Firemen's Insurance Company.	France.....	October 7, 1810.	Capture	Schooner Abœllino, Thomas master.	Insured for H. Turnier..... $1,500 00 Insured for Louis Mallard... ..... 1,400 00 Amount, &c..... 2,900 00 Capture made off Port Farino.	Condemned at Genoa. Date not stated.	This vessel, bound from Philadelphia to Tunis, was captured by the privateer Cæsar, Captain John Baptiste Donati, and carried into Genoa.
106. New York Firemen's Insurance Company.	France.....	Jan. 28, 1812...	Capture	Brig Comet..	Insured for Richard Richardson & Co., $3,909. See last column.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel was bound from Savannah to Chatham, England, captured by the privateer General Cafferilla, Captain O'Reilla, run on shore, and lost near Fecamp.
107. New York Firemen's Insurance Company.	France.....	Dec. 5, 1811 ...	Capture and burning.....	Ship Telegraph, Bayard master.	Insured for Leroy, Bayard & McEvers, $12,000. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel, from New York to Lisbon, was captured by the frigates Medusa and Nymphe, and burnt at sea.
108. New York Firemen's Insurance Company.	France.....	April 16, 1812..	Capture and burning.....	Ship Mercury, Killy master.	Insured for Abraham Reynolds..... $500 00 Peter Hoyt..... 500 00 Amount, &c..... 1,000 00 Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	This vessel, from New York to Lisbon, was captured by the frigates Ariante and Andromache, and brig Mameluke, and burnt at sea.
109. New York Firemen's Insurance Company.	France.....	Feb. 13, 1812...	Capture	Brig Shakspeare, Rand master.	Insured for Hibberson and Young, $1,500. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	The Shakspeare, bound from Amelia Harbor, St. Mary's, to Chatham, England, was captured by the privateer Le Mercure and L'Epervier, and carried into La Hogue.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
110. New York Firemen's Insurance Company.	France.....	Oct. 21, 1810...	Capture	Ship Julius Cæsar, Taber master.	Insured for Ripley, Center & Co., $4,500. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	From New York to London, captured by the privateer Subtile, of Boulogne, Captain Demey, and sent into Dunkirk, where she was lost in a gale on the 23d of October.
111. New York Firemen's Insurance Company.	France.....	Date not stated.	Capture	Brig Hannah, Dawson master.	$1,024 80. The insurance was made for Edward Morewood and Thomas Carberry, on freight, $8,000. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication..	This vessel, bound from Savannah to Portsmouth, England, was captured by a privateer and recaptured by the British, and carried into Plymouth. Salvage, charges, and expenses, $1,024 80. Date of the policy of insurance, February 4, 1812.
112. New York Firemen's Insurance Company.	France.....	Nov. 4, 1811...	Capture	Ship Olive Branch, Bradley master.	Insurance for $5,196, made for L. Krumbeahr, of Philadelphia, and for $10,000 for Alexander Ogden, Charles L. Ogden, and Joshua Waddington, of New York. Loss on first item..... $4,793 60 Loss on second item..... .... 6,847 94 Amount, &c..... ..... 11,641 54 Capture made off Nyburg.	No legal adjudication appears...	The Olive Branch was bound from Kiel to Philadelphia. She was captured, while at anchor off Nyburg, where she stopped to pay Sound dues, by the privateer General Durarnel, Captain Frederick Mossey, of Dunkirk, and carried into Nyburg. The captain and crew were turned on shore. Her papers were sent to Paris; and, after repeated applications to the French and Danish Governments, the property, after a long detention, was finally given up. The loss, in consequence of the detention, expenses, waste, and damage of goods, is as stated.
113. New York Firemen's Insurance Company.	France	1811.....	Capture.....	Ship Atlantic, —— master.	$20,224 40. Insurance was made by Lawrence and Whitney, and Hoyt and Tom, of New York. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Paris September 10, 1811.	This vessel from New York to Gottenburg and a market in the Baltic. She was captured on her passage from Carlsham to Stockholm and sent into Dantzic. The papers sent to Paris, where vessel and cargo were condemned. The reason assigned for the condemnation was, that the ship had been under British convoy.
114. Joseph Phillippe....	France	Nov. 22, 1811 ..	Capture and burning	Brig Dolly	Amount of loss, as per claimant's invoice, £1,189 17s. 11¾d., equal, at $1 per 4s. 6d. sterling, to $14,177 32. Capture made in lat. 34° 34′, and long. 33° 31′.	No legal adjudication appears...	The brig Dolly was captured by the French frigates La Meduse and La Nymphe, and burnt, as was also her cargo, except the valuable goods carried on board the frigates and smuggled into port by the captors. On March 12, 1812, the American ambassador, Mr. Barlow, applied to the Emperor, through the French minister for the Foreign Department, for redress in that case. The claim was afterwards repeatedly urged on the Government of France until December 23, 1819, when the Privy Council decided "that the concerned in the ships Telegraph and Dolly, and cargoes, could not be admitted as claimants; the first public notice of the report of the Berlin and Milan decrees having only been made known by insertion in the Moniteur of May 8, 1812, several months after the capture of the vessels." The American ambassador protested against the decision. Those decrees had been repealed, in regard to American vessels, from November 1, 1810, and notice was given by the Minister of Justice to the President of the Board of Prizes, and subsequently by decree of April 28, 1811.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
115. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	April 11, 1805	Capture	Schooner Anna, Gordon master.	$9,515 75. See last column	See last column	These claims are for amounts insured by the claimants and paid on American vessels which were captured by French armed vessels on the high seas, and either illegally condemned or converted to the use of the captors without condemnation. The stated items of loss are the respective amounts paid by the claimants in consequence of such captures.
116. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	April 27, 1805	Capture	Schooner Ann, Nye master.	$20,000. See last column
117. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Feb. 15, 1805	Capture	Schooner Brothers, Hughes master.	$11,000. See last column
118. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Feb. 7, 1805	Capture	Brig Fame, Missroon master.	$11,000. See last column
119. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	June 8, 1805	Capture	Schooner Harriet, Williams master.	$15,750. See last column
120. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	July 27, 1805	Capture	Brig Jane, Kennedy master.	$22,000. See last column
121. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Feb., 1805	Capture	Schooner Mary, Bunker master.	$2,100. See last column
122. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	June 6, 1805	Capture	Schooner Mars, —— master.	$9,776. See last column
123. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	July 14, 1805	Capture	Schooner Republican, Reed master.	$15,500. See last column
124. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	May 9, 1805	Capture	Schooner Sally, Gilpin master.	$17,966. See last column
125. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	June, 1805	Capture	Schooner Satellite, Hull master.	$10,000. See last column
126. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	June 29, 1805	Capture	Schooner Sophia, Winard master.	$18,500. See last column
127. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Dec. 20, 1805	Capture	Schooner Stephens, Parkens master.	$6,000. See last column
128. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	July 12, 1805	Capture	Schr. St. Tammany, Wright master.	$15,000. See last column
129. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	April 4, 1805	Capture	Schooner Tickler, Frost master.	$20,587. See last column
130. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Dec., 1805	Capture	Schooner Swift, Davis master.	$22,003. See last column
131. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Dec., 1805	Capture	Schooner Berry, Alley master.	$12,250. See last column
132. John L. Place, and the heirs of Thos. Brown.	France	Capture made December 6, 1810.	Capture	Ship Gen. Eaton, Place master.	Freight for charter, pounds sterling 2,560, equal to ..... $11,366 40 Expenses during 19 months detention in France, 55,094 francs ..... 11,000 00 Expenses in London, from the time of	Condemned by the admiralty court, London, December 19, 1812.	The General Eaton, on a voyage from London to Charleston, was captured by two French privateers, and conducted into Calais. She was detained in France from the date of her capture till February 24, 1812, when, by special decree of the Emperor Napoleon, she was released, and possession given to the Captain, he paying all

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
132—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	capture by the British, after leaving France, till the condemnation in London, in consequence of detention by the French prior to the declaration of war by the United States against England, pounds sterling 105 12s. 2d. ..... $467 00 Ship, 220 tons, at $50 per ton..... 11,000 00 Amount, &c..... 33,833 40 Interest appears to be claimed. Place of capture not stated.	.....	expenses. On the 4th June he received possession of the ship, but was not allowed to leave France till the ensuing 24th July, on which day he sailed from Calais for New York, and was captured by the English vessel-of-war the Cadmus, and conducted into the Downs. At the time of her capture by the French the ship was under charter for the voyage at the rate of six guineas per ton for rice, and 2½d. sterling per pound for cotton.
133. James Penniman...	France	Jan 23, 1812...	Capture and burning	Brig Gersham, Smith master.	About $2,000. Capture made in longitude 32°, and latitude 41° 30'.	Unknown	The brig Gersham, owned at Durbury, loaded at Boston with flour, corn, and rice, cleared for Oporto, and sailed from Boston Dec. 28, 1811. On her voyage she was captured and burnt by two French national frigates, the Arianne and the Andromache, of 44 guns each, and a gun-brig of 16 guns, under the command of Commodore Feretier.
134. Wm. Holmes, Plymouth, Mass.	France	Dec. 7, 1807...	Capture and condemnation.	Brig Rising Sun, Laban Burt master.	Value of vessel ..... $10,000 00 Freight of cargo ..... 4,888 89 Primage on cargo..... 977 96 Wages of the master, mate, and crew, from July 30, 1807, to August 26, 1808. 2,478 41 Their board in Amsterdam, 37 weeks.... 999 00 Fee of counsel in Amsterdam ..... 300 00 Provision bill, spare duck, and cordage.. 522 66 20,166 86 Insurance and interest are claimed. The vessel was captured in the North Sea.	The case was tried at Paris, and a decree of condemnation issued August 26, 1808.	The vessel was captured, on a voyage from Philadelphia to Tonningen, by the privateer Jene, commanded by Julius Jacobs, and was carried to Amsterdam.
135. Garland Thompson, executor of Thos. Mitchell, dec'd, late of Louisa co., Virginia.	France	1809.....	Capture and confiscation.	Brig John Adams, Banks master.	Thirty hogsheads of tobacco and three hogsheads of tobacco stems. The claimant alleges that the tobacco alone weighed 43,005 pounds net; and as tobacco sold all over the continent of Europe at that time for from $30 to $40 per hundred pounds, he estimates the loss at not less than $15,000, and for which, and for 17 years' interest, he deems the representatives of the deceased to have a rightful claim for $30,000.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	The tobacco and stems were shipped by the deceased on board the brig John Adams, bound for Hamburg and a market. The brig sailed from Norfolk, in Virginia, in the month of July, 1809. She was captured on her voyage to Hamburg by a French cruiser, carried into Dieppe, and her whole cargo confiscated without ceremony, as the executor is informed.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
136, 140. Dan'l W. Coxe, Philadelphia.	France	1810	Seizure and condemnation	Brig Good Friends, Harlow master.	34,048.86 francs. Seized at Morlaix	Condemned by the Emperor Napoleon, but when or where is not stated.	The vessel was bound from Philadelphia to Tonningen, and put into Morlaix in distress, where she was taken possession of by the French custom-house.
		1810	Seizure and condemnation	Schooner Postboy, Sparrow master.	28,580.25 francs. Seized at St. Sebastian	Condemned by the Emperor Napoleon; it is not said when or where.	The vessel was bound from Philadelphia to St Sebastian.
		1808	Capture and condemnation.	Ship Jas. Adams, Bangs master.	322,979.00 francs. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Dunkirk for alleged violation of the Berlin and Milan decrees. The date of it does not appear.	This ship was bound from Philadelphia to Amsterdam, and on her passage thither was sent into England; and, after having been there released, was captured by the French privateer Savage, and sent into Dunkirk.
		1810	Seizure and condemnation	Ship Hawk, Brown master.	26,563.60 francs. Seized at St. Sebastian	Condemnation by the Emperor Napoleon; the date of it, or where it was made, is not stated.	This ship was bound from Philadelphia to St. Sebastian.
		1808	Seizure and condemnation	Snow Edward, Lewis master.	222,997.10 francs. Seized at the Isle of Rhe 635,168.81 francs, equal, at 5.33⅓ francs per dollar, to $119,094 15. The claimant states that the duties were paid in France on the property aforesaid, and that the above amounts are therefore free of duties, and are without interest for about 17 years. He also alleges that the property, except that by the ship James Adams, was all applied to the use of the French Government. Mem.—$42,476 13 of this claim is probably included in No. 241 of claims on France.	Condemnation at Paris; it does not appear when.	This vessel was spoken on her voyage from Philadelphia to Nantes by a cruizer under French colors, and seized on her arrival for that reason. Bonds were given for the value of the goods, and paid when condemnation took place, for livres 222,997 10.
141. Benj. P. Homer, treasurer of the Com'l Ins. Office in Boston.	France	1811	Capture	Barque Zeno	$3,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation at Paris; date not stated.	The Zeno was owned by David Coffin, of Newburyport, and was bound from Boston to the north of Europe.
142. Same	France	Capture made May 4, 1811.	Capture	Ship Hercules	$10,000. It does not appear where the capture was made.	The condemnation was made at Paris; the date of it is not stated.	The vessel was laden with cotton and rice, bound from Charleston, South Carolina, to St. Petersburg, and was captured by the French cruiser Le Diable, Captain Klimerath, and sent to Dantzic. Humphrey Hathaway and others, of New Bedford, were the owners.
143. Same	France	1810	Capture	Brig Cubano	$2,677. The place of capture is not stated	No legal adjudication appears	Ephraim Locke, or agent, owner.
144. Same	France	1810	Capture	Brig Nancy and Mary	$3,296. No place stated	No legal adjudication appears	Owned by Ephraim Locke and others.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
145. Abner Burbank, of Washington, N.C., in his own right, as adm'r of Eleazer Burbank and Paul Jewet Burbank, both dec'sed, and as agent for Jas. Major and Phineas Cole.	France	1809	Capture and condemnation.	Brig Mount Peltier.	Cost and value of vessel $3,000 00 Cost of the cargo 10,000 00 Freight of the brig out to the West Indies 2,000 00 15,000 00 The place of capture is not mentioned.	Condemned in the port of Basseterre, in the island of Guadaloupe, and, as alleged by the claimant, without any ground, when both Governments were in amity; date not stated.	The capture was made on a voyage from Salem to St. Bartholomew.
146. Pratt & Kintzing, of Philadelphia.	France	Unknown	Capture and condemnation.	Swedish ship Anna Christina.	$8,009 24. No place mentioned.	Condemnation at Barracoa; the date of it is not stated.	The vessel was captured by a French privateer on a voyage from Cape François to Charleston.
147. Same	France	Unknown	Capture and condemnation.	Ship America	$17,572 92. Place of capture not stated.	It is not known whether or not there was any legal adjudication.	Captured by a French privateer on her voyage from Philadelphia to Amsterdam.
148. Same	France	Capture made Dec. 31, 1807.	Capture and confiscation.	Ship James Adams.	$30,173 71. It is not said where the capture was made.	Condemnation by the Council of Prizes, at Paris, July 13, 1808.	This ship was captured by the French privateer Le Sauvage on a voyage from Philadelphia to Amsterdam, and sent into Dunkirk.
149. George Dutch, of Salem.	France	Seizure made Dec. 28, 1809.	Seizure and confiscation.	Schooner Betsey, Thomas Holmes master.	One-fourth of the net sales of the vessel and effects on board belonging to the claimants, after deducting the sum received from the underwriters, $6,163 09; interest to December 31, 1826, $5,916 57. See next column.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication. It is alleged that the vessel and effects were seized and confiscated by the order of the Emperor of France without lawful cause, and, as is presumed, at St. Sebastian.	None.
150. Ephraim Felt, of Salem.	France	Nov. 15, 1811	Capture and destruction.	Brig Three Friends, Captain Lefavour.	$98. Latitude 7° 58′ north, longitude 25° 20′ west.	No adjudication	The brig Three Friends sailed from Salem in October, 1811, bound to Pernambuco, and was captured and burnt by two French frigates, the Medusa and Nymph.
151. Jacob Goodhue, of Columbus, Ohio.	France	1811	Sequestration	Radius	Sugar, coffee, pepper, and gum benjamin. $1,136 00 Interest 15 years 1,022 40 Add freightage 115 00 Wages five months 125 00 2,398 40 Gallapello, Gulph of Taranto, in Italy.	No adjudication	The vessel (of which the claimant was the chief officer) was bound to Gallapello, and was owned by William Gray.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
152. George Johnston, for himself and the executors or heirs of James Johnston, dec'd.	France.....	Mar. 1, 1808...	Destruction of the ship and cargo.	Ship William, of New York, Chas. Rockwell master.	Value of vessel, $20,000; freight on voyage from Liverpool to Savannah, $4,000; value of cargo belonging to the owners of the ship, $2,000. See last column.	No legal adjudication.....	The ship sailed from Liverpool on the 24th February, 1808, bound to Savannah, in Georgia, laden with a cargo of salt, crates of earthenware and other merchandise, in company with the ship Pocahontas, of Boston, ship Brutus, of Duxbury, and others, and on the evening of the 29th February, 1808, was boarded by an officer from the French frigates Hermoine and Hortense, bound from Martinique to France; and after an examination of the William's papers the Commodore stated it to be his duty to burn the vessel, agreeably to the orders he had received from the French Government. The crews of the frigates then proceeded to plunder the William of her provisions, water, some crates and sails, and carried them on board the frigates, and on the 1st March, 1808, burnt her and the residue of her cargo to the water's edge. The Brutus was burnt in the latter part of the same day; the crates on board of the Pocahontas were thrown overboard, and the crews of the William and Brutus, and of the Eliza, of New York, previously burnt, were put on board the Pocahontas and ordered to Boston.
153. The Philadelphia Insurance Company.	France.....	May 11, 1812...	Seizure and destruction..	Brig Mary, Craycroft master.	$12,500 insured on the cargo, which, exclusive of premium of insurance, cost at Havana and Philadelphia $31,088 52½, all for account of Lelapier and W. Hunt, of Philadelphia. See last column.	No adjudication.....	The vessel and cargo were plundered and destroyed on the high seas on the passage from Havana to Smyrna by the frigates l'Arianne, Commodore Ferretier, and l'Andromaque, Captain Maurice, and corvette l'Mameluke. A memorial has been filed with the proper authorities in France claiming indemnity, but no redress has been obtained.
154. Same.....	France.....	1810.....	Sequestration.....	Schooner Post Boy.	$3,000 insured on the cargo for account of the shipper, W. J. Miller, of Philadelphia. See last column.	There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	The cargo was seized and sequestered at St. Sebastian on arrival from Philadelphia.
155. Henry Thompson and Jonathan Meredith, administrators of Charles and Peter Weigman, late of Baltimore, deceased.	France.....	Dec. 31, 1812...	Capture and destruction..	Ship William Wilson, of Baltimore.	Value of ship, exclusive of $12,000 insured $8,000 00 Value of cargo not insured..... 16,272 00 Freight not insured..... ..... 2,440 00 26,712 00 Latitude 36° 10′ north, longitude 18° 20′.	No adjudication.....	This ship was captured on a voyage from Lisbon to Baltimore, with a cargo of salt, by the French frigate La Glorie, Captain A. Roussin, and was sunk by the captors at sea.
156. Jas. Riley, of Willshire, Ohio.	France....	Seizure made in Jan., 1808.	Seizure and condemnation.	Ship Two Marys, of New York.	Part of the cargo, primage on the freight, and his wages and expenses as master of the ship, until his arrival in New York in July, 1809..... $6,946 80 Interest to October 1, 1826..... 8,841 28 15,788 08 Seized at Belle Isle, in the Bay of Biscay.	Condemnation at Paris by the Council of Prizes under the Milan decree, December 15, 1808.	None.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
157. John R. Watson, of New York, one of the heirs of James Watson, jr., deceased, for himself and others interested.	France	Seizure made in Jan., 1808.	Seizure and condemnation.	Ship Two Marys, James Riley master.	51 boxes of sugar, 20 tons of logwood, 150 bags of pimento, freight of the vessel, and charges incurred in consequence of the seizure, $35,872 70. (See last column.) Seized at Belle Isle.	Condemned at Paris on the 15th December, 1808, by the Council Imperial of Prizes, under the Milan decree of 17th December, 1807.	The vessel sailed from New York on the 25th December, 1807. The amount claimed includes interest, at seven per cent., from March 1, 1808, to October 1, 1826, eighteen years and seven months, on $13,341 74, and for the same time, and at the same rate, on $2,249 48.
158. John Lawrence, for himself and others.	France	Jan. 10, 1810...	Seizure.....	Brig St. Tammany, Hussey master.	Cost of vessel ..... $5,000 00 Outfit for the voyage..... 2,246 09 Premium of insurance ..... 1,226 25 8,472 34 Interest thereon from November 8, 1809, to December 8, 1826, seventeen years and one month, at seven per cent. per annum ..... 10,131 50 18,603 84 Seizure made at St. Sebastian.	No legal adjudication appears...	The brig St. Tammany, owned by Thomas H. Smith, jr., Rankin & Hyer, John Colvill, and Lawrence & Whitney, all citizens of the United States, sailed from New York on or about November 24, 1809, bound for St. Sebastian; and on her arrival there, January 10, 1810, the vessel and her cargo, belonging to the same owners, were taken possession of under a decree of the Emperor of France, directing a general sequestration of all vessels belonging, in whole or in part, to any citizens of the United States, which had, subsequently to May 20, 1809, entered, or should thereafter enter, the ports of the French Empire, their colonies, or the countries occupied by their armies. The vessel and cargo were afterwards removed to Bayonne, in France, and there sold, and the proceeds held by the French Government. The cargo was insured by the Phenix Insurance Company, in New York, and afterwards paid for by them; but the vessel was insured against the risk of the sea only. She became a total loss, therefore, to the owners.
159. David Brand.....	France	April, 1808.....	Capture.....	Ship Roboreus, Hall master.	Value of 5 cases of merchandise, $360. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication	The ship Roboreus cleared from Baltimore April 16, 1808, with an assorted cargo, bound to New Orleans, Louisiana. She was an American vessel, registered according to law, and furnished with the requisite papers and documents. She was captured by a French cruiser, and taken into the island of Cuba.

INDEX TO CLAIMS ON NAPLES.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.	Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Boston Marine Insurance Company	3	$8,000 00	Hooper, R. & J., and others	6	$35,000 00
Do do	4	15,000 00	King, Samuel, and others	29	535 00
Bradbury, Charles, for self and others	17	17,400 00	Maryland Insurance Company, assign's, &c	25	5,500 00
Do do	18	2,725 00	Marblehead Social Insurance Company	26	400 00
Do do	19	3,000 00	Do do	27	1,000 00
Do do	20	1,500 00	Do do	28	600 00
Do do	21	5,250 00	Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia	38	7,600 00
Do do	22	9,150 00	Oliver, Robert and John, and others	58	300,000 00
Do do	23	5,000 00	Oliver, Robert and John	59	30,854 74
Do do	24	5,500 00	Do	60	25,000 00
Barker, George, administrator	39	402 00	Prince, Henry	31	2,157 00
Barton, John, and others	30	14,091 34	Do	32	350 00
Brazer, John	61	15,000 00	Peabody, Joseph, and another	36	159,807 28
Craven, N. A. & I. T	1	15,321 73	Do	37	70,245 85
Cook, James	33	3,894 98	Proctor, William	75	306 80
Do	34	500 00	Page, Jery Lee	76	.....
Coulter, John	79	107,685 60	Do	77	.....
Dutch & Deland	40	57,137 09	Do	78	.....
Do	41	1,741 14	Roulet, John S., (including G. S. Mumford's proportion)	83	18,000 00
Do	42	11,000 00	Russell, Nathaniel P., agent	12	2,000 00
Do	43	1,633 42	Do	13	500 00
Do	44	4,200 00	Social Insurance Company of Salem	46	9,000 00
Dodge, Pickering, and others	45	9,600 00	Do do	47	6,000 00
Dodge, Pickering	73	1,380 67	Do do	43	5,500 00
Do	74	2,181 40	Do do	49	10,000 00
Derby, Fishing Company	81	26,000 00	Do do	50	10,000 00
Ellicott, T., and others	5	25,058 00	Do do	51	8,500 00
Gray, Henry	10	600 00	Do do	52	4,000 00
Gray, heirs of Samuel	11	19,000 00	Do do	53	7,663 70
Gray, William R	14	2,135 52	Do do	54	5,000 00
Do	15	8,166 77	Silsbee, Nathaniel, and others	35	84,882 43
Do	16	1,000 00	Stewart, Alexander	80	5,307 50
Gray, estate of William	62	46,900 00	Thorndike, Israel	7	20,000 00
Do	63	12,300 00	Do	8	60,000 00
Do	64	15,250 00	Do	9	150,000 00
Do	65	9,200 00	Union Marine Insurance Company of Salem	55	7,000 00
Do	66	18,042 00	Do do	56	10,000 00
Do	67	4,252 00	Do do	57	10,000 00
Do	68	3,438 88	Von Kapff & Brune and others	2	31,382 84
Do	69	7,700 00	West, Nathaniel	82	157,208 64
Do	70	1,850 00
Do	71	2,900 00	Amount of claims on Naples	.....	1,784,990 32
Do	72	1,600 00

CLAIMS ON NAPLES.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
1. N. A. & J. T. Craven, of Portsmouth, N. Hampshire.	Naples	March 20, 1812.	Sequestration of the vessel and cargo, appropriation of the cargo, and detention of the vessel.	Ship Horace, sequestered and detained.	$15,321 73. Loss was sustained at Naples.....	No legal adjudication	The ship Horace was chartered to carry a cargo of pilchards, &c., to Naples; and on arriving there was, with her cargo, sequestered. The cargo was taken by the Government, and no freight was paid. The ship was not liberated till June 22, 1812. The claim is for total loss of freight, demurrage, and expenses.
Von Kapff & Brune, and others.	Naples	October, 1809..	Seizure	Schooner Zephyr, Murphy master.	Cost of cargo in Baltimore ..... $21,382 84 Value of schooner .... 10,000 00 31,382 84 Freight and expense of the voyage. Seizure made at Naples.	Not stated.....	The schooner Zephyr sailed from Baltimore in July, 1809, for Tunis; proceeded from Tunis to Naples with a cargo of sugar, coffee, and logwood. The papers were in regular order. The supercargo arrived at Naples in October, 1809. The vessel and cargo were seized, and the claimants believe ultimately condemned. The vessel was permitted to come to America, the consignees giving bond for her; the amount of which bond the consignees claim from the present claimants, and also considerable expenses. The claimants have entered claims for the restoration of the property in Naples, as well as Paris, but without effect.
3. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	Naples	1810.....	Detention and confiscation.	Schooner Maria, Cleaveland master.	Paid J. Cleaveland, March 4, 1822, $8,000. Place of detention not stated.	No adjudication appears.....	This vessel was insured "from Boston to ports in Italy, south of Orbitello and Pereiro." She was detained by the Neapolitan Government, and sold for the benefit of the Royal Treasury in 1810.
4. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	Naples	1810.....	Seizure	Brig Two Betsys, Gardner master.	Paid I. Thorndike, August 22, 1810, $15,000. Place of seizure not stated.	No adjudication appears.....	The vessel was insured "from Beverley to the Mediterranean," and seized by the Government.
5. T. Ellicott and Jonathan Meredith, trustees of S. Smith and Buchanan.	Naples	1809..... ...	Seizure and confiscation..	Brig Sophia.....	Cost of shipment, $25,058. Seizure made at Naples	No legal adjudication	The Sophia sailed for Tunis and Naples in 1809. She was seized and confiscated under the Rambouillet decree. This case was under the charge of Alexander Hamett, United States Consul at Naples, and brought to the attention of Wm. H. Crawford, Esq., in June, 1813, then minister to France.
6. R. & J. Hooper, W. & N. Hooper, and William Reed, of Marblehead.	Naples	1810.....	Sequestration.....	Schooner John	$35,000. Sequestration made at Naples.....	No legal adjudication	This vessel sailed from Marblehead for Naples, was there sequestered, and the whole property retained by the Government.
7. Israel Thorndike....	Naples	1810.....	Sequestration.....	Schooner Dove	$20,000. Loss sustained at Naples	No legal adjudication	The schooner Dove, Captain David Thomas, sailed about November 16, 1809, with a full cargo of American fish, belonging to claimant, bound to Naples, under the faith of the decree of the King of Naples of the 17th July, 1809. After her arrival in that port the vessel and cargo were confiscated and sold, and the proceeds deposited in the public chest.
8. Israel Thorndike....	Naples	1810.....	Confiscation.....	Schooner Mary	$60,000. Confiscation took place at Civita Vecchia.	No legal adjudication	The schooner Mary, Henry Larcom master, sailed from Beverley about the 28th of March, 1809, bound to Sardinia; proceeded from thence to Civita Vecchia, where she and her cargo were confiscated and sold by order of the Neapolitan Government, and proceeds of the cargo (sugar, coffee, pepper, &c.,) deposited in the public chest.

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
9. Israel Thorndike....	Naples	1810.....	Sequestration.....	Brig Two Betsys ..	$150,000. Sequestration took place at Naples.....	No legal adjudication	The brig Two Betsys, John Gardner master, sailed from Beverley about the 8th of September, 1809, bound on a voyage to the Mediterranean; arrived at the port of Algiers; sailed from thence for Naples without disposing of any part of the cargo, under faith of the decree of the King of Naples of the 17th July, 1809. Arrived in Naples November 30, 1809, where she was, with her cargo, taken possession of by the Neapolitan Government, and vessel and cargo confiscated and sold, and the proceeds deposited in the public chest.
10. Henry Gray, of Boston.	Naples	December, 1810	Seizure	Ship Henry, Gardner master.	$600. This sum was a loss to Henry Gray, insurer on tobacco. Seizure made at Naples.	No adjudication appears	This vessel and cargo were confiscated under a decree of the King of Naples, March 12, 1810. The property was insured for S. Upton and J. Lee Page by the claimant.
11. Heirs of Saml. Gray, deceased, Brooks and Ward, executors.	Naples	Feb. 13, 1810...	Capture	Schooner William, Turner master.	Vessel, $2,000; net sales at Naples, $36,000; amount claimed by the heirs of Samuel Gray, exclusive of interest, is $19,000. Capture made in the Gulf of Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	The schooner William was captured in the Gulf of Naples by a Neapolitan privateer. Vessel and cargo were immediately seized, confiscated under a decree of the King of Naples, dated March 2, 1810, and subsequently sold. There was no insurance. One-half of said vessel and cargo belonged to Samuel Gray, and one-half to Wm. R. Gray, of Boston. The heirs claim for their one-half of said vessel and cargo, exclusive of interest, $19,000.
12. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	Naples	1811.....	Seizure	Schooner Oceanus..	$2,000. Seizure made at Naples	No adjudication appears.....	The schooner Oceanus was seized at Naples, and cargo sold by order of the Government; total loss.
13. Nathaniel P. Russell, agent.	Naples	1811..... ...	Seizure	Ship Henry.....	$500. Seizure made at Naples.....	No adjudication appears	The ship Henry was seized at Naples, and cargo sold by order of the Government; total loss.
14. Wm. R. Gray, Boston	Naples	Dec. 9, 1809....	Capture	Brig Victory, Felt master.	$2,135 52. Capture made in the Bay of Naples	No legal adjudication appears...	Sixty-six hogsheads of sugar were shipped in the Victory by B. T. Reese, of Marblehead, Mass.; half for his and half for claimant's account. The vessel was captured by a French privateer, and the sugars confiscated by a decree of the King of Naples. The present claim is for half the value of the shipment.
15. William R. Gray	Naples	1810.....	Capture	Schooner William, Turner master.	One-half of 96 boxes of sugar and 870 bags pepper..... $6,760 66 Expenses..... 1,406 11 8,166 77 Capture appears to have been made at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears...	The sugar and pepper were purchased by the claimant of Samuel Gray after shipment, and before sailing of the vessel from Salem for Naples. A. Hamett, American Consul at Naples, certifies, June 12, 1810: "Captured and forcibly kept possession of; cargo and adventures sold by order of Neapolitan Government."
16. William R. Gray	Naples	May 18, 1810...	Sequestration.....	Brig Radius, Larder master.	$1,000. Sequestration made at Galliopoli.	No legal adjudication appears...	Insured for B. Larder and W. B. Sweet by Peter Larder, at Salem, agent for claimant; total loss paid.
17. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Naples	1810.....	Capture and sequestration	Schooner Mary....	$17,400. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears ..	The schooner Mary was taken by two Neapolitan gunboats, carried to Civita Vecchia, and condemned by the King of Naples.
18. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Naples	1810.....	Detention	Brig Perseverance..	$2,725. Loss sustained at Naples	No legal adjudication appears ..	None.

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
19. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Naples	1810	Condemnation	Ship Hercules	$3,000. Condemnation took place at Naples	Condemnation at Naples; date not stated.	None.
20. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Naples	1810	Condemnation	Brig Despatch	$1,500. Condemnation took place at Naples	Condemnation at Naples; date not stated.	None.
21. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Naples	1810	Capture and sequestration	Schooner Amherst.	$5,250. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears	This schooner was taken by a privateer under French colors, carried to Naples, and confiscated by the King.
22. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Naples	1810	Capture and sequestration	Ship Maria	$9,150. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears	The Maria was taken by a privateer under French colors, carried to Naples, and confiscated by the King.
23. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Naples	1810	Seizure	Schooner Urania	$5,000. Seizure made at Naples	No legal adjudication appears	The Urania was seized in Naples and confiscated.
24. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Naples	1810	Seizure	Schooner Oceanus.	$5,500. Seizure made at Naples	No legal adjudication appears	This vessel was seized in Naples and confiscated.
25. Maryland Insurance Comp'y, assignees of John Holmes.	Naples	Oct., 1809	Capture	Brig Orozimbo	$5,500. Capture made near Palermo	Vessel and cargo condemned by an Inferior Court of Prizes at Naples, and afterwards by the King; date not stated.	This brig sailed from Baltimore August, 1809, for Palermo and a market, near which place she was captured by the Neapolitan privateer Jakin, (Joachim,) and carried to Naples, where vessel and cargo were condemned to be sold, and the proceeds to be deposited in the caisse d'amortissement. Documents are in the hands of Mr. Hamett, Consul at Naples, sent by Mr. Appleton, as the claimants are informed.
26. Marblehead Social Insurance Company.	Naples	Jan. 26, 1809	Capture and confiscation.	Ship Francis	$400. Capture made in the Bay of Naples	No adjudication	This ship was captured by a Government vessel, carried to Naples, and confiscated. The amount claimed was paid to Z. Kemp, the insured.
27. Marblehead Social Insurance Co.	Naples	Dec. 2, 1809	Seizure and confiscation.	Brig Romp	$1,000. Seizure made at Naples	No adjudication appears	The brig Romp was confiscated at Naples. The amount claimed was paid to S. White, the insured.
28. Marblehead Social Insurance Co.	Naples	Jan. 19, 1810	Seizure and confiscation.	Brig Sukey and Betsey.	$600. Seizure made at Galliopoli	No adjudication.	This vessel was confiscated in the port of Galliopoli. The amount claimed was paid to J. Hauscomb, the insured.
29. Samuel King, Stephen Whittemore, and Wm. Foster, of Salem.	Naples	Dec. 1, 1809	Confiscation	Brig Romp	Amount claimed by S. King $245 00 S. Whittemore 200 00 Foster 90 00 Amount, &c 535 00 Loss sustained at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears	The property was placed under restraint on the arrival of the Romp at Naples, about the 1st day of December, 1809; was taken possession of, landed, and sold, by order of the King, through the Minister of Finance; and was confiscated by a decree of the King, dated March 12, 1810.
30. John Barton, Geo. Cleaveland, Edward Waldo.	Naples	January, 1811	Sequestration	Schooner Oceanus.	$6,191	No legal adjudication	This vessel sailed from Boston November 20, 1810, immediately after the proclamation of the President of the United States declaring the revocation of the Berlin and Milan decrees. She arrived at Naples the last day of December, and was sequestrated, and the cargo carried away between the 28th and 30th January. No cause for this treatment was assigned, nor could any papers of condemnation be obtained from the Government. The vessel was taken into the ser-
Nathaniel Appleton, Wm. Peale, administrator.					$1,463 70
John White					1,552 17

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
30. John Norris					$990 34		vice of the Neapolitan Marine, and the captain and crew were kept for a long time in a criminal prison. The proceeds of the confiscation passed into a bureau for the special purpose of creating a marine. An eighty-four gun ship and two frigates were actually built, and, after the restoration of Ferdinand IV, formed a part of the navy. The claimants state that there were other shippers besides those enumerated.
Wm. Lauder and T. B. Osgood.					1,404 32
Jonathan Ingersoll					1,402 80
John Prince					1,087 81
					7,900 34
					Sequestration made at Naples.
31. Henry Prince	Naples	1809	Seizure	Brig Romp	$2,157. Seizure at Naples	No legal adjudication	This claimant shipped on board the brig Romp, in the year 1809, certain articles of merchandise, consisting of 3 boxes of codfish, 4 seroons Spanish indigo, 3 casks cocoa, and 1 cask beeswax. The brig sailed from Salem in said year, bound to Naples, where she arrived that year, and, with her cargo, was seized and confiscated by order of the French authorities in that city. In consequence thereof the merchandise was wholly lost.
32. Henry Prince	Naples	1809	Seizure	Brig Romp and sch. Mary.	$350. Seizure made at Naples	No legal adjudication	This claim is for merchandise, consisting of coffee and pepper, shipped on board said vessels, and arrived at Naples 1810, where it was seized. The shippers were James Silver, Joseph Baker, and J. C. King, of Salem, who have since transferred to the claimant their right and interest in the shipment.
33. James Cook	Naples	Mar. 12, 1810	Confiscation	Brig Romp	Amount of invoice and insurance is	$3,894 98	No adjudication appears	Papers, protest, &c., in the hands of N. Silsbee, who forwarded the brig Romp's accounts, including the present claim.
					Amount of sales	10,390 62
					Confiscation made at Naples.
34. James Cook	Naples	Mar. 12, 1810	Confiscation	Maria	Amount of invoice and insurance	500 00	No adjudication appears	Papers, protest, &c., with James Cook, John Prince, jr., and Moses Townsend. This amount included in insurance by L. Kimball, John Prince, jr., agent, George Nicholls, and B. Pierce, insurers.
					Amount of sales	1,139 08
					Confiscation made at Naples.
35. Nathaniel Silsbee	Naples	Dec., 1809	Sequestration	Romp	Merchandise and one-eighth of vessel	$9,662 42	No legal adjudication appears	The Romp was a new vessel, built and fitted in the best manner, and cost $18,000. She sailed from Salem in October, 1809, for Naples, and on arriving there, about December 1, 1809, was, with her cargo, placed under restraint. The cargo was taken, landed, and sold, by order of the King, through the Minister of Finance, about the last of December, and the whole confiscated by a decree of the King, dated March 12, 1810. The cargo, according to the account of sales rendered, produced at Naples (exclusively of embezzlement, which was found, by the deficiency of the weight of the articles sold, to be about twenty per cent.) 116,738.27 ducats, equal to $93,390 62. The vessel was not sold till a later period, and the claimants have no account of what was obtained for her.
James Devereux					Merchandise and one-eighth of vessel	9,813 25
Thomas Whitredge					Merchandise and one-eighth of vessel	11,929 21
Robert Stone					Merchandise and one-sixteenth of vessel.	4,559 40
Jos. J. Knapp, Jere. Briggs, Arch. Rea.					Merchandise and three-sixteenths of vessel	10,581 35
Moses Townsend					Merchandise and one-sixteenth of vessel.	1,840 95
Estate of Joseph White, jr.					Merchandise and one sixteenth of vessel.	3,644 16
Estate of Joshua Ward.					Merchandise and one-sixteenth of vessel.	3,562 13
Joseph Ropes					Merchandise and one-sixteenth of vessel.	3,462 88

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
35. Richard Crowninshield.	.....	.....	.....	.....	Merchandise and one-sixteenth of vessel. $5,535 47
Daniel Sage.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Merchandise and one-sixteenth of vessel. 1,125 00
James Cook.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Merchandise..... 2,286 98
Joseph Hartshorne, Jona. Holman.	.....	.....	.....	.....	Merchandise..... 1,608 00
James Silver.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Merchandise..... 2,060 75
					Six tons logwood, belonging jointly to all the owners of the vessel..... 300 00
John Prichard, admr. of Wm. Lauder, then captain of the vessel.	.....	.....	.....	.....	..... 1,500 39
John C. Verry, 2d mate of the vessel.	.....	.....	.....	.....	..... 372 96
					Amount of a bill of exchange drawn by Captain Lauder, for charges (principally for landing the cargo) which he was compelled to pay before he could obtain permission to leave Naples..... 1,713 13
					Freight of vessel out, say 233 tons, at $40 per ton, which, after deducting insurance on the cost of the vessel, and amount of freight at the then actual rate of insurance, (20 per cent.,) would leave only 16½ per ton, is..... 9,320 00
					84,882 43
36. Joseph Peabody and Gideon Tucker.	Naples.....	1810.....	Capture and confiscation.	Ship Francis, Haskell master.	$159,807 28. Capture made off the entrance of the Bay of Naples.	No legal adjudication.....	This ship sailed from Salem December 14, 1809, with a full cargo of pepper, for Naples, under the faith of the decree of the King of Naples of 17th July, 1809. She was taken January 25, 1810, by a Neapolitan frigate, and carried into Naples, where vessel and cargo were confiscated and sold, and the proceeds deposited in the public chest.
37. Joseph Peabody and Gideon Tucker.	Naples.....	1810.....	Sequestration.....	Brig Betsey, Tucker master.	$70,245 85. Sequestration made at Naples.....	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Betsey sailed from Salem on the 1st day of November, 1809, with a cargo of cocoa, sugar and coffee, bound to Naples, under the faith of the decree of the King of Naples of the 17th July, 1809. She arrived at Naples the 12th of April, 1810, where the vessel and cargo were confiscated and sold, and the proceeds deposited in the public chest.

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
38. Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Naples.....	1809.....	Capture	Schooner Shadow, Matthews master.	$7,600. Place of capture not stated.....	No adjudication appears.....	The Shadow, bound from Philadelphia to Messina, was captured and carried into Naples. After a detention of two years, one-eighth of the cargo was restored.
39. George Barker, admr.	Naples.....	1810.....	Sequestration.....	Ship Francis.....	$402. Sequestration made at the port of Naples.....	No adjudication appears.....	The claimant's property was confiscated at Naples.
40. Dutch & Deland	Naples	Dec., 1809.....	Seizure	Brig Victory, Felt master.	Net proceeds of sales of vessel and effects at Naples belonging to claimants. $80,637 09 Received of underwriters, including premium..... 23,500 00 57,137 09 Interest to December 31, 1826..... 54,851 60 Seizure made at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears...	The American brig Victory, of Salem, and the effects on board, on her voyage from Salem to Naples, was captured by subjects of the King of Naples, acting by his orders, and carried into the port of Naples, and while there was seized and confiscated by orders of the said King, whereby the same have become wholly lost to the claimants. The confiscation was made under the decree of the King of the Two Sicilies of March 12, 1810.
41. Dutch & Deland	Naples	Dec., 1809.....	Seizure	Brig Victory	..... $1,741 14 Interest to December 31, 1826 ..... 1,671 49 Amount, &c..... 3,412 63 Seizure made at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears ..	This claim is for the net proceeds of sales at Naples of an adventure shipped in the Victory by E. Learock, and transferred to Dutch & Deland. Remarks in No. 40 apply to this case.
42. Dutch & Deland	Naples	Feb., 1810.....	Seizure	Schooner Nancy, Holman master.	Net proceeds of sales of vessel and effects at Naples belonging to claimants. $15,000 00 Received from underwriters, including premium ..... 4,000 00 11,000 00 Interest to December 31, 1826..... 10,560 00 21,560 00 Seizure made at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears...	The claimants state this claim to be for effects on board the American schooner Nancy, which vessel, with her effects, while lying in the port of Naples, was seized and confiscated by order of the King, whereby the same became wholly lost to the claimants. The confiscation was made as in No. 40.
43. Dutch & Deland.....	Naples	Dec., 1809.....	Seizure.....	Brig Romp.....	Net proceeds of sales at Naples of Dutch & Deland's proportion..... $1,633 42 Interest to December 31, 1826..... 1,567 08 Amount ..... 3,200 50 Seizure made at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears...	For a policy of insurance, whereby claimants assured to Thomas Whitredge $1,000 on the American brig Romp, appurtenances and effects, at and from Salem to Naples; at and from thence to one or more ports in the Mediterranean, not above Sicily, for the purpose of disposing of her outward, and procuring a return cargo at and from them, or either of them, to her port of discharge in the United States. The insured abandoned the vessel and effects as a total loss on the ground that the brig, with the effects on board, arrived at Naples in the month of December, 1809, and was seized and confiscated without lawful cause, and without the default of the said Thomas, or the master or mariners of said brig, by the order of the King of Naples, whereby the same became wholly lost to the said Thomas. The confiscation was made as in No. 40.

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
44. Dutch & Deland.....	Naples	Dec., 1809.....	Seizure	Brig Victory	Net proceeds of sales at Naples of John Collins' adventure..... $4,200 00 Interest to December 31, 1826 ..... 4,032 00 Amount, &c..... ..... 8,232 00 Seizure appears to have been made at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears...	This claim is for an adventure shipped in the American brig Victory, and transferred to claimants by John Collins. The property was confiscated under the decree of the King of the Two Sicilies, dated March 12, 1810.
45. Pickering Dodge and others, underwriters; John Prince, jr., agent.	Naples	1810.....	Seizure and confiscation.	Schooner Maria, Cleaveland master.	$9,600. The loss was sustained at Naples.....	No legal adjudication appears ..	Property insured by the claimants appears to have been seized and sequestered under a decree of the King of Naples. The claimants have filed in this case, and refer to, their policy of insurance, dated January 18, 1810.
46. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Naples.....	March 12, 1810.	Confiscation.....	Brig Romp	Amount insured, $9,000; sales, $14,650. Confiscation made at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears..	Papers, protest, &c., with N. Silsbee. The amount claimed is included in brig Romp's claim. Copies of the documents in the Department of State in 1811 and 1816.
47. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Naples.....	....	Confiscation.....	Brig Two Betsies...	Insured, $6,000; sales, $17,748 52. Confiscation made at Naples.	No adjudication.....	Papers, protest, &c., with Israel Thorndike. This amount included in brig Two Betsies. Copies and statement in Department of State.
48. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Naples.....	May 12, 1810...	Confiscation.....	Brig Sukey and Betsey.	Insured, $5,500; sales, $11,000. The capture or injury is stated to have been at Galliopoli.	No legal adjudication	Papers, protest, &c., with Stephen White, Esq. This amount included in the brig's claim. Copies of this statement in the Department of State. Confiscation is stated to have taken place at Naples, May 12, 1810.
49. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Naples.....	March 12, 1810.	Confiscation..... ..	Maria	Insured, $10,000; sales, $27,942 32. Confiscation made at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	Papers, protest, &c., with J. Cook, M. Townsend, and John Prince, being wholly insured. Copies of this statement in Department of State. John Tappan, Sewall, Salsbury & Co., and S. Higginson, former owners.
50. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Naples.....	May 12, 1810...	Confiscation.....	Fortune	Insured, $10,000; sales, $23,103 14. Confiscation made at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	Papers, protest, &c., with James Cook and others. Copies of this statement in Department of State. Saunders & Upton and J. Lee Page, former owners.
51. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Naples..... .	March 12, 1810.	Confiscation.....	Victory	Insured, $8,500; sales, $21,606 78. Confiscation made at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	Papers, protest, &c., with James Cook and others. Copies of this statement in Department of State. Dutch & Deland, former owners.
52. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Naples.....	.....	Confiscation.....	Nancy	Insured, $4,000; sales, $8,547. Confiscation made at Naples.	No adjudication appears...	Papers, protest, &c., with J. Cook and others. Copies of this statement in Department of State. Dutch & Deland, J. Mudge, &c., former owners.
53. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Naples.....	May 12, 1810...	Confiscation.....	Mary.....	Amount insured, $7,663 70; sales, $17,335 77. Confiscation made at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	Papers, protest, &c., with James Cook and others. Copies of this statement in the Department of State. John Fairfield and others, former owners.
54. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Naples.....	Aug. 11, 1809...	Capture.....	Margaret	Amount insured, $5,000. The capture or injury is stated to have taken place at Naples.	No adjudication appears	Papers, protest, &c., with John Crowninshield and others, former owners. The claimants state that the Margaret was captured by a French privateer; that a compromise at 50 per cent. with the captors was made at Naples, December 17, 1809; and the vessel foundered on her passage home.

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
55. Union Marine Insurance Company of Salem.	Naples.....	Dec. 22, 1809...	Confiscation.....	Brig Two Betsies, Gardner master.	Insured for Israel Thorndike on effects, $7,000. Confiscation made at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	The claimants refer to documents in the possession of the assured; whose claims may, they suppose, include the present claim.
56. Union Marine Insurance Company of Salem.	Naples.....	Dec. 23, 1809...	Confiscation.....	Ship Francis, Haskell master.	Insured for Joseph Peabody on effects, $10,000. Confiscation made at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	Same as in No. 55.
57. Union Marine Insurance Company of Salem.	Naples.....	Dec. 25, 1809...	Confiscation.....	Schooner Maria....	Insured for John Tappan, Sewall, Salsbury & Co., and Stephen Higginson, jr., on effects, $10,000. Confiscation at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	Same as in No. 55.
58. Robert and John Oliver, Robert Gilmore and Son, and Hugh Thompson.	Naples.....	1810.....	Seizure.....	Not named	$300,000. Place of seizure not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	The papers respecting this claim were delivered to the late William Pinkney, when minister at Naples, and afterwards to Mr. Appleton. The sum of $300,000, exclusive of interest, is short of the amount actually due by the Neapolitan Government. There was in this case a confiscation by that Government.
59. Robert and John Oliver.	Naples.....	1810.....	Seizure.....	Brig Orozimbo.....	$30,854 74. Place of seizure not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	The brig Orozimbo and cargo were seized and confiscated at Palermo. The papers in this case are in the possession of Mr. Appleton, and the sum here stated, exclusive of interest, is short of the amount actually due. There was in this case a confiscation by the Neapolitan Government.
60. Robert and John Oliver.	Naples.....	1810.....	Seizure.....	Schooner Hound...	$25,000. Place of seizure not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The schooner Hound and cargo were seized and confiscated at Naples by the Neapolitan Government. The papers in this case are in the possession of Mr. Appleton, and the sum here stated, exclusive of interest, is short of the amount actually due.
61. John Brazer.....	Naples.....	Not stated. ...	Unknown.....	Ship Henry.....	$15,000. Loss was sustained at Naples.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The claimant states that the ship Henry and cargo were captured or injured, and that the act complained of is the imperial decrees of 1811.
62. William Gray's estate	Naples.....	January, 1810..	Sequestration.....	Ship Trent, Cavendish master.	Cargo and expenses..... $31,900 00 Freight..... 4,000 00 Vessel..... 8,000 00 Amount, &c..... 46,900 00 Seizure made at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears...	The Trent arrived at Naples about the 20th January, 1810, and was immediately seized, and vessel and cargo were confiscated by decree of J. Napoleon, King of the Two Sicilies, March 12, 1810, and subsequently sold. Decedent was owner.
63. William Gray's estate	Naples.....	March, 1810 ...	Sequestration.....	Schooner Louisiana, Newhall master.	Cargo and expenses..... $8,700 00 Freight..... 1,000 00 Vessel..... 2,600 00 Amount..... 12,300 00 Seizure made at Naples.	No legal adjudication appears...	Vessel arrived at Naples about the 20th of March, 1810. The vessel and cargo were seized and disposed of in the same manner as the Trent and her cargo (No. 62) were. Decedent was owner.

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
64. William Gray's estate	Naples.....	May, 1810.....	Sequestration.....	Brig Radius, Lander master.	Half cargo and expenses..... $6,250 00 Vessel..... 5,000 00 Freight..... 2,500 00 13,750 00 Loss as insurer on vessel and cargo..... 1,500 00 Amount, &c..... 15,250 00 Sequestration made at Galliopoli.	No legal adjudication appears...	The Radius sailed from Salem for Galliopoli in March, 1810. The sequestration took place May 18, 1810. William Gray owned one-half, W. B. Sweet one-fourth, Captain Lander one-fourth, of the vessel and cargo. W. Gray, by his agent, P. Lander, at Salem, insured Sweet and Lander out, and cargo $1,500. The property disposed of as the Trent and her cargo (No. 62) were.
65. William Gray's estate	Naples.....	January, 1810..	Capture.....	Brig Phenix, Haskell master.	Vessel..... $8,000 00 Specie on board..... 1,200 00 Amount, &c..... 9,200 00 Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	The Phenix was captured by a Neapolitan frigate and sent into Naples. Vessel and cargo disposed of as the Trent and her cargo (No. 62) were. Decedent was owner.
66. William Gray's estate	Naples.....	October, 1809..	Capture.....	Brig Victory, Felt master.	Loss to Wm. Gray as insurer on vessel.. $3,000 00 Cargo..... 14,500 00 Interest on cargo..... 542 00 Amount, &c..... 18,042 00 Capture made in the bay of Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	The Victory was captured by a French privateer and sent into Naples. The vessel and cargo were condemned at Naples by decree of J. Napoleon, King of the Two Sicilies, 12th March, 1810. This claim was derived to decedent thus, viz: Insured by him for Dutch and Deland, of Salem, on vessel and cargo..... $15,000 00 Insured by him for B. T. Read, of Marblehead. $2,500 00 Purchased of him uninsured interest..... 542 00 3,042 00
67. Wm. Gray's estate..	Naples.....	February, 1810.	Seizure.....	Schr. Mary, Derby master.	Loss as part owner of vessel and cargo, $4,252. Seizure made at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	This vessel was sent into Naples by a Neapolitan privateer, February 16, 1810, and there seized. The vessel and cargo were confiscated at Naples, by a decree of J. Napoleon, King of the Two Sicilies, 12th of March, 1810. The vessel and cargo were originally owned by John Fairfield, of Salem, who sold to W. Orgy the uninsured interests of both, the amount of which is now claimed.
68. Wm. Gray's estate..	Naples.....	Feb. 14, 1810...	Capture.....	Schr. Nancy, Holman master.	Loss to Wm. Gray, as part owner of cargo. $3,398 00 Expenses of detention..... 40 88 Amount, &c..... 3,438 88 Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication appears.....	Pickering Dodge and D. L. Pickman were shippers of merchandise by this vessel, and the claim now made is for a sale and transfer of the uninsured part to Wm. Gray. The vessel was captured and sent into Naples about February 14, 1810, where she was seized. The vessel and cargo were confiscated at Naples, by a decree of J. Napoleon, King of the Two Sicilies, of 12th March, 1810.

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
69. Wm. Gray's estate..	Naples	December, 1810	Seizure.....	Ship Henry, Gardner master.	Loss to William Gray, as insurer on cargo, $7,700. Seizure made at Naples.	No adjudication appears..... ..	The claim was derived to the decedent thus, viz: He insured for S. Upton and J. L. Page, of Salem, $4,000; John Saunders, $2,000; B. & N. Tucker, Boston, $1,700; and paid to each of them a total loss. The vessel and cargo were confiscated at Naples, by decree of J. Napoleon, King of the Two Sicilies, March 12, 1810.
70. Wm. Gray's estate..	Naples	Jan. 31, 1811...	Seizure.....	Schr. Oceanus, Wilson master.	Loss to William Gray, as insurer on cargo, $1,850. Seizure made at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	This claim was derived to Wm. Gray thus, viz: He insured property for— Edward W. Waldo, of Salem..... $1,000 00 T. Q. Hill and W. Burroughs, of Boston..... 850 00 1,850 00 The vessel and cargo were confiscated at Naples, by decree of J. Napoleon, King of the Two Sicilies, March 12, 1810.
71. Wm. Gray's estate..	Naples	December, 1809	Sequestration.....	Brig Romp, Lander master.	Loss to Wm. Gray, as insurer on vessel. $800 00 Cargo..... 2,100 00 Amount, &c..... 2,900 00 Sequestration made at Naples.	No adjudication appears.....	The claim was derived to Wm. Gray thus, viz: He insured for— A. Rea, of Salem, on vessel ..... $800 00 on cargo..... 1,400 00 —— $2,200 00 For W. Landor, of Salem, through his agent, P. Landor, on cargo..... 700 00 —— 2,900 00 The vessel and cargo were confiscated at Naples, by decree of J. Napoleon, King of the Two Sicilies, March 12, 1810.
72. Wm. Gray's estate..	Naples	1809.....	Capture	Ship Margaret, Fairfield master.	Loss to Wm. Gray, who insured I. Crowninshield, Salem, through his agent, P. Lander, $4,000 on cargo, and paid a partial loss, $1,600. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication appears.....	The Margaret was captured and sent into Naples. She was taken under a decree of the King of Naples. In the case of this vessel a compromise was made with the captors, and the ship and part of the cargo were surrendered.
73. Pickering Dodge	Naples	1811.....	Seizure.....	Ship Henry, Gardner master.	$1,380 67. Seizure made at Naples.....	No legal adjudication appears ..	The value of property on board the ship Henry is taken from invoice, that is, at cost and charges of shipment merely, without interest or expenses.
74. Pickering Dodge	Naples	1811.....	Seizure.....	Brig Oceanus, Wilson master.	$2,181 40. Seizure made at Naples	No legal adjudication appears...	Remarks in No. 73 applicable to this case.
75. William Proctor.....	Naples	1811.....	Seizure.....	Brig Oceanus, Wilson master.	$306 80. Seizure made at Naples.....	No legal adjudication appears...	Remarks in No. 73 applicable to this case.
76. Jery Lee Page.....	Naples	1811.....	Seizure and confiscation..	Schooner Oceanas .	Not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	The absence of Captain Lee Page prevents the statement in this case and the two following cases from being complete.
77. Jery Lee Page.....	Naples	1810.....	Seizure and confiscation..	Ship Henry	Not stated	No legal adjudication	See No. 76.
78. Jery Lee Page.....	Naples	1810.....	Seizure and confiscation..	Schooner Fortune..	Not stated	No legal adjudication	See No. 76.

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
79. John Coulter.....	Naples	Feb. 13, 1810...	Capture.....	Brig Ruth and Mary	Loss sustained..... $107,685 60 Interest from February 13, 1810, to Sept. 13, 1826, 16 years and 7 months, at 6 per cent..... 107,147 06 Amount, &c..... 214,832 66 Value of property in Philadelphia..... 71,573 00 Capture made in the Bay of Naples, about a league from the harbor of Naples.	Not known	Confiscation by a decree of the King of the Two Sicilies, dated at Naples, March 12, 1810, a copy of which is filed by the claimant.
80. Alexander Stewart..	Naples	Jan. 13, 1810...	Capture	Brig Ruth and Mary	Loss sustained..... $5,307 50 Interest for 16 years and 7 months, at 6 per cent..... 5,280 95 Amount &c..... 10,588 45 Capture made as stated in No. 79.	No legal adjudication.....	The property on the loss of which this claim is made was confiscated, as stated in No. 79. This claim is for commissions which would have pertained to the claimant had the cargo of the Ruth and Mary been sold by his agency.
81. Derby Fishing Company, New Haven.	Naples	Dec. 30, 1809...	Capture.....	Sch'r Ousetonack, Sheffield master.	Invoice of cargo ..... $10,923 00 Value of vessel ..... 6,000 00 16,923 00 Cargo sold at Naples for $20,000; vessel sold at Naples, subsequently to June 16, 1810, for a sum unknown; interest, at 6 per cent. on amount, $26,000, 16 years and 6 months, $25,740. Capture made in the Bay of Naples.	No legal adjudication	The schooner Ousetonack, bound to Naples, was captured by a Neapolitan privateer, December 30, 1809, and sent into Naples. In this case proceedings were commenced before the tribunal of prizes, but the property was taken out of the hands of the captors by the Government and confiscated under the decree mentioned in No. 79. Vessel and cargo were sold under the direction of the customs, for the benefit of the public treasury. The cargo being in part of a perishable nature, (fish,) had suffered by remaining a length of time in warehouse, and did not sell so high, in consequence, as similar cargoes of much less invoice value.
82. Nathaniel West.....	Naples	Sept., 1809.....	Confiscation.....	Ship Hercules.....	Value of cargo and adventures, as per account of sales at Naples, ducats, 169,001.83, equal..... $135,208 64 Value of the ship, with her outfit ..... 22,000 00 157,208 64 Seizure made at Naples.	No legal adjudication	The Hercules arrived at Naples September 13, 1809, and, after the usual examination, was admitted to a free entry, and permission was given to sell and discharge the cargo. When the cargo was about two-thirds unladen, that part which remained on board was taken out by force, and the whole confiscated and sold at public auction for the benefit of the Neapolitan Government.

CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
83. John S. Roulet.....	Naples	1809.....	Seizure.....	Brig Emily	Cargo insured, $40,000; freight, $14,184.....	No legal adjudication	The brig Emily was bound from New York to Naples and Smyrna. She sailed in December, 1809, and on her arrival in the Bay of Naples was, with her cargo, seized and taken possession of by the Neapolitan Government. The brig being a very fine vessel was appropriated to the private service of the King, and was claimed, in vain, by the correspondents, Messrs. Falconet & Co., of Naples, and by the American Envoy, Mr. Pinckney. The cargo was insured at the Columbian Insurance Office, in New York, to the amount of $40,000, and was sold at a very considerable advance. Its proceeds may be ascertained on application to Messrs. Falconet & Co. The freight was insured at the Commercial Insurance Office, in New York, to the amount of $14,184, at 27½ per cent. premium. The vessel was not insured. She was a new coppered brig, on her first voyage, built in Philadelphia, of the best materials and in the best manner; the property, one-half of Gurdon S. Mumford, and one-half of J. S. Roulet, both citizens of the United States, and merchants of New York, who owned, also, the cargo.
					Cost of vessel at the time of sailing..... $18,000 00
					Interest on this sum 18,630 00
					36,630 00
					One-half the claimant's 18,315 00

INDEX TO SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON NAPLES.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.	Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.	Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Coffin, David, and others.....	6	$35,600 00	Homer, Benjamin P., treasurer, &c.....	11	$1,225 00	White, Stephen, surviving partner, &c.....	2	$1,704 60
Crowninshield, John.....	15	35,000 00	Haskell, Solomon, and others.....	5	39,487 00	White, John and Stephen.....	3	6,504 34
Dutch, George.....	13	1,718 42	Huttlestone, Henry, and others	16	10,000 00	Wingate, Edmund, and others.	7	21,500 00
Do.....	14	2,210 80	Leslie, David, amount not included in No. 16.....	12	250 00
Homer, Benjamin P., treasurer, &c.....	8	6,000 00	Richards, Alexander, and others.....	4	28,000 00
Do.....	9	4,500 00	Swett, William B., and another	17	11,250 00	Amount of supplementary claims on Naples.....	.....	247,949 56
Do.....	10	3,000 00	White, Joseph, and others.....	1	40,000 00

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON NAPLES.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
1. Joseph White, Henry White, Stephen White, estate of Joseph White, jr.	Naples	March 12, 1810.	Sequestration	Brig Sukey and Betsy, Hanscom master.	$40,000. Sequestration made at Naples.	No legal adjudication.	This vessel sailed from Salem, Massachusetts, November 5, 1809, for Galliopoli, in the Kingdom of Naples, with a cargo of sugar, coffee, tobacco, &c. She arrived there on the 29th December, 1809, and on the 19th January following was sequestered. On the 9th of February she was unloaded by an armed force, and the cargo sold at auction by the officers of Government.
2. Stephen White, surviving partner of J. & S. White.	Naples	1810.	Seizure	Ship Henry, Gardner master.	$1,704. Seizure made at Naples.	No legal adjudication.	The Henry sailed from Boston, October 28, 1810, for Naples; arrived there 5th December following; next day five guards put on board. On the 4th of January, 1811, the soldiers, by order of Government, discharged the cargo, which was sold by Government.
3. John White and Stephen White.	Naples	January, 1811.	Seizure	Schooner Oceanus.	$3,004 34 3,500 00 Amount, &c. 6,504 34 Place of seizure not stated. Probably at Naples.	No legal adjudication.	The Oceanus sailed from Boston, November 20, 1810, and arrived December 31 following, and was seized; the cargo was discharged and sold by Government. John White, by Stephen White, attorney, claims $3,004 34. Stephen White claims $3,500.
4. Alexander Richards, B. Merrick, Jeremiah Nelson, Benjamin W. Yatt, and others.	Naples	January, 1810.	Seizure	Brig Alexander	Vessel $4,000 00 Cargo 20,000 00 Freight 4,000 00 28,000 00 Seizure made at Naples.	No legal adjudication.	While entering the port in supposed security the vessel and cargo were seized and sequestered by the Neapolitan Government. The losses of Richards & Merrick were sustained on the vessel, those of the other claimants on the cargo.
5. Solomon Haskell, Solomon H. Currier, Ignatius Haskell.	Naples	February and March, 1810.	Capture	Brig John, Currier master.	Vessel $8,000 00 Cargo 16,732 50 Expenses 2,000 00 26,732 50	No legal adjudication, it is believed.	This vessel, with her cargo, entered Naples in supposed security, under a proclamation of the King. She was there seized, and the vessel and cargo sold, under a decree of the King of Naples, and the proceeds were distributed among the captors, or otherwise disposed of by the officers of the Government. The brig and all her lading were wholly American property, and belonged to the claimants. At the time of her capture she was on her outward passage, seeking a market. She had violated no law, and had on board every document to prove her neutrality.
Enoch Pierce					Fish $3,412 50
E. B. & W. Hale					Fish 2,879 50
Abner Caldwell					Fish 2,522 00
Amos Knight					Fish 650 00
Edward Currier					Fish 650 00
Nathaniel Keezer					Fish 487 50
Joseph Edwards					Fish 325 00
Enoch Gerrish					Fish 494 00
Lowell Brown					Fish 1,066 00
Jacob Cilley					Fish 104 00

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
5. Joshua Gore.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Fish..... $104 00
Mary Hall.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Fish..... 60 00
					12,754 50
					Seizure made at Naples.
6. David Coffin, Wm. Alexander, Jona. Barnard, Nathan'l King.	Naples	March 12, 1810.	Capture.....	Schr. Syren, Jauvrin master.	Vessel..... $6,000 00 Cargo, fish, beef, oil..... 29,600 00	No legal adjudication, it is believed.	This vessel was bound from Newburyport for Palermo, her cargo fish and oil. She had touched at Alicant, was captured by a Neapolitan vessel, carried into Nieche, where vessel and cargo were sold under a decree of the King, and produced the sum claimed.
					35,600 00
					Place of capture not stated.
7. Edmund Wingate, Philip Coombs & Co.	Naples.	January, 1810..	Capture.....	Schr. Peace, Granes master.	Vessel..... $2,500 00 Cargo..... 15,000 00 Freight..... 4,000 00	Condemned by the King of the Two Sicilies. No legal adjudication appears.	This vessel sailed from Newburyport November 25, 1809, with a cargo of dry fish for the Mediterranean; touched at Carthagena and Alicant; was captured in the Gulf by a Neapolitan frigate, and carried into Naples. The captors unloaded and sold the cargo the day following. Vessel and cargo were confiscated by a decree of the King.
					Amount, &c..... 21,500 00
					Capture made in the Gulf of Alicant.
8. Benjamin P. Homer, Treasurer of the Commerc'l Insurance Office, Boston.	Naples	1811.....	Seizure and confiscation.	Brig Alexander	$6,000. See next column.....	Confiscated on arrival at Naples; whether or not under any legal adjudication does not appear.	The vessel went to Naples from the United States, and was owned by Alexander Richards, of Newburyport.
9. Benjamin P. Homer, Treasurer of the Commerc'l Insurance Office, Boston.	Naples	1811.....	Seizure and confiscation.	Ship Henry.....	$4,500. See next column.....	The confiscation took place on the arrival at Naples. There does not appear to have been any legal adjudication.	The Henry was owned by Jere. Lee Page and Samuel Upton, of Salem, and went from the United States to Naples.
10. Benjamin P. Homer, Treasurer of the Commerc'l Insurance Office, Boston.	Naples	1810.....	Seizure and confiscation.	Schr. Oceanus	$3,000. See next column.....	No legal adjudication mentioned; the confiscation was made on arrival at Naples.	This vessel proceeded from Boston to Naples, and was owned by Jere. Lee Page and Samuel Upton, and others, of Salem.
11. Benjamin P. Homer, Treasurer of the Commerc'l Insurance Office, Boston.	Naples	1810.....	Confiscation.....	Ship Admittance...	$1,225. See next column.....	It is not stated where or when the confiscation took place, or whether or not there was any legal adjudication.	Owned by Ezra Weston & Son.
12. David Leslie, of New York. (See No. 16.)	Naples	1808.....	Condemnation.	Brig Nancy, Wilson Barstow master.	One-eighth of the value of the vessel... $1,250 00 Eighteen years' interest 1,575 00	Condemned at Naples. Date not stated.	Wilson Barstow and Henry Huttleston were the other owners of the vessel, and the claimant refers to their papers for further particulars.
					2,825 00
					See next column.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON NAPLES—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
13. Geo. Dutch, of Salem.	Naples	Captured Dec., 1809.	Capture and confiscation.	Brig Victory, Jos. Felt, 3d, master.	Net proceeds of effects at Naples, belonging to the claimant, $1,718 42; interest to December 31, 1826, $1,649 68. The place of capture not stated.	Confiscated under the decree of the King of the Two Sicilies, March 12, 1810. No legal adjudication appears.	The vessel was captured by subjects of the King of Naples, and carried into Naples, whither she was bound on a voyage from Salem.
14. Geo. Dutch, of Salem.	Naples	Seized February, 1810.	Seizure and confiscation.	Schr. Nancy, John Holman master.	Net proceeds of sales of effects of the claimant, $2,210 80; interest to Dec. 31, 1826, $2,122 37. Seized at Naples.	Confiscation March 12, 1810, under the decree of the King of the Two Sicilies. No legal adjudication appears.	None.
15. John Crowninshield.	Naples	None specified.	Sequestration	Brig Golden Age, W Fairfield master.	$35,000 for cargo. Place of loss not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	Sequestered under the general Naples decree.
16. Henry Huttlestone, Wilson Barstow, and David Leslie.	Naples	August, 1808...	Capture	Brig Nancy	Vessel..... $8,000 00 Freight..... 2,000 00 Amount, &c..... 10,000 00 18 years' interest. Capture made in the bay of Naples.	Condemnation at Naples; date not stated.	The Nancy was bound to Galliopoli for a cargo of oil. She was captured while going into Naples to procure empty casks, and condemned at that port on the allegation that she was from England. No other proof was adduced but the fact of the vessel being at the time of capture in sight of a British squadron, with which it was supposed she had had an understanding.
17. Wm. B. Swett, and estate of Benjamin Lauder.	Naples	May, 1810.....	Sequestration.....	Brig Radius, Lauder master.	Half cargo and expenses..... $6,250 00 Half vessel ..... 5,000 00 Half freight..... 2,500 00 13,750 00 Deduct amounts insured by Wm. Gray, $1,500, and by Wm. R. Gray, $1,000.. 2,500 00 Amount, &c... ..... 11,250 00 Interest, $10,800. Sequestration made at Galliopoli.	No legal adjudication appears.	The brig Radius sailed from Salem for Galliopoli, in March, 1810, and was there with her cargo sequestered by order of the King of Naples, May 18, 1810.

INDEX TO CLAIMS ON HOLLAND.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.	Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.	Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Andrew, John.....	4	$5,000 00	Jackson, Thomas and William, and others.....	1	$45,675 75	William Williams and others	5	$61,920 00
Anonymous, (probably Garriel Van Horne)....	11	5,693 25	Learned, Edward	7	4,000 00	Do.....do.....	6	18,000 00
Davis, Ezra.....	10	80,372 40	Perkins, Samuel G., and others.....	2	145,041 48
Gray, estate of William.....	8	1,110 00	Thorndike, Israel.....	3	55,000 00	Amount of claims on Holland.	.....	422,312 88
Do.....	9	500 00

CLAIMS ON HOLLAND.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
1. Thomas and William Jackson, Stephen Higginson, Sam'l G. Perkins, and the estate of Geo. Higginson, dec'd.	Holland	Sept., 1809	Property aboard the vessel was sequestered by the Dutch Governm'nt, and delivered to the French authorities under a secret treaty of March, 1810, and sold at public auction at Paris by order of the French Government. The proceeds of the sale were put into the Public Treasury of France.	The property was taken from the brig Sally, Thos. Cotton master.	The property of T. & W. Jackson was sold in Paris, net of all charges, for francs..... ..... 199,823 That of the other owners was sold, as aforesaid, for francs..... 43,781 243,604 Add 16 years' interest on this sum to November, 1826, francs ..... 233,859 477,463 The property, if sold in Holland, would have brought as follows, viz: T. & W. Jackson's, with the freight.... $36,365 38 The property of the other owners..... 13,888 80 50,254 18 Deduct charges at the rate of 10 per cent. 5,025 41 45,228 77 Add 16 years' interest on this sum ..... 43,428 48 88,657 25 The sequestration was made at Texel.	There was no legal adjudication.	The brig Sally belonged to Thomas and William Jackson, of Plymouth, Massachusetts. Sailed from Boston about June 10, 1809, bound to the north of Europe, laden with a cargo of coffee, sugar, and cotton wool, belonging to citizens of the United States, and arrived at the Texel, July 15, of that year. She was there detained by the Dutch authorities until the ensuing 2d of September, when the cargo was taken into the public stores, and there kept until some time in the year 1810. It was then delivered to the French authorities under the secret treaty of March, 1810, and then transported, first, to Antwerp, where it was, by order of the French Government, advertised to be sold; but it was afterwards transported to Paris, and there sold, and the proceeds of the sale put into the Public Treasury of France, and used for national purposes. The Sally spoke nothing out; nor did she, her officers or crew, commit any violation of public law, or of the known regulations of either the French or the Dutch Governments. The Dutch Government restored to the consignee 100 bales of cotton wool which had been taken with the rest of the cargo. The consignee repeatedly applied for the cargo, and especially on September 10, 1810, by petition to the Director General of the Customs, who replied: "The petitioners are informed that the goods, in consequence of the disposition of his Majesty the Emperor and King, have been given over to the thereto appointed French authorities." The vessel, after a long detention, was released. Stephen Higginson, Samuel G. Perkins, and the representatives of George Higginson, deceased, are successors of the late firm of Stephen Higginson & Co., original owners, and Samuel G. Perkins is agent for the claimants.
2. Samuel G. Perkins, Stephen Higginson, estate of Geo. Higginson, dec'd; William Parsons, Henry Sigourney, Thomas Lee, jr., Henry Lee, Robert Lord.	Holland	July, 1809	Property aboard the vessel was sequestered by the Dutch Governm'nt, and subsequently delivered to the French authorities under a secret treaty of March, 1810, and sold at public auction at Antwerp by order of the French Government, and the proceeds of the sale appropriat'd to national purposes.	The property was taken from the ship Gov. Strong, Robert Lord master.	The property sequestrated was sold in October and November, 1810, at Antwerp, for 1,605,805.71 frs. The custom-house duties, and all expenses of transportation and sale, as charged by the officers of Government, amounted to 832,251.14 francs, leaving net proceeds, 773,554.57 francs. The claimants claim interest on this sum from November, 1810, which, to November, 1826, at six per cent., is 742,611.84 francs. The aggregate claim up to the last mentioned date, is 1,516,166.41 francs, or $284,459. The sequestration appears to have been made at Helvoetsluys.	There was no legal adjudication.	The ship Governor Strong was laden at Boston, and sailed thence for Rotterdam on May 24, 1809. She arrived on the 20th June next following at Helvoetsluys, and on the 7th July the cargo was taken by the Commissary General, and deposited in the Government stores. A portion of the cargo, consisting of coffee and tobacco, was afterwards delivered to the consignees, and sold for account of the owners, but the greater part of the cargo was delivered to the French authorities. The Governor Strong and her cargo were entirely owned by American citizens, and had committed no breach of either national law or the laws of Holland or France. Samuel G. Perkins, Stephen Higginson, and the representatives of George Higginson, deceased, are the successors to S. Higginson & Co., original owners, and Samuel Perkins is agent for all the claimants.

CLAIMS ON HOLLAND—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
3. Israel Thorndike.....	Holland	1809.....	Sequestration.....	Sch'r Two Sisters.	$55,000. Sequestration made at Amsterdam	No legal adjudication appears...	The schooner Two Sisters, Joseph L. Lee master, sailed from Beverly about the 10th May, 1809, with a cargo of sugar, coffee, and pepper, bound to Emden, and forced by adverse circumstances into the Texel, in Holland, where she was forcibly detained, and vessel and cargo carried up to Amsterdam, when the cargo was seized, confiscated, and sold, by order either of the Dutch Government or French authorities.
4. John Andrew	Holland	July 30, 1809...	Sequestration.....	Schooner Neptune.	Ninety-nine chests of tea, $5,000. Place of loss not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	The goods were put into the King's stores in August, 1809, under decree of July 30, 1809, and soon after were removed to the company stores to be sold; but previously to their being sold the Government took possession of them.
5. William Williams, Nathan S. Stanton, Ebenez'r Barrill, and the heirs of Ebenezer Stanton.	Holland and France.	On or about 30th June, 1809.	Capture	Brig Friendship....	Value of cargo in Holland..... $61,920 00 Interest for seventeen years ..... 73,684 80 Total loss..... 135,604 80 Exclusive of the amount of expenses, £750. Capture made in the mouth of the Texel.	Condemnation of vessel and cargo, and subsequent reversal of the decree on appeal. Dates and places not stated.	The brig Friendship was bound to Holland with a valuable cargo, consisting of 17 hhds. tobacco, 27 bales cotton, 72 barrels sugar, 2 hhds. 3 tierces and 4 bbls. coffee. The vessel and cargo belonged to American citizens. After the reversal of the decree of condemnation the cargo was liberated, but the property of which it consisted had been sold by the captors. She arrived in the mouth of the Texel, when she was captured, about the 30th of June, 1809, by the French privateer L'Hebe. The agent of the owners had expended £750 sterling in unsuccessful endeavors to effect the liberation of the property.
6. William Williams, Coddington Billings, Nathan Stanton, and the heirs of Ebenezer Stanton.	Holland and France.	On or about 30th June, 1809.	Capture	Brig Friendship....	Value of vessel..... $8,000 00 Expenses..... 10,000 00 Interest on $8,000 for seventeen years... 8,160 00 Total loss..... 26,160 00 Capture made in the mouth of the Texel.	The brig was condemned in the first instance, but, on appeal to the Court at the Hague, the condemnation was reversed.	The brig Friendship was captured by the French privateer L'Hebe. After the appeal from the original condemnation she was liberated; but the property had been so much impaired by the captors, who stripped all the sails and rigging, and nothing was ever received by the owners. They were not permitted to clear her out after her release, and their agent had ultimately to leave her at Amsterdam. The item of $10,000 is claimed for damage sustained in defending against the captors.
7. Edward Learned....	Holland and France.	On or about 1st July, 1809.	Capture..	Brig Harmony	Commission of 5 per cent. on $60,000, the proceeds of the cargo sold at Amsterdam..... $3,000 00 Interest on this sum for sixteen years... 2,800 00 Expenses in Holland and France..... 1,000 00 Amount, &c..... 6,800 00 Capture made in the Texel.	No legal adjudication	The Harmony sailed from Boston about the first of June, 1809, on the strength of the arrangement between the American Government and Mr. Erskine, with a cargo valued at $20,000, bound to Altona and a market. Having been boarded by a British squadron, she was permitted to proceed, and was afterwards captured by a French privateer, the Tilsit, Capt. Collet. The vessel and cargo were taken possession of by the owners of the privateer. The French Consul resident at Amsterdam, after interrogating the officers of the brig and supercargo, took possession of all the papers, and forwarded them to the Council of Prizes. After the supercargo had been detained about a year, one-third of the cargo was restored, and the vessel

CLAIMS ON HOLLAND—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
7.—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	given up, but not permitted to depart. The brig, of course, had to remain in Amsterdam, and two-thirds of her cargo were taken by the captors, and totally lost to the owners. The claimant, who was the supercargo of the vessel, was deprived of his commissions in consequence of her capture and the loss of her cargo, and expended a considerable sum in order to obtain a part of the cargo. He was, moreover, detained nearly a year in France and Holland, at expense, attempting the liberation of the property.
8. William Gray's estate	Holland.....	1809.....	Seizure	Brig Harmony, Snow master.	Loss to William Gray as insurer on cargo, $1,110. Seizure made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication appears..	The Harmony sailed from Boston June, 1809. She was seized at Amsterdam. The claim is for a partial loss, William Gray having insured Samuel Coverly an adventure..... ..... $2,155 00 From which is deducted amount received by him... 1,055 00 1,100 00 The vessel and cargo were confiscated by order of the King, but a compromise was made, and part of the cargo given up.
9. William Gray's estate	Holland.....	1809.....	Seizure	Brig Sally, Cotton master.	Loss to William Gray as insurer on cargo, $500. Seizure made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication	The Sally sailed from Boston June, 1809, and was seized at Amsterdam. William Gray, by his agent, P. Lander, insured Sanders & Upton, of Salem, $500 on the cargo, and paid them a total loss.
10. Ezra Davis.....	Holland....	1810.....	Seizure under a secret convention between the Government of Holland and the Empire of France.	Brig Matilda.....	..... $80,372 40 Interest from July 1, 1810, to December 31, 1826, 16 years and six months, at six per cent..... 142,544 94 222,917 34 The last item is the claim for interest, as stated by the claimant. The seizure was made at Rotterdam.	No legal adjudication appears...	The brig Matilda sailed from Boston the 28th May, 1809, with a valuable cargo, bound to Rotterdam, where she arrived safe on the 6th July following. On the 10th she was admitted to entry at the custom-house, and an order given for the unlading. The property was placed in the King's warehouses until the duties were paid. The consignee sold nearly one-half of the cargo, and, as no law had been violated, the same was delivered to the purchasers on payment of the duties. The brig remained in the port of Rotterdam until September, when she was regularly cleared, and sailed for Russia. It is therefore evident that the Government of Holland did not pretend that any of the laws had been violated two months after the arrival of the brig at Rotterdam, as they had allowed a large part of the cargo to be sold and delivered from the King's warehouses, and then allowed the brig, without any hindrance or molestation, to leave the port. During the voyage from Boston to Rotterdam the brig was not boarded or spoken by any vessel whatever. At the request of the French minister at Washington, the claimant consented to take out a passenger, a French gentleman, Mr. Giraud, son of the French Consul at Boston, bearer of despatches from the min-

CLAIMS ON HOLLAND—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
No. 10—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	ister to the Government of France, in consequence of which the said minister had furnished the vessel with a full passport to afford her protection from all vessels-of-war of France or her allies, and had full liberty to enter any of the ports of France, and full protection was guarantied to vessel and cargo.—Mem. The foregoing are the remarks made by Mr. Davis. This claim probably arises from a seizure of that part of the cargo which the consignee had not sold.
11. Anonymous, (probably Garril Van Horne.)	Holland.....	Not stated. See last column.	Sequestration.....	Ship Suffolk, Thompson master.	Amount of shipment..... $5,693 25 Interest at 7 per cent. for 17 years, from June 14, 1809, to June 14, 1826..... 6,774 97 12,468 22 Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication	The property was shipped, as per bill of lading, June 14, 1809, per ship Suffolk, by Garril Van Horne, consigned to Frederick T. Wichelhausen & Co., of Bremen, to the order of P. C. Van Eeghen at Amsterdam. It was there held in sequestration, and delivered by the Dutch Government to French commissioners, and sold at Antwerp under the Rambouillet decree.

INDEX TO SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON HOLLAND.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.	Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Bartlet, William.....	1	$102,400 72	Johnston, Thomas.....	10	$84,000 00
Bartlet, William, jr.....	3	8,822 00	Pettingel, John.....	5	78,400 00
Basset, Nathaniel.....	7	495 00	Picket, William, and others.....	6	4,595 00
Bartlet, Edmund.....	9	4,546 11	Wills, John, jr.....	8	494 00
Edes, Isaac.....	2	6,199 19
Jenkins, George.....	4	2,794 94	Amount of supplementary claims on Holland.....	.....	292,746 96

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON HOLLAND.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication: where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
1. Wm. Bartlet	Holland	1809.....	Sequestration and confiscation.	Ship Janus, Gaum master.	Cargo valued at $102,400 72. Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication.....	The property was wholly American, and accompanied with properly authenticated documents; was owned solely by the claimant. It was carried from the United States to Amsterdam in the American ship Janus, and was there sequestered by orders from Napoleon Bonaparte. It was afterwards removed to Antwerp, conformably to a treaty between the French Government and the Government of Holland under Louis Bonaparte in 1810, and there sold, and the proceeds placed in the public chest in France, and wholly lost to the claimant. The property appears to have been confiscated under the Berlin and Milan decrees.
2. Isaac Edes	Holland	1809.....	Sequestration and confiscation.	Ship Janus, Gaum master.	Property on board..... $12,617 40 Deduct amount sold to Wm. Bartlet and included in his claim, No. 1..... 6,417 21 Amount, &c..... 6,199 19 Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 1.
3. Wm. Bartlet, jr.....	Holland	1809.....	Sequestration and confiscation.	Ship Janus, Gaum master.	Value of adventure, $8,822. Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 1.
4. George Jenkins	Holland	1809.....	Sequestration and confiscation.	Ship Janus, Gaum master.	Property shipped by claimant, $2,794 94. Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication.....	The remarks in No. 1 are applicable to this case, except that Mr. Jenkins' loss was not total; 20 bales of cotton and 13 casks of rice, part of his property, were released, and afterwards sold for his account, net $711 24; his 10 hogsheads sugar and — coffee remaining under sequestration by pro forma sales, if the sugar had sold for 30 groats and the coffee at 25 stivers, would have produced him, net, as claimed, $2,794 94.
5. John Pettingel.....	Holland	1809.....	Sequestration and confiscation.	Brig Hannah, Smith master.	Cargo, $78,400. Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Hannah sailed from Newburyport May 16, 1809; arrived at Amsterdam June 12, 1809. Her cargo was landed between the 15th and 16th September, 1809, and deposited in the King's warehouse, as appears by receipt of the storekeeper to the Minister of Marine and Colonies, dated at Amsterdam September 23, 1809. The property was sequestered by order of the Emperor Napoleon, and removed to Antwerp on the 1st and 2d of August, 1810, by virtue of the treaty of March, 1810, made between Holland and France, and there sold, and the proceeds placed in the Treasury of France. The vessel and cargo were wholly American.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON HOLLAND—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
6. Wm. Picket, Ebenezer Noyes, and John Stone.	Holland.....	1809.....	Sequestration and confiscation.	Brig Hannah, Smith master.	Property, $4,595. Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 5.
7. Nathaniel Basset....	Holland.....	1809.....	Sequestration and confiscation.	Brig Hannah, Smith master.	Property, $495. Sequestration made at Amsterdam..	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 5.
8. John Wills, jr.....	Holland.....	1809.....	Sequestration and confiscation.	Brig Hannah, Smith master.	Property, $494. Sequestration made at Amsterdam..	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 5.
9. Edmund Bartlet.....	Holland.....	1809.....	Sequestration and confiscation.	Ship Janus, John Gaum master.	The claimant's sugar and coffee would have produced $4,546 11. Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication.....	Same as in No. 1.
10. Thomas Johnston, of Baltimore.	Holland and France.	Between April 1 and November 20, 1810.	Sequestration and confiscation.	Brig St. Michael's..	The cargo sold for ..... $69,000 00 The brig cost..... 15,000 00 Amount, &c..... 84,000 00 Interest for 18 years, at 4 per cent ..... 53,760 00 137,760 00 Sequestration made at Amsterdam.	No legal adjudication.....	The St. Michael's sailed from Baltimore for Tonningen February 25, 1810, and was then the joint property of James and Charles Allston and the claimant, as was also the cargo, consisting wholly of prime Maryland tobacco. Since May 1, 1812, the claimant has been, and is now, solely interested in this property. The brig, owing to damage sustained during the voyage, was compelled to put into the Texel, where she arrived on or about April 1, 1810. The cargo was ordered to be landed and placed in the King's stores till the damage sustained by the vessel could be ascertained and repaired. They were sequestered at Amsterdam in April, 1810, and there sold November 20, 1810. In June or July in the same year King Louis abdicated the throne of Holland, which was soon after, by authority of Napoleon, annexed to France. It was now and for the first time that the agents for the owners of the St. Michael's and cargo were informed of the fact, or the grounds of their sequestration. They were referred to the tenth article of a secret treaty, dated March 16, 1810, between Holland and France, by the very terms of which article the property in question was exempt from its operation, even if it had been a binding treaty, the brig not having arrived at Amsterdam at the date of the treaty, and the article thereof mentioned sequestering such vessels only as "have arrived in the ports of Holland since January 1, 1809." The proceeds of the sale were remitted to Paris, and amounted, according to the entries on the books of the French Treasury, to 264,815 francs, a less sum by 20,000 francs than the proceeds of the sales according to the auctioneer's books.

INDEX TO CLAIMS ON DENMARK.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Andrew, John	105	$39,738 65
Brown & Ives	1	53,965 00
Boston Marine Insurance Company	17	10,891 66
Do do	18	3,164 20
Do do	19	2,286 13
Do do	20	13,000 00
Do do	21	8,000 00
Bell, Joseph, and others	48	609 30
Bradbury, Charles, for self and others	53 } 54 }	846 81
Do do	55	21,500 00
Do do	56	230 00
Do do	57	375 00
Do do	58	805 00
Do do	59	1,200 00
Do do	60	4,072 84
Do do	61	998 80
Do do	62	72 08
Do do	63	4,000 00
Do do	64	1,043 77
Do do	65	1,000 00
Do do	66	9,689 81
Do do	67	6,132 00
Do do	68	3,954 00
Do do	69	10,882 00
Do do	70	17,538 91
Do do	71	5,000 00
Do do	72	14,567 70
Do do	73	8,713 28
Do do	74	13,510 62
Do do	75	20,000 00
Do do	76	1,000 00
Do do	77	4,000 00
Bell, representatives of John, and others	80	104,150 00
Baltimore Insurance Company	94	20,583 66
Brazer, John	113	2,000 00
Do	114	5,000 00
Crawford, underwriters in office of James, jr	16	4,200 00
Clapp, Asa, and another	135	22,705 48
Do	136	35,576 00
Do	137	7,148 50
Coulter, John	122	6,133 20
Do	123	2,946 12
Do	124	1,064 08
Do	125	3,000 00
Dorr, Andrew C	9	24,472 22
Donaldson, Edward M	95	23,839 00
Do	96	5,250 00
Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia	98	19,600 00
Do do	99	17,000 00
Do do	100	3,000 00
Do do	101	5,192 33
Do do	102	5,960 62
Do do	103	6,847 82
Drinkwater, Phinehas	121	3,022 17
Dall, William, and others	127	35,823 68
Derby, John, and another	131	.....
Gray, Henry	36	1,000 00
Do	37	1,000 00
Gray, William R	52	5,565 65
Gray, estate of William	115	10,000 00
Do	116	4,000 00
Do	117	18,000 00
Do	118	11,000 00
Do	119	1,000 00
Hasty, William, and another	8	10,000 00
Hooper, Robert	22	110,000 00
Hooper, Robert, and others	23	100,000 00
Haxall, William and Henry	81	82,000 00
Hall, Elijah	111	31,391 10
Higginson, Stephen, and others	138	40,786 61
Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania	85	9,800 00
Do do	86	12,997 16
Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania	87	$8,624 00
Do do	88	11,760 00
Keith, Samuel	97	275 33
Kintzing, A	110	3,318 60
Kalkman, C. F	120	79,000 00
Lewis, William	6	6,205 00
Ladd, Henry, and others	7	45,401 60
Lancaster and Susquehanna Insurance Company	45	8,000 00
Do do	46	7,800 00
Mactier, Alexander	2	20,000 00
Meek, Thomas	24	20,000 00
Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company, at Boston	47	3,108 00
Maryland Insurance Company, assignees, &c	78	8,000 00
Do do	79	6,000 00
Do do	112	17,000 00
Murray, John B	82 }	say 28,088 50
Murray, John B., & Son	82 }
Marine Insurance Company	109	20,000 00
Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia	89	5,500 00
Do do	90	5,000 00
Do do	91	10,000 00
Do do	92	12,000 00
Do do	93	8,000 00
Mayerhoff, Francis	126	45,000 00
Moody, Joseph, and others	129	6,000 00
McLellan, Arthur and George	134	34,636 97
McIntire, John, and another	139	40,000 00
New England Marine Insurance Company of Boston	10	479 38
Do do	11	6,808 50
Do do	12	15,000 00
Do do	13	3,000 00
Oliver, Robert and John	108	15,000 00
Pennock, administrator of William	14	10,000 00
Pleasants, Charles	15	2,620 00
Pickman, Benjamin, and another	84	37,719 00
Page, Samuel, and others	132	74,688 98
Same claimants and others	133	20,825 66
Prince, Henry	83	4,000 00
Robinson, Nathan, and others	5	38,500 00
Russell, estate of William R., and others	104	15,000 00
Sheafe, Thomas	3	23,139 84
Social Insurance Company of Salem	106	7,750 00
Thorndike, Israel, and another	26	84,000 00
Thorndike, Israel	27	10,057 71
Union Insurance Company of Maryland. See No. 182, claims on France	25	.....
Union Insurance Company of Boston	28	15,618 00
Do do	29	2,152 00
Do do	30	2,688 96
Do do	31	5,426 92
Do do	32	6,829 44
Do do	33	9,186 37
Do do	34	3,247 80
Do do	35	10,000 00
United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia	38	1,960 00
Do do	39	6,744 57
Do do	40	25,014 95
Do do	41	7,840 00
Do do	42	11,800 00
Do do	43	6,000 00
Do do	44	911 65
Union Insurance Company of Philadelphia	49	5,880 00
Do do	50	5,880 00
Do do	51	4,410 00
Union Marine Insurance Company of Salem	107	10,000 00
Wilson, William, and others	4	51,889 08
Williams, Charles, and others	128	22,666 67
West, Nathaniel	130	33,222 00
Amount of claims on Denmark	.....	2,172,518 44

CLAIMS ON DENMARK.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
1. Brown & Ives, of Providence, Rhode Island.	Denmark....	July 19, 1810...	The ship and cargo were captured by Danish gun brigs, and sent into Christiansand, Norway.	Ship Hope, Uriel Rea master.	Value of cargo, as per invoice..... $36,335 00 Value of ship..... 7,000 00 Value of sundry adventures ..... 4,910 00 Freight..... 3,000 00 51,245 00 Expenses incurred in settlement with the underwriters..... 2,720 00 53,965 00 The exact place of the capture is not stated.	Condemned by the Prize Court of Christiansand, Norway, August 21, 1810. This sentence was confirmed by the High Court at Copenhagen, August 13, 1811.	The ship Hope was loaded at St. Petersburg with a full cargo of hemp, iron, and manufactures, and was homeward bound when taken. An insurance, to the amount of $35,000, had been effected with certain insurance companies who have since settled it. Of this sum, $15,000 was insured by the New England Marine Insurance Company; $15,000 by the Union Insurance Company of Boston, and $5,000 by the Warren Insurance Company. The tonnage of the ship was 239 33-95.
2. Alexander Mactier...	Denmark....	About June, 1810.	Capture	Ship William Wilson.	$20,000 on the cargo ..... The capture was made in the North Sea.	No legal adjudication.....	The ship William Wilson had been legally cleared at the custom house in Baltimore for Sylt and a permitted port in the North of Europe. After her capture she was carried into Heteroo, in Norway, where she was detained until the depth of winter. Being then permitted to depart, she proceeded to Hull, in England, where the whole amount of the shipment did not pay more than the charges. No insurance had been made.
3. Thomas Sheafe, of Portsmouth, New Hampshire.	Denmark....	July 7, 1810....	Capture by a Danish privateer, under a commission from the Danish Government.	Ship Magnet, of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, Jos. Swett master.	The amount of loss, including the value of the ship, freight, and expenses of suit, but not including interest, is $23,139 84. The capture was made near Elsineur.	Condemnation at Copenhagen, by the Danish Court of Admiralty, September 20, 1810.	The ship Magnet was, when captured, on her voyage from Cadiz to St. Petersburg, and her cargo belonged to citizens of the United States.
4. Wm. Wilson & Sons, Ezra Pearce, and S. P. Child.	Denmark....	The capture was made August 21, 1809.	Capture by a Danish privateer and detention.	Ship Harriot, S. P. Child master.	The loss sustained by the claimants is estimated as follows, viz: Nine months' detention, at $2 per ton per month, the tonnage being 229..... $4,122 00 Nine months' wages of officers and seamen, at $358 per month ..... 3,222 00 Nine months' provisions for 12 persons, at $8 per month for each..... 864 00 Time and expenses of William Wilson, of James, 270 days, at $5. .... 1,350 00	The Harriot was tried at Christiansand in October, 1809, and, together with her cargo, acquitted on payment of costs and a fine of 600 rix dollars. From this decision the captors appealed to the High Court at Christiana, and, on May 16, 1810, the vessel and cargo were ordered to be restored to Captain Child.	The ship Harriot belonged to William Wilson & Sons and Ezra Pearce. Her cargo, consisting of tobacco, fustic, and staves, belonged to William Wilson & Sons, except an adventure of the captain. She was captured, on her passage from Baltimore for Stavanger and a market, at the entrance into Stavanger, by the Danish privateer Maria, of Christiansand, A. A. Lerwig master, and sent into Stavanger. When acquitted, after her long detention, she could not proceed to Amsterdam, her original port of destination, but was obliged to go to Bergen for repairs. She proceeded thence to London, where she landed her cargo. The tobacco part of it was 300,325 pounds Maryland tobacco, which would have been sold at

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
4—Continued					Trouble and loss of P. Isaackson on 1,800 rix dollars advanced by him ..... $600 00 Claims for loss of market on cargo..... 39,882 79 Supercargo's commission of 2½ per cent. on this loss ..... 997 06 Estimated loss of market on 1,952 pounds of tobacco, and 4,388 pounds of tobacco stems, belonging to the master..... 851 23 51,889 08 The vessel was captured at the entrance into Stavanger.		Amsterdam, on September 12, 1809, at 32 cents per pound, and thus have produced..... $96,104 The staves and fustic would then and there have produced. 1,396 97,500 Deduct one-third for difference in weight, and for charges.. 32,500 Balance ..... 65,000 The actual net proceeds were, of 16 hogsheads of tobacco and some fustic sold at Bergen, in Norway, $1,820 39; of 273 hogsheads of tobacco sold in London, £5,215 16*s.* 6*d.* sterling; of fustic sold at the latter place, £25 19*s.* 3*d.* sterling. The amount of these net proceeds is $25,117 21; which sum being deducted from the foregoing sum of $65,000, a balance remains of $39,882 79, the amount claimed for the loss of market.
5. Nathan Robinson, Dudley L. Pickman, estate of Noah Emery, jr., deceased.	Denmark	The capture was made 1811.	Capture and condemnation.	Ship Brutus, of Salem, Mass.	At the time she sailed from New Orleans the value of the ship and that of her cargo amounted to $38,500. The place of capture is not stated by the claimant.	The ship and cargo were finally condemned by the High Court of Admiralty, in Copenhagen, on April 7, 1812.	It appears that the Brutus was an American ship, and, with her cargo, the property of American citizens; that in the year 1811 she sailed from New Orleans on a voyage to Russia, and was captured by a Danish or Norwegian privateer or privateers; that the vessel was fully acquitted by the Inferior Court in Norway; that the captor appealed from the sentence of that court, because John Fenno, the captain of the Brutus, refused to pay six thousand rix dollars, by way of compromise; and that, on April 7, 1812, the High Court of Admiralty in Copenhagen, to which the appeal was carried, condemned the ship and cargo on grounds not assumed by the captor, and of which the insufficiency was demonstrated by Mr. Erving, the United States minister to Denmark, in his correspondence with the Government of that country.
6. Wm. Lewis, of Boston	Denmark	The capture was made about May 4, 1809.	Capture and condemnation.	Ship Jane.....	One-fourth of the ship..... ... $1,500 00 Interest in cargo ..... 2,200 00 Expenses in Norway and Sweden, and passage home..... 1,505 00 Loss by detention as prisoner and derangement of business..... 1,000 00 Amount of loss..... 6,205 00 The capture was made while the vessel was making for the port of Christiansand.	Condemnation by the Admiralty Court of Christiana, of vessel and cargo, about December 18, 1809.	In the year 1809 the claimant was interested as owner of one-fourth of the ship Jane, and of $2,200 of her cargo then on board. This ship having been purchased of Arthur McLellan, of Portland, and the claimant having paid a bill of disbursements, and for a part of her cargo, other than that belonging to him, the ship and cargo were suffered to remain in his name for security. About March 25, 1809, the ship cleared from Portland for Gottenburg, and in consequence of severe weather and losses on her passage was, for relief, making for the port of Christiansand, when she was captured by a Norwegian privateer, and taken to the harbor of Egwog. Her papers were sent to Christiansand. The claimant was sent thither, under

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
6—Continued	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	....	military arrest, and there detained ten months, under circumstances of great hardship and oppression. About December 18, 1809, the ship and cargo were condemned by the Admiralty Court of Christiana, on the grounds, as the claimant was informed, of her having been boarded by a British frigate on the passage, and of her destination for Gottenburg.
7. Henry and Alexander Ladd, estate of Reuben Shapley, and estate of Reuben S. Randall.	Denmark ...	July 15, 1809...	Capture	Ship Wonolanset, Reuben S. Randall master.	Value of property captured..... Loss sustained by detention, damage to the cargo, and expenses..... 10,401 60 Amount, &c..... 45,401 60 On the second item interest is claimed from 1810. Compensation also is claimed, but its amount is not stated, for damages sustained by the loss of market, and the breaking up of the voyage. The capture was made off the coast of Norway.	The ship and cargo were condemned, August 23, 1809, in the Lower Court, at Christiansand, but restored, April 20, 1810, on appeal to the High Court of Admiralty.	The ship Wonolanset was owned by Reuben Shapley, of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and sailed from that port June 5, 1809, bound direct for St. Petersburg, in Russia, laden with a cargo of sugar, coffee, rum, mahogany, and logwood, one-half on account and risk of Henry and Alexander Ladd, three-eighths on account and risk of Reuben Shapley, and one-eighth on account and risk of the master. The ship was on monthly charter, and, together with the cargo, consigned to the master. On July 13 she was captured by a Norwegian privateer, called the Admiral Tordenshold, commanded by Kittle Agland, and carried into Christiansand, in Norway, then forming a part of the Kingdom of Denmark. On the following 23d of August she and her cargo were condemned, and in April, 1810, were restored, as was stated in the next column. No damage were, however, awarded to the claimants. The ship reloaded, and sailed from Christiansand on May 25, 1810, having been detained ten months and three days. The reason alleged for the condemnation was, that the ship and cargo were from England, and were British property.
8. William Hasty and estate of Ebenezer Libby, deceased.	Denmark	June 3, 1808....	Capture	Ship Live Oak, Yanel master.	$10,000. The ship was captured on her passage from London to St. Petersburg, but it is not stated where.	This ship was originally condemned June 24, 1808, at Copenhagen, and, on appeal to the Admiralty Court there, was finally condemned Aug. 30, 1808.	The Live Oak, of 278 60-95 tons, was originally owned by, and registered in the names of, William Hasty and Ebenezer Libby, of Scarborough, then in Massachusetts, now in the State of Maine, and Christopher Dyer, of Portland. Samuel Libby and Luther Libby are the sons and heirs of Ebenezer Libby. The ship was captured by two Danish privateers and carried into Copenhagen, and condemned on the alleged grounds of her having a cargo taken in at London, and being bound for Russia. The captain bought in the ship, at her sale under the final decree of condemnation, and drew a bill for the amount of the purchase money and disbursements on Thomas Wilson, of London, agent of the claimants. The bill was honored by him, and afterwards paid by them. The captain bought in the ship in his own name, as the claimants have since learned, but their efforts to find and recover her were unavailing. In the year after the close of the late war she was blown up off New York.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
9. Andrew C. Dorr.....	Denmark	Not stated.....	Capture	Ship Charlotte, Eliot master.	Value of the ship..... $17,500 00 Value of the freight ..... 6,222 22 Value of logwood..... 750 00 24,472 22 The capture was made in the North Sea, on the ship's passage to St. Petersburg.	This ship was condemned by the Admiralty Court at Copenhagen. The date of condemnation is not stated.	The ship sailed from Boston in January, 1810, for St. Petersburg, in Russia, and, with the logwood, was owned by the claimant, the cargo of sugars being for the account of Joseph Dorr only, an American citizen. Having been damaged by the severity of the weather during her voyage, she was obliged to get into port, and proceeded to Holland, where she refitted, and whence she departed for the port of destination. She was immediately captured by a French privateer, and then recaptured by an English frigate and sent to London. After paying there one-eighth salvage and heavy court charges, and after long detention, she sailed again, and was driven back into an English port, where she incurred heavy expenses, sailed again, and was taken in the North Sea by Danish gunboats. She was soon released, but again seized and condemned, because she had been at a British port, although sent in thither by an enemy's vessel.
10. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	Denmark	May, 1811	Capture.....	Brig Catherine	$479 38. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears ..	This vessel was bound from Boston to the North of Europe. She was taken and carried to Denmark. She was afterwards taken by a French privateer, carried into Dantzic, and the owners dispossessed of the cargo.
11. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	Denmark	July, 1810.....	Capture.....	Brig Hannah	$6,808 50. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	This vessel, bound from Boston to the North of Europe, was captured by a Norwegian privateer, and carried into Christiansand.
12. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	Denmark	July, 1810.....	Capture..... ...	Ship Hope	$15,000. Capture made off Norway.....	Condemned at Christiansand, August, 1810.	The Hope, bound from Cronstadt to Providence, was captured and sent into Christiansand.
13. New England Marine Insurance Company, Boston.	Denmark	Not stated	Capture	Ship Resolution....	$3,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned in the High Court of Admiralty, at Copenhagen, October, 1811.	This vessel was bound from New York to Gottenburg.
14. Geo. Newton, admr. of Wm. Pennock.	Denmark.....	1811.....	Capture.....	Ship Industry.....	$10,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	Claimants refer to Mr. Erwin's letter, July 15, 1811, and list.
15. Charles Pleasants....	Denmark	June 18, 1809 ..	Capture.....	Ship Commerce....	$2,620. Capture made off the coast of Norway.....	Condemned at Christiansand, by the High Court of Admiralty, March 12, 1810.	This vessel was captured, on her voyage from Philadelphia to Gottenburg, on 18th June, 1809, by two Danish privateer sloops, and carried into Egrog, thence to Fahrsund, and thence to Christiansand, where vessel and cargo were condemned by the Inferior Court on the 28th July, 1809, by the superior Judge, the inferior one not concurring therein. The High Court of Admiralty at Christiansand, on appeal taken from the sentence, confirmed it on the 12th of March, 1810. The claim is for the balance uninsured of an invoice of sugar and cotton, amounting to $6,820, of which was insured, by underwriters in James Crawford, jr.'s, office, for $4,200.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
16. Underwriters in Jas. Crawford, jr.'s, office.	Denmark.....	June 13, 1809 ..	Capture.....	Ship Commerce....	$4,200. Capture made off the coast of Norway.....	Condemned at Christiansand, by the High Court of Admiralty, March 12, 1810.	Same as in No. 15.
17. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	Denmark.....	April 11, 1811 ..	Capture.....	Brig Charlotte, Pierce master.	Paid Higinson & Co ..... $10,000 00 General average 891 66 10,891 66	Condemned by the Chief Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, October 8, 1811.	Owned by citizens of the United States, and "insured from Boston to the United Kingdom, or port in the North of Europe, north and east of the Elbe."
18. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	Denmark or France.	August, 1811...	Capture	Brig Hannah, Dennis master.	Place of capture not stated. Paid T. C. Amory..... $7,033 20 Salvage 3,869 00 3,164 20	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	Owned by citizens of the United States, and insured "from Boston to Russia, within the Baltic." The brig was captured by the French privateer La Minnette.
19. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	Denmark....	1810.....	Not stated.	Brig Rachel, Joseph master.	Place of capture not stated. Paid T. C. Amory..... $5,000 00 Salvage..... 2,713 87 2,286 13	Not stated.....	Owned by citizens of the United States, and insured from Boston to a port in Europe north of the Elbe.
20. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	Denmark....	Not stated.....	Capture	Ship Resolution....	Place of capture not stated. Paid to J. & T. H. Perkins, 23d April, 1812, $13,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, October 8, 1811.	Insured for Honqua, a Chinese merchant, from New York to Gottenburg.
21. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	Denmark....	July, 1810	Detention	Barque Zeno	Paid to T. C. A. & J. Richards, February and March, 1811, $8,000. Detention took place in Norway.	No adjudication appears.... ..	Owned by citizens of the United States, and insured from Boston to a port in the Baltic.
22. Robert Hooper.....	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Polly, Graves master.	$110,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Christiansand in 1810.	This vessel, bound from St. Petersburg for Marblehead, was captured by a Government vessel and carried into Christiansand, Norway.
23. Rob't Hooper, Rob't Hooper, jr., John Hooper, of Marblehead, Mass.	Denmark ...	1810.....	Capture	Brig Hope, Meek master.	$100,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Christiansand in 1810.	This vessel was bound from St. Petersburg for Marblehead. She was captured by a Government vessel, carried into Christiansand, Norway, and there condemned.
24. Thomas Meek, of Marblehead, Mass.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Schooner Rebecca, Meek master.	$20,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Christiansand in 1810.	This vessel was from Gottenburg for Marblehead; was captured by a Government vessel, carried to Christiansand, and there condemned.
25. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland. Mem.—This claim is also included in the schedule of claims on France, No. 182.	Denmark and France.	July, 1810	Capture	Ship Ploughboy....	$20,000 actually paid by the claimants to the assured. Seizure made near Sylt.	Condemned by the Council of Prizes at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel was bound from Baltimore to Sylt, in Denmark, and after arrival near to that port, and within the jurisdiction of the Government of Denmark, she was forcibly taken possession of by the French private armed vessel La Reciprocité, and carried into Sylt. The protection of Denmark was solicited in vain, and a condemnation took place at Paris without any legal course. Vessel and cargo American property. France is also charged with this claim.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
26. Israel Thorndike and William Leech.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Suwarrow.....	$84,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at a Court in Norway. Date not stated.	The brig Suwarrow, William Leech, jr., master, sailed from Beverley about 17th March, 1809, with a full cargo of tobacco, bound to Gottenburg, in Sweden; cargo belonging bona fide to the claimants, native citizens of the United States; taken by Danish privateers and carried into Fahrsund, a port in Norway, and condemned as enemies' property.
27. Israel Thorndike....	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Schooner Betsey...	$10,057 71. Capture made off the coast of Norway.	The sentence of condemnation pronounced in the Inferior Court at Fahrsund was afterwards reversed by the High Court in Copenhagen, and no compensation was made for the cargo, which had been sold by order of the Inferior Court. Date of reversal, March 9, 1811.	The schooner Betsey, John Fielder master, sailed from Beverley May 30, 1810; cargo, sugar and coffee, belonging to claimant; was captured July 30, 1810, off the coast of Norway, and carried into Fahrsund; was tried and condemned in the Lower Court upon the most frivolous pretext, and cargo ordered to be, and was, sold at auction. Sentence was afterwards reversed by the decree of the High Court in Copenhagen, March 9, 1811, and no compensation has been made.
28. Union Insurance Company of Boston.	Denmark....	July, 1810.....	Capture	Ship Hope..... ...	$15,618, part of cargo and charges incident to trial, &c. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by the Higher and Lower Courts of Denmark. Date not stated.	The ship Hope, on her voyage from St Petersburg to Providence, R. I., was captured in July, 1810, by a Danish privateer, carried into Copenhagen, and condemned by the Lower and High Courts.
29. Union Insurance Company of Boston.	Denmark....	August, 1810..	Capture and detention....	Brig Cygnet.... ...	$2,152, charges defending suits, and loss by detention. Place of capture not stated.	Cleared at the High Court of Copenhagen. Date not stated.	The Cygnet was captured on a voyage from Boston to Gottenburg by a Danish privateer; was carried into Christiansand; cleared. The captors appealed. Cleared at the High Court at Copenhagen.
30. Union Insurance Company of Boston.	Denmark....	April, 1811.....	Capture and detention....	Brig Rachel.....	$2,688 96, charges in consequence of capture and trial. Place of capture not stated.	Cleared by the High Court at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	The brig Rachel was captured on a voyage from Boston to St. Petersburg by a Danish privateer, carried into Copenhagen, condemned by the Lower Court, and cleared by the High Court.
31. Union Insurance Company of Boston.	Denmark....	August, 1811...	Capture and detention....	Brig Hannah.....	$5,426 92, loss sustained on $12,000, being part of cargo. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	This vessel was captured on a voyage from Boston to Gottenburg and Riga by a Danish privateer, carried into Christiansand, and released; was again captured, and carried into Copenhagen, and condemned to pay an amount to the captors of nearly one-half.
32. Union Insurance Company of Boston.	Denmark....	July, 1809	Capture and detention....	Ship Fair Trader...	$6,829 44, amount of the net loss sustained by the seizure, &c. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.	The Fair Trader, while on her voyage from Philadelphia to Kiel, was captured by a Danish privateer, carried into Kiel, and after a long detention was liberated. Half of the cargo was taken by the Danish Government.
33. Union Insurance Company of Boston.	Denmark or France.	July, 1810.....	Capture	Barque Zeno	$9,186 37, being part of cargo and commissions. Place of capture not stated.	The barque Zeno was condemned at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel was captured on a voyage from Boston to Gottenburg by a French privateer, and carried into Christiansand. She was condemned at Paris.
34. Union Insurance Company of Boston.	Denmark or France.	May, 1811	Capture	Brig Catherine.....	$3,247 80, part of cargo and charges. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by the Imperial Council of Prizes at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel was captured by a French privateer while on her voyage from Boston to St. Petersburg, was carried into Dantzic, and condemned by the Imperial Council of Prizes at Paris.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
35. Union Insurance Company of Boston.	Denmark or France.	May, 1811	Capture	Ship Hercules	$10,000, part of vessel and cargo. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by the Imperial Council of Prizes at Paris. Date not stated.	This vessel, on a voyage from Charleston to a port in the Baltic, was captured by a French privateer, carried into Dantzic, and condemned by the Imperial Council of Prizes at Paris.
36. Henry Gray, of Boston.	Denmark	1810.....	Seizure.....	Barque Wm. Gray, Foster master.	$1,000, amount of loss to the claimant as insurer. Seizure made at Copenhagen.	Condemned at Copenhagen February 13, 1811.	The barque William Gray was bound from St. Petersburg to New York. She put into Copenhagen to repair, and while in port she was taken by authority of the Danish Government. The vessel and cargo were condemned by the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, February 13, 1811. The sum claimed by H. Gray was paid by him as total loss.
37. Henry Gray, of Boston.	Denmark	August, 1809...	Capture	Brig Topaz, Henrick master.	$1,000 loss to Henry Gray as insurer. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned. Place not stated. December 18, 1809.	The brig Topaz was bound from Newburyport to Copenhagen. She was captured at sea, and carried into Christiansand; vessel and cargo were condemned December 18, 1809. The sum claimed was paid as a total loss.
38. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	April, 1810.....	Capture	Ship Commerce ...	$1,960. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	This vessel was taken to Christiansand, and condemned in a Danish Court of Admiralty.
39. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	March, 1810 ...	Capture	Brig Bell Air	$6,744 57. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	This vessel was taken to Christiansand, and condemned in a Danish Court of Admiralty.
40. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	October, 1810..	Capture	Brig Elizabeth	$25,014 95. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	The brig Elizabeth was taken to Christiansand, and condemned in a Danish Court of Admiralty.
41. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	December, 1810	Capture	Brig Drummond ...	$7,840. Place of capture not stated	Condemned by the Prize Court at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	This vessel was taken to Copenhagen, and condemned by the Prize Court there.
42. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	October, 1811..	Capture	Brig Ariel	$11,800. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears ..	The brig Ariel was carried to Kiel, where half of the cargo was taken by the Danish Government.
43. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	October, 1811..	Capture	Ship Fair Trader...	$6,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears ..	This vessel was carried to Kiel, where half of the cargo was taken by the Danish Government.
44. United States Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	October, 1811..	Capture	Ship Minerva Smith	$911 65. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears ..	The ship Minerva Smith was carried to Kiel, where half of the cargo was taken by the Danish Government.
45. Lancaster and Susquehanna Insurance Company.	Denmark	October, 1810..	Capture	Brig Elizabeth.....	$8,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	This vessel was taken to Christiansand, and condemned in a Danish Court of Admiralty.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
46. Lancaster and Susquehanna Insurance Company.	Denmark....	December, 1810	Capture	Ship Annawan	$7,800. Place of capture not stated	Condemned in a Danish Court at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	This vessel was taken to Christiansand, and condemned in a Danish Court of Admiralty.
47. Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company of Boston.	Denmark....	Aug. 29, 1811 ..	Capture	Brig Hannah, Dennis master.	$3,108. This sum is the amount of net loss sustained by the claimants in consequence of the capture and sequestration. Place of capture not stated.	Adjudicated by the Chief Court of Admiralty, at Copenhagen, May 11, 1811.	The brig Hannah sailed from Boston on a voyage to Gottenburg and Riga in the year 1810. After various accidents and detentions, on the 29th of August, 1811, she was taken by a Danish privateer, and afterwards was carried into Copenhagen, where she was adjudicated by the Chief Court of Admiralty May 11, 1811, who decreed a large sum to the captors, and restored the balance.
48. Joseph Bell and Joseph Watson, for themselves and for the estate of Wm. Bell, deceased, as his executors.	Denmark....	June 21, 1810 ..	Capture	Brig Julian, Abbott master.	General average on $5,000, portion of cargo at Christiansand and Copenhagen ..... $609 30 Interest from December 1, 1810, to October 1, 1826, 15 years, 10 months, at 6 per cent..... 578 87 Due claimants..... 1,188 17 Place of capture not stated.	The vessel and cargo were libelled at Christiansand and cleared by the Prize Court. The High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, on appeal, ordered the property to be restored, subject to costs, &c., constituting this general average.	The brig Julian, Captain Edward Abbott, of Philadelphia, was owned by William Bell, Joseph Bell, and Joseph Watson, and laden by them and other citizens of the United States, on their respective accounts, with a cargo destined for Gottenburg and a market, consigned to William Bell, jr., supercargo, on board. She sailed from Philadelphia on the 10th of May, 1810, with all the usual documents and consular certificates of the Danish, Swedish, and French Governments, to confirm the legality of the voyage and neutrality of the property. Yet, on the 21st June next ensuing, the brig was captured by the Danish privateer Weay Vülsen Pakkede, Kneid Ellingsen master, and carried into Christiansand, where vessel and cargo were libelled, and, after much detention and expense, were cleared by the Prize Court. From which decision the captors appealed to the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, where, after further delay, that court restored the property, subject to the payment of one thousand rix dollars to be made to the captors as an indemnification for costs accrued by the capture, as also the court charges ordained by the Prize Court on the 1st of December, 1810. Insurance had been effected by her owners upon their interests, as aforesaid, in Philadelphia, not to abandon before sixty days after hearing of capture; in New York six months, unless sooner condemned. Abandonment was legally made to the Philadelphia underwriters, who all paid their subscriptions and averages thereon in Norway and Denmark, and a cession of claim made to them, respectively, with the exception of George Smith, a private underwriter, on cargo for $5,000 in James Crawford & Co.'s office, which, from his insolvency, he was not able, and did not pay. Consequently, no cession was made to him, and the property or risk reverted thereafter to the original owners, inasmuch as if they had left that amount uninsured in the first instance. To this portion of $5,000 on the cargo a

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
48—Continued							general average of $609 30 was struck and made chargeable to it for costs and expenses in Denmark, &c., as was apportioned upon the underwriters according to their subscriptions, and which they paid, leaving unremunerated to the present claimants the sum of $609 30.
49. Union Insurance Co. of Philadelphia.	Denmark	About June, 1810.	Capture	Brig Elizabeth	Paid amount of loss December 20, 1810, $5,880. Place of capture not stated.	Unknown	Claimants insured for Charles Pleasants, April 17, 1810, from St. Petersburg to Philadelphia. The brig was captured and carried into Norway.
50. Union Insurance Co. of Philadelphia.	Denmark	About August 1, 1810.	Capture	Brig Ariel	Paid February 3, 1811, and September 28, 1812 $2,450 00 Paid February, 1811, and August 5, 1812. 3,430 00 5,880 00 Place of capture not stated.	Carried into Kiel and acquitted, whether by legal adjudication does not appear. Date not stated.	This vessel, bound from Philadelphia to Gottenburg, was captured August 1, 1810, by a Danish privateer, and carried into Kiel, where she was acquitted and allowed an entry. One-half of the goods taken by the King for duty, though at the time of entry the duty was quite small. Insured for Henry Hollingsworth, May 26, 1810, $2,450, and for Guer & Dehl, September 18, 1810, $3,430.
51. Union Insurance Co. of Philadelphia.	Denmark	Not known	Capture	Ship Fair Trader	Amount of loss paid October 2, 1810, $4,410. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears	The claimants insured for Dominick Barthe, April, 1810, from Philadelphia to Gottenburg. The ship was captured and carried into Kiel.
52. William R. Gray	Denmark	June 22, 1810	Capture	Schooner Cremer	$5,565 65. (See last column)	Condemned by High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	This vessel, on her voyage from Gottenburg to the Baltic, was captured by a Danish privateer. Claimant insured for C. Coolidge & Co., $4,000. He holds their power of attorney to recover it. Insured for G. Snow, $1,500. Total loss paid.
53. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1809	Capture	Ship Endeavor	Amount of loss in this case appears to be included in the next. Place of capture not stated.	No adjudication appears	Captured by the Danes and released, with expenses.
54. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1809	Capture	Ship Rachel	$846 81. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication appears	Same as in No. 53.
55. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1809	Capture	Brig Topaz	$21,500. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	Captured by the Danes.
56. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1809	Capture	Brig Washington	$230. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears	Captured by the Danes and restored, with expenses.
57. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1809	Capture	Brig Doris	$375. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication appears	Same as in No. 56.
58. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1809	Capture	Brig Alexander	$805. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication appears	Same as in No. 56.
59. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1809	Capture	Ship Wonolanset	$1,200. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears	Same as in No. 56.
60. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1810	Capture	Barque Wm. Gray	$4,072 84. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation. When and where not stated.	Captured by the Danes and condemned.
61. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1810	Capture	Barque Pompey	$998 80. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication appears	Captured by the Danes and restored, with expenses.
62. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark	1810	Capture	Ship Herschel	$72 08. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication appears	Same as in No. 61.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
63. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810..... ...	Capture	Brig Ellen Maria...	$4,000. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication appears.....	Same as in No. 61.
64. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Schooner Cremer..	$1,043 77. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemnation. Time and place not stated.	Captured by the Danes and condemned.
65. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Schooner Minerva..	$1,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation. Time and place not stated.	Same as in No. 64.
66. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Lydia	$9,689 81. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Copenhagen, August 30, 1810.	Same as in No. 64.
67. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Cygnet	$5,132. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication appears.....	Captured by the Danes and restored, with expenses.
68. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Cornelius	$3,954. Place of capture not stated	No adjudication appears.....	Same as in No. 67.
69. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Hannah.....	$10,882. Place of capture not stated	Condemned at Christiansand, 1810.	Captured by the Danes.
70. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Barque Zeno	$17,538 91. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears ..	Captured by the Danes and carried to Christiansand, and condemned by Bonaparte at Paris.
71. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark ...	1810.....	Capture	Ship Argo.....	$5,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	The Argo was bound to Stettin; captured by the Danes.
72. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Ship Hesper	$14,567 70. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemnation at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	The Hesper, bound from Russia to the United States, in 1811, was captured by the Danes.
73. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Charlotte.....	$8,713 28. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemnation at Copenhagen, 1811.	Captured by the Danes.
74. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Brutus.....	$13,510 62. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemnation at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	Same as in No. 74.
75. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Ship Hercules	$20,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears ..	The Hercules was captured by a French privateer, carried to Dantzic, and condemned by Bonaparte, 1811.
76. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Ship Packet	$1,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears ..	Captured by the Danes and restored, with expenses.
77. Chas. Bradbury, for self and others.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Catherine.....	$1,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnat'n by a Danish court. When and where not stated.	The brig, bound to Riga, was captured by a Danish vessel, carried to Dantzic, and condemned.
78. Maryland Insurance Co., assignees of J. P. Pleasants, for Howell & Pleasants, of Philadelphia.	Denmark.....	July 19, 1810...	Capture	Brig Elizabeth, Campbell master.	Cargo, $8,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned, August, 1810, at Christiansand.	The protest states that the brig sailed from Cronstadt the 9th of June, 1810, bound for Philadelphia, and was captured on the 19th of July, at 3 a. m., by five Danish gun brigs, called the Samson, Seagull, Allant, Alsen, and Kiel, and carried into the port of Fleckoe, where the vessel's papers were taken from Captain Campbell after being sealed by himself and the prize master. On the 21st his crew were returned, and on the 22d the Elizabeth was brought to the port of Christiansand. After an examination at the court-house, without being permitted the benefit of counsel, or to speak to the American

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
78—Continued	.....	.....	....	.....	....	.....	Consul, the vessel and cargo were condemned about the 10th of September, 1810, as per translation of condemnation, and declared lawful prize to the captors, on which Captain Campbell immediately appealed to the Superior Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen. The protest also states that the Elizabeth had been obliged by the British man-of-war, the Plantagenet, to remain some time (before she was captured) under her convoy.
79. Maryland Insurance Co., assignees of J. P. Pleasants, for Charles Pleasants, of Philadelphia.	Denmark.....	July 19, 1810...	Capture	Brig Elizabeth.....	$6,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned, August, 1810, at Christiansand.	Same as in No. 78.
80. Representatives of John Bell, deceased, & others, of Petersburg, Va.	Denmark.....	1810.....	Capture.....	Ship Herald	$104,150. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	Mr. Erving's list for 1810, and final list No. 5 of 18th July, 1811, are referred to by the claimants.
81. Wm. & Henry Haxall, of Petersburg, Va., and others.	Denmark.....	1810.....	Capture	Ship Georgia Planter.	$82,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	Same as in No. 80.
82. John B. Murray, John B. Murray & Son.	Denmark.....	May 14, 1810...	Capture	Ship Egeria	John B. Murray's claim is $28,693 40. Interest from July, 1811, is also claimed. John B. Murray & Sons' claim is $2,423. Interest on $2,423 from 14th July, 1811, is also claimed. Amount, &c., as stated by the claimants, exclusive of interest not extended, $31,116 40. See last column of this case. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	The ship Egeria sailed from New York March 10, 1810, bound to St. Petersburg; on the 14th of May, in that year, was taken on her passage by the privateer Oprisningen, Eyde master, of Fleckiford, in Norway, and carried into Fahrsund. The privateer was commissioned by the Government of Denmark. The ship Egeria, and merchandises, were detained until the 14th of July, 1811, during which time every exertion was made on the part of Captain Law to obtain her release in the various courts of Denmark, but without effect; and after incurring expenses to the amount of more than $2,000 in actual disbursements, &c., no compensation was made by the captors. The claim of John B. Murray is stated to arise from demurrage of the ship Egeria, from the day of capture to that of acquittal, 435 days, during which time she had on board a full crew, at $61 per day, amounting to $25,925; from interest on cost of merchandise on board the ship on his own account, after deducting drawbacks, $23,079 16; fourteen months, at 6 per cent., amounting to $1,614 90; his share of expenses of lawyer's fees, commissions, Captain Law's travelling expenses, &c., being 5 per cent. on the whole cargo, amounting to $1,153 50, and from interest on this item. The claim of John B. Murray & Son is stated to be for 14 months' interest on $20,186, amount of cargo on board at the time of the capture, and for $1,010, their share of charges on the same, at 5 per cent.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
83. Henry Prince	Denmark	1810.....	Capture.....	Schooner Iris	Claim for insurance, $4,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned in the Vice Admiralty Court at Christiansand. Date not stated.	This vessel was captured by a Danish vessel-of-war, sent into Christiansand, and there condemned.
84. Benjamin Pickman and John Derby.	Denmark	July 22, 1810...	Capture	Barque Mary	Cargo cost at St. Petersburg, per invoice 69,695 35 Adventures..... ..... 13,788 77 Rubles..... 83,484 12 Shipping charges and captain's commissions, at 5 per cent..... 4,174 20 87,658 32 This sum, at 3 rubles the S. dollar, is.... $29,219 00 Value of vessel and appurtenances..... 8,500 00 37,719 00 Interest is claimed from time of capture. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Christiansand, Sept. 12, 1810, and sentence confirmed by the High Court July 2, 1811, at Copenhagen.	The barque was captured July 22, 1810. The claimants are native citizens of the United States of America, and were the sole and exclusive owners of the barque Mary and cargo. Captain Thomas B. Osgood went from Salem as master of the vessel, but being detained at St. Petersburg by business, he appointed his first officer, John Ropes, jr., as master for her voyage home. Every original paper relating to the vessel and cargo was kept by the captors, and the captain and crew driven on shore. The claimants state that if the vessel had returned to Salem from St. Petersburg, in the usual passage, her cargo and adventure would probably have sold for $45,000, clear of duties. On this supposition, their claim, including $8,500, the value of the vessel, would be $53,000.
85. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	Denmark	.....	Capture	Ship Annawan, Donaldson master.	Paid December 20, 1810, $9,800. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned in the Royal Prize Court of Denmark. Date not stated.	Insured for John Donaldson. Bound from St. Petersburg to Philadelphia. Captured by five Danish gun brigs, and sent to Christiansand.
86. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	Denmark	.....	Capture	Brig Elizabeth, Campbell master.	Paid March 4, 1811, insured for Jas. Robb $1,217 16 Jan., 1811, insured for Chas. Pleasants.. 11,760 00 12,977 16 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	The brig Elizabeth, bound from St. Petersburg for Philadelphia, was captured by sundry Danish gun brigs, and sent to Christiansand.
87. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	Denmark . ..	....	Capture	Brig Julian, Abbott master.	Paid February 1, 1811, $8,624. Insured for John Boccalin. Place of capture not stated.	Adjudication by the Prize Court at Christiansand. Date not stated.	The brig Julian, from Philadelphia to Gottenburg, &c., was captured by a Danish privateer, sent to Christiansand, and cleared by Prize Court. Captors appealed, and cargo held.
88. Insurance Company of the State of Pennsylvania.	Denmark	....	Capture	Brig Ariel, Butler master.	$11,760. Place of capture not stated.....	Cleared by the court at Fleusbourg, but condemned by royal decree. Dates not stated.	Insured for Nixon & Walker, April 14, 1810, on two-thirds vessel's value, from Philadelphia to Gottenburg, and one other port. Captured July 31, 1810, by a Danish privateer, sent into the port of Kiel, and there long detained. Vessel taken possession of December 11, 1810, by Gen. Evault. Cleared by Fleusbourg court, and afterwards condemned by royal decree.
89. Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	1810.....	Capture	Brig Ariel, Butler master.	$5,500. Capture made on the brig's entering the port of Kiel.	No legal adjudication appears...	The Ariel was bound from Philadelphia to Kiel. She was released on surrendering one-half of the goods in lieu of duties.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
90. Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	1810..... ...	Capture	Ship Fair Trader, Craig master.	$5,000. Capture made on the ship's entering the port of Kiel.	No legal adjudication appears...	The ship Fair Trader was bound from Philadelphia to Kiel. She was released on surrendering one-half of the goods in lieu of duties.
91. Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark	1810.....	Capture	Ship Annawan, Donaldson master.	$10,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation in Norway. Date not stated.	This ship, bound from St. Petersburg to Philadelphia, was captured by Danish gunboats, and carried into Norway.
92. Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Brig Elizabeth, Campbell master.	$12,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemnation in Norway. Date not stated.	The brig Elizabeth, bound from St. Petersburg for Philadelphia, was captured by Danish gunboats and carried into Norway.
93. Marine Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark....	1809.....	Capture	Ship Commerce, Skinner master.	$8,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemation in Con. Date not stated.	The Commerce was bound from Philadelphia to Gottenburg, was captured by Danish gunboats, carried into Norway and condemned.
94. Baltimore Insurance Company.	Denmark....	June 2, 1810...	Capture	Ship Oscar.....	$20,583 66. Place of capture not stated.....	Adjudication and acquittal, in the court of last resort, at Copenhagen, September 17, 1811.	The ship Oscar, John Cunningham master, sailed from the Chesapeake bay in April, 1810, bound to Gottenburg, laden with tobacco and cotton, was captured on the 2d of June, 1810, by a Danish cruiser, and carried into Norway, and, on the 27th of July following, was condemned by a Prize Court at Christiansand; appealed to Copenhagen, where vessel and cargo were acquitted, September 17, 1811. The Danish Government granted an indemnity for the detention, which was entirely inadequate; so much so that the claimants, by the detention and loss of market, absolutely lost the sum now claimed, viz: $20,583 66.
95. Edward M. Donaldson.	Denmark....	July 19, 1810...	Capture	Ship Annawan.....	Vessel—Freight..... $10,000 00 Goods..... 13,839 00 Amount uninsured. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	This ship, on a voyage from St. Petersburg to Philadelphia, all American property, and a very valuable cargo. She was captured by five Danish gunboats, and carried into Christiansand.
96. Edward M. Donaldson.	Denmar	July 19, 1810...	Capture	Ship Annawan.....	Detention ..... $1,250 00 Loss of fruit..... 3,000 00 Expenses..... 1,000 00 Amount, &c..... 5,250 00 Capture made off Elsineur.	No adjudication appears.....	This ship sailed from Norfolk, Virginia, March 23, 1809, to Madeira and Lisbon; there loaded with salt, fruit, wine, &c., on account of the owner, who was also the master, (the claimant,) and sailed for St. Petersburg, June 26, 1809. She was captured off Elsineur by a Danish cruiser, and carried to Copenhagen and detained fifty days. Cargo of fruit rotted. Released on paying $1,000 to captors, and obliged to winter in Russia, in consequence of the detention.
97. Samuel Keith.....	Denmark....	July 13, 1810...	Capture	Brig Ariel.....	9 bales cotton; half retained, $275 33. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears ..	The goods were shipped by the claimant March 31, 1810. The vessel, bound from Philadelphia to Gottenburg and another port, was captured by privateer Tiger, carried to Kiel and released, and half the goods taken for duties.
98. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark....	July 19, 1810...	Capture.....	Brig Elizabeth, Campbell master.	Goods. Paid $19,600. Place of capture not stated...	Condemned. When and where not stated.	Insured by William Hunt, Philadelphia, to St. Petersburg, and back, April 26, 1809, and St. Petersburg to Philadelphia, August 23, 1810. Captured by five Danish gunboats or brigs, and carried to Norway.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
99. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark....	July 19, 1810...	Capture	Ship Annawan.....	Goods. Paid $17,000. Place of capture not stated..	Condemned. When and where not stated.	Insured by J. Donaldson, April 3, 1810, and by Pratt & Kurtz, July 28, and August 6, 1810, Petersburg to Philadelphia. Captured by five Danish brigs, and carried to Norway.
100. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark....	1809.....	Capture	Ship Commerce, Skinner master.	Goods, $3,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Christiansand, November, 1809.	Insured May 13, 1809, by T. C. Clifford, Philadelphia, to St. Petersburg, with liberty of Gottenburg. The Commerce was captured and sent to Christiansand.
101. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark....	July 31, 1810...	Capture	Ship Fair Trader, Craig master.	Goods. Paid $5,192 33. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication appears...	Insured May 31, 1810, by G. & H. Cilham, and August 24, 1810, by W. Hunt, Philadelphia, to Gottenburg and another port. The Fair Trader was captured by the privateer Tigre, carried to Kiel, and released, but one-half of the goods were taken for the duties.
102. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark....	July 13, 1810...	Capture.	Brig Ariel, Butler master.	Indigo. Paid $5,960 62. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears..	Insured April 21, 1810, by Charles Francis, Philadelphia to Gottenburg and another port. Captured by the privateer Tigre, carried to Kiel and released, but half the goods taken for duties.
103. Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.	Denmark....	June 1, 1810 ...	Capture	Schooner Fame, Perry master.	Paid $6,847 82. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	Insured by George Harrison, April 8, 1811, Baltimore to St. Petersburg. The schooner Fame was captured by cutters and sent into Fahrsund. Released, but loss and expenses.
104. Estate of Wm. Russell, N. Silsbee, D. L. Pickman, and others.	Denmark....	Sept. 20, 1810..	Capture	Schooner Iris, Russell master.	Value in the United States of property captured, $15,000. Capture made on the coast of Norway.	Condemned in Admiralty Court at Christiansand, and afterwards, on an appeal, by the High Court at Copenhagen, July, 1811.	The Iris was captured on the coast of Norway and sent in.
105. John Andrew.....	Denmark...	June 15, 1809 ..	Capture	Ship Pacific, Becket master.	Rice .... $1,694 52 S tea..... .... 1,793 60 H. S. tea .... 231 70 H. S. tea .... 641 40 Sugar .... 171 69 H. S. tea ..... 283 80 Short price..... ..... 4,816 65 Vessel .... 9,500 00 Freight..... ..... 6,000 00 Expenses in Norway ..... 3,000 00 23,316 65 Freight for 12 or 15 shippers..... 16,422 00 Amount, &c..... 39,738 65 Place of capture not stated.	Condemnation of vessel and cargo by the Prize Court at Christiansand, July 3, 1809.	On the 15th of June, 1809, the ship Pacific was captured by the privateer Nouske Tar, Captain Matthias Perry, on the ground that Captain Becket, of the Pacific, after having been hailed, had refused sending his boat, as also to give up his papers, besides other alleged suspicious circumstances.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
106. Social Insurance Co. of Salem.	Denmark....	May 26, 1811...	Capture	Brutus	Amount insured, $7,750. Capture made off the Naze of Norway.	No legal adjudication appears...	This vessel was captured by Norwegian privateers. Papers, protest, &c., with Nathan Robertson and D. L. Pickman, &c., owners. The insurance in this case was made for Noah Amory, one of the owners, to whose statement the claimants refer.
107. Union Marine Insurance Company of Salem.	Denmark....	March 9, 1810..	Confiscation.....	Schooner Lydia, Chever master.	Insured for Samuel Gray on effects, $10,000.....	No legal adjudication appears...	Confiscated in Denmark by the French. The claimants state that this amount is probably included in the claim of the assured, he being in possession of the documents.
108. Robert and John Oliver.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture and detention....	Ship Mary.....	$15,000. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The ship Mary was captured by Danish privateers, carried into Copenhagen and detained upwards of twelve months, by which a loss was sustained in a sum greater than that here stated.
109. Marine Insurance Company.	Denmark ...	1810.....	Capture	Ship Oscar	$20,000. Place of capture not stated	Condemnation at Christiansand. Date not stated.	Captured by a Danish privateer.
110. A. Kintzing, for his son, B. H. Kintzing.	Denmark...	May, 1809	Capture.....	Ship Commerce, Skinner master.	..... $3,318 60 Interest to October, 1826..... 3,452 45 Total loss..... 6,771 05 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned at Callanburg after a trial. Date not stated.	The ship Commerce, bound from Philadelphia to Gottenburg, was captured at sea by a Danish privateer.
111. Elijah Hall.....	Denmark....	July 20, 1810..	Capture.....	Ship Aurora, Hall master.	$31,391 10. Place of capture not stated. See last column.	Condemned in the Lower Prize Courts of Denmark.	The ship Aurora, bound from Sandaignia to Bergen, was captured July 20, 1810, by the Danish privateer New Devil, Captain Simmerson, and carried into Fleckefeird. The claimant, in his explanatory remarks, states the amount of his loss to have been $16,000, the value of the vessel of which he was proprietor; that he owned no part of the cargo at the time of the capture; that the ship was on charter, the amount of which is not known, the papers having been detained by the captors or court; that she was captured between Sandaignia and Bergen, to which latter place she was bound, and that she was sent into Fleckefeird.
112. Maryland Insurance Company, assignees of R. Gilmer & Sons.	Denmark....	June, 1810.....	Capture and detention ...	Ship Oscar, Cunningham master.	About $17,000. Place of capture not stated.....	Subjected to legal adjudication, and acquitted in the court of last resort at Copenhagen. See last column.	The ship Oscar sailed from the Chesapeake bay in April, 1810, bound to Gottenburg, in Sweden, laden with tobacco and cotton. She was captured the 2d of June, 1810, by a Danish cruiser, and carried into Norway, and on the 27th July following was condemned by a Prize Court at Christiansand. An appeal was taken to Copenhagen, where the vessel and cargo were acquitted 17th of September, 1811. The Danish Government granted an indemnity for the detention, which was entirely inadequate, so much so, that the claimants, by the detention of vessel and loss of market, absolutely lost about seventeen thousand dollars.
113. John Brazer.....	Denmark....	Not stated.....	Unknown to claimants...	Brig Radius.....	$2,000 loss sustained at Copenhagen.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The claimant states that the brig Radius and cargo was captured or injured, and that the imperial decrees of 1811 are the act complained of.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
114. John Brazer.....	Denmark....	Not stated.....	Unknown to claimant....	Ship Andromache..	$5,000 loss sustained at Copenhagen.....	No legal adjudication appears...	The claimant states that the ship Andromache and cargo were captured or injured, and that the imperial decrees of 1811 are the act complained of.
115. Wm. Gray's estate.	Denmark....	July, 1810.....	Capture.....	Brig Hope, Meek master.	Loss to William Gray, insurer on vessel. $2,000 00 Cargo 8,000 00 10,000 00	Vessel and cargo condemned by the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, of July 2, 1811.	This vessel, bound from St. Petersburg to the United States, was captured in the Baltic by Danish gun brigs and sent into Christiansand, July 19, 1810. The sum claimed was insured by William Gray for R. & J. Hooper, of Marblehead.
116. Wm. Gray's estate.	Denmark....	1810.....	Seizure.....	Barque Wm. Gray, Foster master.	See last column. Loss to William Gray, as insurer on vessel, $1,000. Seizure made at Copenhagen.	Condemned by the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, February 13, 1811.	The barque William Gray was bound from St. Petersburg to New York, and was taken by order of the Danish Government while lying at Copenhagen, where she had put in for repairs. The sum claimed was insured for Pickering Dodge, of Salem, by William Gray.
117. Wm. Gray's estate.	Denmark....	June, 1810.....	Capture	Schooner Cremer, Swazey master.	Loss to William Gray, as insurer on cargo, $18,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	The Cremer was captured in the Baltic by Danish privateers, on her passage from Gottenburg to the Baltic, June 22, 1810, and sent into Copenhagen. The sum claimed was insured by William Gray, viz: For C. Coolidge & Co., Boston ..... $15,000 00 Captain Swazey..... 3,000 00 18,000 00 C. Coolidge & Co. gave William Gray a power of attorney to prosecute this claim for his benefit.
118. Wm. Gray's estate..	Denmark.....	March, 1811....	Capture	Ship Brutus, Fenno master.	Loss of Gray, insurer on cargo, $11,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, April 7, 1812.	This vessel, bound from New Orleans to St. Petersburg, was captured in the Baltic by five Danish privateers, and sent into a port in Norway, March 26, 1811. The sum claimed was insured by William Gray for D. L. Pickman and Nathaniel Robinson, of Salem.
119. Wm. Gray's estate..	Denmark....	June, 1809.....	Capture	Barque Pacific, Becket master.	Loss to William Gray, as insurer on cargo, $1,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen, July, 1809.	The sum claimed was insured for Joseph Mosely, of Salem, by P. Lander, agent of William Gray. The Pacific, from Salem to the North of Europe, was captured by the Danish privateer North Star, June 15, 1809, and sent into Christiansand.
120. C. F. Kalkman.....	Denmark...	1809, 1810.....	Sequestration.....	Grand Seignior, Bolton master; Temperance, Southcomb master; N. America, Tucker master; Geo. Albert, Norman master.	The cargo of the Grand Seignior was of the invoice value of $69,000; that of the Temperance, $83,000; that of the North America, $6,200; and that of the George Albert, $1,005. The detention of these cargoes occasioned, in some instances, a loss of 50 per cent., and in some a total loss. The damage really ascertained to have been suffered is not less than $79,000. See last column.	No legal adjudication appears...	The cargoes were shipped in June and July, 1809, from Baltimore for Tonninger Hassun and other Danish ports. On their arrival at those ports, they were seized and sequestrated by the King of Denmark, under the pretext of their being British property, without any testimony to support the charge. They were detained at least eight months, and not released until the summer of 1810. The owner accompanied the property, and used every effort to relieve it from this unfounded arrest. The expenses and the difference, in the meantime, in the market prices, occasioned a heavy loss on the original

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.		Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
120—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....		.....	cost of the property, as stated by the claimant. In some instances the heavy freight, and other expenses incurred during the detention, were not covered by the proceeds of the particular cargoes.
121. Phin. Drinkwater..	Denmark....	1809.....	Capture.....	Ship North America.	6 hhds. sugar, 10 casks rice, 20 bales cotton, as per appraisement made at St. Petersburg, Russia.....	$1,352 17	No legal adjudication appears...	The ship North America, of which the claimant was master, was taken by a Danish privateer, and carried into Christiansand.
					Claimant's time for 11 months, at $3 per day	1,002 00
					Expenses on shore, at $2 per day.....	668 00
						3,022 17
					Simple interest on the amount for 17½ years, at six per cent.....	3,173 28
					Amount, &c.....	6,195 45
					Place of capture not stated.
122. John Coulter.....	Denmark....	Aug. 13, 1810..	Capture. See last column.	Brig Ariel.....	Loss sustained.....	$6,133 20	No legal adjudication appears...	To prevent confiscation at Kiel, such American property as was in Holstein and Sleswick was declared for exportation to Hamburg, subject to the duties of the French tariff, and an additional duty of six per cent. imposed by the Danish Government. These unlawful duties were paid in kind, which was one-half of the property brought into Hamburg.
					Interest from Aug. 13, 1810, to Sept. 13, 1826, 16 years 1 month, at 6 per cent..	5,918 50
						12,051 70
					Value of property in Philadelphia, $2,174 51.
					For place of loss see last column.
123. John Coulter.....	Denmark....	Aug. 13, 1810..	Capture. See last column.	Ship Stranger	Loss sustained.....	$2,946 12	No legal adjudication appears...	Same as in No. 122.
					Interest from Aug. 13, 1810, to Sept. 13, 1826, 16 years 1 month, at 6 per cent..	2,843 05
						5,789 17
					Value of property in Philadelphia, $1,862 75.
					For place of loss see last page.
124. John Coulter.....	Denmark....	1807....	Capture. See last column.	Ship Bourdeaux Packet and the Helena.	Loss sustained.....	$1,064 08	No legal adjudication appears..	None.
					Interest from October 12, 1812, to Sept. 13, 1826, 13 years and 11 months, at 6 per cent.....	888 50
						1,952 58
					Seizure made at Antwerp.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
125. John Coulter.....	Denmark....	Aug. 13, 1810...	Capture.....	Ship Minerva Smith	Loss sustained..... $3,000 00 Interest from Sept. 1, 1810, to Sept. 13, 1826, 16 years, at 6 per cent..... 2,880 00 5,880 00 Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	Captured by a Danish privateer.
126. Francis Mayerhoff..	Denmark or France.	June, 1811.....	Spoliation.....	Ship Indian Queen, Stephen Hammond master.	$15,000. For place of loss see last column.....	No legal adjudication.....	The Indian Queen sailed from New York on the 10th of March, 1810, arrived at Kiel on the 1st of May, 1810, and discharged her freight in the usual way and time. After the discharge of the cargo at Kiel, the Danish Government issued a proclamation in October, 1810, avowing an agreement made with Napoleon, by which all American importations to Kiel were to be removed to Hamburg, then in possession of the French. The goods were accordingly removed on the 19th April, 1811, by the Danish Government to Hamburg, and there placed in the custody of the French authorities. The French then, under pretence of a duty, claimed and retained two-thirds of the cotton and six-tenths of the tobacco, leaving for the owners the residue, which, in the case of this claimant, did not more than cover the expenses of transportation, insurance, &c. The cargo consisted of cotton and tobacco, of which the claimant's proportion was worth the amount claimed.
127. William Dall and the heirs of Isaac Vose, of Boston.	Denmark....	Aug. 9, 1809...	Capture and detention...	Brig Joseph, Turner master.	Loss sustained, $35,823 68. Interest from February 26, 1810. Capture made off the Naze of Norway.	Trial and acquittal of vessel and cargo at Christiansand, 1809. Appeal to the High Court of Christiana, and acquittal in 1810.	The brig Joseph, owned by William Dall and Joseph Vose, sailed from Boston in June, 1809, bound direct for St. Petersburg, her papers and documents in perfect order. On her passage she was captured by two Danish privateers, and carried into a small port near Christiansand, called Hitteroe. The captain and crew were turned ashore, and the vessel and cargo taken possession of by the privateers' crew, in whose possession she remained from the time of her arrival in August, 1809, till her final liberation in July, 1810. The vessel was brought to trial in Christiansand in November following, and cleared. The captors appealed to the High Court of Christiana, and she was again cleared, without allowance of damages or charges of any kind. While in possession of the captors the vessel was exposed to the sun and rain for about ten months, which occasioned her seams to open, and the rain and snow during the winter to penetrate through the decks. The cargo, consisting partly of coffee, cotton, rice, and other articles subject to injury by wet, was thus very much damaged. Those articles were landed after acquittal,

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
127—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	and were sold to prevent a total loss by damage, and also to pay immense expenses incurred by defending this very unjust capture. The papers containing an account of this transaction are stated to have been forwarded to the Department of State in 1811 or 1812.
128. Charles Williams, Francis Watts, and John Williams.	Denmark....	July 13, 1812...	Capture.....	Ship Antelope, Christopher Fowler master.	Value of vessel ..... $16,000 00 Freight..... 6,666 67 22,666 67 Capture made off the North Cape of Lapland.	Claimants know of no legal adjudication.	The ship Antelope, of Kennebunk, sailed from London, taken in charter by the agent of Pickering, Dodge & Co., of Salem, Massachusetts, to go in ballast and take a cargo of sail-cloth, iron, hemp, &c., at Archangel to Salem. She sailed from Gravesend in the morning of June 27; and on July 13, in sight of Lapland, North Cape, latitude 70° 45′, 19° east longitude, land ten leagues distant, was taken by Danish gunboat No. 97, carried on shore among the rocks and anchored. On August 2, gunboat on a cruise was chased into port by boats of the British frigate Horatio, which captured gunboat, a schooner in company, and the ship Antelope, and carried them to England. There was then war between England and Denmark, as also between England and the United States; but the latter fact was not known to the captain of the frigate, nor to Captain Fowler, till his arrival in England. There was a total loss of all the property. It was necessary to support the men in England, and pay for their transportation to London.
129. Joseph Moody, for self and other owners.	Denmark....	May 1810.....	Capture.....	Brig Columbia.....	$6,000. See last column	Subject to legal adjudication at Copenhagen, August 10, 1810.	The brig Columbia, John Sullivan master, Joseph Moody, Richard Gilpatrick, and Jeremiah Paul, owners, was bound from Lisbon, with a cargo of salt and fruit for Gottenburg, where she touched for information, and thence proceeded with her cargo for Riga, in the Baltic. After having touched at Elsinore and paid the regular Sound dues, she was cleared, and proceeded on her voyage; but shortly after her departure from that port was taken possession of by a Danish privateer and carried into Copenhagen, and there detained for trial. The master, mate, and crew, compelled to leave the vessel and provide for themselves on shore, at the expense of the owners, from about the 1st of May to the 1st of Septemper, 1810. It appears by an authenticated copy of the records of the Prize Court of Copenhagen, now in the possession of the claimants, that a trial was had on the vessel and cargo, and sentence pronounced on the 10th day of August, 1810, in the following words: "The ship in question, Columbia, Captain Sullivan, together with her cargo, is hereby released, save, however, that the expenses before the court, and a sum of five hundred rix dollars to be paid to P. Madson, are to be paid out of the ship and cargo." From this sentence, as appears by the records of

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
129—Continued	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	the court, the captors appealed. In consequence of their so doing, Captain Sullivan, to avoid a further detention of three or four months, and probably in the Baltic during the approaching winter, and a further accumulation of costs without any prospect of redress, was induced to pay the captors one thousand rix dollars in addition to the sums before mentioned, to obtain his release. On so doing, he was permitted to depart with his vessel and cargo, except the fruit, which was taken out and disposed of by the captors, by which claimants suffered considerable loss, besides all the costs above mentioned, and a detention of the vessel and crew three and a half months. Captain Sullivan has been absent for many years, and the claimants presume that he is dead. Adverting to his accounts of charges and losses, they amount to $5,052 85, but as there may be other charges, the sum claimed is stated at $6,000.
130. Nathaniel West....	Denmark....	July 7, 1809....	Capture	Ship Commerce, Sam. B. Ingersoll master.	Fine paid by order of court 400 rix dollars. $56 00 Value of articles delivered owners of privateer for abandoning their appeal to High Court..... 1,100 00 Paid owners of another privateer abandoning claim..... 70 00 Port charges, bribe to judge, and other expenses ..... 1,000 00 Loss of voyage by detention ..... 15,000 00 Demurrage 61 days, at $80 per day..... 4,880 00 Insurance outward, at 7 per cent..... 4,900 00 Freight, £7 on 200 tons ..... 6,216 00 Amount, &c..... 33,222 00 Place of capture not stated.	Tried by Danish court at Christiansand, and ship and cargo released. Date not stated.	The ship Commerce, with a valuable cargo, was captured on the 7th July, 1869, by a Danish privateer, and sent into Norway. After a detention of 61 days, she was liberated by the Danish court, and allowed to proceed on her voyage. This ship was, when captured, on her voyage to Gottenburg, in Sweden, and had every document to prove the property to be American. After a ruinous detention, which rendered it much too late to proceed to St. Petersburg, where she was bound for a return cargo for Salem, the Commerce, on the 16th of September, 1809, set sail for Christiansand, and was the next day overtaken by a violent gale of wind and totally lost on the coast of Sweden, as also was a large part of her cargo.
131. John Derby and B. Pickering.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture.	Brig Mary	Not stated.....	Condemned on the 12th September, 1810, by the High Court of Christiansand.	The brig Mary, owned by the claimants, having on board a valuable cargo, on her passage from Gottenburg for the United States, was captured and carried into Christiansand. The papers respecting this claim were in the possession of Mr. Erving, minister of the United States at the Court of Denmark.

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
132. Samuel Page, Samuel Endicott, and John H. Andrews.	Denmark....	Sept. 3, 1811...	Capture	Schooner Jeremiah, Wm. R. Russell master.	Vessel and cargo..... $42,937 51 Interest on ditto..... ..... 1,101 84 Damages ..... 10,000 00 Vessel's expenses, rix dollars..... 22,173 28 Privateer's expenses, rix dollars ..... 377 58 See last column. Capture made in the Sound, 8 miles from Elsineur Castle.	Cleared in the High Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen. Date not stated.	The schooner Jeremiah sailed from Salem on the 28th of July, 1811, bound for St. Petersburg, with a cargo of white Havana sugars. She was captured by a Danish privateer, sent to Copenhagen, and condemned in the first court, but afterwards cleared in the High Court, after a detention of 142 days; she being obliged to pay the privateer's and all other expenses. When cleared, it was too late for her, during the season, to proceed up the Baltic. Amount of claims, exclusive of interest, on vessel and cargo, is, in United States money, $74,688 98.
133. Samuel Page, Samuel Endicott, and John H. Andrews. Samuel Endicott, and John H. Andrews.	Denmark....	May 24, 1812...	Capture	Sloop Jorgan.....	Property captured amounting to 31,723.13.0 marks banco, equal to $——. Property captured amounting to 30,743.3.0 marks banco, equal to $——. Amount of the two claims included in this case is 62,477 marks banco, equal, at 33⅓ cents a mark banco, to $20,825 66. Loss sustained at Cappel.	No legal adjudication appears...	On the 21st of May, 1812, an American agent shipped on board the Danish sloop Jorgan, Captain H. Beix, sixty-two bales and two boxes of Saxony and Silesia linens, from the port of Eckenford, in the Duchy of Holstein, in the Kingdom of Denmark, to be transported across the Great Belt and landed at Corsoeur, in the island of Zealand. After sailing from Eckenford, in consequence of contrary winds, the sloop was obliged to put into Cappel, Denmark. On the 24th of May said sloop was cut out of the port of Cappel by the boats of two British ships-of-war, in consequence of the dilatoriness and neglect of the Danish commanding officer of artillery in not coming to rescue the sloop, since it was in his power, had he made proper despatch, to have prevented the enemy from taking away the sloop, as his troops were stationed not more than two English miles from the harbor of Cappel, and the enemy were more than three hours in getting the sloop out of the harbor.
134. Arthur McLellan and Geo. McLellan.	Denmark....	May 4, 1809....	Capture.....	Ship Jane.....	Cargo taken on board at Charleston, South Carolina, in December, 1808, including shipping charges. .. .. $19,130 31 Charter of ship ..... 1,344 00 Disbursements on ship during the voyage, including provisions, seamen's wages, custom-house fees, &c..... 750 00 Disbursements, &c., from January 15 till the day she sailed for Gottenburg, March 15, 1809, for wages, stores, &c., for voyage ..... 1,085 18 Disbursements, &c., during her detention, till final condemnation, per Isaac Isaackson, American Consul at Christiansand..... 1,321 00	Condemned in the High Court of Admiralty at Christiansand, December 18, 1809.	The vessel was owned by George McLellan, the cargo by Arthur McLellan. She was captured, May 4, 1809, by two open boats, manned with sixteen men each, without carriage guns, and carried to a place called Eguog. The cause assigned for the condemnation of the ship was that she was British property; and the reasons given by the High Court of Admiralty for this opinion were, that she had on board 250 unwrought handspikes and 40 sticks of timber, which they called ship timber, and pronounced contraband. The Secretary of State's signature was not on the sea papers, and mention was made of the office being vacant; no signature of his (Secretary of State) having been received at the custom-house (Christiansand) prior to the ship sailing; that in the ship's journal was found noted, under date of March 30, 1809, that a man named John Ellis was delivered on board an English brig of Liverpool; and under date 18th of April, that the same man was lost overboard in a gale. The reason of its

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.		Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
134—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Disbursements, &c., by George McLellan, master.....	$1,006 48	.. ..	being noted that he was put on board of an English ship was to prevent his impressment in case of being boarded by an English ship-of-war. That on board were two passengers that were not found on the muster roll, and had no passports, Englishmen by birth; and that the ship was addressed to an English house of trade, and directed to receive orders from said house. Those and other reasons given by the court for the confirmation of the sentence, were readily explained to the court by the master of the ship. The charter of said ship to Charleston, and back, began October 14, 1808, and ended January 15, 1809, three months, at $2 per month per ton.
					Loss of Arthur McLellan, owner of the cargo, without interest.....	24,636 97
					Ship Jane, purchased of Arthur McLellan in March, 1809, per register.....	6,000 00
					Freight to be paid on delivery of the cargo at Gottenburg, per bill of lading, £900 sterling.....	4,000 00
					Loss of Arthur McLellan, owner of the ship, without interest.....	10,000 00
					Whole amount.....	34,636 97
135. Asa Clapp and Matthew Cobb's administrator.	Denmark....	June 5, 1810...	Capture.....	Brig Minerva, Wm. Baker master.	Capture made off the Naze of Norway.		Vessel and cargo were tried by the High Court at Copenhagen, and acquitted, June 17, 1811, by payment of costs.	Brig Minerva sailed from Portland on the 3d day of April, 1810, bound to St. Petersburg, Russia, laden with sugar, coffee, pepper, indigo, cotton, and rum. On the 5th June, 1810, she was captured by a Danish privateer, Captain ——, and carried into Fahrsund, in Norway. The papers were sent to Christiansand, and there, after a long delay, there was a trial, and the vessel and cargo cleared. The captors appealed to the High Court of Copenhagen, and the trial took place on the 17th June, 1811, when the vessel and cargo were cleared by paying costs. The Minerva had all the necessary papers to prove the neutrality of the vessel and cargo. She had certificates of the Danish, French, Swedish, and Russian Consuls. The late Matthew Cobb and Asa Clapp were the sole owners of the vessel and cargo. The appraisement of the damage was made at St. Petersburg, the port of her destination.
					Wages of officers and seamen, from June 5, 1810, to August 30, 1811, at $240 per month.....	$2,836 00
					Expenses in Norway and cost of court..	3,600 00
					Provisions.....	500 00
					Damages, by appraisement, of sugar, coffee, indigo, and cotton.....	10,543 08
					Charter of the brig, 188 tons, 13 months and 27 days, at $2 per ton per month..	5,226 40
					Amount.....	22,705 48
					Interest on this sum from June 5, 1810, to December 5, 1826, 16½ years, at 6 per cent. per annum.....	22,478 42
						45,183 90
136. Asa Clapp and Matthew Cobb's administrator.	Denmark....	April 30, 1809..	Capture.....	Ship North America, Phineas Drinkwater master.	Capture made near the Naze of Norway.		Cleared in the High Court of Admiralty, in Denmark, on the payment of charges. Date not stated.	The ship North America, 354 tons burden, sailed from Portland on the 28th of March, 1809, for Gottenburg, in the Kingdom of Sweden, laden with cotton, rice, and sugar. She was captured on the 30th of April, 1809, by two Danish privateer boats, and carried into Christiansand,
					Expenses and charges attending the courts of justice.....	$3,454 00
					Wages of officers and seamen for eleven months, at $301 per month.....	3,311 00

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
136—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Charter of the ship 11 months, at $2 per ton..... $7,788 00 Provisions for 14 men, 11 months..... 902 00 Damages to the cotton, sugar, and rice, by the detention of the ship, by appraisement, at St. Petersburg..... 20,121 00 35,576 00 Interest on this sum from April 30, 1809, to October 30, 1826, 7½ years, at 6 per cent..... 37,354 80 72,930 80	.....	in Norway. She was tried in the Lower Court, and, after a detention of eleven months, she was cleared in the High Court of Admiralty by paying all charges. The damage of the cargo was ascertained at St. Petersburg, where it was landed. The ship had all the necessary papers to prove the neutrality of vessel and cargo. The ship and cargo were owned by the late Matthew Cobb and Asa Clapp.
137. Asa Clapp and the administrators of Matthew Cobb.	Denmark....	June 9, 1809...	Capture.....	Ship Harriet, Jos. Weeks master.	Wages of officers and seamen, from June 19 to September 19, 1809, at $280 per month..... $840 00 Expenses at Copenhagen, cost of court, and 500 rix dollars to the captors..... 4,430 50 Provisions for seamen..... 312 00 Charter of the ship three months, at $2 per month per ton..... 1,566 00 Amount..... 7,148 50 Interest on this sum from June 19, 1809, to December 19, 1826, 17½ years, at 6 per cent. per annum..... 7,405 92 14,554 42	Adjudged at the Prize Court in Copenhagen, on the 6th Aug., 1809, and cleared on paying expenses, and 500 rix dollars to the captors.	The ship Harriet, 261 tons, sailed from Portland on the 17th of May, 1809, bound to St. Petersburg, Russia, laden with mahogany, logwood, rice, sugar, rum, cotton, and hops. On the 19th June, 1809, she was captured by three Danish privateers, commanded by Jans Neilson, Lars Bentzum, Hans Fredrict, and carried into Copenhagen. The Harriet had all the necessary papers to prove the neutrality of the vessel and cargo, and the certificates of the Danish, French, and Russian Consuls. The late Matthew Cobb and Asa Clapp were the sole owners of the vessel and cargo.
138. Stephen Higginson, Sam'l G. Perkins, and heirs of Geo. Higginson; Marine Insurance Company, Suffolk Insurance Comp'y, and C. Bradbury, insurance broker.	Denmark....	April 11, 1811..	Capture.....	Brig Charlotte.....	Capture made near the coast of Denmark. Cost of vessel and cargo in Boston, with premium of insurance..... $31,765 88 Portage bill..... 1,594 67 Expenses in the Baltic..... 3,007 22 Abandonment..... 5 00 Freight of brig..... 4,413 84 Interest from August, 1810, to August, 1826, sixteen years..... 39,155 14 79,941 75 For place of capture see the last column.	Condemned at Eartholm, April 25, 1811.	The brig Charlotte, belonging to Stephen Higginson & Co., sailed from Boston August 12, 1810, for Gottenburg and a market, with a cargo of cotton, wool, tobacco, rice, and logwood, belonging to the said Higginson & Co., and stopped at Greenock, in Scotland, for the purpose of landing some passengers, and gaining information as to market, &c. She proceeded again on her voyage on the 15th September, and arrived about the 7th October, in distress, at Gottenburg, where the cargo was landed, for the purpose of repairing the ship. She proceeded, with her outward cargo on board, the 11th November, for Leibau, in Prussia. The port of Elsineur being considered as blockaded by the British, she went to Copenhagen for the express

CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
138—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	purpose of paying the Sound dues. Here she was strictly examined by the commander of the Crown Battery, received a Sound pass, and was suffered to proceed to her port of destination on the 19th of November; but, in consequence of the lateness of the season and extremely tempestuous weather, could not reach any port in Russia or Prussia, and was obliged to put into Carlscrona on the 29th November, where she continued during the winter. On the 11th of April, 1811, the said brig sailed from Carlscrona for Stockholm, where the markets were favorable for the cargo. On the same day, in sight of the Swedish shore, she was captured by the Danish privateer Dansburg and ordered for Eartholm, where she arrived the day following. The insurance was made in Boston. The condemnation proceeded on the unfounded presumptions that the insurance had been made in England, and that the vessel and cargo were to be considered, in a certain manner, as English property; and on the allegations that the vessel had no "grand bill of sale," and that a passport from the French Consul at Boston was found on board, which the French Government had declared to be false.
139. John McIntire and James Kelso.	Denmark....	May 8, 1810....	Capture.....	Ship Adamant, Robert master.	$40,000. For place of capture see last column.....	Condemnation in the Vice Admiralty Court at Christiansand, which, on appeal to the Admiralty Court in Copenhagen, was confirmed. Date of neither decree is stated.	The Adamant sailed from New York for Holland in October, 1805, and arrived in the Texel Roads in December, where she discharged her cargo, and, in the year 1806, took in a cargo at Wismar, in the Baltic, where she was chartered, for $40,000, to perform a voyage to Batavia, and back again to Wismar. She arrived at and sailed from Batavia in the year 1807, and, on her return towards Wismar, got on a reef of rocks on the coast of Norway, which compelled her to go into Christiansand for repairs. During her stay in that port, an embargo was laid, which detained the ship after she had been repaired, and greatly enhanced her expenses; to pay which she was chartered, by the authorized agent of the owners, to the Prussian Consul in Christiansand for two voyages, and sailed from that port with the license of the King of Denmark on board. After delivering the cargo at her destined port, and on her return to, and within a few hours' sail of, Christiansand, whither she was going for the second cargo, agreeably to contract, a Danish privateer, commanded (it was said) by Captain Wolfson, of Copenhagen, took possession of the ship on the 8th of May, 1810, and carried her into Christiansand, where she was condemned in the Vice Admiralty Court. John McIntire owns five-sixths, James Kelso one-sixth, of the ship Adamant. The amount claimed includes the value of the vessel, and the loss arising from her detention, exclusive of freight.

INDEX TO SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON DENMARK.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.	Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.	Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Adams, Isaac, and another	10	$15,000 00	Homer, Benjamin P., treasurer, &c	31	$838 00	Pratt & Kintzing	27	$75,363 59
Bartlet, William, and another	11	88,771 00	Do do	32	558 00	Phœnix Insurance Company of New York	4 to 6	47,654 64
Do do	12	5,900 00	Do do	33	505 00	Pierce, Benjamin, and others	9	106,533 70½
Brown, Moses, and others	19	36,800 00	Hays, Samuel	2	22,000 00	Scott, Allen, surviving, &c	1	125 00
Boston Marine Insurance Company	24	11,200 32	Hale, Benjamin, and others	18	29,711 64	Sharp, Robert, and others	23	130,000 00
Coffin, David, and others	7	25,074 04½	Hovey, Thomas, surviving partner, &c., and another	20	20,307 84	Thurlo, Paul, and another	13	17,600 00
Cushing, John N., and others	8	171,821 96	Nimmo, Henry	3	37,421 08	Wheelwright, Abraham and Ebenezer	14	34,515 67
Davis, George	34	.....	New York Firemen's Insurance Company	21	10,000 00	Wood, Abner, and another	15	35,268 00
Homer, Benjamin P., treasurer, &c	28	6,029 69	Do do	22	24,000 00	Do do	16	31,112 00
Do do	29	2,400 00	Pratt & Kintzing	25	1,745 19	Wood, Abner	17	54,802 09
Do do	30	1,000 00	Do	26	36,605 56	Amount of supplementary claims on Denmark	.....	489,761 92½

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON DENMARK.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
1. Allen Scott, surviving partner of Sabret Scott & Son, of Georgetown.	Denmark	May 24, 1810	Capture	Schooner Antelope, Riley master.	For 12 months' detention of vessel and cargo of coffee, actual expenses $2,200 00 Demurrage 5,075 00 7,675 00 12 months' interest on value of cargo 1,450 00 9,125 00 Place of capture not stated.	Proceedings were had in the court of Christiansand, and the vessel and cargo were released; but the captors appealed to the Supreme Tribunal at Copenhagen, which confirmed the release. Date not stated.	The Antelope, of 104 36-95 tons, bound from Georgetown, District of Columbia, to Gottenburg and a market, and loaded with coffee, was captured by the Danish cutter No. 6. She was not finally released till after twelve months' delay, and the captured were made to pay all expenses.
2. Samuel Hayes, of Philadelphia.	Denmark	1810	Capture and confiscation.	Ships Minerva, Smith, and Fair Trader.	Value of property $22,000 00 16 years' interest 21,120 00 43,120 00 See last column.	Adjudicated and liberated, by various courts in Denmark, as American property. Date not stated.	These vessels sailed from Philadelphia bound to Kiel, in Denmark, and were captured by a privateer going into said port, where they were libelled. The supercargo was detained two years in following the claim. The expenses, with the cost of suit, made a general average of 45 per cent. After the adjudications referred to in the next preceding columns, the King of Denmark decreed that he would have half the property in lieu of the duties he then imposed; whereas the duties, when the vessels arrived in port, were only two per cent.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
3. Henry Nimmo, of Providence, R. I.	Denmark....	About Jan. 1, 1810.	Capture	Ship Rebecca, Nimmo master.	Value of ship when taken..... .... £3,000 ster. Freight, per charter ..... 2,000 Primage on freight, at 5 per cent..... 100 Repairs of vessel, cost and expenses of courts..... 1,400 Detention of ship 8 months, at £8 per day, about..... 920 £8,420 ster. Equal to..... $37,421 08 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by a court in Copenhagen, February or March, 1810.	The ship Rebecca was taken by the Danes January 1, 1810, on her passage from Dantzic to Bristol, England, or to Teneriffe, with a cargo of pipe staves, and was carried into Copenhagen.
4. Phœnix Insurance Co. of New York.	Denmark....	April 27, 1810..	Seizure	Ship Fair Trader, Craig master.	$2,250. $3,304 75 interest, at 7 per cent., to October 1, 1826. Seizure made at Kiel.	Condemned. When and where not stated.	The shipment was made by Jacob Barker, and its amount was $3,000. It was seized by the Danish Government.
5. Phœnix Insurance Co. of New York.	Denmark....	April 5, 1810....	Capture	Ship Devotion, Miller master.	$13,969 64. $14,040 62 interest, at 7 per cent., to October 1, 1826. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned. Where and when not stated.	The shipment was made by H. A. & J. G. Coster, and its amount was $13,500. This vessel was captured by the Danish lugger Le Revenant, and sent into Elsineur.
6. Phœnix Insurance Co. of New York.	Denmark....	Sept. 26, 1810..	Capture	Brig Nimrod, Smith master.	$31,435. $31,658 33 interest, at 7 per cent., to October 1, 1826. Place of capture not stated.	Condemned. When and where not stated.	The shipment was made by Minturn & Champlin, and its amount was $30,000. This ship was captured by the Danish ship Resolution, and sent into Aalborg. The alleged cause of capture was trading to an English port.
7. David Coffin, James Meyer, and Benjamin Lunt.	Denmark....	April 26, 1810..	Capture	Ship Mary Pike, Meyer master.	Vessel..... $10,000 00 Cargo..... 1,288 95 Freight..... 6,645 05 Expenses... ..... 3,140 04½ Insurance .. .. 4,000 00 Amount, &c..... 25,074 04½ Place of capture not stated.	Subject to adjudication at Copenhagen, and condemned, as prize, June 23, 1810. Appeal taken to the High Court, which affirmed the sentence, with additional costs.	The ship and cargo were wholly American. Her cargo, which was salt, would have sold at her port of destination at $3 per bushel. She had been solely and exclusively engaged in legal commerce, and had on board all the necessary documents to prove the neutrality of herself and cargo. She was captured by a Danish privateer, carried into Copenhagen, and there taken possession of by persons acting in the name of the Danish Government.
8. John N. Cushing and Sewell Topham.	Denmark....	July 15, 1809; July 19, 1810.	Capture..... ...	Ship Hesper, Cushing master.	Expenses paid while under detention, including amount paid the captors by compromise after appeal..... $25,743 45 Ship and appurtenances..... 18,000 00 Cargo of owners..... 17,345 91 Freight, damages, and expenses ..... 30,000 00 Adventure of J. Cushing 2,603 60 93,692 96	After the first capture acquitted in a Danish court, and after the second condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	The ship Hesper and cargo were wholly American. She sailed from Boston May 15, 1809, with a cargo of cotton, which she discharged at Greenock; sailed thence for Russia, was captured by a Danish privateer, and tried in a Danish court. From her acquittal there an appeal was taken by the captors. To avoid further and greater detention the owners were induced to compromise with them and pay 1,000 rix dollars and heavy expenses for permission to proceed. The ship and cargo were again captured on sailing from Russia, having on board a very valuable cargo, partly belonging to the owners of the vessel; the largest part to William Bartlet, of Newburyport, and partly to Thomas C. Amory & Co., of Boston. She was captured by five Government Danish brigs, carried into Christiansand, and there, with her cargo, condemned. She had on board evidence of he
William Bartlet.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Part of the cargo of the same vessel not included as above..... 78,129 00 Amount, &c..... 171,821 96 Places of capture not stated.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
8—Continued							complete neutrality. By her detention in the first instance she was prevented from arriving in season to dispose of her cargo; and, by the setting in of winter, detained over the season, to the ruin of her voyage. Cargo—hemp, iron, and manufactures, wholly American property. The value of this last amount is stated at the price for which such property was selling when the vessel would have arrived in the United States.
9. Benjamin Pierce	Denmark	1810	Capture	Brig Topaz, Herrick master.	Vessel $15,000 00 Cargo 27,000 00 Freight 19,200 00 Expenses 4,000 00 Insurance 12,500 00 $77,700 00	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	Vessel and cargo belonged to claimants. She was captured by three open boats, with upwards of 45 armed men, belonging to privateers from Norway, who took away the papers. They were proceeding, when they fell in with an English frigate and were recaptured. Afterwards, on the 9th August, the brig was again captured by two Danish privateers, carried into Fleceñerd, and on the 13th September following the vessel and cargo were condemned as prize to the captors at Christiansand.
Francis Todd					Sugar and coffee, cost 1,517 52½
Elias Hunt					Sugar 8,198 00
Joseph Toppan					Sugar 1,810 08
Amos Knight and Moses Night.					Sugar 3,008 60
Samuel Coffin					Sugar 8,223 70
Micajah Lunt					Sugar and coffee 570 40
John Moody					Coffee 5,244 40
Robert Clark					Sugar 260 00 106,533 70
					Place of capture not stated.
10. Isaac Adams and Samuel Swett.	Denmark	July 19, 1810	Capture	Brig Ellen Maria, Swett master.	$15,000. Place of capture not stated.	Not known; the papers being stated to be mislaid.	The property wholly belonged to the claimants. The vessel was captured by a Danish privateer.
11. William Bartlet	rk	July 19, 1810	Capture	Ship Janus, Gaum master.	Vessel $15,000 00 Cargo 73,571 00 Adventure 200 00 Amount, &c 88,771 00	Condemned at Christiansand. Date not stated.	The Janus left Newburyport 27th May, 1809; carried out a cargo of colonial produce to Amsterdam, which was there sequestered. She afterwards went to St. Petersburg, and while sailing thence for the United States with a cargo of hemp, iron, and cordage, she was captured by five Danish gun brigs, carried into Christiansand, where vessel and cargo were condemned. The property is estimated at the price for which such goods were selling at Boston at the time when the vessel would probably have reached that place.
William Bartlet, jr.					Interest claimed from time of capture. Place of capture not stated.
12. William Bartlet	Denmark	Not stated	Capture	Barque Wm. Gray.	Property on board belonging to claimant, $6,000. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears.	This vessel, wholly American, was sailing from St. Petersburg for the United States with a cargo of Russian goods when she was captured. The value of the goods is stated at the price they would have brought in the United States. Interest is claimed.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
13. Paul Thurlo and Nathaniel Knap.	Denmark....	July 14, 1810....	Capture	Brig Hannah, Dennis master.	Value of vessel..... $10,000 00 Cargo, part ..... 600 00 Freight ..... 7,000 00 Amount, &c..... 17,600 00 First capture made off the Naze of Norway. Place of second capture not stated.	Subject to adjudication at Christiansand, and July, 1810, condemned by the Prize Court. On appeal to a higer court acquitted, Aug. 8, 1810, and, after her second capture, again subject to adjudication and acquitted; where and when not stated.	This vessel was wholly owned by the claimants, American citizens. She sailed from Boston May 27, 1810, with a cargo of cotton, coffee, logwood, and indigo, on freight, and belonging to citizens of the United States. Her papers were regular. She was captured off the Naze of Norway by a Norwegian privateer, and carried into Christiansand. She was again captured by a Danish privateer, a French cruiser in company, carried into Copenhagen, detained 15 months, and, although acquitted, she was finally lost to the owners; a sum not more than sufficient to pay expenses being realized from the sales.
raham and Ebenezer Wheelwright.	Denmark....	May 11, 1810....	Capture	Ship Argo, Wheelwright master.	Ship valued at..... $12,000 00 Cargo, cost ..... 500 00 Freight, actual..... 13,349 00 Detention and expenses of the ship, costs, &c..... 8,666 67 34,515 67 Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears ..	The cargo was captured by a Danish privateer called Jagerson, commanded by Anderson.
15 Abner Wood, Isaac Stone.	Denmark....	Aug. 5, 1809 . ..	Capture.....	Ship America, Stone master.	Charter usages, costs, and expenses..... $17,571 00 Loss on cargo of coals..... 4,000 00 Ship's expenses ..... 1,200 00 Expenses paid captors..... 497 00 Freight..... 12,000 00 35,268 00	Subject to adjudication at Christiansand, and condemned. On appeal to the High Court this sentence was reversed, but the expenses of the captors were decreed to be paid out of the ship and cargo.	She sailed from the United States May, 1809, with tobacco, on freight, for Newcastle, England; from thence to proceed for Gottenburg with a cargo of coals, on the sole account of the owners of the ship, citizens of the United States, intending to load home with iron and hemp from St. Petersburg. The object was defeated, and voyage broken up, and heavy expenses and losses ensued. The ship and cargo were in all respects completely neutral, furnished with every document to prove the same, and so acknowledged by the High Court. The claimants have estimated the loss or damage at $12,000. Much larger loss can be proved.
16. Abner Wood.....	Denmark....	July 9, 1809....	Capture.....	Brig Alexander, Michael Hodge, jr., master.	Expenses..... $1,487 00 Loss on sales..... 20,625 00 Interest during detention..... 2,700 00 24,812 00	Subjected to adjudication at Aalborg, and acquitted Aug. 11, 1809. On appeal to the High Court of Copenhagen the acquittal was confirmed. See last column.	This vessel was freighted by Abner Wood to take a cargo to St. Petersburg, or place north and east of the British channel, of colonial produce, wholly American, with proper evidence of neutrality. She was captured by two Danish privateers near the coast of Jutland; was carried into Aalborg. The acquittal there was confirmed, but she was detained under adjudication until May 2, 1810. The difference in prices, occasioned by the detention, is claimed.
David Coffin.....	.....	.....	.. ..	.....	Detention, charter, wages, and provisions for crew of vessel .... 9,000 00 33,812 00 See last column.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
17. Abner Wood.....	Denmark....	Aug. 14, 1811..	Capture	Ship Neptune.....	Vessel ..... $25,000 00 Loss of funds for return cargo ..... 8,222 00 Expenses..... ..... 1,580 00 Freight or reasonable estimate of profits. 20,000 00 Amount, &c..... 54,802 00 Capture made at Elsineur Roads.	Subjected to adjudication at Copenhagen, and condemned Aug. 29, 1811, and in the High Court at the same place Nov. 12, 1811.	The Neptune was a new, first rate coppered ship of 357 tons. When captured, she was on a voyage from the United States for England, and thence for St. Petersburg, to load for home with iron, hemp, and manufactures, on the sole account of the claimant. She was captured while at anchor by officers and men from Danish gunboats. The ship and funds were claimant's sole property. Her capture occasioned the loss of funds, and much greater loss of her cargo homeward. It would have netted a profit exceeding $20,000.
18. Benjamin Hale, Hen. Furlong, Stephen Holland, Benj. Merrill, Ephraim Titcomb, Joseph Brown.	Denmark....	Aug. 12, 1811..	Capture	Brig Washington...	Loss for detention and on vessel, cargo, and freight ..... $28,911 64 Loss of adventure and perquisites..... 800 00 Amount, &c ..... 29,711 64 Place of capture not stated.	Subjected to adjudication at Copenhagen, and condemned. On appeal, cleared at the High Court, after a detention of more than six months. Date not stated.	The vessel, with her cargo, the sole property of the claimants, sailed from Newburyport June 28, 1811, for St. Petersburg; her cargo consisting of coffee, sugar, logwood, mahogany, pepper, and prunes, with proper evidence of neutrality. She was captured by a Danish privateer called the Good Hope, and, although cleared by the High Court at Copenhagen, the cargo, by reason of the long detention, was nearly destroyed. The coffee was entirely so, and produced on the whole sale but a small sum. The vessel, remaining unfit for sea at Copenhagen, was necessarily left when the war between England and the United States commenced, and became, therefore, nearly a total loss to the claimants. Hale and Furlong were the owners of the vessel and cargo; the rest of the claimants were shippers, as also were Hale and Furlong.
19. Moses Brown, Leonard Smith, Steph'n Holland, Joseph Pike, for vessel & cargo.	Denmark....	Sept., 1811	Capture	Ship Nancy, Eveleth master.	Loss sustained.....	Subject to adjudication at Copenhagen, and condemned. Appealed to the High Court, and cleared on payment of 1,000 rix dollars and heavy expenses. Date not stated.	The ship Nancy and cargo were wholly the property of the claimants; she sailed from Gottenburg September 2, 1811, with a valuable cargo; she arrived at Elsineur September 5, 1811, and paid Sound dues; sailed on the 10th, and was captured within about five leagues of her port by two Danish privateers and carried into Copenhagen. The master was taken out and carried to the Crown Battery, and there detained. The cargo was taken out and afterwards returned on board. On the 15th of October the condemnation of vessel and cargo was notified to the master. The claimants appealed to the High Court, where she was afterwards cleared, but required to pay 1,000 rix dollars and heavy charges, which, with the long detention and consequent injury to the cargo, occasioned nearly a loss of the whole. The ship had passed through the Sound and paid her Sound dues, and was not under convoy; she was detained nearly a year, and actual expenses of nearly $10,000 were incurred.
Benj. Price, Alexander Coldwell, jr., William Coldwell, John Boardman, Steph. S. Hodge, Wm. Stone, shippers.	.....	.....	.....	.....	Loss sustained, $36,800. Place of capture not stated.
20. Thomas Hovey, surviving partner of Stevens & Hovey,	Denmark....	May 20, 1808...	Capture	Ship Laura, Coffin master.	Ship and appurtenances..... $13,640 00 Officers' and seamen's wages, provisions, and outfits... ..... 1,550 00	Condemned August 28, 1808, in the Prize Court at Copenhagen; and on appeal by the	The Laura sailed from New Orleans May 20, 1811, for Liverpool, England. She sailed thence for Gottenburg, where she arrived safe. On her passage from Gottenburg for Riga, in Russia, she was cap-

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
& Amos H. Cross, administrator of Jonathan Stevens, deceased.	.....	.....	.....	.....	Charter ..... $3,616 31 Expenses and charges of trial ..... 1,501 50 20,307 84 Interest to August 21, 1826 ..... 21,627 85 41,935 69 Place of capture not stated.	captain to the High Court of Admiralty, the sentence was confirmed Nov. 15, 1808.	tured May 20, 1808, by two boats belonging to the island of Zealand. The Laura was American property, and duly registered; had all necessary papers, and was pursuing a lawful voyage. The captors took from the master some of the most important of the ship's papers, which were never restored, and were not exhibited on either of the trials. The production of them would have falsified the pretences and allegations on which the condemnation proceeded. The charter-party was from May 20, 1808, to the ensuing 15th November—about 240 tons, at $2 50 per ton per month.
21. N. York Firemen's Insurance Company.	Denmark....	1810.....	Capture	Ship Resolution, Eldridge master.	Amount of insurance, September 28, 1810, $10,000. Place of capture not stated.	Condemnation at Christiansand. Date not stated.	This vessel, bound from New York to Gottenburg, was captured by a Danish privateer and carried into Christiansand. The vessel and cargo were the property of Minturn & Champlin, of New York.
22. N. York Firemen's Insurance Company.	Denmark....	July 29, 1811...	Capture	Brig Nimrod, Smith master.	Amount of insurance, Sept. 25, 1810 .... $20,000 00 Proportion of expenses in prosecuting this and the next preceding claim, No. 21.. 4,000 00 Amount, &c..... 24,000 00 Place of capture not stated.	The vessel and cargo were condemned in the Lower Court. An appeal was prosecuted, and, after a long detention, the property was given up. Date not stated.	The brig Nimrod, bound from New York to Elsineur, and one other port in the Baltic, was captured by the Danish privateers Resolution, Captain Jorgen Thorst, and Provister, Captain Jorgen Neilson, and carried into Aalborg, North Jutland. Vessel and cargo were the property of Minturn & Champlin, of New York. The loss sustained by the claimants was extremely heavy, the proportion of net proceeds attaching to the policy, as stated by Minturn & Champlin, being only $4,400, no part of which has ever been recovered of them.
23. Robert Sharpe, Thos. Warner, & David Dunham.	Denmark....	1809.....	Capture	Ship Ann Louisa, Roche master.	Cargo sold for ..... $120,000 00 Ship ..... 10,000 00 Amount, &c. ..... 130,000 00 Place of capture not stated.	Condemnation in the Prize Court and in the Court of Admiralty at Copenhagen. Dates not stated.	This vessel sailed from New York April 23, 1809, for St. Petersburg, Russia. She put into Ireland to repair. She was captured by four privateers, and carried into Copenhagen.
24. Boston Marine Insurance Company.	Denmark....	1809.....	Capture	Barque Wm. Gray..	Amount insured ..... $11,000 00 Expenses 200 32 11,200 32	Condemned at Copenhagen. Date of condemnation not stated.	The vessel was owned by citizens of the United States, and was insured from St. Petersburg to the United States.
25. Pratt & Kintzing, of Philadelphia.	Denmark.....	July 18, 1810...	Capture.....	Ship Industry.....	$1,745 19. The expenses incurred. See last column.	Subjected to legal adjudication, and cleared October 3, 1810. Where not stated.	The capture was made on a voyage from Philadelphia to Tonningen and the Baltic by the Danish privateer Fordeusald and two royal gunboats, and the ship was carried into Callunborg.
26. Same.....	Denmark....	May 19, 1809...	Capture.....	Ship Atlantic	$36,605 56 for expenses incurred, and for damages sustained in the vessel and cargo. Capture made off the Naze of Norway.	Subjected to legal adjudication, and condemned by the Inferior Court on June 9, 1809, and the sentence reversed by the Superior Court on the 23d of December following.	This ship was captured on a voyage from Reedy Island, Delaware, to Marstrand, a small port in Sweden, near Gottenburg, off the Naze of Norway, by a Norway privateer called the Norway Girl, and was carried into Christiansand.

SUPPLEMENT TO CLAIMS ON DENMARK—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
27. Pratt & Kintzing, of Philadelphia.	Denmark	Capture made June 18, 1809.	Capture and condemnation.	Ship Commerce ...	$75,363 59. See last column	Condemned by the Inferior Court at Christiansand July 28, 1809, by the superior Judge, the inferior one not concurring. An appeal from the sentence was taken to the High Court of Admiralty for Norway at Christiana, which confirmed the sentence of condemnation March 12, 1810.	The ship Commerce was captured on her voyage from Philadelphia to Gottenburg by two Danish privateer sloops off the coast of Norway, and was carried into Egvog, from thence to Fahrsund, and from thence to Christiansand. In addition to the property of the claimants, goods were shipped by other persons amounting to $39,955 34, making the loss $115,318 93.
28. Benjamin P. Homer, Treasurer of the Commercial Insurance Office, in Boston.	Denmark	July 5, 1810 ...	Capture and detention ...	Brig Cygnet.....	$6,029 69. Place of capture not stated.....	Subjected to legal adjudication, but where or when does not appear. The vessel was cleared in the Lower Court, and afterwards, finally, on an appeal of the captors.	The Cygnet was taken into Fahrsund, in Norway, and the claimant expresses an inability to read the papers, the same being in the Danish language. The amount claimed is alleged to have been paid by the company to C. Coolidge & Co., (who were the owners or agents of the vessel,) and W. Matchet, on policies No. 85 and 89.
29. Same.....	Denmark	1812.....	Capture	Brig Orange.....	$2,400. Place of capture not stated.....	Condemned at Copenhagen. No date mentioned.	This vessel was proceeding from St. Michael's to Russia, and was the property of Thomas Hickling & Company. Policy No. 1098.
30. Same.....	Denmark	June 2, 1810....	Capture	Ship Ganges	$1,000. It was not explained where the capture was made.	Condemnation at Copenhagen; but when is not apparent.	The ship Ganges was bound from Cadiz to Riga, was owned by Nahum Piper and Barker & Bridge, of Boston, and was insured by policy No. 175.
31. Same	Denmark	1810.....	Capture and detention....	Brig Columbia, Capt. Sullivan.	$838. The place of capture not stated.....	Detained at Copenhagen; subjected to legal adjudication; cleared in the Lower Court. An appeal was made by the captors, and withdrawn on their receiving $1,000, and the vessel finally acquitted.	Joseph Moody, of Kennebunk, owned this vessel, which was from St. Ubes for St. Petersburg. Policy No. 181.
32. Same.....	Denmark	1810.....	Capture	Brig Joseph.....	$558. Where captured not stated.....	Detained, and finally cleared; but where, when, or in what manner, is not shown.	Owned by William Dall.
33. Same.....	Denmark	1810.....	Capture	Brig William	$505. No place of capture mentioned.....	It does not appear whether or not there was any legal adjudication.	Owned by C. Coolidge.
34. George Davis	Denmark	1809.....	Capture	Brig Belle Air.....	Not stated.....	Not stated.....	The claimant states that in 1809 a capture was made, under Danish authority, of property committed to his care as supercargo of the brig Belle Air, and expects damages from Denmark or France for detention and loss of market; a statement of which, immediately after his acquittal, he duly forwarded to Copenhagen.

Appendix containing claims on France, and claims (only 47, 48, 49, amounting to $35,000) on Holland, for losses sustained previously to the year 1805.

INDEX TO APPENDIX.

Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.	Names of claimants.	Number.	Amount.
Baltimore Insurance Company	34	$1,200 00	Gibson, James, administrator	15	$9,367 84
Do do	35	11,500 00	Do do	16	4,955 48
Do do	36	5,748 86	Griffith, Robert J	22	108,649 90
Do do	37	9,000 00	Gilpin, Joshua, surviving partner, &c., for self, &c.	27	71,207 30
Do do	38	16,000 00	Hatch, Henry, administrator	17	56,000 00
Do do	39	1,000 00	Hovey, Thomas, and another	23	12,930 17
Do do	40	12,000 00	Huntress, heirs of Daniel	6	6,904 28
Do do	41	2,500 00	Do do	7	2,500 00
Do do	42	19,874 25	Long, Nathaniel	50	6,450 00
Do do	43	14,233 33	Logan, Oliver	91	.....
Do do	44	19,079 50	Mactire, Alexander	9	18,333 00
Do do	45	3,500 00	Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria	10	5,640 00
Do do	46	20,000 00	Do do	11	10,000 00
Do do	47	20,000 00	Do do	12	4,000 00
Do do	48	4,000 00	Maryland Insurance Company	28	23,600 00
Do do	49	11,000 00	Do do	29	5,248 00
Barr, John, for self and others	18	899 82½	Marine Insurance Company	23	337,089 79
Bell, Joseph, and others	19	7,924 00	Marine Insurance Company of New York	61-65	34,250 00
Carter, Joshua	53	11,755 28	Melcher, estate of William	21	32,000 00
Clarke, William L., for self and others. See No. 2, appendix	25	.....	Nelson, Jeremiah, and others	60	10,333 75
Chesapeake Insurance Company	80	11,200 00	Oliver, Robert and John	30	23,911 02
Do do	81	1,257 00	Pearson, John, and others	58	14,664 48
Do do	82	10,000 00	Penniman, Mary	5	22,000 00
Do do	83	10,000 00	Prince, Henry, and another	31	9,374 06
Do do	84	8,000 00	Roulet, J. S., including claim of Icard's estate	32	12,937 76
Do do	85	9,500 00	Roach, heirs of Thomas	26	2,080 00
Do do	86	13,333 00	Read, William	24	94,560 47
Do do	87	2,200 00	Smith & Buchanan, trustees of	8	16,422 00
Do do	88	4,500 00	Stocker, E., and others	52	25,838 26
Cornell, Robert C., and others	2	99,759 44	Do	59	11,348 79
Coffin, David, and others	54	24,000 00	Thorndike, Israel, and another	14	20,000 00
Do do	55	14,178 42	Union Insurance Company of Maryland	66 to 78	140,401 00
Coffin, David	56	5,800 00	Wheelwright, Abraham & Ebenezer, and others	57	23,196 48
Dorr, Andrew C	3	10,433 02	West, Nathaniel	20	37,669 73
Do	4	4,922 51	Winchester, D., surviving partner	89	4,125 00
Franklin Robinson & Co., assignees of, and others.	1	165,921 87	Winchester, D	90	9,975 00
Fitch, Peletiah	79	8,000 00	Woodbury, Caleb, and others	51	18,711 87
Fry, Benjamin	13	13,540 57	Amount of claims contained in appendix	.....	1,854,436 30½

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
1. The assignees of the estate of Franklin Robinson & Co., and others, enumerated in the last column.	France	April, 1798....	Seizure.....	Ship Hunter, Whitlock master.	Loss sustained... ..... $165,921 87 Value of property in 1789 ..... 137,977 98 Seizure made at Algeziras.	No legal adjudication	The vouchers in support of this claim are among the papers transmitted to the Department of State by order of the Board of Commissioners under the 11th article of the Florida treaty. Those quoted (OO) (PP) (RR) (TT) (UU) (VV) (3–V) (3–V) show that the loss sustained amounted at least to $165,921 87, independently of interest. The vessel and cargo were seized in the port of Algeziras, in Spain, by the French privateer The Chasseur Barque. The parties to this claim, beside the assignees of the estate of Franklin Robinson & Co., are the North American Insurance Company, Insurance Company of Pennsylvania, Baltimore Insurance Company; private underwriters in the office of George Keeports, insurance broker in Baltimore; private underwriters in the office of Barton & Lewis, insurance brokers in Philadelphia; private underwriters in the office of Shoemaker & Barrett, insurance brokers in Philadelphia; and private underwriters in the office of Joseph Taylor, insurance broker in Boston. William Whitlock, captain of the Hunter, and Joseph L. Dias, supercargo thereof.
2. Robert C. Cornell, on behalf of the heirs of Jacob Doty; James Strong, in behalf of Julia Post, late Julia Wattles; the heirs of John G. Clark.	France	May 13, 1799...	Capture	Schooner Frederick.	Loss sustained, $99,759 44. Place of capture not not stated.	Condemned by the Council of Prizes at Paris, September 16, 1800.	The Frederick sailed from New York in March, 1798, on a trading voyage between Senegal and Hamburg. On her second return to Hamburg she was captured at sea, on the 13th May, 1799, by the French privateer L'Arriege, and sent into Corunna, in Spain. On the 3d of June, 1799, she was cleared, with costs, by the French Consul, as perfectly neutral, and the papers appearing regular. The captors appealed from the consular sentence to the Tribunal of Nantz, where the property was condemned, on the 4th of November, 1799, on the ground that a sea letter could answer only for a single voyage. Captain John G. Clark, on behalf of himself and the other owners, appealed from said condemnation to the Council of Prizes at Paris, where, on the 16th September, 1800, it was affirmed, and ordered to be transmitted to the French Consul at Corunna, there to be carried into effect; which, being done, the loss thereby became total to the owners. J. Lopez Dias is agent for the claimants.
3. William & Andrew C. Dorr.	France	Nov., 1796.....	Seizure	Schooner Jane, Atwood master.	Value at the lowest estimation at the time of seizure, $10,433 02. Vessel and outfit estimated at cost, and cargo at the time of seizure. Seizure made at Cape François, in St. Domingo.	No legal adjudication	On the arrival of the vessel at Cape François an entry of the cargo was made immediately; a guard of soldiers was put on board, and, the orders of the captain not admitting a credit, the cargo was taken by the Government by force, for the supply of the troops. The captain abandoned the vessel and cargo, and returned home.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
4. Andrew C. Dow.....	France	About June, 1797.	Capture	Schooner Rebecca, Rogers master.	Loss sustained, livres 26,053 16.6, equal to $4,922 51. See last column.	No legal adjudication as to the seizure.	The schooner Rebecca was captured by a privateer and cleared by the court, and nearly all the property restored. It was afterwards taken by force, by order of the Government, and a part of the cargo was taken to supply the soldiers at St. Domingo. For the amount claimed an obligation was given by the Government of that place, but never paid. It was sent to France and presented under the Louisiana treaty, but the funds proving inadequate, it was not paid.
5. Mary Penniman, widow of John Penniman, deceased.	France	July 30, 1796...	Capture	Brig Pearl, Webb master.	$22,000. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication	Brig Pearl cleared out from the port of New London the 30th of July, 1796, for Hispaniola. On her passage she was captured by the French privateer L'Adelaide, Captain Fetaid, and carried into Jeremie, where vessel and cargo were seized by the French Government. The property appears to have belonged to Penniman & Griffing.
6. Heirs of Daniel Huntress.	France	Sept. 19, 1798..	Capture	Brigantine Sterling, Brown master.	Amount claimed, $6,904 28. Capture by the Vigilant, made in latitude 40° 20′ north, and longitude 20° 30′ west. The amount claimed arises from deducting $6,041 22 from the following account, viz: Value of brig..... $6,000 00 Premium of insurance on brig from Lisbon to Portsmouth, at 18 per cent.... 1,080 00 37 puncheons of rum on board, which probably averaged 110 gallons when shipped, say 3,700 gallons, allowing 10 gallons each for leakage, which costs 7-6 Tobago currency ..... 3,363 63 Cash paid for 37 puncheons, at $8 each.. 296 00 To freight of said rum, at $8 per hhd ... 296 00 To premiums of insurance on ditto, $3,955 63, at 18 per cent..... 712 01 To 62 moys salt, which cost at Lisbon rs. 160,822, equal to..... 201 02 To expense loading the rum and salt at Lisbon, estimated..... 25 00 To freight of the salt from Lisbon, 62 moys, at $5 per moy ..... 310 00 To premium of insurance on salt, at 18 per cent..... 96 48 To freight of 44 puncheons rum from Lisbon, at $8..... 352 00	No legal adjudication appears...	On February 15, 1798, Daniel Huntress was owner of the Sterling, burden 149 tons, and of a cargo on board of her of the invoice value of $3,454 25, consisting of lumber, seal and codfish, salmon, beef, flour, and oil. On that day she sailed from Portsmouth on a voyage to Tobago, in the West Indies, and thence back. The original instructions to the captain were to proceed to Curaçoa; but they were subsequently countermanded. On the vessel's arrival at Tobago, the captain sold the outward cargo, and with the proceeds thereof purchased 52 puncheons of rum. With this cargo, and certain merchandise on freight consigned to different persons, &c., she sailed on May 6 for Portsmouth, and on May 26 was captured by the French privateer Mercury and ordered to proceed to Bordeaux. On June 27 she was recaptured off Cape Finisterre by the British sloop-of-war Petterell, and carried into Lisbon. On September 6, pursuant to a previous adjustment of the claim which the recaptors had made for salvage, 16 puncheons of rum were delivered to the agent of the said sloop-of-war. In order to obtain funds for defraying the expenses occasioned by the capture and recapture aforesaid, and for making the necessary repairs and outfits, and for purchasing salt to complete the lading, 25 puncheons of the rum were sold at Lisbon. The Sterling, with the residue of the cargo of rum, and 62 moys of salt, purchased at Lisbon on account of D. Huntress, sailed, September 13, 1798, from Lisbon for Portsmouth, and on the 19th day of the said month was captured by the French privateer Vigilant, of Nantz, and carried into the port of Muros, in Galicia, in Spain. The vessel and cargo were, on October 17, 1798, by sentence of the French Vice Consul in Galicia, ordered to be sold on the alleged ground that the

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
6—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	To premium of insurance on said freight, 18 per cent .. .. $63 36 To commissions paid at Tobago and Lisbon, estimated.. ..... 150 00 Amount, exclusive of interes 12,945 50	....	vessel had on board rum, the produce of an English island, and the proceeds, after the customary deduction for the invalids of the marine, to be paid to the owners and crew of the Vigilant. The captain claimed an appeal to the tribunal at Nantz, but the claimants are ignorant whether it was prosecuted. The executors of Daniel Huntress presented to the Commissioners under the treaty of February, 1819, between the United States and Spain, the account against Spain, stated in a foregoing column. Of the amount thereof the said Commissioners awarded the sum of $6,041 22, as per the following note of their allowance: Vessel, $4,000; freight home, $516; Huntress' cargo, $976 02; insurance, 10 per cent. Divided thus: To the executors of D. Huntress, $2,791 22; to the underwriters on vessel and cargo the precise amount on which they had underwritten, $3,250; and this sum, $6,041 22, having been deemed the just amount due said Huntress from the Kingdom of Spain, the uncollected balance, being $6,904 28, said executors claim as due from the Kingdom of France, or such an allowance as they may be entitled to on account of the unjust and illegal capture of the said brigantine and cargo.
7. Heirs of Daniel Huntress.	France	1798.....	Capture.....	Schooner Lark.....	Value of vessel and cargo supposed to be between $2,000 and $3,000.	No legal adjudication appears...	The agent for the claimants states that it is believed the documents concerning this case were transmitted some years since to the Department of State.
8. Thomas Ellicott, Jonathan Meredith, trustees of S. Smith and Buchanan.	France	1797.....	Capture.....	Brig Freemason....	The amount of invoice cost of Smith and Buchanan's portion of the cargo was $16,422. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears...	The brig Freemason was bound to Bremen in the year 1797. The vessel and cargo were captured by the French, and the owners dispossessed of their property, although no definitive sentence of condemnation ever took place.
9. Alexander Mactier, Baltimore Chesapeake Insurance Company, Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	Nov. 4, 1804 ...	Capture.....	Sloop Henry, Travers master.	Loss on vessel..... $5,000 00 Loss on cargo..... 13,333 00 Amount, &c..... ..... 18,333 00 Capture made off Cuba.	No legal adjudication	The schooner Henry was legally cleared at the custom-house of Baltimore for Jacmel, on her return from which place she was captured by a French privateer and carried into St. Jago.
10. Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria.	France	August, 1803...	Capture	Brig Lucy	$5,640. Place of capture not stated.....	This vessel was subjected to legal adjudication at Port Royal, Martinico, and sold in 1803.	See preceding column.
11. Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria.	France	May, 1804	Capture	Schooner Saucy Jack.	$10,000. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication	None.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
12. Marine Insurance Company of Alexandria.	France	May, 1804	Capture	Schooner Union	$4,000. Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication	None.
13. Benjamin Fry, Newport, R. I.	France	Dec. 19, 1800, is the date of the capture.	Capture and condemnation.	Brig Favorite, Benjamin Seabury master.	Value of brig and cargo, and incidental charges ..... $12,051 50 Interest on this item from December, 1800, to October, 1826, 25 years, 9 months, at 6 per cent. ..... 18,619 56 Cash paid for fees to claimant's attorney in Paris ..... 116 33 Charge for claimant's time and expenses at and from Paris, in 1802, to obtain restitution of his brig and cargo ..... 1,372 74 Amount, &c ..... 32,160 13 The brig was captured on her passage from Newport to St. Christopher, in the West Indies, but it is not stated where.	Condemned at Guadaloupe about January 2, 1801.	The brig Favorite was loaded by the claimant, on his own account, at Portsmouth, with articles not contraband of war, and was cleared at the custom-house of that place November 24, 1800, for St. Christopher. On her passage she was captured by the French privateer General Dugommier, commanded by Captain Rogondin, and owned by Joseph Thalezand.
14. Israel Thorndike and William Leech.	France	1799	Capture	Schooner Alert, Oliver master.	$20,000. Capture made in the harbor of St. Andero.	Condemned by the Chamber of Commerce at Bayonne, in 1799.	The schooner Alert, Jacob Oliver master, with a cargo of codfish and fish oil, bound to Bilboa and St. Andero, in Spain, sailed from Beverley December 5, 1798, was taken within the habor of St. Andero by three French privateers, carried into Bayonne, in France, and, with her cargo, condemned for having no roll of equipage.
15. James Gibson, administrator of Peter McCall.	France	Feb. 13, 1798	Capture	Ship New Jersey	Amount of goods per invoice ..... $11,232 00 Interest from July 16, 1798, to November 4, 1805, 7 years, 3 months and 19 days. 4,921 48 16,153 48 Deduct received under the Louisiana treaty ..... 1,864 16 14,289 32 Interest is claimed on this balance from November 4, 1805, till paid. Place of capture not stated.	Condemnation at St. Domingo, 1798.	Peter McCall and John Gibson were supercargoes of the ship New Jersey, of Philadelphia, owned by Nicklin & Griffith and others. On her return voyage from Canton, she was captured by the French and carried into Porto Rico.
16. Jas. Gibson, administrator of John Gibson.	France	Feb. 13, 1798	Capture	Ship New Jersey	Amount of goods shipped, per invoice ... $5,905 05 Interest from July 16, 1798, to November 4, 1805, 7 years, 3 months and 19 days. 2,587 38 8,492 43 Deduct received under the Louisiana treaty ..... 949 57 7,542 86 Interest is claimed on this balance from November 4, 1805, till paid. Place of capture not stated.	Condemnation at St. Domingo, 1798.	Same as in No. 15.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
17. Henry Hatch, administrator de bonis non of Crowell Hatch.	France	Probably in 1797	Capture	Ship Maria, Rich master.	Value of ship ..... $12,000 00 Cargo ..... 40,000 00 Expenses ..... 4,000 00 Amount, &c ..... 56,000 00 Place of capture not stated.	Condemned by the Tribunal of Commerce in Basseterre, in 1797.	The ship and cargo were captured within sight of the island of Barbadoes by the French privateer La Flibustier, Captain Anthony Fuet, carried into Point Petre, in the island of Guadaloupe, on the 20th Prairial, year 5 of the French Republic. The condemnation was made under an arrete of the Executive Directory of the 27th of Ventose, year 4, and the vessel and cargo were confiscated according to that article. The claim for compensation was made on the French Government, through the agency of Mr. John Duballet, in Paris, and the documents are now in the possession of the French Government, in the Chamber of Commerce.
18. John Barr, of Salem, Massachusetts, for himself and others.	France.....	Oct. 6, 1800....	Capture	Brigantine Neptune, Robert Barr master.	Money belonging to John Barr ..... $566 7½ Money belonging to Robert Barr..... 240 00 Adventures of John and Sally Barr ..... 11 00 Adventure of Mary Wright..... 28 00 Adventure of Benjamin Cheever..... 26 00 Adventure of Charles McClure..... 18 00 Amount, &c..... 899 82½ Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication appears ..	John Barr was owner of the brigantine Neptune. She cleared from Salem about the middle of July, 1800, and was captured on her voyage by the French privateer La Liberte, and the money (in specie) taken from her, and divided among the officers and crew of the privateer. She was carried into Porto Rico and there, together with her cargo, sold.
19. Joseph Bell and Joseph Watson, for themselves, and as executors of William Bell, deceased.	France.....	Dec. 1, 1803....	Non-payment of bills of exchange.	The schooner Olive Branch carried the property in purchase of which the bills were given.	Francs. One set of bills of exchange, dated 22d Ventose, year 11, No. 1064, for..... 15,800 One set, &c., dated as above, No. 1106, for 6,000 One set, &c., dated as above, No. 1120, for 22,000 Total francs..... 43,800 Which, at 5 francs 10 centimes per dollar, were received in value for..... $7,294 00 Interest from December 1, 1803, to October 1, 1826, 22 years 10 months, at 6 per cent..... 10,855 88 Amount, &c ..... 18,779 88 See last column.	No legal adjudication.....	The claimants freighted and loaded the schooner Olive Branch, James Burns master, with a cargo of provisions suitable for the French forces then at Cape François, (which could not be obtained from the interior,) and despatched her on March 1, 1803, consigned to John Joseph Fraissinet, the supercargo on board. On his arrival at Cape François he sold for account of the claimants the whole invoice of cargo to Bernard Castaing, Agent General of the Military Hospital, for $10,800. It was agreed that $2,000 thereof were to be paid in cash, to defray the duties and freight, and the residue, $8,800 in bills on the French Government. On the discharge and delivery of the cargo, it being discovered that some of the articles (perishable in their nature) were damaged, they were rejected by Mr. Castaing, and a deduction of $1,150 from the amount of the sale was made for the damaged articles, thereby reducing it to $9,650. Of this sum, conformably to the original contract, $1,726 was payable in cash, and $7,924 in bills, which was accordingly done by the said agent general. The bills were drawn on the Payer General of Marine, Citoyen Villemont, at Paris, by H. Darne, Colonial Prefect, in virtue of an order of the Captain General of the colony of St. Domingo, of

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
19—Continued.....	.....	.....	.....	....	.....	....	20 Ventose, year 11, at 60 days after sight, payable to Dat & Brocar, or order, endorsed by them, and countersigned by the Payer General of the Army. They were received from Fraissinet on his return, and remitted by the claimants, on June 20, 1803, to Messrs. George Barclay & Co., of London, for collection, after being made payable to them or order, over the blank endorsement of Dat & Brocar. Barclay & Co. forwarded them for collection to their friend, M. Ricamier, banker, in Paris; but he was unable to obtain payment of said bills, and they have never yet been paid.
20. Nathan West, for himself and others, owners of the ship.	France.....	Nov. 2, 1800....	Capture.....	Ship Prudent, Crowninshield master.	Articles plundered ..... $310 00 Merchandise spoiled..... 8,850 00 Loss by detention on residue of merchandise..... 3,629 89 Damage to the ship..... 2,500 00 Expenses of defending the ship on her trial ..... 2,175 40 Demurrage..... 12,640 00 Insurance ..... 3,360 00 Freight ..... 4,444 44 Total..... 37,669 73 Place of capture not stated.	Trial and acquittal in the Spanish court. Date not stated. See last column.	The ship Prudent sailed from Falmouth, in England, October 22, 1800, bound for Palermo, in Sicily. She was captured on the 2d of November by three French and two Spanish privateers, and taken into Algeziras, in Spain. After trial and acquittal in the Spanish court, the French Vice-Consul took possession of the papers, and finally gave them up, April 9, 1801. During her detention the cargo of the Prudent became much injured, and the pilchards, a part of it, were ordered by the Board of Health at Algeziras to be thrown overboard.
21. Estate of William Melcher, of New Castle, Me.	France.....	March 17, 1800.	Capture.	Schooner Polly, Allen master.	Value of schooner..... $32,000 00 Value of cargo when taken, £1,708 18s. 6d., equal, if sterling, to..... ..... Amount, &c..... See last column.	Condemned April 12, 1800, at St. Eustatia, by a French Prize Court.	The schooner Polly was captured on a voyage from St. Vincent's to New Castle on the Damariscotta, four days from St. Vincent, by a French privateer called La Bonne Mere. The claim appears to be for the value of the schooner only.
22. Robert I. Griffith, as surviving partner of Nichlin & Griffith, of Philadelphia, attorney in fact for the assignees of said firm, and acting executor of Geo. W. Bryan.	France	Feb. 13, 1798...	Capture	Ship New Jersey, Clay master.	Balance due estate of Nichlin & Griffith.. $96,098 36 Sum due estate of N. & G. as insurers on property of Thomas Henry on board... 6,924 00 Balance due estate of George W. Bryan. 5,627 54 108,649 90 Interest is claimed on each of the above items, from November 4, 1805. See last column.	Condemned at the city of St. Domingo in 1798; whether by legal adjudication does not appear. The claimant mentions, also, an award made by the Council of Prizes at Paris in September, 1804, but does not state its contents.	The ship New Jersey was captured on the high seas by a French privateer, and carried into Porto Rico.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
23. Thomas Hovey and Lemuel Tucker, administrator of Daniel Tucker, deceased.	France	Sept. 28, 1803..	Capture	Sch'r Fair Lady, Snow master.	Amount of loss..... $12,930 17 Interest to August, 1826 ..... 18,748 76 31,678 94 The above amount of loss is thus obtained, viz: The net amount of sales, at Gen. Noailles' prices, was $6,500, and would have purchased 20,310 pounds of coffee, at 16 cents; 2,031 pounds added for French weight, equal to 22,341 pounds, which would have sold at 25 cents per pound exclusive of duties, amounting to $5,585 25; also, 3,251 cubic feet of mahogany, which would have sold for 23 cents per superficial foot of one inch, amounting to $8,972 76. Aggregate of these amounts..... $14,558 01 Deduct freight of coffee, at $1 per cwt..... $223 41 Freight of mahogany, at $36 ....1,404 43 Cost, as above.....6,501 00 8,128 84 Profits..... 6,429 17 Add cost..... 6,501 00 Amount of loss, as above..... 12,930 17 Place of capture not stated.	No legal adjudication.....	The Fair Lady, laden with a cargo of lumber and provisions, and bound from Portland to the Island of Jamaica, was captured by a French armed vessel, and carried into Cape Nichola Mole, then closely besieged, and the garrison in great distress. The cargo was sequestered, under the name of a purchase, at prices fixed by himself, by the French General Noailles, to supply the garrison, who gave the captain an order for $6,501, payable in mahogany and coffee, at ——. The order was never paid, that place having been evacuated before the captain's arrival there. General Noailles then promised him a bill of exchange on the French Government, but he could obtain nothing but an order on General Rochambeau, at Cape François, for the bill. The captain demanded permission to sail thither for the bill, but it was refused, and, after the vessel had been detained thirteen days, was ordered to sail, with 200 sick and wounded French soldiers, to Charleston, and did not receive the bill of exchange till March 12, 1804. This bill was on that day drawn by M. Pichon, Commercial Agent of the French Government, then residing in Washington, in favor of Hovey & Tucker, for the sum of 35,750 francs 62 centimes. The French Government disapproved of M. Pichon's interference, and the various efforts of the parties to obtain payment of the bill have proved unsuccessful. Hovey and Daniel Tucker were the owners of the property.
24. Wm. Read, for the late firm of Wm. Read & Co., of Philadelphia, and as administrator of Arch. McCall and Geo. Plumsted.	France	Feb. 13, 1798...	Capture	Ship New Jersey, Clay master.	Balance due William Read & Co., Nov. 4, 1805..... $38,867 98 Balance due estate of Arch. McCall, deceased, Nov. 4, 1805..... 32,957 67 Balance due estate of Geo. Plumsted, deceased, November 4, 1805..... 22,734 82 Amount, &c..... 94,560 47 See last column.	Condemned at the city of St. Domingo in 1798. The claimant mentions also, but not particularly, an award by the French Council of Prizes at Paris.	The ship New Jersey was captured on the high seas by a French privateer, and carried into Porto Rico.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
25. Wm. L. Clark, for himself and the representatives of John G. Clark. See No. 2, App.	France and Spain.	May 13, 1799...	Capture	Schooner Frederick, John G. Clark master.	Actual sales of the property at Corunna May 18, 1801, as per the Government books,..... $85,128 00 Charges and expenses of Captain Clark's defence of the property in the different suits at Corunna, Nantz, and Paris, during nearly two years..... 4,218 63 Total. ..... 89,346 63 Had the Frederick been permitted to prosecute her voyage her cargo would have sold at Hamburg for a much larger sum, as was fully shown to the Commissioners under the last treaty with Spain. Messrs. Gorge, Smith & Co., merchants, of Hamburg, at the time of the capture, in a letter dated July 26, 1809, advised that on the 1st of that month the property would have sold at the current prices, as follows, viz: Cargo ..... $94,759 44 Vessel..... 5,000 00 Total..... 99,759 44 See last column.	On appeal by the captors from the decision of the French Consul to the tribunal at Nantz, the vessel and cargo were condemned, November 4, 1799. This latter sentence was confirmed by the Council of Prizes at Paris, September 16, 1800.	In March, 1798, the Frederick sailed from New York for Senegal, with an assorted cargo, for a trading voyage or voyages between Senegal and Hamburg. She arrived safe at Senegal, where the captain disposed of his cargo; took in another for Hamburg; there disposed of it; took another cargo; sailed again for Senegal, and there disposed of it. After taking there another cargo he sailed April 11, 1799, for Hamburg; and on May 3, 1799, the Frederick was boarded at sea by the French armed brig Le Votour, Captain Ball, who, finding on examination the papers to be all clear and neutral, allowed the schooner to continue her voyage. On the 13th of that month she was captured at sea by the French privateer L'Arriege, of Bordeaux, Capt. Henry, and sent for adjudication into Corunna, in Spain. On the 16th she arrived there, and a Spanish guard took possession of the vessel and cargo, unbent the sails, unhinged the rudder, and sent the captain and crew ashore. The crew of the Arriege returned and loaded their own vessel, and left the Frederick and cargo wholly in Spanish custody, which continued until the final condemnation, sale, and sequestration. On May 19, 1799, Captain Clark wrote to Colonel Humphreys, the minister of the United States in Spain, soliciting his interference and advice; but Colonel Humphreys, owing to the extreme injustice of the French tribunals, was unable to suggest any efficient mode of redress. On June 3, 1799, they were brought to trial before the French Consul, and cleared, with costs. On appeal by the captors to the Tribunal of Nantz they were condemned on the allegation that a sea letter could answer only for a single voyage, and that this was a case of a multiplicity of voyages. The captain appealed on behalf of himself and other owners from this decision to the Tribunal of Cassation, whence the appeal was subsequently removed to the Council of Prizes at Paris. The decision was there confirmed, and ordered to be transmitted to the French Consul at Corunna to be carried into effect. This was accordingly done, the vessel and cargo were sold, the proceeds of sale were sequestered, and the loss thereby became total to the owners. The captain, being left at Paris, where his vessel and cargo were then finally condemned, returned to New York by the way of Hamburg. On February 25, 1823, the Commissioners, under the 11th article of the treaty with Spain, having taken up this case, entered on the records, under No. 33, that they disallowed it on the ground that the testimony filed was insufficient to establish it. The testimony is on file in the office of the Secretary of the Commission.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
26. Heirs of Thos. Roach, late of Portsmouth, N. H., deceased.	France	Jan. 18, 1797...	Capture	Brig Two Sisters ..	Detention of the vessel 25 days, &c., at $24 per day ..... $600 00 Plunder of sundry articles aboard the brig 120 00 Captain's wages and bills drawn on T. Roach while in search of the brig..... 160 00 Salvage ..... 1,200 00 Amount, &c..... 2,080 00	Libelled in the Vice Admiralty Court at Basseterre, St. Christopher, February 21, 1797, and one-eighth salvage and costs decreed to the recaptors.	The brig Two Sisters, burden about 140 tons, sailed from Portsmouth December 20, 1796, bound to Martinique; and on January 18, 1797, was captured by a French privateer under English colors, which ordered her to be carried into Basseterre, Guadaloupe. On her passage thither she was recaptured by the British ship Vengeance, and brought into Basseterre Road, St. Kitts, on January 20.
27. Joshua Gilpin, surviving partner of Edward Dunant, for himself and others:					Value of property captured, $7,625. Capture made near Fort Royal bay.
E. Dunant and J. Mackee.	France	July 10, 1793...	Detention of goods.....	Sloop Rainbow, Mackee master.	Bill for goods detained and agreed to be paid for by the Administration of Cape Francois, St. Domingo..... $2,215 03	No legal adjudication appears...	This case is numbered 284 in the printed list exhibited to the Board of Commissioners for determining the claims of American citizens at Paris. This amount is there stated to be 11,075 livres of France.
E. Dunant and J. Gilpin.	France	June 3, 1793...	Detention of goods.....	Brig Hope, Poole master.	For goods detained and sold to the Administration of Cape Francois 11,130 55	No legal adjudication appears ..	This item is numbered 332 in the list aforesaid. Its amount is there stated to be 50,142 livres of France.
E. Dunant and for M. Cullock.	France	Mar. 7, 1795 ...	Seizure and detention ...	Brig Anna, Forster master.	For seizure of goods in port and detention of vessel by the Administration of Leogan, in St. Domingo..... 16,145 25	No legal adjudication appears ..	This sum is numbered 314 in the list aforesaid. Its amount is there stated to be 90,524 livres of France. Additional for freight and demurrage, &c., 32,712 livres of France. Loss and damage, 65,820.
Dunant and Gilpin...	France	June 9, 1795 ...	Seizure and detention ..	Brig George, McQuirk master, and brig Liberty, Anderson master.	Goods and vessel carried into Port du Paix. Goods taken and vessel detained. A connected voyage 36,917 93	No legal adjudication appears...	This item is numbered 155 in the bill aforesaid. Its amount is there stated to be 59,537 livres of France.
E. Dunant and J. Gilpin.	France	Mar. 23, 1795...	Seizure and detention....	Sloop Martha, McWilliams master.	Goods taken into port and vessel detained..... 4,798 54 Amount, &c..... 71,207 30 On each of the items of loss which constituted this amount interest is claimed from the respective dates of the acts complained of.	No legal adjudication appears...	None.
28. The Maryland Insurance Company, assignees of William Prestman for D. Alexander.	France	October, 1803 ..	Capture.....	Sloop John and Henry, W. C. Penninger master.	Cargo, $23,600. The loss appears to have been sustained near the Mole of St. Nicholas.	No legal adjudication.....	The ship, on a voyage from Charleston to Port Republic, was captured by the French felouche L'Effionte, Captain Morlet, out of the Mole of St. Nicholas, then in the possession of the French army of St. Domingo, under the command of General Noailles. This officer took the cargo for the use of the garrison; and having neither specie nor produce, he gave an order on M. Magnitot at Cape Francois for the payment of said cargo in coffee. As Capt. Penninger was proceeding in his ship from the Mole to the Cape, he was captured by

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
28—Continued	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	the British and sent to Jamaica, and while there the Cape and Mole were evacuated, and, of course, an end put to all chance of procuring payment. In 1804 the documents were forwarded to Luke Callaghan, Esq., of Paris, who has been strenuously endeavoring to recover the amount, aided by the several ministers of the United States, but without effect.
29. The Maryland Insurance Company, assignees of S. Smith and Buchanan.	France or Holland.	March 29, 1804.	Capture	Brig Lear, Bounds master.	$5,248. Place of capture not stated.....	No legal adjudication.....	The brig Lear sailed from Baltimore the 30th of March, 1804, and on the 29th of same month was captured by a French privateer, which sent eight men and a prize master on board, and ordered Captain Bounds on board the privateer. The Lear was directed to proceed to Curacoa, and arrived there the 5th of April, 1804. On the 20th the Dutch and French Commissioners broke open the hatchways, and ordered the cargo to be landed without being legally condemned, nor would they give Captain Bounds any satisfaction for their proceedings.
30. Robert and John Oliver.	France or Spain.	June, 1799.....	Capture	Ship Ann.....	$23,911 02. Place of capture not stated	No legal adjudication.....	The ship Ann was bound from Lisbon to Batavia, and was captured and carried into Cadiz by the French privateer Mouche, where the ship and cargo were condemned by the French authorities. The sum of $23,911 02 was shortly recovered under the Spanish treaty.
31. Henry Prince and Stephen Philips.	France.....	1802.....	Sale to the French authorities.	Brig Sukey.....	49,995 francs, equal, at 18¾ cts. a franc, to $9,374 06.	No adjudication.....	The claimants were joint owners of the brig Sukey and cargo of flour. Said brig sailed from Alexandria, D. C., for the island of Hispaniola. On the 10th December, 1802, she arrived at Jacmel, in said island. The flour was delivered by order of the French authorities into the public stores, for which bills were received in payment for the colonial prefect of St. Domingo, drawn on the Commissary of Marine in Paris. These bills have never been paid.
32. John S. Rowlet, surviving partner of G. Rossier and Roulet.	France.....	April, 1804.....	Capture	Brig Dove, Hussey master.	Short insured on cargo ..... $8,752 00 Freight not insured..... 4,185 76 12,937 76 Int. on this sum, at 6 per ct. per annum.. 17,401 29 30,339 05 One-half of this sum is the amount of loss sustained by the claimant. See last column.	Condemnation by a French court in St. Domingo. Date not stated.	The brig Dove was captured on her return voyage from Port au Prince to New York by the French privateer Confiance, and carried into Mayaguet island, where vessel and cargo were sold by the privateer. They were the property, one-half of the late Joseph Icard, and one-half of G. Rossier and Roulet, all citizens of the United States, and merchants of New York. A claim for this property was brought before the Commissioners under the Florida treaty, but was not considered by them to come within its stipulations.
33. Marine Insurance Company.	France.....	Date not stated. Before 1805.	Capture	Not stated.....	$337,089 79. See last column.....	Not stated.....	The claimants merely state that this claim is for the amount of losses paid by them for captures made by the French prior to 1805.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
34. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Nov. 6, 1803....	Capture.....	Schr. Ann, Captain Hamilton.	$1,200. See last column.....	Not known to have been subject to legal adjudication.	Captured, on a voyage from Jeremie to Baltimore, by the French privateer L'Froute, Captain Bonne, and carried to St. Jago de Cuba, where she arrived November 13, 1803. This and the following cases numbered 35 to 41, inclusive, were urged under the Florida treaty, and not allowed.
35. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Feb. 7, 1804....	Capture	Schr. Cygnet, Capt. Wickham.	$11,500. See last column.....	Not known to have been subject to legal adjudication.	Captured, proceeding from Cape Francois to Port au Prince, by the French privateer Regulator, Captain John Forest, and carried to St. Jago de Cuba, where she arrived February 9, 1804.
36. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Dec. 24, 1804...	Capture	Schr. Henry, Capt. Travers.	$5,748 86. See last column.	Condemned in Guadaloupe 13th Thermidor, 13th year.	Captured, proceeding from Jacmel to Baltimore, by the French privateer brig Regulus, Captain Mathieu, and ordered for Guadaloupe, but carried to St. Jago de Cuba, where she arrived about 20th Nivose, 13th year.
37. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	Jan. 10, 1804...	Capture	Schooner Maria, Captain Chase.	$9,000. See last column.....	Not known to have been subject to adjudication.	Captured, proceeding from Port Republican to Baltimore, by the French privateer Regulator, Captain Mathieu, and ordered to St. Jago de Cuba. Captain Chase having been taken on board the privateer, arrived in her at St. Jago de Cuba on January 21, 1804, where he found the schooner Maria. On his return to Baltimore, his owner purchased a new schooner, called her Maria, gave him command of her, and despatched her on the same voyage; she met the same fate.
38. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Dec. 8, 1804....	Capture	Schooner Maria, Captain Chase.	$16,000. See last column.....	Not known to have been subject to adjudication.	Captured, on a voyage from Baltimore to a port in the island of St. Domingo, by a French privateer, (her name concealed,) and proceeded, with the Maria in company, to the port of Baracoa, in the island of Cuba, where they arrived December 11, 1804.
39. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Feb. 20, 1804...	Capture.....	Schooner Peggy....	$1,000. See last column.....	Not known to have been subject to adjudication.	Captured, proceeding from Charleston to Cape Francois, by the French privateer Regulator, Captain John Forest, and ordered to St. Jago de Cuba, where she arrived February 25, 1804.
40. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Nov. 1803	Capture	Schooner Tartar, Captain Easton.	$12,000. See last column	Not known to have been subject to adjudication.	Captured, proceeding from Baltimore to St. Jago de Cuba, or Jeremie, by the French privateer Regulator, Captain Jean Jacques Mathieu, and carried to a port in Cuba.
41. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Nov. 25, 1804..	Capture.....	Brig Ruby, Captain Wannell.	$2,500. See last column.....	Not known to have been subject to adjudication.	Captured, proceeding from Aux Cayes to Baltimore, by the French privateer Virginia, and carried to the port of Bataband, on the south side of the island of Cuba.
42. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Nov. 20, 1804..	Capture.....	Schooner Superb ..	$19,874 25. See last column.....	Condemned in the city of St. Domingo, 27th Frimaire, 13th year.	Captured, proceeding from Baltimore to Cape Francois, by the French privateer L'Hereuse Rencontre, Captain Rosseait, and sent to the Bay of Samana, on the north coast of St. Domingo.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
43. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Sept. 5, 1804 ...	Capture	Schr. Abba Thule, Captain Jones.	$14,233 33. See last column	Not known to have been subject to adjudication.	Captured, proceeding from Charleston to Cape Francois, by the French privateer L'Aimable, commanded by Pierre Joiet, who took Captain Jones and all his crew, except one man, out of the Abba Thule, and put a crew on board from the privateer, and ordered her to a French port.
44. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France.....	Sept. 22, 1800 ..	Capture.....	Schr. Lion, Captain Frazier.	$19,079 50. See last column.....	Condemned in Guadaloupe, 28th Vindemiaire, 9th year.	Captured, proceeding from Port Republican to Baltimore, by the French privateer L'Harmonie, and carried to Guadaloupe. This vessel and cargo having been condemned after the date of the convention of September 30, 1800, the documents relating to the capture and condemnation were transmitted to the company's agents, Messrs. Hottenguer & Co., at Paris, to claim restitution.
45. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	1800.....	Capture.....	Schooner Nancy, Captain Jones.	$3,500. See last column.....	Condemned in Guadaloupe, 17th Frimaire, 9th year.	Captured, proceeding from Baltimore to Trinidad, by the French privateer L'Bejou, and carried to Guadaloupe. This vessel, as in the case of the Lion, having been captured and condemned after the date of the convention of the 30th September, 1800, the documents relating thereto were transmitted to Paris, to Messrs. Hottenguer & Co., the company's agents, to claim restitution from the French Government.
46. Baltimore Insurance Company.	France	July 14, 1799...	Capture.....	Ship Venus, Capt. Dashiell.	$20,000. See last column	Not known to have been subject to adjudication.	The Venus sailed from Gibraltar June 29, 1799, bound to Batavia, in the island of Java, having on board $30,000, (Spanish milled dollars, on which this company had insured $20,000,) and a small amount of other cargo. Having encountered bad weather and lost some spars, and several casks of water having leaked out, Captain Dashiell determined to put into the island of St. Jago, (one of the Cape de Verd Isles,) to repair and fill up his water; he accordingly brought his ship to anchor in that port July 13. On the next day three French frigates and a schooner came in and anchored; at 8 p. m. a boat boarded the Venus from the Media frigate, the officer commanding ordered Captain Dashiell, with his papers, on board the Concorde, 50 gun ship; at 9 p. m. the boat returned, put on board the Venus thirty-two Frenchmen, and took eighteen of her crew on board the frigate. At midnight the whole stood to sea, taking the Venus with them. The next day they commenced plundering her; took out the $30,000, and everything they could lay their hands on; threw her cannon overboard, and carried off the ammunition and small arms; put on board the Venus twenty-six Americans and thirty-four Englishmen, and gave Captain Dashiell a passport as a cartel for America. The voyage being thus broken up, Captain Dashiell returned to Baltimore with his ship.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
47. Baltimore Insurance Company.	Holland	Feb. 10, 1800...	Not restoring property to American claimants.	Ship Mary, Capt. Phillips.	$20,000. See last column.....	Not known to have been subject to adjudication.	Captured, proceeding from Batavia (island of Java) to Baltimore, by French privateer L'Renomeo, Captain Joseph Rodignan, and carried to the Dutch island of Curacoa, where she arrived on 10th February, 1800, where she was taken possession of by the Fiscal of the island, the hatches sealed, and a guard of Dutch soldiers put on board. On Tuesday, the 18th day of February, the Government ordered the cargo to be unloaded, that afterwards it and the ship might be sold at public vendue, and that the net proceeds might remain in the custody of the Government, subject to the order of those to whom they might be adjudged to belong. Restitution was claimed from the Government of Holland many years ago without success.
48. Baltimore Insurance Company.	Holland	March 12, 1798.	Permitting French privateers to bring into its ports, and there sell, American vessels and cargoes.	Schooner Betsey, Capt. Emmons.	$1,000. See last column.....	Condemned in Guadaloupe, 5th Germinal, 6th year.	Captured, proceeding from Alexandria, Virginia, to the island of Barbadoes, by the French privateer Buonaparte, and carried to a port in the Dutch part of the island of St. Martin, where she arrived March 12. The captors were allowed by the authorities of the island to appropriate the property to their own use.
49. Baltimore Insurance Company.	Holland	March 27, 1804.	Same as in No. 48.....	Brig Joseph, Capt. Penrice.	$11,000. See last column.....	Not stated.....	Captured, proceeding from Baltimore to a port in St. Domingo, by the French privateer schooner Foguies, commanded by John Dateie, and carried to the island of Curacoa, where she arrived March 27, 1804. As in the foregoing case, the authorities of the island allowed the captors to appropriate the property to their own use.
50. Nathaniel Long	France.....	Nov. 21, 1800 ..	Capture	Sch. Four Brothers, Eastman master.	Salvage and expenses $6,450.....	Not stated.....	The Four Brothers was captured by a French privateer, and recaptured by the English.
51. Caleb Woodbury, Elias Dudley, Daniel Isley, Eben. Gunnison, John Barrell, Clement Star, and Michael Smith.	France	March 26, 1804.	Capture	Schooner Joseph, Lurvey master.	Vessel, cargo, freight, and expenses, $18,711 87. See last column.	Not known.....	The Joseph and cargo were wholly the property of the claimants. She was captured on her passage from Jacmel by a French privateer called Adet, and carried into St. Jago de Cuba. She was there sold, and the proceeds distributed among the captors.
52. Eben. Stocker, Newburyport; Thomas C. Amory & Co., Boston; Andrew Frothingham, Jas. Prince, Jos. Cutter, Nath'l Bradstreet, and others.	France	Dec. 20, 1804..	Capture	Brig Swift Packet, Goodhue master.	Vessel, cargo, freight, and expenses, $25,838 26⅔. See last column.	It is believed that the property was not subject to any legal adjudication.	The vessel and cargo belonged wholly to the claimants, American citizens. On her passage to Jacmel, bound for New Orleans, she was captured by two French privateers called Sandource and Dolphin, carried into St. Jago de Cuba, and immediately sold there. The proceeds were distributed among the captors before any adjudication could have been had.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
53. Joshua Carter	France	Oct. 25, 1800	Capture	Brig Hannah, Chase master.	Vessel, cargo, and freight, $11,755 28. Place of capture not stated.	Not known	The vessel and cargo belonged wholly to the claimants. She was captured by a French privateer called the Peurto Reguina and carried into Porto Rico, where the principal part of the property was sold and distributed among the captors before any adjudication could have been had.
54. David Coffin	France	Nov. 12, 1800	Capture	Brig Nathaniel, Rutherford master.	Vessel $8,000 00 Freight 4,000 00 $12,000 00	Not subject to adjudication	This vessel wholly belonged to the claimant, an American citizen; was on charter to Messrs. Coffin & Otis, William Faris, and Ebenezer Stocker, to take a cargo to the West Indies and load back. She was captured by a French privateer called the Liberty, and cast away and lost on Cape Samana, east end of Hispaniola, then in possession of the French.
Coffin & Otis, William Faris, Eben. Stocker.	France				Cargo 12,000 00 Amount, &c. 24,000 00 See last column.
55. David Coffin, James Kimball, Ammi Smith, and Joseph Lord.	France	Oct. 27, 1800	Capture	Brig Venus, Smith master.	Vessel $3,500 00 Cargo 10,678 42 $14,178 42 See last column.	Not subject to adjudication	The vessel and cargo were wholly the property of the claimants. The cargo was sugar and cocoa. She was on her voyage from Trinidada, bound for the United States; was captured by a French privateer called the Bon Mere, carried into St. Eustatia, and disposed of. The proceeds were distributed among the captors.
56. David Coffin	France	Oct. 31, 1800	Robbery	Brig Hero, Webster master.	Specie $5,000 00 Property 800 00 5,800 00 See last column.	Not subject to any adjudication.	Wholly belonging to the claimant. She was robbed at sea by a French privateer, on her passage from St. Thomas', bound for Turk's Island. All her specie, and a number of packages of dry goods, hats, boots, and other articles taken on board the privateer.
57. Abraham Wheelwright and Eben. Wheelwright.	France	February, 1804.	Capture	Schooner Peggy, Denney master.	Vessel $2,400 00 Cargo and adventures 19,660 39 22,060 39	Not known	Vessel and cargo, property of the claimants, American citizens, are claimed with adventures at their actual value. She was captured on her passage, by a French privateer called the Fleurde Mere, from St. Mark's, and carried to St. Jago de Cuba, and the whole sold and distributed among the captors, it is believed without any adjudication.
Thomas Pritchet					Property 1,136 09 23,196 48 See last column.
58. John Pearson and others.	France	March, 1804	Capture	Brig John, Dale master.	Vessel $7,000 00 Cargo 2,946 10 Freight 4,162 00 Expenses 556 38 14,664 48 See last column.	Not known	Vessel and cargo wholly the property of the claimants, American citizens. She was, on her passage from Hispaniola for Jamaica, captured by a French privateer, carried to St. Jago de Cuba, and there disposed of. The privateer was called the Liberty.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
59. Ebenezer Stocker and others.	France	Nov., 1803	Capture	Schooner Polly, Morris master.	Vessel $2,000 00 Cargo 7,848 79 Freight 1,500 00 11,348 79 See last column.	Not known	The vessel and cargo were wholly the property of the claimants, American citizens. She was captured on her outward voyage for the West Indies by a French privateer, Herondelle, carried to St. Domingo, and there disposed of.
60. Jeremiah Nelson and others.	France	April, 1804	Capture	Brig Minerva, Greenough master.	$10,333 75. Place of capture not stated	Not known	The vessel and cargo were wholly the property of the claimants. She was captured by a French privateer and rescued by the crew. Soon afterwards she was captured by the Spaniards, and principally lost.
61. Marine Insurance Co. in N. York.	France	1804	Detention or condemnation.	Brig Dove, Hussey master.	Loss on cargo, $5,000. The loss appears to have been sustained at Porto Rico.	Condemned by a French court. Where and when not stated.	The voyage was from Port au Prince to New York. The owners were G. Rossier & Roulet.
62. Marine Insurance Co. in N. York.	France	1804	Detention or condemnation.	Brig AmiableCreole, Allen master.	Loss on cargo, $5,000. The loss appears to have been sustained at Porto Rico.	Condemned by a French court. Where and when not stated.	The voyage was from Port au Prince to New York. The owners were B. M. Mumford and others.
63. Marine Insurance Co. in N. York.	France	1804	Detention or condemnation.	Ship Hopewell, Seeson master.	Loss on cargo, $10,000. The loss appears to have been sustained at Guadaloupe.	Not stated	The voyage was from New York to Aux Cayes. The owner was George Barnewall.
64. Marine Insurance Co. in N. York.	France	1804	Detention or condemnation.	Brig Rockland, King master.	Loss on cargo, $10,000. The loss appears to have been sustained at Guadaloupe.	Not stated.	The voyage was from New York to Aux Cayes. The owner was George Barnewall.
65. Marine Insurance Co. in N. York.	France	1804	Detention or condemnation.	Schooner Joseph, Survey master.	Loss on cargo, $4,250. The loss appears to have been sustained at St. Jago de Cuba. Amount, &c., $34,250.	Condemned by a French court. Where and when not stated.	The voyage was from Jacmel to New York. The owner was Joseph Icard.
66. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Sept. 5, 1804	Capture	Sch'r Abbe Thule, Jones master.	$9,452. The place of loss in this and the following cases to No. 78, inclusive, is not stated. (See last column.)	See last column	These claims are the amounts insured by the claimants, and paid on American vessels, which were captured by French armed vessels on the high seas, and either illegally condemned or converted to the use of the captors without condemnation. The stated items of loss are the respective amounts paid by the claimants in consequence of such captures.
67. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Dec. 12, 1804		Snow Eliza, Powell master.	$14,000.
68. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Aug. 21, 1804		Sch'r Lydia, Chamberlain master.	$20,349.
69. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	May 16, 1804		Brig Neptune, Clapp master.	$400.
70. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Nov., 1804		Brig Ruby, Wannell master.	$11,500.
71. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	July 7, 1804		Sch'r Sally, Hellman master.	$3,000.
72. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	April 14, 1804		Ship Sukey, Whipple master.	$7,600.
73. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Sept. 6, 1804		Schooner Surviving Brother, Gardner master.	$13,650.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
74. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	July 5, 1804		Schooner Tartar, Doane master.	$1,750		For remarks see No. 66.
75. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	July, 1804		Schooner Hopewell, Sesson master.	$13,000.
76. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	July, 1804		Brig Rockland, Akins master.	$6,700.
77. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	July, 1804		Schooner Nancy, Winter master.	$20,000.
78. Union Insurance Co. of Maryland.	France	Sept., 1804		Schooner Ardent, Smith master.	$19,000.
79. Peletiah Fitch	France	1797	Capture	Sloop Hiram	Value of sloop $5,000 00 Value of cargo 3,000 00 Amount, &c 8,000 00 Interest is claimed on these items. See last column	Condemned in 1797. Place not stated.	The sloop Hiram, while on her voyage from Norfolk to Jamaica, was, with her cargo, captured by the French. The claimant states that the papers in this case are on file in the Clerk's office of the House of Representatives.
80. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France	Sept. 6, 1804	Capture	Schooner Surviving Brothers, Gardner master.	$11,206. See last column	No legal adjudication	This vessel was taken, on her passage from Port de Paix to Baltimore, by a French privateer, the crew dispossessed, and the vessel ordered into port. It is not known whither she was carried.
81. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France	Nov. 20, 1804	Capture	Schooner Superb, Shever master.	$1,257. See last column	Condemned at the city of St. Domingo, 27th Frimaire, 13.	Taken, on her passage from Baltimore to Cape Francois, by the French privateer L'Heureuse Rencontre.
82. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France	July 7, 1804	Capture	Brig Delaware, Deal master.	$10,000. Capture made in Fortune Island	See last column.	This vessel was taken, on her passage from Aux Cayes, in St. Domingo, to Baltimore, by the French privateer Regulator. She had got ashore when she was captured. At a subsequent date she may have been condemned at the city of St. Domingo. On her arrival at Baracoa, July 13, 1804, the property was disposed of without any legal process. This and the following claims, to No. 88, inclusive, were unsuccessfully preferred under the Florida treaty.
83. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France	July 13, 1804	Capture	Schooner Sally, Hillman master.	$10,000. See last column	Condemned at Basseterre, 25th Vindemiaire, 13.	This vessel was captured, on her voyage from —— to Baltimore, by the French privateer Plutus, and carried, July 27, 1804, to Baracoa, when and where the property was disposed of without legal proceedings. The condemnation which ultimately took place rests on the trade with St. Domingo being interdicted by France.
84. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France	May 21, 1804	Capture	Schooner Brothers, Hippins master.	$8,000. See last column	No legal adjudication appears	Taken on her passage from Jeremie to Charleston. The property disposed of without legal form.
85. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France	June 2, 1804	Capture	Schooner Paragon, Davis master.	$9,500. See last column.	Condemned at the city of St. Domingo, 13th Fructidor 12.	This vessel was taken on her passage from Baltimore to Cape Francois and to Mayaquez, in Porto Rico, by the French privateer Democrat. The property was disposed of prior to the condemnation.

APPENDIX TO CLAIMS ON FRANCE—Continued.

Name of claimant.	Name of the Government on which the claim is made.	Date of the act complained of.	Nature of the act.	Name of the vessel captured or injured.	Amount of loss sustained, and value of property captured, and where.	Subjected or not to legal adjudication; where and when.	Remarks to explain or elucidate the general nature of the claim.
86. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France	Dec. 24, 1804...	Capture	Schooner Henry, Travers master.	$13,333. See last column.....	Condemned at Basseterre, 13th Thermidor, 13.	Taken on her passage from Jacmel to Baltimore by the French privateer Regulus, and the property disposed of on arrival at St. Jago, about 20 Nivose, 13, prior to the condemnation. The condemnation rests on the illegality of the trade.
87. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France	Nov. 25, 1804 ..	Capture.....	Brig Ruby, Wannell master.	$2,200. See last column.....	No legal adjudication appears...	Taken on her passage from Aux Cayes to Baltimore, and to a port on the south side of Cuba, by the French privateer Virginia. Property disposed of without legal adjudication on arrival at Cuba.
88. Chesapeake Insurance Company.	France	Dec. 19, 1804 ..	Capture.....	Schooner Elesenor, King master.	$4,500. See last column	No legal adjudication appears...	Taken on her passage from Cape Francois to Baltimore by a French privateer. Property disposed of at St. Jago without legal adjudication.
89. D. Winchester, surviving partner of J. Ogleby and D. Winchester.	France	1803.....	Non-payment of bills of exchange.	.....	22,000 francs, equal, at 18¾ cents a franc, to $4,125, amount of bills.	.....	Bills of exchange in the sum of 22,000 francs were drawn at Cape Francois, in the island of St. Domingo, by the Agents or Commissioners of the French Army on the Payer General of Marine at Paris, and have never been paid.
90. D. Winchester.....	France	Date appears to be in 1803.	Non-payment of bills of exchange.	.....	Amount of bills, 53,200 francs, equal, at 18¾ cents a franc, to $9,975.	.....	Bills of exchange in the amount of 53,200 francs were drawn, probably, as those mentioned in No. 89 were never paid.
91. Oliver Logan.....	France	Date of capture not stated; probably in 1797.	Capture.....	Not stated.....	Not stated.....	Condemned in March, 1797, by the municipality of the island of Guadaloupe.	John Logan was the sole owner of the vessel and cargo. They were taken by a French privateer and carried into Basseterre, Guadaloupe.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 452. [2D SESSION.

APPOINTMENTS OF MINISTERS TO AND THEIR DUTIES AT THE CONGRESS AT PANAMA.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 3, 1827.

To the House of Representatives of the United States:

In compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 9th ultimo, relating to the appointments of Chargés des Affaires, and to the commissions and salaries of the Ministers and Secretary to the mission to Panama, I transmit herewith a report from the Secretary of State, with accompanying documents.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, February 3, 1827.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, January 31, 1827.

The Secretary of State, to whom has been referred the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 9th instant, requesting the President to communicate to the House "whether any, and if any, what number of Chargés des Affaires have been appointed since the 4th day of March, 1789, without the advice and consent of the Senate, and whether, in any case, such appointment has been made after notice had been given of the intention of a minister abroad to return, and after his successor had been appointed; if so, by what authority and what length of time did said temporary appointment continue, what the general duties to be discharged, and what the compensation paid; and that the President also inform this House from what period the persons appointed Minister and Secretary of Legation to Panama received their commissions, and from what period they have been paid their salaries," has the honor to report:

The resolution requires, first, information as to the number of the appointments of Chargés des Affaires which have been made, if any, without the advice and consent of the Senate, since the 4th day of March, 1789; secondly, whether, in any such instances, the appointments were made after notice had been given of the intention of a minister abroad to return, and after his successor had been appointed; thirdly, if so, by what authority, and for what length of time did such temporary appointments continue; fourthly, what were the duties to be discharged by Chargés des Affaires so appointed; fifthly, what compensation did they receive; and, sixthly, from what period the persons appointed Ministers and Secretary of Legation to Panama received their commissions, and from what period they have been paid their salaries.

1. On the first point, the following cases are stated from the records of the Department of State, in none of which, except that of Mr. Short, were the persons appointed nominated to the Senate.

William Short was nominated to the Senate on the 16th of June, 1789, as Chargé d'Affaires at the Court of France, during the absence of the minister plenipotentiary at that Court, (Thomas Jefferson,) and commissioned as such on the 6th April, 1790, during the pleasure of the President of the United States. Thomas Jefferson was, on the 26th of September, 1789, appointed Secretary of State, and thereby vacated his office as minister plenipotentiary to the Court of France. W. Short, without further nomination to the Senate, was commissioned as above, there being no minister plenipotentiary at the Court of France until the appointment of Gouverneur Morris, January 12, 1792. Mr. Short was presented as Charge d'Affaires by Mr. Jefferson, on his taking leave of the French Court, on the authority of a letter from Mr. Jay, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, of June 19, 1789, which also permitted that minister's return on a visit to the United States.

John H. Purviance was left in the charge of our affairs at London, on the 8th of October, 1804, by Mr. Monroe, during his absence in Spain.

George W. Erving was appointed Secretary of Legation to Madrid, with the advice and consent of the Senate, November 22, 1804, and appointed provisionally by the President, without the co-operation of the Senate, to act as Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid until the arrival of Mr. Bowdoin, appointed minister 22d of November, 1804.

Jonathan Russell was left in the charge of our affairs at Paris by General Armstrong, and commissioned as such by the President.

John S. Smith was left Chargé d'Affaires at London by Mr. Pinkney, May 1, 1811, but no commission ever issued to him as such.

Jonathan Russell was sent, by the direction of the President, from Paris to London in October, 1811, as Chargé d'Affaires.

Levitt Harris was left Charge d'Affaires at St. Petersburg by Mr. Adams, in April, 1814, by direction of the President.

John L. Lawrence, left Chargé d'Affaires at Stockholm by Mr. Russell, June 6, 1814.

Henry Jackson, left Chargé d'Affaires at Paris by Mr. Crawford, April 26, 1815, while Mr. Gallatin, appointed minister to France February 28, 1815, was in London, assisting in the negotiation of the convention of that year.

Thomas L. L. Brent, Secretary of Legation at Madrid, was left Chargé d'Affaires there, by Mr. Erving, in August, 1815.

And again, by Mr. Forsyth, November 23, 1820, during his return, on leave, to the United States.

Christopher Hughes, Secretary of Legation at Stockholm, was designated by the President to act as Chargé d'Affaires on the 10th September, 1816, in the event of the retirement of Mr. Russell, and he was accordingly so left by Mr. Russell in October, 1818.

Charles Pinkney, left Chargé d'Affaires at St. Petersburg by Mr. Pinkney, in February, 1818. Mr. Campbell was appointed minister April 16, 1818.

He was again left there in charge of our affairs by Mr. Campbell, July 8, 1820, by the direction of the President. Mr. Middleton was appointed minister April 6 of that year.

John James Appleton was left Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid by Mr. Forsyth, March 3, 1823. Mr. Nelson was appointed minister January 15, 1823.

Daniel Sheldon, left Chargé d'Affaires at Paris by Mr. Gallatin, May 16, 1823, under the direction of the President.

John A. Smith, left Chargé d'Affaires at London by Mr. Adams, in June, 1817, by order of the President.

He was again left in charge of our affairs by Mr. Rush, in May, 1825, under the direction of the President. Mr. King was appointed minister May 5, 1825.

John M. Forbes became Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Ayres on the death of Mr. Rodney, June 10, 1824. He was afterwards nominated to the Senate in that character, and confirmed 9th of March, 1825.

John A. King, left Chargé d'Affaires at London by Rufus King, July 1, 1826, with the approbation of the President. Mr. Gallatin was appointed minister May 10, 1826.

He was again left in charge of our affairs by Mr. Gallatin during a short excursion which he made to Paris in the fall of 1826.

Beaufort T. Watts, left Chargé d'Affaires at Bogota by Mr. Anderson, March 26, 1825, till January 20, 1826, during the return of that minister, on leave, to the United States.

He was again left (and yet remains in charge of our affairs) on Mr. Anderson's leaving Bogota, June 12, 1826, to proceed on the mission to Panama.

2. Most of the preceding appointments of Chargés des Affaires were made whilst we had ministers appointed to reside near the same Governments. Mr. Purviance was so appointed by Mr. Monroe, being the regular minister of the United States in London at the time. Mr. Erving, being the Secretary of Legation at Madrid, was intrusted with the charge of our affairs until the arrival of Mr. Bowdoin, our minister. Mr. Harris, at St. Petersburg, was left in charge of our affairs whilst Mr. Adams was absent on the duty of assisting in the negotiation of peace with Great Britain. Mr. Lawrence was left Chargé d'Affaires by Mr. Russell whilst this gentleman was absent from Stockholm on the same service of treating of peace. Mr. Jackson was left chargé at Paris after Mr. Gallatin's appointment, but before his arrival in France, as the minister of the United States. Mr. Brent was intrusted with the charge of our affairs during Mr. Forsyth's return to the United States. In the same character, at Stockholm, Mr. Hughes was left by Mr. Russell on his return home. Mr. Pinkney was left by Mr. Campbell in charge of our affairs in July, 1820, Mr. Middleton having been appointed minister the preceding April. Mr. Appleton was left in charge of our affairs by Mr. Forsyth, at Madrid, in March, 1823, Mr. Nelson having been appointed minister the preceding January. Mr. Watts was left at Bogota, in charge of our affairs, in the year 1825, during Mr. Anderson's absence on a visit to the United States. And, lastly, Mr. John A. King was left by Mr. Rufus King in charge of our affairs after the appointment, but before the arrival of Mr. Gallatin at London. The necessity of confiding temporarily to a chargé the affairs of a Government, which is ordinarily represented by a minister plenipotentiary, arises out of the absence of the minister, no matter from what cause. It is supposed not to be affected by the fact of a minister's having notified his intention to return and the appointment of his successor.

3. The authority under which the above appointments were made is believed to be furnished by the Constitution of the United States, and the public law and usage of nations. So important is it regarded to preserve, without interruption, the diplomatic intercourse between nations which are mutually represented by ministers, that upon the death of a minister the Secretary of Legation becomes, by established usage, ipso facto, Chargé d'Affaires until his Government is advised and provides for the event. The period during which they respectively continued to act in the character of Chargé d'Affaires will be seen by an inspection of the annexed abstract from the books of the Treasury, marked A, to which a reference is respectfully requested.

4. The duties to be performed by a Chargé d'Affaires, so appointed, are to be found in the same public law and usage, and may be stated, in the general, to be the same as those of the minister whose place he supplies. He transacts the ordinary business of the legation; keeps its archives and an office; corresponds with the Government where he is accredited, and with his own; and sustains an expense and maintains an intercourse with the diplomatic corps corresponding with the new station to which he is elevated.

5. The compensation received by the several persons so appointed (with the exception of Mr. John A. Smith and Mr. Watts, whose accounts are not yet closed, but will be finally liquidated on the same principles,) may be seen in the above extract from the Treasury. From that abstract it appears, 1st. That the allowance of salary in the character of chargé, in the cases there stated, has been uniform; 2d. That the allowance of an outfit has been most usually, but not always, made; 3d. That in some instances the temporary appointment has been continued after the intervention of the session of a Senate, as in the cases of Mr. Purviance, Mr. Russell, Mr. Lawrence, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Brent, Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Sheldon; and in two cases (those of Mr. Erving and Mr. Harris) after the intervention of several sessions of the Senate; and 4th. That in the case of Mr. John A. King the allowance made to him was a medium between the highest and lowest allowances that had been previously made. The highest was made in the cases of Mr. Russell and Mr. Jackson, to each of whom, besides the outfit and salary of a chargé, a quarter's return salary was allowed. Mr. King was not allowed salary as a chargé during the absence of Mr. Gallatin on his visit to Paris last fall; nor was he allowed a quarter's return salary as chargé. He was moreover the bearer of a convention, the first intelligence of the conclusion of which reached the Department by his delivery of the instrument itself. Such a service is always regarded in the transactions of Governments as one of peculiar interest. He might have been, but was not, allowed the usual compensation made to bearers of despatches. An extract from a letter addressed by the late Secretary of State to the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, marked B, accompanies this report.

6. The commissions of the Ministers to Panama and Secretary of Legation bear date March 14, 1826.

Mr. Anderson's salary, as one of these ministers, commenced, and his salary as minister to Colombia ceased on the 12th of June, 1826, when he left Bogota to proceed to Panama. Mr. Sergeant's commenced on the 24th of October, 1826, when he was notified to prepare to proceed on the mission. Mr. Rochester's salary, as Secretary of the Legation, commenced with the date of his commission. The considerations which induced the fixation of its commencement at that period were these: he resided in the interior of New York, remote from the seaboard, and was required, shortly after the confirmation of his appointment, to repair to the city of New York, where he accordingly came, to proceed on the mission, which it was then expected would depart in the course of the last spring. Subsequent events, not chargeable to him, prevented his departure. He moreover resigned, about the period of his nomination to the Senate, a judicial station which he held under the State of New York to enable him to accept this new appointment, and held himself in readiness to depart on the mission from the date of his appointment to the period when he actually sailed from the United States.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. CLAY.

A.

The Register of the Treasury, to whom was referred the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 9th instant, for such information as his office affords on the subject-matter of said resolution, has the honor to report the following, being extracts from the accounts of such of the Chargés des Affaires of the United States at foreign Courts as are, from the strictest research, to be found on the files of his office:

William Short, Chargé d'Affaires to Versailles.

No.
13937.	For his salary as Chargé d'Affaires at Versailles, from September 24, 1789, to June 30, 1790, 9 months and 6 days, at $3,000 per annum		$2,300 00

John H. Purviance, Chargé d'Affaires at London.

25576.	For salary as Chargé d'Affaires at London, from October 8, 1804, to July 17, 1805, 9 months and 9 days, at $4,500 per annum		$3,485 95
	Deduct for same period, as Secretary of Legation, at $1,350 per annum		1,045 79
			2,440 16

George W. Erving, Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid.

23587.	For his salary, from October 24, 1805, to April 5, 1810, 4 years, 5 months, and 13 days, at $4,500 per annum		$20,035 27
	Three months' salary for his return home		1,125 00
			21,160 27

Jonathan Russell, Chargé d'Affaires at Paris.

26818.	For his salary, from August 10, 1810, to October 25, 1811, 1 year and 2½ months, at $4,500 per annum		$5,437 50
	For outfit, equal to one year's salary		4,500 00
			9,937 50

John S. Smith, Chargé d'Affaires at London.

26548.	For salary, from May 1, to November 16, 1811, 200 days, at $4,500 per annum		$2,465 75
	Half an outfit as Chargé d'Affaires	$2,250 00
	A quarter's salary for returning home	1,125 00
			3,375 00
			5,840 75

Jonathan Russell, Chargé d'Affaires at London.

26819.	For his salary, from October 26, 1811, to July 27, 1812, 275 days, at $4,500 per annum		$3,390 41
	For outfit, equal to one year's salary	$4,500 00
	One quarter's salary, allowed for returning home	1,125 00
			5,625 00
			9,015 41

Levitt Harris, Chargé d'Affaires at St. Petersburg.

223.	For salary, from April 17, 1814, to February 21, 1817, at $4,500 per annum		$12,812 50
	For one quarter's salary, allowed for returning to the United States		1,125 00
			13,937 50

John L. Lawrence, Chargé d'Affaires at Stockholm.

428.	For his salary during the absence of Mr. Russell, the minister who was engaged with the joint mission at Ghent, from June 7, 1814, to May 19, 1815, 11 months and 13 days, at $4,500 per annum		$4,289 83

Henry Jackson, Chargé d'Affaires at Paris.

No.
302.	For salary, from April 27, 1815, to July 17, 1816, 1 year, 2 months, and 21 days, at $4,500 per annum	$5,512 50
	For this sum allowed him as an outfit and his return to the United States	5,625 00
		11,137 50

Thomas L. L. Brent, Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid.

1802.	For his salary as Acting Chargé d'Affaires during the absence of Mr. Erving, on a visit to the United States, from August 5, 1815, to August 23, 1816, 1 year and 19 days, at $4,500 per annum	$4,732 33
	For this sum, being the difference between his salary as Secretary of Legation and that of Chargé d'Affaires, the duties of which he was performing during the absence of Mr. Forsyth, on a visit to the United States, from November 28, 1820, to August 18, 1821	1,813 86
		6,546 19

Christopher Hughes, Chargé d'Affaires at Stockholm.

1313.	For salary, from November 1, 1816, the date of his appointment, to December 14, 1817, the period of Mr. Russell's return to Stockholm, 1 year, 1 month, and 14 days, at $4,500 per annum	$6,038 04
	For salary, from October 22, 1818, to December 31, 1822, 4 years, 2 months, and 10 days, at $4,500 per annum	18,868 20
	For amount of his outfit, on his first entering upon the duties thereof, in 1816	4,500 00
1705.	For amount of an outfit on Mr. Russell's second departure from Stockholm, in 1818, as United States minister there	4,500 00
	For salary, from January 1, 1823, the period to which it was last adjusted, to July 15, 1825, the day on which he left Stockholm, making 2 years, 6 months, and 15 days, at $4,500 per annum	11,433 42
		44,339 66

Charles Pinkney, Chargé d'Affaires at St. Petersburg.

1249.	For his salary, from February 1, 1818, to January 31, 1819	$4,500 00
	For his salary, from June 21, 1820, to June 6, 1821	4,326 93
		8,826 93

John J. Appleton, Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid.

1575.	For his salary, from March 3 to December 3, 1823, this last being the day on which Mr. Nelson arrived to assume the duties of minister, making 9 months and 1 day, at $4,500 per annum	$3,395 10

Daniel Sheldon, Chargé d'Affaires at Paris.

1672.	For salary, from May 16, 1823, to April 2, 1824, 10 months and 17 days, at $4,500 per annum	$3,968 40
	For amount of his outfit	4,500 00
		8,468 40

John A. King, Chargé d'Affaires at London.

1829.	For his salary, from July 1, 1826, the day on which his duties commenced, to August 31 following, when they terminated, 62 days, at $4,500 per annum	$758 15
	For amount of his outfit, equal to 1 year's salary	4,500 00
		5,258 15

All which is respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH NOURSE, Register.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Register's Office, January 20, 1827.

B.—Extract of a letter from Mr. Adams, Secretary of State, to Lewis McLane, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means of the House of Representatives of the United States.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, March 10, 1824.

"I have the honor of informing you that outfits have usually been allowed to Secretaries of Legation, who have been left as Chargé des Affaires, on the return of ministers plenipotentiary to the United States upon the termination of their missions.

"They have not been allowed in cases of temporary absences of ministers, whether upon public concerns or for their personal accommodation.

"Instances of the allowance, in the cases referred to by your letter, are, of Mr. Henry Jackson, on the return of Mr. Crawford from Paris in April, 1815, and of Mr. J. A. Smith, on my return from London in June, 1817; also, of Mr. C. Hughes, on the return of Mr. Russell from Sweden in 1819, and of Mr. A. H. Everett, on the return of Mr. Eustis from the Netherlands in 1819."

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 453. [2D SESSION.

SPOLIATIONS BY FRANCE PRIOR TO SEPTEMBER 30, 1800.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 8, 1827.

Mr. HOLMES, from the Select Committee, to whom were referred the petitions of Joseph Emerson, and many others, praying to be remunerated for losses sustained by captures and other injuries under authority of the French Republic, made the following report:

The petitioners have presented claims against the United States for captures and other injuries inflicted under authority of the French Republic, previously to the convention of September 30, 1800, for which no indemnity was provided by that convention. They state, in substance, that their property was taken from them in contravention of the laws of nations and existing treaties; that the United States have not only failed to enforce their claims against France, but have expressly relinquished them for a fair consideration, and they therefore ask an indemnity to the amount of the claims relinquished.

The petitioners have furnished no evidence of the injuries of which they complain, nor of the amount of their losses; and, in ordinary cases, the committee would be justified in a report against them, for want of proof.

But, inasmuch as it was admitted, by the ministers of both parties to the convention of 1800, that illegal captures and detentions had been made, under the authority of the French Republic, against citizens of the United States; that the injuries sustained were of considerable amount; and as it appears that the claims for these were relinquished by the United States, in discharge of alleged infractions of the treaty of commerce with France of 1778, and to release us from the guaranty in the treaty of alliance of the same date, and the consular convention of November 14, 1788, it is fair to presume the petitioners expected that the Senate would determine the preliminary question whether, under the circumstances of the case, the United States were obliged, in equity, to make to them any compensation.

In this view of the case, the committee consider it their duty to answer this question, and present the answer and the reasons to the Senate for their consideration and decision. If the petitioners are entitled to any portion of their claims, there can be no good reason to withhold it from them; and if not, it is due to them that we should definitively refuse them, and assign the reasons for such refusal. To do this, it will be necessary to present to the Senate the state of the controversy between France and the United States at the time these claims were relinquished.

By the 17th article of our treaty of commerce with France of 1778 her armed ships, with the prizes taken from her enemies, were entitled to shelter and protection in our ports, while those of her enemies were excluded. By the 25th article of our treaty of 1794 with Great Britain, her armed ships, with their prizes, were admitted, and those of her enemies excluded, with a proviso, however, in favor of nations with whom we had existing treaties. France, nevertheless, complained, and, in many instances, her complaints were by no means groundless—that, contrary to our express stipulations with her, British armed ships, with their prizes taken from her citizens, were admitted and protected in the ports of the United States. It was insisted by France that the 25th article of the British treaty was a direct infraction of ours with her, and that the proviso, whatever its intent, had no practical effect in her favor. The coalition against France had agreed to enforce the extraordinary principle, that articles of ordinary sustenance might become contraband of war. To this coalition, formed by the treaties of Pavia and Pilnitz, in 1791, Great Britain was, though not an ostensible, a real party. It was afterwards extended to embrace other Powers, and the stipulations were to prohibit the exportation of provisions to France, shut their ports against her, employ all means in their power to injure her commerce, and to unite all their efforts to prevent neutral Powers from giving any protection whatever, directly or indirectly, to the commerce or property of the French on the sea, or in the ports of France. Pursuant to this combination, not only against France, but against all neutral commerce, Great Britain, early in 1793, captured our vessels bound to French ports. In retaliation, the French Republic, by the decree of May 9, 1793, authorized the capture of neutral merchant vessels bound to British ports. In each case a limited and very inadequate compensation was to be awarded for cargo, freight, and detention. The decree of May 23 excepted our vessels from the operation of that of the 9th; that of May 28 included us; that of July 1 exempted us, and that of July 27 comprised us within its provisions. The reason, or rather excuse, for this, given by the French minister to Mr. Morris, in his letter of October 14, 1793, is, "the extreme rigor with which the English and other belligerents treat all neutrals destined for France." To which he adds, "The difficulty of distinguishing our allies from our enemies has often been the cause of offences committed on board your vessels; all that the administration could do is to order indemnification to those who have suffered, and to punish the guilty." Pressed by this formidable coalition, and distracted by the events and atrocities of the revolution, France was constantly vibrating between a retaliation upon her enemies on the one hand, and a wish to conciliate us on the other. This extraordinary attempt to reduce, by famine, such a nation as France, as wild and extravagant as it was unjust to neutrals, was justly condemned as a direct contravention of the laws of neutrality. But by the 18th article of our treaty with Great Britain of 1794 it was, in effect, conceded that provisions and other articles bound to the ports of her enemies might become contraband; that the vessel might be carried into a British port, and the cargo disposed of, paying the value and an ordinary mercantile profit. It is easily perceived that this humiliating concession was little relished in the United States, and much less in France. The second article of the treaty of commerce of 1778 having provided that concessions to others should become common to the parties, it was not unreasonable to expect that France would insist on a right corresponding with that conceded to Great Britain. To allow that our legitimate commerce might be diverted from its destination, and our cargoes be carried to and sold in a glutted market, was, indeed, a concession, and would seem to demand a corresponding concession to France. Unfortunately for us, this concession to Great Britain became a great annoyance to our commerce. The combination against the trade of neutrals with France, and the facility with which Great Britain, by the superiority of her Navy, could intercept that commerce, had rendered the prices of all articles of sustenance exceedingly high in France and low in England. The rule of compensation with the former was the port of destination; with the latter, the port of entry; and both nations paid us, if they paid at all, the price in the cheapest market. If France could not sustain the position that this concession to Great Britain was the extension of a corresponding right to her, still it is not clear that the concession itself was not an injury to her. Her complaints on this point, whether groundless or not, perplexed and annoyed us, and it was exceedingly desirable to be relieved from them.

By the 23d article of the treaty of commerce of 1778 it was stipulated that free ships should give freedom to goods and persons, contraband of war and soldiers in the service of an enemy excepted. By the treaty of 1794 with Great Britain it was conceded that the property and persons of her enemies might be taken from our ships. The result was, that while the property and subjects of Great Britain were, on board of our vessels, protected from French cruisers, those of France were denied such protection from British cruisers, and subjected to capture. It was contended that, by this provision in the British treaty, that of 1778 became modified, and that the right resulted to France to seize and capture British property and subjects on board of our vessels, since we had conceded to the latter the right to take those of the former. Such a claim your committee will not attempt either to resist or support. It was one which our own Government might have resisted by arguments very satisfactory to themselves, but very unsatisfactory to France. It was a subject of controversy.

In our treaty with Great Britain we had extended the articles of contraband far beyond all reasonable limits, and many articles, particularly materials for ship building, were included in the list, which were expressly exempted in our treaty with France. Whether this was a concession, entitling France to corresponding rights or privileges, or a just ground of complaint, is not now necessary to be determined; it was complained of as an injury; it was a claim from which it was desirable to be relieved.

Another injury of which France complained, and perhaps justly, was our submission to the British rule of 1756, prohibiting all commerce of a neutral with her enemy's colonies not permitted in time of peace. By the decrees of the national convention of February 19 and March 26, 1793, the ports of France and her colonies were opened to neutrals on the same terms as to her own citizens. On November 6, of the same year, Great Britain, by an order in council, or "additional instructions" to the officers of her Navy, revived this rule against our trade with the French colonies.

It would seem that the admission of a neutral into French colonies on favorable terms was an act of which her enemy had no right to complain. To interrupt it was an aggression, perhaps, which, in ordinary cases, the neutral ought to resist or counteract. France, therefore, might very justly complain, that to submit to it was a concession to her enemy at her expense. If a neutral nation submits to an unlawful interruption by one belligerent of its commerce with the other, this other may have good reason to complain, provided such neutral possesses the means of resistance.

Other claims were pressed upon us by France for injuries of which she complained: such as our prohibiting the sale of her prizes in our ports; detentions by embargo; our refusal to permit her to fit out and commission privateers; denying these privateers an asylum in our ports, and restoring their prizes to her enemy; permitting British ships-of-war, generally, to enter our ports after having made prize of French vessels, and to repair and refit; refusing to reclaim French prizes taken in or brought into our waters by British ships; granting facilities to Great Britain in the reduction of the French colonies in the West Indies; permitting the seizure and detention of French national vessels; submitting to the impressment of our seamen to strengthen the maritime power of her enemy; aiding the insurgents of St. Domingo, and many others not necessary to be named.

These complaints were for supposed infractions of the treaty of commerce—many of them were undoubtedly groundless; some, in their character, equivocal; and others, perhaps, valid and just. If any of the seizures and detentions of the property of our citizens can be justified by France, on the ground that the right resulted to her in consequence of concessions made to her enemy, still this would not discharge our Government from their obligation to remunerate our citizens for these losses. They, it would seem, ought to be protected in a commerce carried on conformably to the laws of nations and existing treaties, as expounded by the Government of the United States. If, in this exposition, the United States were in the wrong, yet we can see much reason why citizens who adventure under the faith of their own Government should be compensated for losses thus sustained. If an international tribunal should determine that, in some points of the controversy, France was right, and that the seizures, under her authority, of the property of our citizens was conformable to the laws of nations and existing treaties, still the American sufferer might well demand of his Government compensation for injuries arising from its own error. Be this as it may, it is most certain that from 1792 to 1800 property of our citizens, to a large amount, was wrested or plundered from them by authority of the French Government without color of right, and even without the formality of adjudication. For these palpable injuries the United States were most unquestionably bound to demand indemnity in behalf of the sufferers.

Your committee will now proceed to examine the claims of France arising under the treaty of alliance.

By the 11th article of that treaty "the two parties guaranty mutually, for the present and forever, against all other Powers, to wit: The United States to his most Christian Majesty the present possessions of the Crown of France in America, as well as those it may acquire by the future treaty of peace; and his most Christian Majesty guaranties to the United States their liberty, sovereignty, and independence, absolute and unlimited, as well in matters of Government as commerce, and also their possessions, and the possessions and additions or conquests that their Confederation may obtain during the war from any of the dominions now or heretofore possessed by Great Britain in North America, conformable to the 5th and 6th articles above written. The whole, as their possession, shall be fixed and assured to the said States at the moment of the cessation of the present war with England." The 5th and 6th articles alluded to provided that if the United States should make conquest of the British possessions in North America or Bermuda, these should belong to them, and that France should renounce all claim to them; and it was further provided in the 12th article that "the reciprocal guaranty should have effect the moment the war should commence between France and England, or if no such war, then at the moment hostilities should arise between Great Britain and the United States." At the time of the ratification of this treaty the possessions of the Crown of France in America were, we believe, Cayenne, on the continent, and the islands of St. Domingo, Martinico, Guadaloupe, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Tobago, Deseada, Marie Galante, St. Pierre, and Miquelon.

In the war of our Revolution France lost several of these islands, which were restored to her by the peace of 1783. This guaranty was "for the present and forever;" and should any other Power thereafter attempt a conquest of the possessions of either party thus guarantied, the party attacked might demand succor of the other, and, in case of failure and loss, an indemnity. It has not, we believe, been ever pretended that France, on her part, had failed to fulfil this guaranty. By the first article of the treaty of peace of 1783 his Britannic Majesty acknowledged the United States (the identical party to the treaty of 1778) to be free, sovereign, and independent, and relinquished all claim to them forever, and by boundaries perfectly satisfactory to the United States.

To the time of the convention of the 30th of September, 1800, our limits had not been disturbed, and our "liberty, independence, and sovereignty" continued "absolute and unlimited."

With France it was very different. She had been despoiled of many of her possessions in America; had lost the fine island of Martinico, with others of inferior note, and was in danger of losing the rest.

In 1791, when the coalition was formed against France by the treaties of Pavia and Pilnitz, she had been nearly four years distracted by a revolution sanguinary in its character beyond example. It was known that England was a party to that coalition. War, in fact, existed with England before France, in 1793, declared against her. Her ambassador had been sent home, and this, by the treaty of 1786 between the parties, was to be considered as a commencement of hostilities.

In this state of things, France, struggling with internal and external enemies, powerful and vindictive, her American possessions unprotected and exposed to the superior naval power of Great Britain, the President of the United States, in February, 1793, issued his proclamation of neutrality, avowing and defining the policy to be pursued by the Government, and prescribing the rule of strict and rigid impartiality towards the belligerents.

There can be no doubt that, at this time, the casus fœderis had occurred, if France had demanded a fulfilment of the guaranty. War between France and England actually existed; the French American possessions were threatened; early in April the British forces garrisoned Martinico; and during the next year most of the French possessions in the West Indies were captured by the British land and naval forces.

From the commencement of this war in Europe our Government was exceedingly apprehensive that France would require us to fulfil the stipulations of the treaty of alliance. On the 21st of December, 1792, Mr. Morris, our minister in France, in his letter to the Secretary of State, expresses his apprehension that "the question respecting the guaranty of American possessions may be agitated, especially if France should attempt to defend her islands," and, disclaiming the discussion of the question of our obligation, expresses his "wish that all our treaties (however onerous) may be strictly fulfilled, according to their true intent and meaning." This subject of the guaranty was one from which our Government felt much anxiety to be relieved. To the time of the convention of 1800 France had uniformly insisted that we were obligated to fulfil the guaranty; while in the United States public opinion had been much divided, and some of our most distinguished statesmen had taken opposite sides of the question. It was insisted that this was only a defensive alliance, and that in this war France was the aggressor. Whether this ground was tenable in point of fact or principle admits of much doubt. France, then distracted by internal commotions, was also contending against Europe in arms. The objects of the coalition were well understood, and it was well known that England was a party to that coalition from the first. France was to be coerced to restore her legitimate monarch, and by means, too, which violated all the laws of neutrality. If ever a nation is engaged in a defensive war, it is in resisting enemies whose professed object is to regulate its internal government. It is quite certain that one of the parties to the guaranty has not the exclusive right to determine whether the other is the aggressor in a war in which it may be engaged. France, perhaps, had a right to determine for herself when her honor and safety required that she should resort to arms; and had we been at war, and demanded of her the fulfilment of this mutual guaranty, we should have scarcely been satisfied with the answer, "this is a defensive alliance, and you are the aggressors." And it is, at least, a subject of controversy, whether, by this treaty of alliance, the casus fœderis did only occur when one of the parties is engaged in a defensive war. The United States guarantied to France, for the present time and forever, not only her present possessions in America, but those which she might acquire by the future treaty of peace. France, by the terms of the treaty, engaged voluntarily in the war with Great Britain, and as against her this war was clearly offensive, and with the expectation, too, of an acquisition of territory "by the future treaty of peace." The proclamation of neutrality by the President, of February, 1793, is no evidence that it was his opinion that the casus fœderis had not occurred. The question was presented to his Secretaries or "Cabinet," and they were equally divided—Messrs. Jefferson and Randolph taking the affirmative, and Messrs. Hamilton and Knox the negative of the question. Whatever may have been the opinion of the President himself, it does not appear that he ever expressed it. The Federal Government had then been in operation less than four years; its success had satisfied the expectations of its friends; the Revolutionary debt had been funded, and provision made for its extinguishment; we were fast recovering from the losses and sufferings of the Revolution, and from the state of almost anarchy which succeeded it. But our Northwestern posts were still held by the British, contrary to the stipulations of the treaty of peace; we were at war with the Indians; our citizens were poor, and public credit had scarcely revived. The war of the French revolution was extraordinary and sanguinary; and when and what was to be its termination no one could predict. Considering then our own weakness and necessities, and the superiority of the British as a naval Power, it was difficult and hazardous for us, if we should attempt it, to preserve to France her possessions in America. The President determined, very wisely, that, before any demand should be made on us by France, he would prescribe and enjoin a strictly impartial neutrality towards the parties at war, trusting to events, and preferring, perhaps, future indemnity to France for the loss she might sustain of her possessions in America, rather than to be involved in a war of such a character, threatening wide desolation, and putting at hazard the prosperity, if not the independence, of the United States. Even admitting that the time had not come when France could claim the benefit of this guaranty, we were still entangled with this alliance; for the obligation was for the present and forever. Until the alliance should be dissolved by mutual consent or open war, we were liable to be involved in every war in which the French possessions in America might be in danger. And although the guaranty was mutual, yet, considering the relative condition of France and the United States, her obligation to us was merely nominal—it was worth nothing. But, inasmuch as it was necessary for France to exert her whole strength in her European wars, our guaranty of her American possessions was highly important to her; and, consequently, she in 1793 gave instructions to her minister here that, in any new treaty with us, he should make this guaranty an indispensable condition.

Whatever might have been our obligation to France under the provisions of the treaty of alliance, it was not to have been expected that she would have been convinced that we were exonerated, while we entertained such difference of opinion on the subject ourselves. And it is recollected that two of our most distinguished statesmen took opposite sides of the question, and engaged in the contest at great length and with much learning and ability. If the Government of the United States could have proved to our satisfaction that this claim for indemnity was utterly groundless, still it was necessary to go further, and satisfy France. This claim, just or otherwise, was a subject of controversy, which we severely felt, with which we were exceedingly perplexed, and from which we were extremely solicitous to be relieved. Your committee are well aware that it is believed by some that, in consequence of the collisions of 1798 and 1799, our treaties with France were annulled, and all obligations under them had ceased. France had, under various pretexts, taken and sequestered or condemned property of our citizens to a large amount. At that time our controversy with her was approaching a crisis; and such were our complaints that Congress, by the act of May 28, 1798, authorized the President to cause to be seized, and brought in for adjudication, the armed vessels of the French Republic which should have committed depredations on our citizens, or should be found hovering on our coasts for that purpose, and to retake any vessel captured; and by an act of the 7th of July of the same year our treaties and the consular convention with her were abrogated. A partial war ensued; there were several engagements on the ocean, and some of her national vessels were captured. Still we were not in such actual open war as would absolve us from treaty stipulations. It would be difficult to convince France that we could annul the treaties by an ex parte act of legislation; and as to the contest, it was never understood here that this was such a war as would annul a treaty. By the acts of Congress of June 13, 1798, and February 15, 1799, suspending our commercial intercourse with the French Republic, the President was authorized to discontinue the prohibitions and restore the intercourse, on satisfactory evidence that the French aggressions had ceased. And surely, if this had been an actual, open, flagrant war, such as would abrogate all treaties, Congress could not by law have authorized the President to make peace, but with the advice and consent of the Senate, two-thirds concurring. In the President's instructions to his envoys to France, (Messrs. Ellsworth, Davie, and Murray,) dated October 22, 1799, he says: "This conduct of the French Republic would well have justified an immediate declaration of war on the part of the United States; but desirous of maintaining peace, and still willing to leave open the door of reconciliation with France, the United States contented themselves with preparations for defence, and measures calculated to protect their commerce." The convention of 1800 was, moreover, not a treaty of peace, either in form or substance. The treaties of 1778 were the basis of the negotiation. The question between the negotiators was not so much whether war had annulled these treaties, as whether they should be annulled by negotiation. They were expressly recognized in the second article of the convention, and that article being afterwards expunged by mutual consent, these treaties thereby became null and void by convention, and not by war.

France never admitted that these treaties were annulled by war. In the negotiation which resulted in the convention of September 30, 1800, the French ministers insisted that "the treaties which united France and the United States are not broken; even war could not have broken them;" and that "the misunderstanding which existed was not a state of war, at least on the side of France."

The President, in his instructions to Messrs. Pinkney, Marshall, and Gerry, of the 15th of July, 1797—the same as those given afterwards to Messrs. Ellsworth, Davie, and Murray, in 1799—observes that "specific succors have the advantage of certainty, and are less liable to occasion war," and proposes that, "instead of troops or ships-of-war, it will be convenient to stipulate," in a future war, "for a moderate sum of money, or quantity of provisions, at the option of France," not to exceed the annual sum of two hundred thousand dollars; but cautions his ministers not to stir the question of guarantee if France is silent on the subject.

The American ministers who negotiated the convention of 1800 were, moreover, specially instructed to claim and insist on indemnities for illegal captures and detentions; and, in their first project, they, in the second article, proposed provision for mutual indemnification for individual citizens, but were cautiously silent on the subject of the guarantee. The French negotiators insisted on the advantages resulting from the priority of treaties. At length they proposed the simple alternative, "either the ancient treaties, with the advantages resulting from their priority, and the stipulation of reciprocal indemnities, or a new treaty, assuring equality without indemnity." Our ministers proposed: "1. A renewal and confirmation of former treaties. 2. The payment, in seven years, of three millions of francs, to reduce the right, as to privateers and their prizes, to those of the most favored nation. 3. In lieu of the mutual guarantee in the treaty of alliance, that, when either party should be attacked, the other should furnish and deliver property to the amount of one million of francs; either party to be exonerated from this stipulation on paying, within seven years, the gross sum of five millions. 4. To place commerce on a footing of the most favored nation. 5. A reciprocal stipulation for indemnity."

Finally, the last branch of the French alternative was substantially agreed to; for the second article of the convention provides, or rather declares, that "the ministers plenipotentiary of the two parties, not being able to agree at present respecting the treaty of alliance of the 6th of February, 1778, and the treaty of commerce of the same date, and the convention of the 14th of November, 1788, nor upon the indemnities mutually due or claimed, the parties will negotiate further at a convenient time; and, until they may have agreed on these points, the said treaties and convention shall have no operation." This convention was ratified by the United States, expunging this article, and limiting its duration to eight years. France agreed to the limitation, and to the "retrenchment" of the article, adding, however, a proviso, "that, by this retrenchment, the two States renounce the respective pretensions which are the object of the said article." This convention had been negotiated under the administration of Mr. John Adams; and Mr.

Jefferson, who had succeeded him, supposing probably that this proviso made such an alteration in the convention as to require the further advice and consent of the Senate, submitted it to their consideration; and, on the 19th of December, 1801, they resolved (two-thirds of the members present concurring therein) that they considered the said convention as fully ratified, and that it be returned to the President for the usual promulgation. It was accordingly promulgated in the usual form.

Although it has been doubted by some whether this convention was constitutionally ratified, yet, as it was made with the advice and consent of the Senate, two-thirds concurring therein; as it was observed during the eight years as the supreme law of the land, and, if null and void, would leave open the claims for reciprocal indemnity and mutual guarantee, your committee can see neither the reason nor policy of raising a doubt of its validity.

At any rate, it is certain that, by its provisions, the petitioners have lost all prospect of indemnity from France; and now the question presented by the petitioners recurs: Are the United States bound to remunerate them to any amount? That a nation is not obliged to press the claims of its citizens upon a foreign Power at the risk and expense of a war is readily admitted. It is obligated only to a fair exertion of its ability. As an agent of the claimant, it should not press his claims so far as to subject others to equal or greater injuries. The United States, therefore, in pressing these claims as far as they safely could, and seeing no prospect of success, might have been justified in waiving or postponing them, or taking a less sum than their actual amount. The late convention with Great Britain, taking a gross sum for slaves and property taken from our citizens during the late war, is an example. We obtained all we could for the claimants, reserving nothing to ourselves. But, clearly, the petitioners present no such case. Had the deficiency, in the case cited, been reserved for the benefit of the United States, or any part converted to their use, the claimants might have presented a case analogous to that of the petitioners. In this under the consideration of the committee France and the United States had reciprocal claims for infractions of the law of nations and existing treaties. Whether those of France were valid or not, they were matter of controversy which it was our interest to settle and adjust. Had the convention, as was proposed by our ministers, provided for reciprocal indemnites, and had Commissioners been appointed to liquidate the claims and determine their validity, it is impossible to say what might have been the result. Certain it is that, in such case, the United States would never have laid their hands on the adjusted claims of their own citizens to discharge those which might be allowed to France or her citizens. Such an offset would be taking private property for public uses without just compensation, and is expressly prohibited by the Constitution. And how would such a case vary from that of the petitioners? It is now too late for the United States to question the justice and validity of these claims as against France. We have pressed them upon her as valid and just; she has admitted them, and given us an equivalent to release them. We have released them; and, though they were unliquidated, still they were capable of liquidation, and either their amount or the value which we obtained for their discharge would be equitably due to the claimants.

Were the question between individuals the case would be clear. If one takes the claim of another, whether a matter of controversy or a liquidated debt, he is bound to respond for the full value. And if an agent, though held responsible only for a fair exertion of his ability, converts the property or rights of his principal to his own benefit, he should surely account to him, at least to the value of the benefit received. If we consider the United States in the character of agents for the claimants, accountable for a fair exertion of their ability, we should remunerate them for what we did obtain.

Were this a new principle, and we were now about to establish it as a rule, although we should do it with much caution and deliberation, yet we cannot perceive what better rule could be adopted. But it seems to your committee that it is already established, and one by which the United States have always professed to be governed, and by which, as we believe, they have generally acted.

In our compacts with several States, whenever we have taken for our own use property reserved by the compact to them, we have readily admitted our liability to respond. In that with the State of Georgia we had, among other things, stipulated to extinguish the Indian title within her limits. In attempting to fulfil this stipulation, we, in a treaty with the Indians, ceded to certain individuals a portion of the same lands as a part of the consideration for the extinguishment of title, thus taking for our own use part of the lands which we had stipulated to purchase for the use of Georgia to pay for another part which we did purchase. Georgia complained, and claimed an appropriation to extinguish the title to these "reservations." Her claim was too just to be refused, and we readily granted the appropriation. Many of our citizens had suffered injuries from Spain, similar to those of which the petitioners complain. Spain was unable to pay an adequate indemnity but by a cession of territory. We received the territory for our benefit, exonerated Spain from the claims of our citizens, and paid them what we deemed a fair equivalent for the cession. Should it be objected that it cannot be ascertained what was the value of the consideration paid by France for the release of these claims, the same difficulty was presented in the case of Spain. The claimants were obliged to submit to our estimate, and receive the amount which we determined the cession to be worth. Had we, in the case of Spain, obtained the cession of territory and made no provision to pay our citizens for claims released, this would have been a case against the petitioners. As it is, it is certainly a case in their favor. In each case the consideration for the release was worth something, and upon that something we ought, in the one case, as we did in the other, to fix a fair and reasonable value, and remunerate the claimants to that amount. A Board of Commissioners, such as was proposed by our ministers, might have burdened us with a debt equal to the losses of the French possessions, with the addition of indemnities for infractions of the treaty of commerce, and the sums thus awarded might have equalled, and even exceeded, the actual losses of all the claimants. They now ask us to determine the amount ourselves, to provide for the examination, liquidation, and payment of their claims, and they will then be satisfied that they have been treated as others.

The United States have faithfully fulfilled their engagements with foreign nations and the individual States; they have satisfied their citizens for Spanish spoliations. In the convention of 1803, for the purchase of Louisiana, they reserved twenty millions of francs out of the consideration to satisfy our citizens for "debts" due to them from the French Government prior to the 30th of September, 1800, and expressly stipulated in their favor in the fifth article of the convention of that date between the United States and France. They have, moreover, discharged a debt of gratitude to the indigent officers and soldiers of the Revolution; and the case of the petitioners seems to stand nearly alone, unadjusted, unsatisfied. Your committee, in fine, can see nothing in their case which takes it from the ordinary rule of justice, which requires that an agent shall account for what he receives for his principal, or from that avowed and practiced on by the Government in other cases; and they cannot perceive how we can withhold from these claimants their just due, consistently with the clause in the Constitution which provides that "private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation."

Your committee have endeavored to ascertain the probable amount of these claims thus released, and, to that end, they wrote to the Secretary of State for information, and have received the answer marked A and the document marked B, by which it appears that the number of claims for losses by seizures and detentions, from 1793 to 1800, both inclusive, is 444, and for contracts for supplies, &c., 12; that those on which there has been an estimate are 88; and the estimated amount is $2,235,702 59, which is about one-fifth of the number, and probably much more than that proportion of the whole amount. There are, probably, many others which have not been returned to the Department, and many of those which have been so returned may not be sustained, for want of the necessary proof, or for other reasons; and the estimated amount of many is, doubtless, greatly exaggerated.

From the best consideration your committee have been able to bestow on the subject, they are of opinion that the claims of our citizens against France for indemnity, which were released by the convention of the 30th of September, 1800, when examined and liquidated, would not exceed $8,000,000.

Much of the evidence in support of these claims is wanting, and is supposed to be deposited with our minister, or the Agent for Claims at Paris. Your committee are of opinion that measures should be adopted to procure the evidence which is there, or elsewhere, that the claim should be examined and liquidated; and, thereupon, provision ought to be made for the payment of a reasonable sum for their final discharge. They therefore recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to procure the evidence and documents relating to the claims of our citizens against France previously to the convention of the 30th of September, 1800, and to cause an abstract of the claims, and of the evidence and documents, to be laid before the Senate at the commencement of the first session of the next Congress.

A.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, January 22, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to you, in compliance with the request in your letter of the 1st instant, "a list of spoliations and other injuries on the property of American citizens by the French, from the year 1793 to 1800, both inclusive," as far as the documents on file in this office admit of the detail required by your committee. The statement, however, as you will perceive, is necessarily imperfect, from the deficiency of the materials on which it is founded.

In answer to the inquiry of the committee, whether any and all the evidence to support the claims be in this Department, and if not, where it could be obtained, I have the honor to state that, without a full and particular examination of that which is on file here, and which has been used in forming the present list, no conjecture can be hazarded (if it were proper to make one) as to its sufficiency in regard to the claims to which it relates; but it is believed that the list itself is essentially and greatly deficient as to the number of existing claims for the period which it comprehends.

The fact is not precisely known, but it is supposed that the papers in many of the cases included in this list are to be found in the office of the Agent of Claims at Paris.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. CLAY.

JOHN HOLMES, Esq., Senate of the United States.

B.

List of spoliations and other injuries on the property of American citizens by the French, from the year 1793 to 1800, both inclusive.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
1	Ship Andrew	Samuel Makins	Messrs. King, Pratt, & others.	April 10, 1793, not stated	L'Orient	Rice and pimento	Not stated	Not stated	Released with loss	Some evidence on file.
2	Sloop Matty	Timothy Avery	Not stated	1795, not stated	Cape Francois	Not stated	do.	do.	Condemned	Do.
3	Schooner Two Sisters	John Parks	Messrs. Field, Harlan, & others	March 24, 1795, off the West Indies	do.	Dry goods and groceries.	$8,564 45	$18,593 08	do.	Do.
4	Schooner Active	Not stated	Mark L. Hill & Co	1794, off the West Indies	Guadaloupe	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated.	do.	A letter on file. Evidence presumed to be at Paris.
5	Brig Gayoso	James Graisbury	Messrs. Reed & Ford	Aug. 14, 1793, off the Capes of Delaware.	Philadelphia	do.	do.	2,386 90	Not stated	A statem't of the parties.
6	Brig Patty	Josiah Hem-tead	I. Riley	September 2, 1796, off Antigua	Guadaloupe	American produce	do.	Not stated.	Condemned	Evidence on file.
7	Ship Hope	John Rodgers	Buchanan & Young	January 16, 1797, 25 leagues off Sully	L'Orient	Not stated	do.	23,000 00	do.	Do.
8	Snow Jenny	— Delisle	Buchanan & De La Porte	1797, not stated	Gonaives	do.	do.	5,550 00	Cargo taken	A letter on file.
9	Snow Isabella	James Helm	James Buchanan and others	April, 1797, not stated	Point Petre, (Guadaloupe)	do.	do.	Not stated.	Condemned	Do.
10	Brigantine Friendship, of Salem.	George Hodges	Nichols & Hodges	June 27, 1797, latitude 27° 15′ north, longitude 54° 13′ west.	Cape Francois	Dry goods and groceries.	do.	do.	do.	Evidence on file.
11	Brigantine Despatch	Thomas Lunt	Messrs. Parry, Harn, & Lunt	Nov. 18, 1796, near Cape Nichola Mole	Port du Paix	Lumber and provisions.	do.	do.	do.	4 letters on the subject.
12	Brig Little Sarah	Joseph Lowry	Messrs. Holland & Mackie, owners of the cargo.	April, 1793, off the Delaware	Philadelphia	Flour and meal, &c	do.	do.	Cargo taken	A memorial of the parties.
13	Sloop Martha	Joshua McWilliams	Edward Dunant, owner of the cargo.	March, 1795, not stated	Port du Paix	Flour and almonds	do.	do.	do.	Memorial and letters.
14	Schooner Union	Henry Hooper	Robert Hooper	October, 1794, near Monte Christi	do.	16 negroes	do.	2,000 00	Condemned	Evidence on file.
15	Ship Pallas	Not stated	Messrs. Mari & Gordon	1797, off Charleston	Not stated	Not stated	do.	Not stated.	Not stated	A letter on file.
16	Ship Flora	Thomas Scott	Not stated	June 2, 1796, not stated	Pillaged & detained at sea.	do.	do.	do.	do.	Evidence on file.
17	Brig Mary	— Murner	Anthony Butler	September 25, 1796, not stated	Not stated	do.	9,100 00	18,000 00	Condemned	A letter on file.
18	Barque Providence	Not stated	do.	May, 1796, not stated	Guadaloupe	do.	2,000 00	5,000 00	do.	Do.
19	Sloop James	do.	do.	Apparently in 1797, not stated	Cape Nichola Mole	do.	11,500 00	17,600 00	do.	Do.
20	Brig Penelope	do.	do.	Apparently in 1796 or 1797, not stated	Jamaica	do.	Not stated.	12,000 00	do.	Do.
21	Brig Molly	do.	do.	do. do. do.	Not stated	do.	2,500 00	2,500 00	Cargo condemned	Do.
22	Ship Severn	— Goodrich	Stephen Deblois, John Othout & Co.	1794, not stated	Brest	do.	Not stated.	Not stated.	do.	2 letters on file.
23	Brig Samuel	Alexander Black	W. Arnold. (Gibbs & Channing owners of the cargo.)	April, 1796, not stated	St. Malo	do.	do.	do.	do.	A letter on file.
24	Schooner Clara	— Lathrop	Benjamin Williams	April 9, 1797, off Tortugas	Cape Nichola Mole	do.	do.	do.	Retaken by the English	Do.
25	Ship Paragon	Thomas Marshall	P. Nichlin & Co., owners of the cargo.	1794, not stated	Not stated	Flour and staves.	15,208 00	15,208 00	Condemned	Some evidence on file.
26	Schooner Active	Nathaniel Atkins	James Crawford	January 11, 1797, off Barbadoes	Guadaloupe	Rum and sugar	1,691 00	1,691 00	Cargo condemned	Do.
27	Sloop Lucy	Not stated	Nathaniel Eaton, owner of part of the cargo.	September, 1796, not stated	do.	Horses	Not stated.	Not stated.	do.	A letter on file.
28	Schooner George, of York	— Fraiser (app'rs)	Not stated	April, 1798, not stated	do.	Not stated	do.	do.	Condemned	Evidence on file.
29	Brig Amphion	Joshua Sayer	Robert Wilson	1796, not stated	Cayenne	do.	do.	do.	do.	A letter on file.
30	Schooner Juno	William Burgess	Patton & Dykes	July 18, 1796, off Port au Prince	Leogane, (Hispaniola)	Flour, meal, and bread.	do.	do.	do.	Some evidence on file.
31	— New Jersey	— Clay	Not stated	Apparently in 1798, not stated	Not stated	Not stated	do.	do.	Detained	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
32	Brig Brothers	John Baptist Smith	Jas. Barry. (Smith & Buchanan owners of the cargo.)	1796, not stated	St. Bartholomew	Sugar moulds	Not stated	Not stated	Condemned	Some evidence on file.
33	Ship James	John Smith	Sam. & J. Smith, and S. Smith & Buchanan.	December, 1796, not stated	Guadaloupe	Flour	$16,674 00	$16,674 00	Released with loss	A letter on file.
34	Brig Abeona	Isaac Isaacs	Sam. & I. Smith, John Hollins, and Smith & Buchanan.	1797, not stated	Jean Rabel	Not stated	5,380 75	5,380 75	Escaped with loss	Do.
35	Brig Nathaniel	David Young	Gale & Young	August 1, 1797, off Cape Nichola Mole	Port de Paix	Staves, shingles, meal, &c.	Not stated	Not stated	Condemned	Evidence on file.
36	Ship Commerce	Godfrey Wood	Murray & Mumford	June 27, 1797, off the Capes of Virginia	Porto Rico	Salt, crockery ware, &c.	do.	do.	do.	Some evidence on file.
37	Ship Louisa	Holder Tallman	John Clark	February 13, 1797, off Turtle island	Jean Rabel	Staves, shingles, &c.	do.	do.	Not stated
38	Ship Fame	Joseph Brown	Hall and McClintock	March 12, 1797, off Porto Rico	Curaçoa	Sugar	5,768 64	15,463 64	Condemned	Evidence on file.
39	Brig Harmony	Samuel Clapp	Francis Becker	June 21, 1797, off Nichola Mole	Jean Rabel	Staves, hoops, &c.	5,471 60	5,864 96	do.	Do.
40	Sloop Polly	John Dunn	Henry Ball	August 27, 1796, not stated	Leogane, Hispaniola	Molasses, &c.	Not stated	1,085 00	do.	Do.
41	Brig Juno	John Walker	James Sheafe	April 10, 1797, lat. 45° 30′, long. 18°	Nantz	Rice, coffee, &c.	do.	Not stated	do.	Two letters on file.
42	Schooner Paragon	Not stated	George Taylor	April 28, 1797, not stated	Tortuga	Not stated	10,000 00	14,000 00	do.	One letter on file.
43	Schooner Juno	do	George Taylor, (one of the underwriters.)	1796, near the West India islands	Not stated	do	Not stated	86,000 00	Cargo condemned	Do.
44	Schooner Hopewell	do	do	1796 or 1797, near the West India islands.	Cape Francois	do	do
45	Brig Hope	do	do	do do	Guadaloupe	do	do
46	Brig Joseph	do	do	do do	do	do	do
47	Schooner Hannah	do	do	do do	Not stated	do	do
48	Schooner Lucy	do	do	do do	Port de Paix	do	do
49	Brig Virginia	do	do	do do	Guadaloupe	do	do
50	Schooner Rebecca	John Hall	Valck & Co	October 5, 1796, near Barbuda	St. Martin	Dry goods and groceries.	31,910 88	35,160 88	do.	Evidence on file.
51	Brig Greenfield	John Stevenson	David & Gordon Mumford	April 24, 1796, not stated	Cape Nichola Mole	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	do.	A letter on file.
52	Schooner Rebecca	Mildmay Smith	Not stated	April 26, 1796, off St. Mark's	Petit Guave	Groceries, &c.	do.	do.	Detained	Some evidence on file.
53	Brig William	James Gilmore	do	1798, near the West India islands	Aux Cayes	Not stated	do.	do.	Condemned	Two letters on file.
54	Brigantine Thomas	Not stated	Salisbury & Higginson, part owners of cargo.	1797 or 1798, not stated	A French port in the Bay of Biscay.	do.	6,908 00	6,908 00	do.	A letter on file.
55	Ship Alexander Hamilton	William Wise	John Hollins	July 6, 1798, off Little Egg Harbor	Not stated	do.	Not stated	150 00	Detained	Some evidence on file.
56	Brig Union	Abel Lunt	A. & Benjamin Frothingham	May 22, 1798, lat. 49° 1′, long. 18° 49′	Bordeaux	Sugar, coffee, and cotton.	do.	Not stated	Condemned	A letter on file.
57	Sloop Cicero	Thomas Taggart	Thomas Tennant	September 20, 1799, not stated	Cape Nichola Mole	Flour, coffee, &c.	25,491 50	29,491 50	do.	Evidence on file.
58	Sloop Cicero	William Edwards	Ezekiel Freeman	October 24, 1799, not stated.	do.	Not stated	Not stated	2,500 00	Detained	Do.
59	Schooner Polly	Knot Pedrick	Maxton & Aitchison, (owners of cargo.)	September, 1799, off Leogane, Hispaniola.	Petit Guave	Dry goods, &c	80,000 00	80,000 00	do.	Two letters on file.
60	Brig Nymph	Charles Hardy	L. Croucillat	Mar. 30, 1799, lat. 40° N., long. 30° 11′ W.	Bordeaux	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	A letter on file.
61	Schooner Minerva	—— Andall	do.	Mar. 31, 1799, lat. 40° N., long. 30° 11′ W.	do.	do.	do.	do.	do.	Do.
62	—— Elizabeth, of N. York.	Not stated	Not stated	1798 or 1799, not stated.	Not stated	do.	do.	do.	do.	Do.
63	Ship Mary, of Charleston.	do	do	do.	do.	do.	do.	do.	do.	Do.
64	—— Fame, of New York	—— Story	do	do.	do.	do.	do.	do.	do.	Do.
65	Ship Fox	Not stated	Thomas Hazard and others	do.	Guadaloupe	do.	do.	do.	Condemned	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
66	Brig Mary	Henry Pettis	John Bowery	August 6, 1799, not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Part of the crew detained.	Evidence on file.
67	Ship Confederacy	Scott Jenks	Leffingwell & Pierpont	June 4, 1797, not stated	Nantz	Tea and sugar	$400,000 00	$400,000 00	Condemned	Do.
68	Finmarken Gluckstein	Not stated	Messrs. Ketland, Walker & Phillips, (owners of the cargo.)	1796, not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Cargo taken at Leghorn	Letters on file.
69	Columba Fortunata	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
70	Brig Mary	— Titcomb	Not stated	Apparently in 1794 or 1795, not stated	do	do	do	do	Not stated	Evidence presumed to be in the consulate at Paris.
71	Ship Mary Ann	— Simpson	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
72	Schooner President	— Carhart	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
73	Schooner Active	— Drummond	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
74	Schooner Mary	— Pratt	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
75	Ship Four Friends	— Glenn	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
76	Schooner Endeavor	— Ellery	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
77	Brig Peter	— Nowell	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
78	Brig Brutus	Not stated	do	August 20, 1796, off the West India islands.	Petit Trou	Provisions, dry goods, and cash.	15,000 00	15,000 00	Put on trial	Some evidence on file.
79	Sloop Honor	Kemball	do	August 3, 1796, off the West India islands.	do	Provisions and live stock	3,000 00	3,000 00	do	Do.
80	Schooner Burnstoff	Bonavista	do	1796, apparently off the West India islands	do	do	Not stated	Not stated	Released	Do.
81	—— Charming Polly	Pritchett	do	September 4, 1796, apparently off the West India islands.	do	Coffee and cotton	25,000 00	28,500 00	Condemned	Do.
82	Sloop Nelly	Adams	do	Apparently 1796, apparently off the West India islands.	Lane a Veaux	Ballast	Not stated	Not stated	Put on trial	Do.
83	Schooner Somerset	Dellingham	do	do do	do	Salt and wine	do	do	Not stated	Do.
84	Schooner Catharine	Story	do	do do	do	Provisions, &c	do	do	Condemned	Do.
85	Schooner Rainbow	Howland	do	do do	do	Oil	do	do	Released	Do.
86	Brig Kerhappuck	Lillibridge	do	September 24, 1796, apparently off the West India islands.	Mary Guand	Provisions	12,600 00	21,600 00	Condemned	Do.
87	Brig Nancy	May	do	Apparently 1796, apparently off the West India islands.	do	Provisions and dry goods	20,000 00	25,000 00	do	Do.
88	Brig Franklin	Peck	do	do do	do	Sugar	5,400 00	9,400 00	Put on trial	Do.
89	Brig Freemason	Wyse	do	do do	do	Provisions	25,000 00	28,000 00	Not stated	Do.
90	Brig Mary	Boyle	do	do do	do	do	6,000 00	12,000 00	do	Do.
91	Brig Clio	Ball	do	do do	Petit Guave	Provisions	Not stated	Not stated	Put on trial	Do.
92	Schooner Amelia	Cochran	do	do do	do	Wine and goods	16,000 00	16,000 00	do	Do.
93	Schooner Hope	Jacobs	do	do do	do	Provisions	8,000 00	8,000 00	Not stated	Do.
94	Schooner Nymph	Sulivan	do	do do	Not stated	Not stated	10,000 00	10,000 00	do	Do.
95	Sloop Leader	Warner	do	do do	do	do	5,000 00	5,000 00	do	Do.
96	Brig Polly	Watson	do	do do	do	do	Not stated	Not stated	do	Do.
97	Brig Pearl	Webb	do	do do	do	do	6,000 00	6,000 00	do	Do.
98	Schooner Three Friends	Wilson	do	do do	Leogane, (Hispaniola)	do	24,000 00	24,000 00	Condemned	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
99	Brig Industry	Masa	Not stated	Apparently 1796, apparently off the West India islands.	Leogane, (Hispaniola)	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated.	Some evidence on file.
100	Brig Pomona	Not stated.	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
101	Brig Experiment	Huston	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
102	Brig Tuton	Flinn	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
103	Schooner Hannah, of Philadelphia.	Not stated	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
104	Schooner Nancy, of Philadelphia.	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
105	Sloop Sincerity	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
106	Schooner Alethea, of Georgetown.	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
107	Sloop Delia, of New York.	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
108	Sloop Hibernian, of New York.	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
109	Brig Charlotte	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
110	Brig Glasgow, of New York	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
111	Sloop Irona, of R. Island	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
112	Schooner Three Friends, of Charleston.	Parker	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
113	Schooner Eliza	Not stated	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
114	Schooner Liberty, of Boston	Williams	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
115	Schooner Ann Maria	Wilson	do	do	St. Jago de Cuba	Sugar	$5,000 00	$9,000 00	Put on trial	Do.
116	Wilmington Packet	Francis	do	do	do	Sugar and coffee	Not stated	3,500 00	do	Do.
117	Brig Wallwick, of Philad.	Mackutchion	do	Apparently in 1796, apparently off the West Indies.	do	Sugar	do	4,100 00	Not stated	Do.
118	Ship Success	Gorden	do	do	do	Not stated	do	Not stated	do	Do.
119	Ship Laurens	Not stated	do	In 1794 or 1795, not stated	Not stated	do	do	do	do	Evidence presumed to be at Paris.
120	Barque John	do	Simond	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
121	Schooner Lark	Lovett	Not stated	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
122	Schooner Deborah	Not stated.	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
123	Schooner Polly	Willis	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
124	Sloop Mary Ann	Brentnall	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
125	Brig William	Not stated	do	Apparently in 1794, not stated	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
126	Sloop Barrett	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
127	Ship Ellice	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
128	Ship Molly	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
129	Brig Peggy	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
130	Brig Kitty	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
131	Ship Hamilton	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
132	Ship America	Not stated	Not stated	Apparently in 1794, not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Evidence presumed to be at Paris.
133	Brig Minerva	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
134	Ship Harmony	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
135	Barque Prudence	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
136	Barque Hector	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
137	Ship Good Friend	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
138	Schooner John	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
139	Brig Sterling	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
140	Brig Elizabeth	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
141	Schooner York	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
142	Ship Little Cherub	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
143	Ship Somerset	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
144	Schooner Dairy Maid	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
145	Brig Triton	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
146	Sloop Venus	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
147	Brig George	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
148	Brig Active	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
149	Brig Samuel	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
150	Sloop Diligent	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
151	Schooner Retrieve	Jackson	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
152	Sloop Confidence	Bradbury	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
153	Sloop Jenny	Not stated	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
154	Brig Hector	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
155	Schooner John and James	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
156	Ship Commerce	Enoch Prebble	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
157	Schooner Polly	Price	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
158	Brig Nancy	Dunning	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
159	—— Cyrus	Increase Blake	Blake & Bacon	do 1798 do	Nantz	Oranges	do	do	Cargo condemned	Do.
160	—— Theresa	James Brown	Thomas Stewart	do	do	Ballast	do	do	Put on trial	Evidence on file.
161	Brig Triumph	McConnell	Not stated	do 1795 do	Not stated	Not stated	do	do	Not stated	Do.
162	Sloop Cynthia	Matby	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	A list.
163	Brig Caliope	Allin	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	A list.
164	Ship Harriott	Strong	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	A list.
165	Brig Abigail	Smith	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	A list.
166	Brig Fox	Moses Bunker	do	November 8, 1799, not stated	St. Domingo	do	do	$1,055 00	Put in requisition to convey troops.	Evidence on file.
167	Schooner Mentor	Samuel Gould	do	do do	do	do	do	365 00	Put in requisition to convey troops.	Do.
168	Ship Hope	Not stated	Thomas Lewis & Son	December, 1800, not stated	Guadaloupe	do	do	17,862 16	Condemned	A letter.
169	Ship Mary	Phillips	Jeremiah Yellott	1800, not stated	Not stated	do	do	Not stated	Not stated	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
170	Ship Delaware	Thomas Truxton	Not stated	1794, not stated	Not stated	3,000 barrels flour	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	A letter; evidence presumed to be at Paris.
171	Brig Russel	Not stated	J. G. & Thomas Blount	1796, not stated	Cape Francois	Not stated	do	do	Condemned	A letter and other papers.
172	Ship Russel	William Wood	Gibbs & Channing	1800, Fort Angue, island of Java	Not stated	do	do	do	Not stated	Do.
173	Schooner Atlantic	William West	Not stated	February, 1800, not stated	St. Domingo	Dry goods	do	do	do	Do.
174	Brigantine Ranger	John Flagg	Thomas & W. Sheaffe	May 15, 1800, not stated	Point Petre, Guadaloupe	Lumber and provisions.	$9,673 89	$15,673 89	Condemned	Evidence on file.
175	Brig Venus	Ammi Smith	Joseph Lord	October 27, 1800, not stated	St. Eustatia	Sugar, coffee, &c	Not stated	Not stated	Cargo taken	A letter.
176	Schooner Robert	Not stated	Robert Maxwell	Apparently in 1799, not stated	Gonaives	Not stated	641 81	801 88	Part of the cargo taken	Do.
177	Schooner Three Friends, of Baltimore.	do	John Ross	Apparently in 1796 or 1797, not stated	Leogane, (Hispaniola)	Sugar	Not stated	Not stated	Condemned	Do.
178	Brig Experience	James Houston	Clement & Taylor	1796, not stated	do do	Lumber and provisions.	12,111 78	19,111 78	do	Some evidence on file.
179	Brig Matilda	Gideon Leet	Warner & Co	In 1799, not stated	St. Bartholomew	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	do	A letter.
180	Brig Lyon	Robert Ilsley	Not stated	1800, not stated	Cape Nichola Mole	Lumber and provisions.	do	do	Detained	Do.
181	Ship Thomas Wilson	Not stated	J. Mitchell, (owner of cargo)	1795, not stated	Havre	Provisions	do	do	Cargo taken	Do.
182	Schooner Success	do	J. Brock, (owner of cargo)	1796, off Halifax	Not stated	Not stated	do	do	Robbed	Do.
183	Ship Alert	John Christian	Not stated	1798, not stated	Marseilles	do	do	do	Not stated	Do.
184	Schooner Lion	Henry Donnell	do	1800, not stated	Not stated	do	do	do	Burnt	Some evidence on file.
185	Brig Betsy	William Clarke	John Hollinsworth & Co	May, 1793, lat. 36° N., long. 45° W	Philadelphia	Coffee, &c	do	do	Detained	Do.
186	Schooner Marcus	Not stated	Loring and others	May 17, 1799, not stated	Campeachy	Rum and sugar	do	do	Condemned by the Spanish Government.	A letter.
187	Ship Hibernia	McDonald	James Kavenaugh & Co	In 1800, not stated	Porto Rico	Not stated	do	do	Retaken by the British	Do.
188	Brigantine Betsy	John Clarke	Joseph Perkins & Co	January 12, 1797, not stated	Guadaloupe	Lumber and provisions.	do	do	Cargo taken	Do.
189	Brig Resolution	John H. Shaherley	Brothers Coster & Co	February 18, 1793, off the Texel	Ostend	Not stated	do	do	Detained	Do.
190	Ship Eliza	John Burrowdale	Not stated	April 24, 1797, lat. 49° 17′, long. 17° W	Not stated	do	do	do	Retaken by the British	Some evidence on file.
191	Brig Valeria	Henry Stover	John Wells	January 15, 1797, Cape Maize	St. Jago de Cuba	Lumber and provisions.	12,828 13	18,379 13	Vessel and cargo taken	Evidence on file.
192	Schooner Frederick	John G. Clarke	Wattles Dotes & Co.	May 12, 1798, lat. 46° 29′, long. 14° 25′	Corunna	Gum, pepper, camwood, &c.	Not stated	Not stated	Released	Letters.
193	Brig Hope	Asa Hooper	Marston Watson	1794, off Bilboa, in Spain	Rochefort	Cocoa, dry fish, &c	do	do	Condemned	A letter.
194	Sloop Hiram	Sylvester Baldwin	Fitch & Bachus	1797, not stated	Cape Francois	Not stated	do	do	do	Do.
195	Ship Nancy	Howard Allen	Clason & Livingston	December, 1800, not stated	St. Martin	do	do	175,000 00	do	Evidence on file.
196	Sloop Betsy	William Johnson	A. S. Glass, owner of part of the cargo.	June 27, 1794, off the United States coast	Not stated	do	do	Not stated	Robbed	A letter on file.
197	Schooner York	Andrew Burke	Burke & Co.	Feb. 3, 1793, not stated.	Port au Prince	Sundry merchandises and gunpowder.	do	14,073 00	Condemned	Evidence on file.
198	—— Lydia	George Dunham	Not stated	Previous to 1801, not stated	Belle Isle	Flour	do	Not stated	Cargo condemned	Do.
199	—— John and Martha	Benjamin F. Knapp	John Wells	May 18, 1798, not stated	Malaga	Barilla and reeds	do	22,290 00	do	Do.
200	Schooner Friendship	Samuel Fisher	Joseph Shute & Co	October 30, 1800, not stated	Ordered for Porto Rico	Not stated	do	Not stated	Cast away, or ran ashore	A letter on file.
201	Ship Fair American, of N.Y.	Henry Treadwell	Not stated	Aug. 2, 1797, lat. 48° 12′ N., long. 20° 15′ W.	Not stated	do	do	do	Not stated	Do.
202	Brigantine Betsy	Timothy Baker	do	Oct. 17, 1796, lat. 20° 23′ N., long. 65° W	St. Martin	Lumber and salt fish	do	do	do	Some evidence on file.
203	Schooner Sophia	—— Miner	Taggart & Smith	April 15, 1799, not stated	Cape Francois	Lard, &c	3,021 91	5,521 91	do	Do.
204	Schooner Trial	Daniel Rope, jr	John Norris	May 13, 1798, off Guadaloupe	Basseterre	Fish, flour, &c	Not stated	Not stated	do	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
205	Ship Ann and Susan	Richard West	Stephen Kingston	1797, not stated	Curacoa	Not stated	Not stated	$16,000 00	Condemned	Some evidence on file.
206	Schooner Lively	John Burrowes	John Burrowes	Apparently in 1798, not stated	Not stated	do	do	Not stated	do	A letter on file.
207	Sloop Britannia	Not stated	Not stated	Apparently in 1796, not stated	do	do	do	do	Not stated	Do.
208	Ship Alexander Brown	do	do	Apparently in 1798, not stated	Monte Christi	do	do	do	do	Do.
209	Schooner Leander, of N. Y.	do	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
210	—— Liberty	do	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
211	Schooner Chance	Jeremiah Diman	do	April 25, 1798, off Saba	St. Thomas	Negro slaves	do	do	Recaptured by the English	Do.
212	Ship Merchant	—— Rosseter	do	May 8, 1798, off Sandy Hook	Not stated	Not stated	do	do	Not stated	Do.
213	Ship Thomas	—— Holland	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
214	Schooner Nautilus	Robert Dixon	Scott & Seamen	Apparently in 1799, not stated	Curacoa	do	$30,000 00	30,000 00	Captured, and part of the crew murdered.	Do.
215	Brig Vulture	John Berry	Richardson & Co	Dec. 18, 1798, lat. 23° 12′ N., long. 53° 30′ W.	Cape Francois	Fish, flour, beef, &c	7,000 00	9,500 00	Condemned	Evidence on file.
216	Ship William	William Mugford	William Gray	May 2, 1799, lat. 27° 59 N., long. 75° W.	Not stated	Fish, brandy, &c	Not stated	Not stated	Robbed and released	Some evidence on file.
217	Ship Eunice	Thomas Seal	John Quinby	July 7, 1797, not stated	Nantz	Salt, woolens, &c	do	do	Condemned	Do.
218	Schooner Polly	Joseph Atkins	Jonathan Merry	October 19, 1799, not stated	Port de Paix	Not stated	do	1,774 00	Put in requisition	Do.
219	Sloop Harriot	Willoughby Lynde	Not stated	do do	do	Coffee, sugar, &c	do	Not stated	do do	Do.
220	Brig Six Brothers	John Needham	Needham & Son	April 29, 1797, not stated	Guadaloupe	Ballast	do	do	Condemned	Do.
221	Sch'r Unity, of Baltimore	Jas. Wm. Latouche	Not stated	In 1795, not stated	Port de Paix	Not stated	do	do	do	Do.
222	Schooner Sally	Not stated	do	April 15, 1795, not stated	Burnt	Lumber	3,409 92	7,849 92	Burnt	Do.
223	Ship Mount Vernon	George Domonick	P. B. Oram, part owner of cargo	June 9, 1796, not stated	St. Domingo	Coffee, rum, sugar, &c	Not stated	4,122 91	Condemned	Do.
224	Schooner John	John Owen, jr.	B. M. Mumford	October, 1797, not stated	Port au Prince	Not stated	do	Not stated	Released and retaken	Do.
225	Sch'r Helena, Plumstead	Hendrick Vandym	Messrs. Loir and Chevalier	July 7, 1797, off the West Indies	Lane a Veaux	do	do	do	do do	Do.
226	Brig Electra	Pardon Almy	Not stated	September 2, 1797, off Porto Rico	Not stated	do	do	do	Robbed and released	Do.
227	Brig George	—— Tate	Messrs. Mumfords	Apparently in 1796, not stated	Cape Nichola Mole	do	do	do	Not stated	A letter on file.
228	Brig Rebecca	—— Dunberry	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
229	Schooner Royal Captain	John Bryant	John Bryant	July 30, 1796, not stated	Bologne	Gin, lace, &c	do	do	Condemned	Evidence on file.
230	Ship Rosanna	John Polland	Dunlap & Grant	November 5, 1796, not stated	La Rochelle	Sugar, molasses, &c	do	do	do	Do.
231	Ship Julianna	Thomas Heywood	Chequier & Holmead	April 26, 1797, not stated	Havre	Coffee, hides, &c	do	do	do	Do.
232	Ship Antelope	Benjamin Miller	Ebenezer Parsons	January 25, 1797, not stated	L'Orient	Cotton, rice, tobacco, &c	do	do	do	Do.
233	Ship Diana	N. J. Ingraham	Edward Swarbreck	October 23, 1796, not stated	Brest	Salt and dry goods, &c	do	do	do	Do.
234	Brig John	James Scott, jr.	Adams, Loring & Co	February 27, 1797, not stated	Morlaix	Oil, cotton, &c	do	do	do	Do.
235	Ship Sally	James Crowdhill	William Hodgson	April 27, 1797, not stated	do	Gin and ballast	do	do	do	Do.
236	Brig Leonard	William Hackett	John Wells	March 14, 1797, not stated	Brest	Sugar, cotton, coffee, &c	do	15,458 00	do	Do.
237	Brig D——	Andrew Foster	William Dixon	March 19, 1797, not stated	Morlaix	English manuf'd goods	do	Not stated	do	Do.
238	Ship Hare	Nathaniel Haley	Isaac Clason	February 17, 1797, not stated	Dieppe	do do	do	do	do	Do.
239	Ship Rainbow	William Smith	John Geyer	March 27, 1797, not stated	Nantz	Rice, cotton, &c	do	do	do	Do.
240	Brig Sally	Eden Wadsworth	Adams & Loring	June 21, 1797, not stated	Isle of Rhe	Rice, tobacco, coffee	do	do	do	Do.
241	Schooner Sally	Timothy Davis	John Babson	March 30, 1797, not stated	Dieppe	Brandy and wine	do	do	do	Do.
242	Ship William	Richard Barker	Vernon & Gardner	1797, latitude 44° 33′ N., longitude 25° 42′ W.	L'Orient	Rice, coffee, sugar	do	do	do	Some evidence on file.
243	Ship Cincinnatus	William Martin	Aquilla Brown	May 30, 1797, not stated	do	English manuf'd goods	do	do	do	Do.
244	Ship Hebe	Charles Lindergreen	Edward Swarbreck	April 19, 1797, not stated	Nantz	Cotton, rice, &c	do	do	do	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
245	Brig Catharine	Samuel Cazeneau	Messrs. Davenports	May 17, 1797, not stated	Nantz	Tobacco	Not stated	Not stated	Condemned	Some evidence on file.
246	Ship Briseis	James Breath	Messrs. Rutgers and Seamen.	May 28, 1797, not stated	do	Sugar and coffee	do	do	do	Do.
247	Ship Oneida	David Scharry	Messrs. Jackson, Buckley & Co.	May 25, 1797, not stated	do	Turpentine, tobacco, &c	do	do	do	Do.
248	—— John and James	James Johnson	Not stated	Apparently in 1797, not stated	Corunna	Not stated	do	do	Not stated	Do.
249	—— Mary	—— Curtis	do	Apparently in 1797, not stated	Nantz	Fish	do	do	Condemned	Do.
250	Brig American Hero	Alex. McDougal	Alexander McDougal	June 10, 1797, not stated	do	Flour, rice, and staves	do	do	do	Do.
251	Ship Ohio	—— McLackland.	Smith & Wykoff	Apparently 1797, not stated	L'Orient	Tar, pitch, and cotton	do	do	do	Do.
252	Ship Raven	Charles Riley	Savage & Murgetroyd	June 29, 1797, not stated	do	Sugar, nankeen, &c	do	do	do	Do.
253	Ship Ceres	Roswell Roath	Dunham, Willet & Roath	July 1, 1797, not stated	La Rochelle	Coffee, sugar, &c	do	do	do	Do.
254	Ship Bacchus	George Rich	Campbell & Brewer	July 3, 1797, not stated	Nantz	Molasses, rice, &c	do	do	do	Do.
255	Ship Light Horse	John Haff	Ingraham & Sands	June 24, 1797, not stated	do	Millstones, slates, &c	do	do	do	Do.
256	Schooner Sally	Benjamin Russel	Nathan Poor & Co.	June 24, 1797, not stated	do	Fish and pepper	do	do	do	Do.
257	—— Phœnix	George Repold	Albert le Camp	January 10, 1798, not stated	L'Orient	Not stated	do	do	Not stated	Do.
258	—— Freemason	—— Bunker	Not stated	July 24, 1797, not stated	Paimpol	Coffee and tobacco	do	do	do	Do.
259	Brig Charleston	Daniel Reed	Thomas Morris	July 21, 1797, not stated	L'Orient	Tobacco, rice, and sugar	do	do	Condemned	Do.
260	Brig Mary, of Boston	John Choates	John Choates	Apparently 1797, not stated	Nantz	Cotton, sugar, and coffee	do	do	do	Do.
261	Ship Columbia	Samuel Lathrop	Leffingwell & Kelly	Apparently 1797, not stated	do	Cotton, sugar, & tobacco	do	do	do	Do.
262	Ship Mercury, of Phila	Thomas Keown	Colbreath & Keown	June 22, 1797, not stated	do	Tobacco and staves	do	do	do	Do.
263	Brig Carolina	William Morton	Edward Jones	July, 1797, not stated	Bayonne	Rice	do	do	do	Do.
264	Brig Washington	Jacob Graham	Bird & Barrow	July 21, 1797, not stated	Bordeaux	Dry goods and coal	do	do	do	Do.
265	Ship Venus	Robert Birrell	Bryson & Birrell	August 5, 1797, not stated	do	Earthenware, &c	do	do	do	Do.
266	Brig Mary, of Boston	Jediah Southworth	David Tilden	August 22, 1797, not stated	Isle of Rhe	64 pipes of brandy	do	do	do	Do.
267	—— Mary, of New York	Robert Holmes	Seton Maitland & Co	Apparently 1797, not stated	Nantz	Sugar, coffee, &c	do	do	do	Do.
268	Ship John and Richard	Edmund Nowland	Edmund Nowland	December 1, 1797, not stated	La Rochelle	Sugar, china, &c	do	do	do	Do.
269	Ship Sally	Seth Webber	Webber & Page	January 2, 1797, not stated	Brest	Butter and feathers	do	do	do	Do.
270	Ship Friendship	Thomas Orange	Scrouppel & Orange	October 26, 1797, not stated	L'Orient	Coffee, sugar, &c	do	do	do	Do.
271	Ship South Carolina	Andrew Robinson	Tunno, Coffyn & Co.	December 28, 1797, not stated	do	Dry goods	do	do	do	Do.
272	Brig Amiable Matilda	William Brown	Yard, Ketland & Co	October, 1797, not stated	Bayonne	Cocoa	do	do	do	Do.
273	Ship Federalist	John Pratt	Junno & Cox	December, 1797, not stated	do	Sugar, coffee, &c	do	do	do	Evidence of the claim on file.
274	Brig Fanny and Betsy	Nicholas Sherlock	William Pennock	December 24, 1797, not stated	Paimpol	do	do	do	do	Do.
275	Ship Bristol	Edward Smith	Thomas Smith	January 10, 1798, not stated	Morlaix	Ballast	do	do	do	Do.
276	Sloop Joel Barlow	Hugh Williams	Not stated	Apparently in 1797, not stated	Roscoff	Cotton, fruit and nankeens.	do	do	do	Do.
277	Schooner Eagle	Russel Hubbard	John Howard & Co	November 14, 1797, not stated	L'Orient	Coals and potatoes	do	do	do	Do.
278	Brig Mary	Alexander Ross	Scoby	August, 1797, not stated	Bayonne	Fish, oil, &c	do	do	do	Do.
279	Brig Mercury	—— Dixey	Dixey	December, 1797, not stated	do	Sugar and oil	do	do	do	Do.
280	Ship Madison	—— Hancock	J. Skinner & Son	January 19, 1798, not stated	L'Orient	Salt	do	do	do	Do.
281	Brig Industry	—— Smith	Not stated	Apparently in 1797, not stated	Roscoff	Dry goods	do	do	do	Do.
282	Schooner Experiment	John Worth	William Young	do	Paimpol	Brandy	do	do	do	Do.
283	Ship Leeds's Packet	Richard Bunce	Not stated	do	do	Tobacco and rice	do	do	Not stated	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
284	Brig Pilgrim	—— Chissel	Hilton	Apparently in 1797, not stated	St. Jean de Luc	Black pepper, &c	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Evidence of the claim on file.
285	Brig Maria	—— Taylor	Dl. Sargent	do do	Not stated	Oil and rum	do	do	do	Do.
286	Ship James and William.	—— Wonnycoot	Not stated	do do	Roscoff	Tar and turpentine	do	do	Condemned	Do.
287	Brig Lydia	Thomas Ansdell	do	February 24, 1798, not stated	Brest	Rice, sugar, &c	do	do	Not stated	Do.
288	Barque Pomona	John Craft	Head & Amory	May 8, 1797, not stated	Carthagena	Brandy	do	do	Condemned	Do.
289	Brig Telemachus	William Plumer	Ebenezer Parsons	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
290	Schooner Abigail	James Atwood	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
291	—— Kitty and Nelly	—— Church	James Clark	Apparently in 1797, not stated	Not stated	Tobacco, rice and sugar	do	do	Not stated	Do.
292	Ship Columbus	Joseph Skinner	Isaac Clason & Co	March 7, 1798, not stated	La Rochelle	Coffee, logwood, &c	do	do	do	Do.
293	Ship Three Sisters	Christopher Wood	Not stated	April, 1798, not stated	Bayonne	Salt, coal and dry goods	do	do	do	Do.
294	Ship Eagle	Samuel Brook	William Smith	Apparently in 1797, not stated	Isle de Rhe	Rice and cotton	do	do	do	Do.
295	—— Bost, of Boston	Josiah Barned	T. K. Jones & Bass	do do	Not stated	Rice, cotton and logwood	do	do	do	Do.
296	Sch'r Harmony, of Gloucester.	—— Brown	Not stated	October, 1797, not stated	Port de Paix	Not stated	do	do	Released	Do.
297	Sch'r John, of Norfolk	Thomas Law	do	1797, not stated	Jean Rabel	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
298	Sch'r Nymph, of Baltimore	Thomas Makimion	do	October, 1797, not stated	Not stated	do	do	do	Put in commission	Do.
299	Sch'r Nancy, of Boston	Jabez Barney	do	Apparently in 1797, not stated	do	do	do	do	Released	Do.
300	Sch'r Patriot, of Philadel'a.	Abner Amuet	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
301	Boat Mermaid	—— McCallan	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
302	Boat Hope, of Charleston.	Benjamin Buell	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Released	Do.
303	Sch'r Polly, of Baltimore.	—— Booth	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
304	Brig Active, of Philadel'a.	William Williams	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
305	Brig Two Brothers, of Wilmington.	Alexander Foster	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
306	Sch'r Apollo, of N. York	Rich'd W. Richards	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
307	Sch'r Friends, of Baltimore	James Helm	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
308	Boat Dolphin, of Philadel'a	Samuel Holt	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Released	Do.
309	Schooner Betsy, of Boston.	—— Vincent	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
310	Do do	William Cazneau	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
311	—— Diana, of Alexandria.	Henry Nicholl	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Released	Do.
312	Boat of the Brig Harriet, of Philadelphia.		do	do do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
313	Schooner St. John	Anthony Gaspord	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Evidence on file.
314	Boat Laura, of Charleston.	Thomas Wilcox	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Released	Do.
315	Ship Nancy, of Norfolk	Henry Dickson	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
316	Schooner Paragon	John Montgomery	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
317	Brig Grace	Robert Lawrence	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
318	Brig Wm. Pennock	Robert Hatton	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
319	Boat Mary, of Wilmington	Samuel Bodish	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Released	Do.
320	Brig Nancy, of Newbern	Alexander Duguid	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
321	Schooner Happy Return..	Not stated.....	Not stated.....	Apparently in 1797, not stated	Not stated.....	Not stated.....	Not stated...	Not stated....	Condemned.....	Evidence on file.
322	Schooner Gravenhorst....	Washburn.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Released	Do.
323	Schr. Kitty, of Philadel'a.	Rufus Green.....	....do	.....do.....do	.. .do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
324	Schr. Mountain Leader...	Samuel Sergeant...	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Condemned.....	Do.
325	Brig Juno, of Boston.....	Henry Alkins.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	.. .do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
326	Boat Discovery..... ...	Noble Perry	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
327	Brig Aurora.....	Nichol Vincent.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
328	Schooner Friendship.....	Stephen Sellock...	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	. ..do	....do	Released	Do.
329	Schooner Lovely Lady...	Edward Johnson...	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Condemned.....	Do.
330	Brig Betsy, of New London	Zeb. Barham.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	... do	Do.
331	Schr. L'Halantee, of Bos'n	William Cotte.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	.... do	....do	Do.
332	Brig Saler Levent, of Norf'k	John Kerbee.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
333	Brig Lehebeau, of Baltim'e	Baptist Mezech....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
334	Brig Eunice, of New York	Obed Ramsdell.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	... do	....do	....do	Released.....	Do.
335	Brig Industry	Richard Bishop....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	... do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
336	Schooner Thetis.....	Thomas Love.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
337	Brig Dolphin.....	James Gorham.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Condemned..	Do.
338	Brig Alexander.....	William Booth.....	... do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
339	Brig Sally and Betsy.....	Wilson Hubbell....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	...do	....do	....do	Do.
340	Schr. Polly, of Boston....	Jones Jarvin.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	. ..do	....do	....do	Do.
341	Brig Hope, of New York..	James Fusel.....	....do	.....do. .....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
342	Brig Sisters	Gilbert Thiser	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
343	Schooner Regulator.....	Mildmay Smith.....	...do	.....do.....do	...do	...do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
344	Schooner Mary Eliza.....	Michael Parsons...	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Released	Do.
345	Boat N. Y. & Phila. Packet	Ressel.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
346	Schr. Lark, of Baltimore.	James Boyd	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
347	Boat Citizen, of Boston...	George McClellan..	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
348	Snow Pallas, of N. York.	Noah Wyatt.....	... do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
349	Schr. Table, of New York.	John D. Turnbull ..	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Condemned.....	Do.
350	Schr. Regulator, of Wash'n	Williams.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Released.....	Do.
351	Boat Fair American.....	I. Hood	....do	.....do.....do	...do	....do	....do	....do	Condemned.....	Do.
352	Boat President.....	Malbie	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
353	Schooner Maria, of Phila.	Richard Flinn	....do	. ....do..... .....do	....do	.... do	....do	....do	Released.....	Do.
354	Schooner Evelina	Peter Giffe	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
355	—— Abigail, of Portland .	Samuel Robinson...	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Condemned.....	Do.
356	Brig Julius Cæsar	B. Ward	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Released	Do.
357	Brig Adventure	Zebn. Hunt.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
358	Boat Justina.....	—— Briggs	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
359	Schooner Louis.....	Amasa Sawyer	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	....do	Do.
360	Schooner Yeatman	Roger Crane.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	... do	....do	Do.
361	Schooner Fairplay	Holder Hocum.....	....do	.....do.....do	....do	....do	....do	...do	...do	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
362	Schooner Maria	Alexd. Hare	Not stated	Apparently 1797, not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Released	Evidence on file.
363	Brig Ann, of New York	John Burnham	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
364	Brig Eliza, of Philadelphia	Christop'r O'Conner	do	do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
365	Boat Perfect, of Phila	Thomas Van Meek	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
366	Ship Charlotte	James Lindsey	I. H. Large & Co	April 10, 1797, not stated	Nantz	Rice, cotton, &c	$62,212 94	$64,212 94	do	Do.
367	John, of Richmond	Edward Watson	John Banks	Apparently 1799, not stated	Nantz	Tobacco and staves	Not stated	Not stated	do	Do.
368	Thomas, of Portsmouth	Thomas McFernald	Thomas Manning	Apparently 1798, not stated	Sables	Dry goods	do	do	do	Do.
369	Fanny, of Salem	Jesse Smith	John Derby	do	Nantz	Not stated	do	do	Not stated	Do.
370	Delight, of New York	James Henshaw	H. A. & I. G. Castor	do	Paimpol	West India produce	do	do	Released	Do.
371	Statiza, of Portsmouth	John Seawood	Thomas Manning	do	Nantz	Mahogany and logwood	do	do	Cargo condemned	Do.
372	Rudolph Frederick, of Boston.	R. H. Croker	—— Geyer	Apparently 1800, not stated	Paimpol	West India produce	do	do	do	Do.
373	Winyaw, of New York	R. M. Steele	T. H. Thompson	do	Brest	East India produce	do	do	do	Do.
374	Tom, of Boston	John Bailey	Thomas English	do	Not stated	Rum, cochineal, &c	do	do	Not stated	Do.
375	Fox	David Norie	Latting & Deal	Apparently 1797 or 1798, not stated	Apparently in Nantz	Tobacco, turpentine, &c	11,025 25	24,485 75	Cleared	Do.
376	Brigantine Betsy	William Furlong	Clabot & Glennie	March 20, 1794, not stated	Not stated	Sugar and coffee	17,394 58	23,610 58	Condemned	Do.
377	Ester, of Beverley	Zachariah Morgan	Not stated	Apparently in 1800, not stated	Corogne	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	do	Do.
378	Success	E. Lowe	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	Not stated	do	do	do	Sold to the Government and not paid.	Do.
379	Industry	I. Snow	do	do	do	do	do	2,608 50	Part of the cargo sold and not paid.	Do.
380	Theodosia	Jo. Justice	do	do	do	do	Not stated	Not stated	Condemned	Do.
381	Genet	E. Wales	do	do	do	Hemp	8,128 34	8,128 34	Cargo condemned	Do.
382	Oneida	Sheffield	do	do	do	Belle Isle	Flour	41,306 61	41,306 61	do
383	Swanick	I. Yonger	do	do	do	Not stated	Not stated	9,974 75	9,974 75	Condemned
384	Olive Branch	Buffington	do	do	do	do	do	13,642 08	13,642 08	do
385	Iris	Parker	do	do	do	do	do	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated
386	Henry	Hodge	do	do	do	Morlaix	do	do	2,220 00	Condemned
387	Betsy	Murphy	do	do	do	Guadaloupe	do	do	Not stated	Cargo condemned
388	Pigon	H. Green	do	do	do	Not stated	do	do	134,104 05	Released
389	Jane	Cowell	do	do	do	Havre	do	do	Not stated	Detained
390	Fame	Coleman	do	In 1793, not stated	L'Orient	do	do	do	Not stated	Do.
391	Mary	Halley	do	do	Brest	do	do	do	Cargo condemned	Do.
392	Hero	Blount	do	do	Cherbourg	do	do	do	do	Do.
393	Abigail	George Dunham	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	L'Orient	do	do	do	Released	Do.
394	Cleopatra	Donavan	do	do	Not stated	do	do	19,725 00	Condemned	Do.
395	Von Knoren	Gravell	do	1793, not stated	Morlaix	do	do	Not stated	do	Do.
396	Sally	Jo. Hall	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	Guadaloupe	do	do	29,908 10	Cargo condemned	Do.
397	Apollo	McGruder	do	do	Not stated	do	do	1,825 00	Detained	Do.
398	Union	Beard	do	1793, not stated	Cherbourg	do	do	16,425 00	Released	Do.
399	Governor Mifflin	Not stated	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	Not stated	do	do	Not stated	Not stated	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vesssel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
400	Ruth	Peters	Not stated	1793, not stated	Rochefort	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Released	Evidence on file.
401	Friendship	Holney	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	Not stated	do	do	do	Detained	Do.
402	Mercury	Todd	do	1793, not stated	Morlaix	do	do	do	Released	Do.
403	Ann and Susanne	Lane	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	Not stated	do	do	do	Cargo taken	Do.
404	Suffolk	P. West	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
405	Sally	Stone	do	do do	do	do	do	do	Detained	Do.
406	Geruka	Giles	do	do do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
407	Minerva	Wood	do	do do	St. Louis, St. Domingo	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
408	Pratt	Hawkins	do	do do	Point Petre, Guadaloupe	do	do	do	do	Do.
409	Ann	Coleman	do	do do	Bordeaux	Wine	do	do	Cargo taken	Do.
410	Yorick & Teresa	Not stated	do	do do	Petit Goave, St. Domingo	Not stated	do	do	Condemned	Do.
411	Hamilton	Rodman	do	do do	Not stated	do	do	do	Detained	Do.
412	Lucy	Bailey	do	do do	St. Domingo	do	do	do	Cargo taken	Do.
413	Matsy	King	do	do do	Polverol, St. Domingo	do	do	do	Cargo taken and vessel detained.	Do.
414	Atalanta	Houston	do	1794, not stated	Guadaloupe,	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
415	Ship Favorite	Brown	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	Port au Prince	do	do	do	do	Do.
416	Sophia	Willing	do	1794, not stated	Havre	do	do	do	Released	Do.
417	Rambler	Einathan	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	Not stated	do	do	do	Recaptured	Do.
418	Harmony	Demphy	do	1795, not stated	Petit Goave	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
419	Sally & Robin	Not stated	do	1793, not stated	Cape Francois	do	do	do	Cargo burnt	Do.
420	Juno	Maxwell	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	St. Domingo	do	do	do	Cargo taken	Do.
421	James	Delastrande	do	do do	Not stated	do	do	do	Vessel lost by detention	Do.
422	Unis	Carlton	do	1795, not stated	Brest	do	do	do	Detained	Do.
423	William	Henderson	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	Not stated	do	do	do	Robbed	Do.
424	Margaret	Dalton	do	1794, not stated	Dominica	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
425	Juno	Brice	do	1793, not stated	Rocheforte	do	do	do	Detained	Do.
426	Allice	Gould	do	do	St. Lucia	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
427	Maria	K. Welch	do	Previous to 1801, not stated	St. Michael's	do	do	do	Detained	Do.
428	Thomas	Salter	do	do do	Not stated	do	do	do	Put in requisition	Do.
429	Republican	J. Simpson	do	1800, not stated	Corunna	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
430	Peggy	G. Davidson	do	do	Gijon	do	do	do	Released	Do.
431	Portland	Polland	do	do	Not stated	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
432	Polly	Tufts	do	do	do	do	do	do	Released	Do.
433	Ruby	Luke Keefe	do	do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
434	Pearl	William Lattimer	do	do	do	do	do	do	Released	Do.
435	Kitty	Charles Carter	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
436	Woodrop Sims	Hodgson	do	do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.
437	Parkham	Markmillan	do	do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
438	Ruby	Girard	do	do	do	do	do	do	Detained	Do.
439	Columbia	Felix Coran	do	do	do	do	do	do	Condemned	Do.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

No. of claim.	Description and name of vessel.	Captain's name.	Owner's name.	When and where captured.	What port carried into for adjudication.	Description of cargo.	Amount.	Probable aggregate amount of claim.	How disposed of.	Remarks.
440	Ann	Lord	Not stated	1800, not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Not stated	Condemned	Evidence on file.
441	Retrieve	Johns.	do	do	do	do	do	do	Compromised	Do.
442	Brig Daniel and Mary	Not stated.	do	January 1, 1800, not stated	Port au Prince	do	do	do	Released with loss	Do.
443	Schooner Juno	do	do	April 4, 1800, not stated	Not stated	do	do	do	Recaptured	A letter on file.
444	Ship Minerva	do	Obed & Mitchell	October, 1800, lat. 24° N., lon. 57° 30′ W	do	Whale oil	do	do	Retaken by the British	Do.

Bartholomew Sarazin, property destroyed by the French at Cape Francois, St. Domingo, June 20, 1793, and other losses	$13,284 00
T. R. Livingston, contracts for leather previous to 1801, "part paid, part liquidated, and part pending"	Not stated.
H. Sadler, contracts for leather previous to 1801 remaining due	186,811 70
Louis Bernard, advances for building a hospital previous to 1801	Not stated.
James Grubb, for "supplies furnished at St. Domingo" in 1793	17,476 58
Falconer, Forman & Co., for "supplies furnished in 1796"	Not stated.
Vose & Graves, two bills of exchange drawn on Citizen Genet, dated June 26, 1793, not paid	Not stated.
Sadler & Pitcairn, contracts for hemp and iron, &c., in 1797	97,274 59
McCormick & Co., cargoes taken by the Administration at Cape Francois previous to 1800	91,500 00
John Teasdale, sr., two bills of exchange on the French Marine at Paris in 1793	8,427 67
Dupoy & Co., 8,000 pounds of coffee taken at Jaen-Rabel in 1799	1,600 00
Emerson & Manwaring, claim for a part of the freight of a cargo of the ship General Wayne delivered at Brest in 1795 or 1796	Not stated.

B.—LIST OF SPOLIATIONS—Continued.

RECAPITULATION.

Names of vessels.	Probable Am't.	Names of vessels.	Probable Am't.
3. Schooner Two Sisters	$18,593 08	98. Schooner Three Friends	$24,000 00
5. Brig Gayoso	2,386 90	115. Schooner Ann Maria	9,000 00
7. Ship Hope	23,000 00	116. Wilmington Packet	3,500 00
8. Snow Jenny	5,550 00	117. Brig Wallwick	4,100 00
14. Schooner Union	2,000 00	166. Brig Fox	1,055 00
17. Brig Mary	18,000 00	167. Schooner Mentor	365 00
18. Barque Providence	5,000 00	168. Ship Hope	17,862 16
19. Sloop James	17,600 00	174. Brigantine Ranger	15,673 89
20. Brig Penelope	12,000 00	176. Schooner Robert	801 88
21. Brig Molly	2,500 00	178. Brig Experience	19,111 78
25. Ship Paragon	15,208 00	191. Brig Valeria	18,379 13
26. Schooner Active	1,691 00	195. Ship Nancy	175,000 00
33. Ship James	16,674 00	197. Schooner York	14,073 06
34. Brig Abeona	5,380 75	199. John and Martha	22,290 00
38. Ship Fame	15,468 64	203. Schooner Sophia	5,521 91
39. Brig Harmony	5,864 96	205. Ship Ann and Susan	16,000 00
40. Sloop Polly	1,085 00	214. Schooner Nautilus	30,000 00
42. Schooner Paragon	14,000 00	215. Brig Vulture	9,500 00
43. Schooner Juno		218. Schooner Polly	1,774 00
44. Schooner Hopewell		222. Schooner Sally	7,849 92
45. Brig Hope	86,000 00	223. Ship Mount Vernon	4,122 91
46. Brig Joseph		236. Brig Leonard	15,458 00
47. Schooner Hannah		366. Ship Charlotte	64,212 94
48. Schooner Lucy		375. —— Fox	24,485 75
49. Brig Virginia		376. Brigantine Betsy	23,610 58
50. Schooner Rebecca	36,160 88	379. —— Industry	2,608 50
54. Brigantine Thomas	6,908 00	381. —— Genet	8,128 34
55. Ship Alexander Hamilton	150 00	382. —— Oneida	41,306 61
57. Sloop Cicero	29,491 50	383. —— Swanick	9,974 75
58. Sloop Cicero	2,500 00	384. —— Olive Branch	13,642 08
59. Schooner Polly	80,000 00	386. —— Henry	2,220 00
67. Ship Confederacy	400,006 00	388. —— Pigon	134,104 05
78. Brig Brutus	15,000 00	394. —— Cleopatra	19,725 00
79. Sloop Honor	3,000 00	396. —— Sally	29,908 10
81. —— Charming Polly	28,500 00	397. —— Apollo	1,825 00
86. Brig Kerhappuck	21,600 00	398. —— Union	16,425 00
87. Brig Nancy	25,000 00	Bartholomew Sarazin's claim	13,284 00
88. Brig Franklin	9,400 00	H. Sadler's claim	186,811 70
89. Brig Freemason	28,000 00	James Grubb's claim	17,476 58
90. Brig Mary	12,000 00	Sadler & Pitcairn's claim	97,274 59
92. Schooner Amelia	16,000 00	McCormick & Co.'s claim	92,500 00
93. Schooner Hope	8,000 00	Claim of John Teasdale, senior	8,427 67
94. Schooner Nymph	10,000 00	Dupoy & Co.'s claim	1,600 00
95. Sloop Leader	5,000 00
97. Brig Pearl	6,000 00	Total	2,235,702 59

NOTE.—The above recapitulated cases, it will be perceived, do not embrace more than one-fifth of the whole number inserted on this list.

STATE DEPARTMNET, City of Washington, January 22, 1827.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 454. [2D SESSION.

TREATY OF AMITY, COMMERCE, AND NAVIGATION WITH MEXICO.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE, IN EXECUTIVE SESSION, FEBRUARY 12, 1827.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit to the Senate, for their advice with regard to its ratification, a treaty between the United States and the Mexican Confederation, signed by the plenipotentiaries of the respective Governments on the 10th of July last. It will be seen by its terms that, if ratified by both parties, the ratifications are to be exchanged at this city on or before the tenth day of next month. The ratification on the part of the Government of Mexico has not yet been received, though it has probably before this been effected. To avoid all unnecessary delay the treaty is now communicated to the Senate, that it may receive all the deliberation which, in their wisdom, it may require, without pressing upon their time at a near approach to the close of their session. Should they advise and consent to its ratification, that measure will still be withheld until the ratification by the Mexican Government shall have been ascertained. A copy of the treaty is likewise transmitted, together with the documents appertaining to the negotiation.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, February 8, 1827.

Extract from letter No. 1 of Mr. Clay to Mr. Poinsett, appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Mexico, dated Department of State, March 25, 1825.

"The mission on which the President wishes you, with all practicable despatch, to depart would at any time be highly important, but possesses at this moment a peculiar interest. Everywhere on this continent, but on the side of the United Mexican States, the United States are touched by the colonial territories of some sovereign authority fixed in Europe. You are the first minister actually leaving the United States to reside near a sovereign Power established and exerted on this continent whose territories are coterminous with our own. You will probably be the first minister received by that Power from any foreign State, except from those which have recently sprung out of Spanish America. The United Mexican States, whether we regard their present posture, or recall to our recollection their ancient history and fortunes, are entitled to high consideration. In point of population, position, and resources, they must be allowed to rank among the first Powers of America. In contemplating the progress in them towards civilization which the aborigines had made at the epoch of the Spanish invasion, and the incidents connected with the Spanish conquest which ensued, an irresistible interest is excited, which is not surpassed, if it be equalled, by that which is awakened in perusing the early history of any other part of America. But what gives, with the President, to your mission peculiar importance at this time is, that it has, for its principal object, to lay, for the first time, the foundations of an intercourse of amity, commerce, navigation, and neighborhood, which may exert a powerful influence for a long period upon the prosperity of both States.

"In more particularly inviting your attention to the objects which should engage it on your mission, I will, in the first place, refer you to the general instructions which were given by my predecessor, on the 27th of May, 1823, to Mr. Anderson, the minister of the United States at Colombia, of which a copy is annexed, and which are to be considered as incorporated in these. So far as they are applicable alike to the condition of Colombia and of Mexico, and shall not be varied in this or subsequent letters, you will view them as forming a guide for your conduct. In that letter, of the 27th of May, the principles which have regulated the course of this Government in respect to the contest between Spanish America and Spain, from its origin, are clearly stated, explained, and vindicated, and the bases of those upon which it is desirable to place the future intercourse between the United States and the several Governments which have been established in Spanish America are laid down; so that, although that letter was intended to furnish instructions for the American minister deputed to one of those Governments only, it should be contemplated as unfolding a system of relations which it is expedient to establish with all of them.

"From that letter, as well as from notorious public facts, it clearly appears that the people and the Government of the United States have alike, throughout all the stages of the struggle between Spain and her former colonies, cherished the warmest feelings and the strongest sympathies towards the latter; that the establishment of their independence and freedom has been anxiously desired; that the recognition of that independence was made as early as it was possible, consistently with those just considerations of policy and duty which this Government felt itself bound to entertain towards both parties; and that, in point of fact, with the exception of the act of the Portuguese-Brazilian Government, to which it was prompted by self-interest, and which preceded that of the United States only a few months, this Government has been the first to assume the responsibility and encounter the hazard of recognizing the Governments which have been formed out of Spanish America. If there ever were any ground for imputing tardiness to the United States in making that recognition as it respects other parts of what was formerly Spanish America, there is not the slightest pretext for such a suggestion in relation to Mexico; for within a little more than a year after its independence was proclaimed the United States hastened to acknowledge it. They have never claimed, and do not now claim, any peculiar favor or concession to their commerce or navigation as the consideration of the liberal policy which they have observed towards those Governments. But the President does confidently expect that the priority of movement on our part, which has disconcerted plans which the European allies were contemplating against the independent Governments, and has, no doubt, tended to accelerate similar acts of recognition by the European Powers, and especially that of Great Britain, will form a powerful motive with our southern neighbors, and particularly with Mexico, for denying to the commerce and navigation of those European States any favors or privileges which shall not be equally extended to us. In pursuance of the instructions given to Mr. Anderson, a general convention of peace, amity, navigation, and commerce was concluded and signed at Bogota on the 3d of October, 1824. Its ratification has been consented to and advised by the Senate of the United States, but the ratifications have not yet been exchanged, in consequence of the unavoidable delay which has arisen in the transmission of its anticipated ratification on the part of Colombia to her minister here. A copy of that convention will accompany these instructions, and it will serve to assist you in the formation of the treaty which it is expected you will be able to conclude at Mexico.

"The basis of the regulations of the commerce and navigation of the United States and Colombia which that convention assumes is that of extending to them, respectively, the rule of the most favored nation. To that rule there are some objections, and the President would therefore prefer, and you are accordingly instructed to endeavor to get substituted for it, that of placing the commerce and navigation of the two countries on the more liberal footing of reciprocity between the resident citizen and the foreigner, which is provided for by the act of January 7, 1824, passed since the instructions to Mr. Anderson were prepared. The rule of the most favored nation may not be, and scarcely ever is, equal in its operation between two contracting parties. It could only be equal if the measure of voluntary concession by each of them to the most favored third Power were precisely the same; but as that rarely happens, by referring the citizens of the two contracting Powers to such a rule the fair competition between them, which ought always to be a primary object, is not secured, but, on the contrary, those who belong to the nation which has shown least liberality to other nations are enabled to engross almost the entire commerce and navigation carried on between the two contracting Powers. The rule of the most favored nation is not so simple as the proposed substitute. In order to ascertain the quantum of favor which, being granted to the commerce and navigation of one nation, is claimed by another, in virtue of a treaty stipulation embracing that principle, it is necessary that the claimant should be accurately informed of the actual state of the commercial relations between the nation on which the claim of equal favor is preferred and all the rest of the commercial world. A knowledge of those relations must be sometimes sought after in numerous treaties, statutes, orders, decrees, and other regulations, and is often of very difficult attainment. When acquired, it is not always very easy to distinguish between what was a voluntary grant and that which was a concession by one party for an equivalent yielded by the other. Sometimes the equivalent for the alleged favor proceeding from the one party may be diffused throughout all the stipulations in the treaty by the other, and is to be extracted only after a careful view and comparison of the whole of them. Not unfrequently the equivalent may not even be clearly deducible from the instrument itself conveying the supposed favor. Peculiar considerations may lead to the grant of what, on a first impression, might be conceived to be a voluntary favor, but which has really been founded upon a received equivalent; and these considerations may sometimes apply to the entire commerce and navigation of a country, and at others to particular ports only. Examples of the latter description are to be found in the Louisiana treaty, (see Laws U. S., vol. 1, page 134,) by the 7th article of which, in respect to New Orleans and other ports of that province, privileges were secured, for the space of twelve years, to the ships of France and Spain, and their cargoes, exclusive of all other nations; and by the 15th article of the treaty with Spain, which was signed on the 22d day of February, 1819, (see 6th vol. of U. S. Laws, page 614,) like exclusive privileges were secured to Spanish vessels and their cargoes, for the term of twelve years, in the ports of Pensacola and St. Augustine. From some or all of these causes it so happens that, in the practical application of the rule of the most favored nation, perplexing and embarrassing discussions sometimes arise; and there are not wanting instances of such discussions in our own intercourse and correspondence with foreign Powers. It is better to avoid sowing the seeds of all collisions and misunderstandings, and that desirable object the President thinks will be best accomplished by adopting a plain and familiar rule for the two parties themselves, instead of referring each of them to that complicated rule which may happen to exist between either and third parties. By placing the admission into the ports of Mexico of a vessel of the United States and her cargo, being of their produce or manufacture, upon the same footing with the admission into those ports of a like cargo imported in a vessel owned by a resident citizen of Mexico, and vice versa, the simplicity which it is desirable the rule should possess will be secured, and all causes of misunderstanding be prevented. The President does not anticipate that you will experience any difficulty in impressing upon the United Mexican Government the very great liberality which characterizes the act of January 7, 1824, and, in making it, perceive the utility of engrafting on the treaty which you are expected to conclude the principle of that act. It has been already embraced by several of the European Powers, and been mutually extended to the commerce and navigation between them and the United States. He wishes it applied as extensively as practicable to all the commercial world, and he would see with regret that any of the Governments of America should be behind any European Power in acting on such a scale of enlightened liberality. Nevertheless, if all your efforts should be unavailing to carry to the Mexican Government a conviction of the expediency of the proposed principle and the propriety of treating on it, you are then at liberty to conclude a convention comprehending the rule for the regulation of the commerce and navigation of the two countries which was incorporated in the late Colombian treaty. It is hardly necessary to remark that both principles leave the respective parties entirely free to impose such duties of impost and tonnage as they may think proper. A full power for negotiating concerning matters of commerce and navigation accompanies these instructions.

"You will bring to the notice of the Mexican Government the message of the late President of the United States to their Congress on the 2d of December, 1823, asserting certain important principles of intercontinental law in the relations of Europe and America. The first principle asserted in that message is, that the American continents are not henceforth to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Powers. In the maintenance of that principle all the independent Governments of America have an interest, but that of the United States has probably the least. Whatever foundation may have existed three centuries ago, or even at a later period, when all this continent was under European subjection, for the establishment of a rule, founded on priority of discovery and occupation, for apportioning among the Powers of Europe parts of this continent, none can now be admitted as applicable to its present condition. There is no disposition to disturb the colonial possessions, as they may now exist, of any of the European Powers, but it is against the establishment of new European colonies upon this continent that the principle is directed. The countries in which any such new establishments might be attempted are now open to the enterprise and commerce of all Americans; and the justice or propriety cannot be recognized of arbitrarily limiting and circumscribing that enterprise and commere by the act of voluntarily planting a new colony, without the consent of America, under the auspices of foreign Powers belonging to another and a distant continent. Europe would be indignant at any American attempt to plant a colony on any part of her shores; and her justice must perceive, in the rule contended for, only perfect reciprocity.

"The other principle asserted in the message is, that, whilst we do not desire to interfere in Europe with the political system of the allied Powers, we should regard as dangerous to our peace and safety any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere. The political systems of the two continents are essentially different. Each has an exclusive right to judge for itself what is best suited to its own condition and most likely to promote its happiness, but neither has a right to enforce upon the other the establishment of its own peculiar system. This principle was declared in the face of the world at a moment when there was reason to apprehend that the allied Powers were entertaining designs inimical to the freedom, if not the independence, of the new Governments. There is ground for believing that the declaration of it had considerable effect in preventing the maturity, if not in producing the abandonment, of all such designs. Both principles were laid down after much anxious deliberation on the part of the late administration. The President, who then formed a part of it, continues entirely to coincide in both; and you will urge upon the Government of Mexico the utility and expediency of asserting the same principles on all proper occasions.

"The final establishment of the limits between the territories of the United States and those of the United Mexican States is an interesting object, to which you will direct your attention. By the third article of the treaty 'of amity, settlement, and limits between the United States of America and his Catholic Majesty,' concluded and signed at Washington on the 22d day of February, 1819, it is provided that 'the boundary line between the two countries, west of the Mississippi, shall begin on the Gulf of Mexico, at the mouth of the river Sabine, in the sea, continuing north, along the western bank of that river, to the thirty-second degree of latitude; thence, by a line due north, to the degree of latitude where it strikes the Rio Roxo of Natchitoches, or Red river; then, following the course of the Rio Roxo westward, to the degree of longitude one hundred west from London, and twenty-three from Washington; then, crossing the said Red river, and running thence, by a line due north, to the river Arkansas; thence, following the course of the southern bank of the Arkansas to its source, in latitude forty-two north; and thence, by that parallel of latitude, to the South sea; the whole being as laid down in Melish's map of the United States, published at Philadelphia, improved to the 1st of January, 1818. But if the source of the Arkansas river shall be found to fall north or south of latitude forty-two, then the line shall run from the said source due south or north, as the case may be, till it meets the said parallel of latitude forty-two; and thence, along the said parallel, to the South sea. All the islands in the Sabine and the said Red and Arkansas rivers, throughout the course thus described, to belong to the United States; but the use of the waters and the navigation of the Sabine to the sea, and of the said rivers Roxo and Arkansas, throughout the extent of the said boundary, on their respective banks, shall be common to the respective inhabitants of both nations.' By the fourth article provision is made for the appointment, by each of the contracting parties, of a Commissioner and Surveyor, to fix with more precision the line described in the third, and to place the landmarks which shall designate exactly the limits of both nations, but it has not yet been carried into execution. That treaty, having been concluded when Mexico composed a part of the dominions of Spain, is obligatory upon both the United States and Mexico. On the 15th of February, 1824, Mr. Torrens, the Chargé d'Affaires from Mexico near this Government, addressed a note to this Department, (of which a copy is annexed,) in which he declares the willingness of the Supreme Executive Power of Mexico to accede to the limits agreed upon in the third article above mentioned, and its readiness to co-operate with the United States in carrying into complete effect those two articles.

"Some difficulties may possibly hereafter arise between the two countries from the line thus agreed upon, against which it would be desirable now to guard, if practicable; and as the Government of Mexico may be supposed not to have any disinclination to the fixation of a new line, which would prevent those difficulties, the President wishes you to sound it on that subject, and to avail yourself of a favorable disposition, if you should find it, to effect that object. The line of the Sabine approaches our great western mart nearer than could be wished. Perhaps the Mexican Government may not be unwilling to establish that of the Rio Brassos de Dios, or the Rio Colorado, or the Snow Mountains, or the Rio del Norte in lieu of it. By the agreed line portions of both the Red river and branches of the Arkansas are thrown on the Mexican side, and the navigation of both those rivers, as well as that of the Sabine, is made common to the respective inhabitants of the two countries. When the country adjacent to those waters shall come to be thickly inhabited collisions and misunderstandings may arise, from the community thus established in the use of their navigation, which it would be well now to prevent. If the line were so altered as to throw altogether on our side Red river and Arkansas and their respective tributary streams, and the line on the Sabine were removed further west, all causes of future collision would be prevented. The Government of Mexico may have a motive for such an alteration of the line as is here proposed, in the fact that it would have the effect of placing the city of Mexico nearer the centre of its territories. If the line were so changed, the greater part, if not the whole, of the powerful warlike and turbulent Indian nation of the Camanches would be thrown on the side of the United States, and, as an equivalent for the proposed cession of territory, they would stipulate to restrain, as far as practicable, the Camanches from committing hostilities and depredations upon the territories and people, whether Indians or otherwise, of Mexico.

"But if you shall find that the Mexican Government is unwilling to alter the agreed line in the manner proposed, and that it insists upon the execution of the third and fourth articles of the treaty before mentioned, you are authorized to agree to the recognition and establishment of the line as described in the third article, and to the demarkation of it forthwith as is stipulated in the fourth. But in that case you will urge, not, however, as a sine qua non, the insertion of an article in the treaty by which each party shall undertake to restrain the Indians residing within his territories from committing hostilities upon the people, Indians, or territories of the other. The example of such an article, which will at the same time furnish a model for that which is proposed, is to be found in the fifth article of the treaty of friendship, limits, and navigation between the United States of America and the King of Spain, which was signed at San Lorenzo el Real the 27th day of October, 1795. The hostilities which the President is desirous to restrain are afflicting to humanity when confined to the Indians themselves, but they often affect, collaterally, peaceable citizens, who are no parties to them, and their property. Instances are believed to have occurred, and others may be expected more frequently, of escape by slaves from their owners in Louisiana, Missouri, and Arkansas, and their taking refuge in the adjacent territories of Mexico. The pursuit after and recaption of these slaves, which it would be difficult for this Government to restrain, may lead to irritations, if not acts of violence. And as their acquisition cannot be desired by Mexico, especially as the fugitives may be supposed to be the most worthless part of that unfortunate portion of our population, you are instructed to endeavor to get an article inserted in the proposed treaty providing for the regular apprehension and surrender to their respective proprietors, or their lawful agents, of any fugitive slaves."

Extract from a letter, No. 5, from Mr. Clay to Mr. Poinsett, dated Department of State, September 24, 1825.

"The convention with Colombia, referred to in your general instructions of the 25th March last, has, since their date, been ratified by the Government of Colombia, and the ratifications of the two Governments have been exchanged at this place. Subsequent to the date of that convention a treaty was concluded between Great Britain and Colombia, according to which the commerce between those two Powers has been placed upon the footing of that of the most favored nation, and their navigation upon the principle of equality, which is stipulated in the second article of our convention with Great Britain, under date the 3d of July, 1815, (see 6th volume of the Laws of the United States, page 603,) and which is proposed in the act of Congress of the 7th January, 1824. That second article is almost literally copied into the treaty between Colombia and Great Britain, where it will be found in its fourth, fifth, and sixth articles. As by our convention with Colombia no such provision was made for the regulation of the navigation of the two countries, and as by the laws of that Republic foreign vessels and their cargoes are subject to alien duties, advantages have been conceded to Great Britain which were not granted to the United States. These advantages would have formed a subject of just complaint on our part if the Government of Colombia, sensible of what is due to us, had not promptly informed Mr. Watts, charged with the affairs of the United States at Bogota, in the absence of Mr. Anderson, that it was ready to extend them to us. Accordingly, instructions have been given to Mr. Anderson, who is just about returning to his post, to concur with that Government in the adoption of the necessary regulations for securing to our commerce and navigation, in all respects, the same advantages which have been yielded to Great Britain. The result undoubtedly will be to place our commerce and navigation with Colombia, first, on the footing of the most favored nation; and, secondly, that the vessels of each party, laden with its own produce and manufactures, shall pay in the ports of the other the same duties and charges as its own vessels importing similar produce and manufactures.

"If you shall not have concluded the treaty of commerce when this letter arrives, you will be able to urge upon the Government of Mexico the example of Colombia and great Britain, and what has been done, and is proposed to be completed between the United States and Colombia, as motives for acceding to the principles which the President is desirous of introducing into the treaty which you are authorized to negotiate.

"I observe that by the sixth article of the treaty which has been concluded between Great Britain and Mexico, (a copy of which is transmitted in your despatch, No. 2,) 'the products or manufactures of each of the contracting parties, when imported in their own vessels into the ports of each, respectively, shall not pay any higher duty than is now or shall hereafter be paid by the vessels of the most favored nation; and the same on exportation of the products and manufactures of each in the vessels of the other. When the Mexican mercantile marine shall have increased so as to be sufficient for its commerce, then there may be established, by common consent, a perfect equality of duties, &c., on the importation and exportation of the products and manufactures of the respective dominions and States, indifferently in vessels of both nations.' This provision may possibly be urged by the Mexican Government as an objection against adopting in the treaty with the United States that principle of perfect equality between the vessels of the two countries which is desired. If the intrinsic merit of the principle itself, the example of Colombia, and the irritating tendency of countervailing legislation, the inevitable effect of an attempt by one nation to secure advantages to its own navigation denied to that of foreign Powers, shall not enable you to prevail on the Mexican Government to agree to the perfect equality which is proposed, you will consider yourself authorized to accede to an article embracing the same principles as are contained in the sixth article of the British treaty.

"The President approves of your consenting to treat on the two subjects of commerce and limits separately. Indeed, it was never contemplated that one of them should be dependent on the other. As the ratification on the part of Great Britain of the treaty with Mexico has been suspended with a view to effect some alterations in it, the present is an auspicious period for pressing your negotiation for the commercial treaty. Should the negotiation be still pending, you will bear in mind the expediency of inserting a provision in the treaty similar to that which is found in the first part of the second article of the convention of London of 1815, exempting the produce and manufactures of the United States from paying, in the ports of Mexico, higher duties than similar produce and manufactures of other countries. The provision may be made reciprocal. Its necessity is suggested by the representation made to this Department, heretofore communicated to you, that our cotton fabrics were subjected to higher duties than like British fabrics. If that representation were unfounded, such is the British jealousy of a competition with our rising manufactures that an attempt may be made to depress them by rendering them liable to more burdensome duties than are paid by the rival fabrics of Great Britain.

"The President sees with regret the reluctance, on the part of the Mexican Government, to agree to the opening of the road from Missouri towards Santa Fé. The road was intended for purely commercial purposes, and doubtless the people of both countries would be benefitted by the exchanges which it would facilitate. No misconception could be greater than that of its having originated in views of territorial acquisition. If either party could lose by it, it would probably be the United States, many of whose enterprising citizens might be tempted by the intercourse to which it would lead, in consequence of the greater cheapness or other advantages of the lands of the internal provinces, to migrate thither. The connexion between the fixation of limits and the proposed road is not perceived. Wherever the limits may now or hereafter shall be established, the road will be useful. It proposes no disturbance in existing or contemplated limits. In fact, an imperfect trace or road, such as it is, is now used, and the sole question is, whether it shall be rendered more convenient to the persons whose interest or inclination shall induce them to travel it. To defer making the road more visible and comfortable for an indefinite period; to deny to the parties mutually a certain benefit, in prospect of a future and contingent arrangement to which it has no necessary relation, does not seem advisable.

"Nor does the President perceive the utility of a joint appointment by the two Governments of Commissioners, 'who, by examining together the country, within a given latitude, from one sea to the other, might present exact information upon which the limits might be established as is desired.' After agreeing upon the principles on which a line of demarkation between the territories of two nations should be run, it has been usual to appoint, conjointly, Commissioners to proceed to mark and abut the line. Their duty is then prescribed, and if any variance arises between them, observations and experiments, with proper instruments, generally enable them to reconcile it. But it has not been customary to send forth Commissioners either to agree upon a suitable boundary, or to collect data upon which the parties are subsequently to establish one. Such a course would be to reverse the order of proceeding which is recommended by the practice and experience of nations. It would probably leave the state of information which should guide the two Powers pretty much as it now is. There is but little likelihood that the Commissioners would agree, and each set would be influenced by the separate views of policy which it might happen to take of the particular country which it represented. If it were needful for both parties to acquire the knowledge which the Mexican Government supposes to be wanted, it would be better for each to send out its own exploring Commissioners, under its separate instructions. For ourselves, although much undoubtedly remains to be known of the countries through which the line may be fixed, we believe that the stock of our information is sufficient to enable us to agree upon a boundary that would be satisfactory to us. In declining, however, to accede to the measure of creating a joint commission, the President would not be understood as objecting to a resort by the Mexican Government, for its own satisfaction, to the appointment of Commissioners for the purpose of collecting any information which it may desire. Should it persist in attaching importance to such a measure, the hope is indulged that no unnecessary time will be lost in sending out the commission, so that the negotiation in regard to the limits may be resumed with as little delay as possible."

Mr. Clay to Mr. Poinsett.

No. 7.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, November 9, 1825.

SIR: Since the date of my letter of the 26th September last, your despatches to No. 21 have been received. That of the 13th of September, 1825, was received yesterday. They have all been laid before the President, and I shall now make the remarks which appear to be called for by the last, being the only one which seems to require particular notice. In that you state that, in the course of your conferences with the plenipotentiaries of the United Mexican States, on the subject of the proposed commercial convention, a point of difficulty has arisen which has been agreed to be reserved. The point is, an exception in favor of the American nations which were formerly Spanish possessions, to which, on account of the fraternal relations that unite them to the United Mexican States, the latter may grant special privileges which shall not be extended to the dominions and citizens of the United States. The President approves of your refusal to accede to that exception.

The United States have neither desired nor sought to obtain for themselves, in their commercial relations with the new States, any privileges which were not common to other nations. They have proposed, and only wished to establish as the bases of all their commercial treaties, those of equality and reciprocity. They can consent to no other. Ready themselves to extend to the United Mexican States any favors which they have granted to other nations, the United States feel themselves authorized to demand, in this respect, a perfect reciprocity. They could not agree to treat on the principle of a concession to any European Power of commercial privileges which were denied to them. They would feel even more repugnance to the adoption of such a principle in respect to any American nations; because by placing the United States, in some degree, out of the pale of that American system of which they form no unessential part, it would naturally wound the sensibility of the people of the United States.

As you had not time, at the date of your despatch, to communicate the reasons which were urged in support of this extraordinary exception, they can only be collected from the tenor of the clause inserted in the British treaty which you have cited. That clause asserts as the motives for the exception, 1st, that the new States, in whose favor it is to be applied, were formerly Spanish possessions; and 2d, that certain fraternal relations unite them to the Mexican States. The validity of neither of these reasons can be perceived. What is there in the nature of the fact that those nations were once bound by a common allegiance to Spain to justify the exception? Can any rule be fairly deduced from a colonial condition which should govern independent nations no longer bound by any common tie? Is there not something derogatory from the character of free States and free men in seeking to find a rule for their commercial intercourse, in their emancipated condition, from a retrospect of their colonial state which was one of dependence and vassalage? What is to be the limit of this principle? If the accident of a colonial connexion under a common sovereign is to justify a peculiar rule for the emancipated colonies, may not that common sovereign also insist, on the ground of ancient relations, upon special privileges? And then it would be incumbent upon the United States to consider if they had not been premature in their recognition of the independence of the United Mexican States. But if the fact of the Spanish dominion having once stretched over the new States is to create an exception of commercial privileges in their behalf, the United States, upon a similar ground, have a right to demand the benefit of it. For the same Spanish dominion once, and at no very distant day, extended over the larger part of their territories, and all that part which is conterminous with those of the United Mexican States. With respect to the second reason deducible from the clause in the British treaty, there is no statement of the nature of those fraternal relations which are supposed to warrant the exception. Certainly, as between the United Mexican States and the other new nations carved out of the former Spanish colonies, none are known to the world which can sanction the exception. The United Mexican States have, it is true, been waging war with Spain cotemporaneously with the other States; but hitherto there has been no co-operation of arms between them. The United Mexican States have alone sustained their contest. If the idea of those fraternal relations is to be sought for in the sympathy between the American belligerents, this sympathy has been equally felt and constantly expressed, throughout the whole struggle, by the United States. They have not, indeed, taken up arms in support of the independence of the new States; but the neutrality which they have maintained has enabled them more efficaciously to serve the cause of independence than they could have done by taking part in the war. Had they become a belligerent, they would probably have drawn into the war, on the other side, parties whose force would have neutralized, if it had not overbalanced, their exertions. By maintaining neutral ground, they have entitled themselves to speak out with effect, and they have constantly so spoken to the Powers of Europe. They disconcerted the designs of the European alliance upon the new States by the uncalculating declarations which they made in the face of the world. They were the first to hasten to acknowledge the independence of the United Mexican States, and, by their example, drew after them Great Britain. It has, no doubt, not escaped your observation that, in the case of the treaty which has been concluded between the United States and the Republic of Colombia, (and of which a printed authentic copy, as it has been ratified by the two Governments, is herewith transmitted,) no such exception was set set up by that Republic. On the contrary, it is expressly stipulated in the second article that the parties "engage mutually not to grant any particular favor to other nations, in respect of commerce and navigation, which shall not immediately become common to the other party, who shall enjoy the same freely, if the concession was freely made, or allowing the same compensation, if the concession was conditional."

There is a striking inconsistency in the line of policy which the United Mexican States would seem disposed to pursue towards the United States. They would regard these States as an American nation or not, accordingly as it shall suit their own purposes. In respect to commerce, they would look upon us as an European nation, to be excluded from the enjoyment of privileges conceded to other American nations. But when an attack is imagined to be menaced by Europe upon the independence of the United Mexican States, then an appeal is made to those fraternal sympathies which are justly supposed to belong to our condition as a member of the American family. No longer than about three months ago, when an invasion by France of the island of Cuba was believed at Mexico, the United Mexican Government promptly called upon the Government of the United States, through you, to fulfil the memorable pledge of the President of the United States in his message to Congress of December, 1823. What they would have done had the contingency happened, may be inferred from a despatch to the American minister at Paris, a copy of which is herewith sent, which you are authorized to read to the plenipotentiaries of the United Mexican States. Again: the United Mexican Government has invited that of the United States to be represented at the Congress of Panama, and the President has determined to accept the invitation. Such an invitation has been given to no European Power, and it ought not to have been given to this, if it is not to be considered as one of the American nations.

The President indulges the confident expectation that, upon reconsideration, the Mexican Government will withdraw the exception. But if it should continue to insist upon it, you will, upon that ground, abstain from concluding any treaty, and put an end to the negotiation. It is deemed better to have no treaty and abide by the respective commercial laws of the two countries, than to subscribe to a principle wholly inadmissible, and which, being assented to in the case of Mexico, might form a precedent to be extended to others of the new States.

I am your obedient servant,

H. CLAY.

JOEL R. POINSETT, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, United States, Mexico.

PROTOCOLS OF THE CONFERENCES, AND COPIES OF THE NOTES BETWEEN THE PLENIPOTENTIARIES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND OF THE UNITED MEXICAN STATES, DURING THE NEGOTIATIONS FOR A TREATY OF AMITY, COMMERCE AND NAVIGATION BETWEEN THOSE STATES, CONCLUDED JULY 10, 1826.

Protocol of the first conference held by Joel R. Poinsett, plenipotentiary on the part of the United States of America, and his excellency Lucas Alamán, Secretary of State and of Exterior and Interior Relations, and his excellency José Ignacio Esteva, Secretary of State and of the Treasury, plenipotentiaries on the part of the United Mexican States, on the 22d of August, 1825.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

The plenipotentiaries interchanged their respective powers. It was agreed that a project of a treaty of amity, navigation and commerce should be drawn up by Joel R. Poinsett, to be presented to the plenipotentiaries at their next conference.

J. R. POINSETT.
LUCAS ALAMÁN.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the second conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on the 13th September, 1825.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

A translation into the Spanish language of the project of a treaty of amity and commerce between the two Republics was read and compared with the original presented by Joel R. Poinsett, as far as the conclusion of the thirteenth article, and was found to be so far correct.

On reading the first article, it was remarked by the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government that they desired in all their treaties to adopt one style of language, and would therefore prefer that this article should be in the words of the first article of the treaty they had lately concluded with Great Britain; for which the treaty between the United States and Spain had been the model. As it corresponds in substance with the one proposed by the plenipotentiary of the United States, he did not object to its substitution.

On reading the third article, it was suggested by the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government that it would be necessary to make an exception in relation to the coasting trade, which was acquiesced in by the plenipotentiary of the United States. The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government declared the fourth article of the project to be inadmissible in the present state of their commercial marine. They objected that the principle of reciprocity would, from the very superior tonnage of the United States of America, be wholly in their favor, and enable them, for a very considerable period, to engross the carrying trade between the two countries, and proposed, instead, the principle of the most favored nation.

In reply, the plenipotentiary of the United States observed that his Government was desirous of adopting the principle he had introduced into the project in all their treaties with foreign Powers as much more fair and liberal than the one proposed to be substituted for it. That they had already concluded treaties on that basis with Great Britain, Russia, the Netherlands, Prussia, Hamburg, Bremen, Lubeck, Oldenburg, Norway and Sardinia; that between some of those States and the United States of America, as great a disparity of tonnage existed as between that of Mexico and of the United States; that it was surely better to adopt a plain and explicit rule which should govern the two parties themselves than refer each of them to that which may exist between either and a third party, and which was to be sought for in treaties where it was difficult to distinguish between a voluntary grant and one yielded for an equivalent; that the principle of the most favored nation was liable to be very unfair in its application, as being most favorable to the nation which shall adopt the most liberal regulations in its foreign commerce.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government observed that the same principle as that under discussion had been urged by the plenipotentiaries of His Britannic Majesty, and that they had refused to accede to it for the reasons just assigned, and therefore could not, with propriety or consistency, agree to introduce it into a treaty with the United States.

The plenipotentiary of the United States explained why the principle for which he contended had not been engrafted on the treaty lately concluded between the United States and the Republic of Colombia, by stating that the law which recognized that principle being about to expire, the President of those States thought it better not to introduce it into any treaty which might be made in the interval until the sense of Congress should be ascertained on the subject, presuming that there would be no difficulty in making a future arrangement with Colombia founded on a principle acknowledged so fair and liberal; that the law expired on the 1st of January, 1824, but so satisfied were that Congress of the excellence of this principle that it was again renewed on the 7th of the same month.

After agreeing to reason this point, and that the plenipotentiary of the United States should present a note explanatory of his views on the subject, the fourth article of the treaty between the Mexican United States and Great Britain was read. This article contains the principle of the most favored nation, and the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government expressed their wishes that it might be substituted for the fourth article contained in the project. This point having by agreement been resumed, the plenipotentiary of the United States confined his observations to an exception contained in the last clause of that article in favor of the American nations which had been Spanish possessions, and to which Mexico might grant privileges that should not be extended to Great Britain. To this exception he objected, that no distinction ought to be made between any of the members of the great American family; that Great Britain, having consented to such a provision, could not influence the decision of the United States; the Republics of America were united by one and the same interest to support each other against the European system; that it was the interest of the European Powers that such distinctions should be made between the American Republics; but it was most manifestly the interest of the latter that they should all be united as intimately as possible—an union which could only exist on the basis of the most perfect reciprocity.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government observed that Mexico was united by fraternal ties and strong sympathies to the nations which had, like themselves, shaken off the Spanish yoke, and that they stood in a very different relation towards them from having formed an offensive and defensive alliance with them, and were, therefore, more intimately united with them than with the United States.

The plenipotentiary of the United States rejoined, that the policy his Government had pursued towards the nations which had been formerly Spanish possessions gave them a right to expect that no such distinction should be made in their case, and entitled them to be considered at least on an equal footing with any of the American Republics; and that the treaty with Colombia, and those, in all probability by this time, concluded with Buenos Ayres and Chilé, contained no such provision, and therefore to insert it in this treaty would be useless. The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government here observed that a war might dissolve any one of those treaties, and they thought Mexico ought, in that event, to possess the power of evincing her sympathies in favor of either of the nations, formerly Spanish possessions, which might be so circumstanced, without violating her neutrality. The plenipotentiary of the United States replied, that he considered this argument as conclusive why his Government should not accede to the insertion in the treaty of such a provision. A war between the United States and any of the American Republics he regarded as a remote and improbable event; but could never consent to place by treaty the former in a less favorable situation than their enemies, if by any unforeseen accident the present friendly relations which subsisted should be changed.

After some further discussion, this point was reserved.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government here remarked, that, in order to avoid any doubt or misunderstanding as to what vessels should be considered as belonging to the United States of America or to the United Mexican States, they wished to insert in the treaty an article to the same effect as the seventh article of their treaty with Great Britain, which defined what should be considered requisite to constitute a Mexican and a British vessel.

The plenipotentiary of the United States observed, that the British plenipotentiaries, in granting this condition and in extending its provisions for the term of ten years, had yielded a great deal to the Mexican Government; but as he knew that his Government was disposed to foster the rising commerce of the Republics of America, he would not refuse to act, upon this occasion, with equal liberality, and consented to the insertion of an article in the same terms as the seventh article of the treaty between Mexico and Great Britain.

An additional article in the treaty between Mexico and Great Britain was read. It provides that as Spain was the only nation that might obtain privileges which could not be extended to Great Britain from the peculiar relations which had existed between Mexico and Spain, the privileges, if any should be granted for an equivalent to Spain, are in nowise to be exclusive or prohibitory, and are to be limited to a certain term of years.

The fifth article being read, the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government suggested that an article to the like effect had been inserted in their treaty with Great Britain, and as it appeared, in substance, to be the same, the plenipotentiary of the United States agreed to substitute it for the fifth article of the project.

The sixth and seventh articles, containing provisions similar to those contained in an article of the treaty between Mexico and Great Britain, some conversation took place on the subject of amalgamating them into one article.

A conversation took place, on reading the eighth article, as to the degree of protection to be afforded to a vessel belonging to either of the contracting parties when pursued into the harbors of the other party, being a neutral. The Mexican plenipotentiaries inquired whether this article might not give rise to reclamations, and instanced the claim made by the United States on the Government of Portugal on account of one of their vessels having been captured by a British squadron within the jurisdiction of the Portuguese Government. The plenipotentiary of the United States explained, that the claim made by his Government on that occasion was made in virtue of an acknowledged rule of the law of nations, and not in consequence of any treaty existing between the two countries. The attack made on the American vessel in the port of Fayal by the British was a palpable violation of the neutral rights of Portugal, to which she submitted only because she had not the power to cause those rights to be respected. Every neutral is bound to compel a belligerent to respect her neutral rights if she possesses the power to do so.

A discussion arose on the ninth article as to what ought to be considered the competent tribunals in such cases. The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government suggested that the consuls appointed by the contracting parties and residing in the ports of the United States and Mexico, respectively, might be invested with full powers to this effect. The plenipotentiary of the United States observed, in reply, that there was, in his opinion, no objection to this proposal, except that in order to confer upon those officers the necessary powers, there must be a consular convention between the two Governments.

On the tenth article, some conversation took place on the difficulty of preventing smuggling in such cases; but it was remarked that each nation would be at liberty to adopt such regulations on the subject as it might deem expedient.

An objection was made respecting the eleventh article by the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government, that Spaniards might take advantage of it by becoming citizens of the United States and then claiming their forfeited estates. The plenipotentiary of the United States, after observing that Spaniards could acquire no rights in this country by becoming citizens of the United States other than they possessed before, engaged to send the laws relating to aliens and citizens, as passed by the Congress of those States, to the plenipotentiaries, that they might see the provisions of those acts.

It was agreed to strike out the word "special" in the twelfth article preceding the word "protection" as not conveying precisely the same meaning in both languages.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government, not being quite certain as to the practice of their courts of law, preferred that the concluding clause of this article should be altered so as to extend to the citizens of each country, respectively, the same rights and privileges as the inhabitants of the country where the suit was held would be entitled to in similar cases. This alteration was agreed to by the plenipotentiary of the United States.

The thirteenth article was considered by both parties of so much importance that its discussion was reserved to a future day.

JOEL R. POINSETT.
LUCAS ALAMÁN.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

[Note.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Mexico, September 18, 1825.

MOST EXCELLENT SIRS: In consequence of the arrangement made at our second conference, by which it was agreed that the disputed point contained in the fourth article of the project of a treaty of amity, navigation, and commerce between the United States of America and the United Mexican States should be reserved, and that I should state, in a note, my views on that important subject, I have the honor to submit to you the following observations in favor of assuming, as the basis of commercial intercourse between the two Republics, the abolition of all discriminating duties whatsoever, so as to place the citizens of each country, respectively, in regard to all objects of commerce and navigation, upon the footing of equal favor rather than that of extending to them, respectively, the privileges and exemptions of the most favored nation.

The first is not only in itself fair and liberal and comprehensible, being never liable to any misinterpretations, because it applies to the two parties themselves and not to a rule which may exist between one of them and a third party, but it is much more fair and liberal than the principle proposed to be substituted for it, because it establishes the most perfect reciprocity between the two parties and secures to each of them equal privileges and exemptions; whereas, the principle of the most favored nation may not be, and very rarely is, equal in its operation between the two contracting parties. It can only be so when the voluntary concessions made by each of the contracting parties to other nations are exactly alike, which, it must be acknowledged, is of very rare occurrence. The least difference in the commercial privileges granted by one of them to a third most favored Power and withheld by the other might essentially change the relations between the two contracting parties. So that, where this principle prevails, the party which, in its commercial intercourse with other nations, shall adopt the most illiberal regulations will possess advantages over the other party which may be governed in its commercial intercourse with other nations by a more liberal policy. It cannot be considered just that the former, by adopting the least liberal system, should be enabled to enjoy the greatest share of the commerce and navigation carried on between the two contracting parties.

The rule contained in the project is much more simple and comprehensible than the proposed substitute, because it is a fixed and determined rule; whereas, in order to ascertain the precise nature of the favor to which one of the parties may be entitled in virtue of a treaty stipulation embracing the latter principle, recourse must be had to the existing commercial relations between the other party and all the rest of the commercial world. A knowledge of these relations can be acquired only by consulting the treaties, statutes, orders, decrees, and other regulations of the parties, and it not unfrequently happens that disputes arise between them from the difficulty of distinguishing between a concession made to a third party for an equivalent and a favor granted voluntarily. Peculiar considerations may lead one party to make a concession to a third power, which, on a partial examination, might be regarded as a voluntary favor, when, in reality, it was granted for an equivalent, but which is either not clearly deducible from the treaty, or may be so diffused throughout all the stipulations of it as to be extracted only after a careful view and comparison of the whole of them. From these causes perplexing and embarrassing discussions have arisen in the practical application of the rules of the most favored nations; and the President of the United States is anxiously desirous of extending the more liberal and simple principle of perfect reciprocity with respect to commerce and navigation between both countries, respectively, in all the treaties in which the United States of America are a party; and considerable advances have been made by the latter towards the general establishment of this most liberal of all principles of commercial intercourse. Most of the commercial nations of Europe have been convinced of the advantages of this principle over that proposed by your excellencies. In 1815 the United States of America made a treaty with Great Britain upon the basis contained in the fourth article of the project under discussion. By a treaty concluded between the United States and Sweden the same principle of equal duties and charges of tonnage, import, export, prohibition, and bounty upon vessels and their cargoes, being of the produce or manufacture of the respective countries, whether in vessels of the foreign or native, was established. This principle of commercial intercourse has been extended, at different epochs, by the United States of America to the Netherlands, to Prussia, to the Free and Hanseatic cities of Bremen, Hamburg, and Lubeck, to the kingdom of Norway, and to the empire of Russia.

I have already explained to your excellencies why this principle, which the President is desirous to adopt generally, and especially in all treaties with the Powers of America, was not introduced into that lately concluded with Colombia. The law of Congress by which that principle was established was about to expire when the minister of the United States to that Republic received his instructions to conclude that treaty. That law did expire on the 1st of January, 1824. But so convinced was the Government of the United States of the liberal and enlightened policy which had dictated it, and the salutary effects it had produced, that it was renewed on the 7th of the same month, as soon as the ordinary forms of legislation would permit. From this circumstance alone the establishment of this liberal principle in the commercial intercourse between the United States and Colombia was left to be the subject of future concert. The President of the United States of America did not anticipate that I should experience the slightest difficulty in impressing upon this Government the superior advantages which would result to both parties from the adoption of the rule proposed in the project, which is simple and familiar, being made to govern the two parties themselves over the one proposed to be substituted, which is complicated and refers the parties to compacts which may happen to exist between either of them and third parties.

I pray your excellencies to accept the assurances of the highest respect with which I have the honor to be your excellencie's most obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

Their Excellencies Don LUCAS ALAMÁN and Don JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA, Plenipotentiaries of the United Mexican States.

Protocol of the third conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and the United Mexican States on the 19th of September, 1825.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

On the fourteenth article of the project being read, the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government remarked, that although they did not object to the principle laid down in that article that "free ships should make free goods," still there were circumstances arising out of the peculiar geographical position of the seacoast of Mexico which would render the application of that principle difficult upon their coast. They considered it of the utmost importance to prevent the introduction of Spanish productions into Mexico; but if neutrals could, without the risk of loss, bring the property of the enemies of Mexico into the Gulf of Mexico, it would be impossible for them to prevent that property from being smuggled into the country; their coasts were so situated that a vessel found in the Gulf, within a certain latitude, must be bound to one of their ports or be there with an intention of landing her cargo clandestinely. The plenipotentiary of the United States replied, that the great object was to establish the principle as applicable to vessels on the high seas, and that each nation would be at liberty to make such regulations within its own maritime jurisdiction as it might judge expedient in order to prevent its own revenue laws from being violated.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government objected, that the ordinary extent of maritime jurisdiction would not in this case be sufficient to protect the coast of the Gulf of Mexico from smuggling, and proposed some general term which would embrace the whole Gulf, excluding only New Orleans.

To this proposal the plenipotentiary of the United States declared that he could not consent, because the United States of America possessed several ports within the Gulf besides New Orleans, such as Mobile, Pensacola, Tampa, and others. After some further discussion, this point was reserved, and it was agreed that the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government should prepare a note explanatory of their views.

The fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth articles being co-relative to the fourteenth, were likewise reserved.

On the nineteenth article being read, the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government inquired in what manner it was to be ascertained whether the fact of a place being invested or blockaded was known by the vessel attempting to enter a blockaded port.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that when due notice was given in the country and port from which such vessel sailed, it was always to be presumed that the owners and commander were acquainted with the existence of the blockade, provided such public notice had been given before the vessel sailed. For it was a maxim that no man had a right to evade a law by pleading ignorance of its existence after that law had been publicly promulgated. The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government put the case of a vessel escaping the blockading squadron by reason of its being driven off by a gale of wind and entering the blockaded port, would she, under these circumstances, be permitted to sail with a cargo and carry off the persons and property of the besieged?

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that if a vessel entered a blockaded port under such circumstances and ignorant of the existence of the blockade, still she had no right to depart with a cargo other than that which she brought with her; and that the provision of the last clause was intended to embrace only such vessels as had entered the port previous to the existence of the blockade.

The twentieth, twenty-first, and twenty-second articles were read and agreed to.

On the twenty-third article, a conversation took place as to what were to be considered the established courts for prize-causes. The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government stated that it was intended to create circuit courts which should have admiralty jurisdiction; but that in the interval prize causes were tried before the Juez de letras.

The plenipotentiary of the United States observed that it was not intended to specify what courts should be established for the purpose of trying all prize causes; but that none other than the court so established should have jurisdiction in such causes, with regard to the delivery of an authenticated copy of the proceedings in cases of condemnation, and that the sentence should set forth the reasons on which it shall have been founded.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government remarked that it was not the practice of their courts for the judges to give the motives of the sentence; that it was, in their opinion, the duty of the Fiscal.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that, provided the motives on which the sentence or act was founded were given by the officer whose duty it was to do so, and legally authenticated according to the practice of the courts of the respective countries, such documents would be deemed satisfactory.

The articles twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth were read and agreed to. The twenty-sixth article was agreed to, but it was suggested by the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government and assented to by the plenipotentiary of the United States, that each party should reserve the right of excluding consuls from such ports and places as they should deem proper. On reading the twenty-seventh article, some objections were started by the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government as to the nature of the proposed exemptions from taxes and contributions which it was intended such officers should enjoy. By the seventh article of the project, citizens of both countries, respectively, were exempted from all taxes and contributions other than such as citizens of the country where they reside are subject to. They thought, too, that cases might occur where it would be important that consuls might be called upon to substantiate facts by written documents in their possession. They proposed that, as it was provided there should be formed, as early as convenient, a consular convention between the two countries, this article should be omitted, to which the plenipotentiary of the United States did not object. It was agreed that the plenipotentiary of the United States should write to his Government for powers to conclude such convention

The twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth articles of the project were read and agreed to.

On reading the thirtieth article, a conversation took place as to the meaning of the word "unreasonably," and what ought in such case to be construed into an unreasonable delay. As there is no word that conveys exactly the same meaning in the Spanish language, it was agreed to substitute the words "or delayed longer than is reasonable or necessary."

On the fourth point of the thirtieth article, the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government observed that it was of course to be understood that the treaties here mentioned were of a similar nature to the one now under discussion.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government read the sixteenth article of the treaty between the Mexican United States and Great Britain, by which it had been agreed that as many new and important points might arise in the progress of the intimate relations established between the two countries which would require a special convention to settle, all such subjects should be taken into consideration at the end of six years from the date of the exchange of ratifications of that treaty, and all the articles then concluded should be considered as forming a part of the treaty and have the same force as there contained in it, and offered to introduce the same condition in the present treaty with the United States of America. To which the plenipotentiary of the United States assented, after observing that the words "articles then concluded upon" implied the necessary consent of the Congress and Senate according to the institutions of their respective Governments.

It was likewise agreed to insert at the conclusion of the thirtieth article the term of six months for the ratification of the treaty, to be counted from the date of the signature thereof, or sooner, if possible.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government observed that it would be advisable to introduce an article respecting the Indians inhabiting the territories of the respective countries.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied, that he would have proposed such an article, as well as one relating to fugitive slaves, in this project, but had deferred these subjects as more properly belonging to the treaty of limits.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government observed, in reply, that it would in their opinion be better to confine the treaty of limits entirely to marking out and defining the boundaries, and that it was important to settle the principle of the government of the Indian tribes within the territories of the respective countries as soon as possible.

The plenipotentiary of the United States expressed himself disposed to comply with the wishes of the Mexican Government in this particular, and proposed to adopt the fifth article of the treaty of friendship, limits, and navigation, concluded between the United States of America and the King of Spain, in 1705, as far as it applied to the present circumstances of the two countries, which was assented to.

It was likewise agreed that the plenipotentiary of the United States should draw up an additional article on the subject of fugitive slaves passing over the frontiers of the two countries.

The article relating to fugitive slaves is as follows, viz: "It is likewise agreed that, in the event of any slaves escaping from their owners, residing in the States or territories of one of the contracting parties, and passing over into the States or territories of the other, it shall be lawful for the owner or owners of such slaves, or their lawful agents, to require the assistance of the authorities of the country where they may be found for their arrest, sentence, and custody; and, for that purpose, the proprietors or their agents shall address themselves to the nearest magistrate or competent officer. On such demand being made it shall be the duty of the magistrate or competent officer to cause the said slaves to be arrested and detained, and if it shall appear that such slaves be actually the property of the claimant the magistrate or competent officer shall surrender them to the proprietors or their agents, to be conveyed back to the country from whence they had escaped; the claimants paying the expenses incurred by the arrest, detention, and custody of such slaves, and none other."

J. R. POINSETT.
LUCAS ALAMÁN.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the fourth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on the 27th of September, 1825.

Present, the plenipotentiary of the United States of America, his excellency Don José Ignacio Esteva, and his excellency Don Gomez Pedraza.

His excellency Don José Ignacio Esteva informed the plenipotentiary of the United States that, Don Lucas Alamán having resigned all the offices he held under the Government, the President had thought proper to appoint his excellency Don Gomez Pedraza to be one of the plenipotentiaries to negociate the treaty of amity and commerce between the United States of America and the United Mexican States. Whereupon his excellency Don Gomez Pedraza presented his full powers to the plenipotentiary of the United States.

The project of the treaty and the protocols of the former conferences were then read. His excellency, the newly appointed plenipotentiary, did not object to what had been agreed upon by his colleague.

In order to obviate the necessity of further discussion on the article intended to establish the principle that free ships shall make free goods, the plenipotentiary of the United States offered the following proviso, viz: "The stipulations contained in this article shall not be so construed as to render it lawful for the vessels of either of the contracting parties, being neutral, to introduce into the ports of the other, being belligerent, the goods or persons of the enemies of the latter," with which the plenipotentiaries of Mexico were satisfied; but, in order to make it more explicit, proposed to add the words, viz: "Y el contraventor quedará sugeto á las leyes establecidas en el pais," "and by so doing they will subject themselves to the existing laws of the country." They desired it should be expressly understood that, in such cases, the vessels of the neutral should not be permitted to approach their shores with the goods of an enemy on board, and declared that a vessel found within the sack formed by the Gulf of Mexico could not be considered as bound to any other than the ports of Mexico.

The article relating to the arrest, detention, and delivery of fugitive slaves was read and agreed to.

An article relating to the obligations of the contracting parties towards the Indians residing within their respective territories, the same in substance as the 15th article of the treaty betweeen the United States of America and Spain, signed at San Lorenzo el Real in 1795, was read and agreed to. It is as follows, viz: "And it is further agreed that the two contracting parties shall, by all the means in their power, maintain peace and harmony among the several Indian nations adjacent to the lines and rivers which shall form the boundaries between the two Republics. And the better to obtain this effect both parties oblige themselves expressly to restrain, by force, all hostilities on the part of the Indian nations living within their boundary; so that the United States of America will not suffer their Indians to attack the citizens of the United Mexican States, nor the Indians inhabiting their territory, nor will the United Mexican States permit these last mentioned Indians to commence hostilities against the citizens of the United States of America, nor against the Indians inhabiting their territory, in any manner whatever. And whereas several treaties of friendship exist between the two contracting parties and the said nations of Indians, it is hereby agreed that, in future, no treaty of alliance or other whatever (except treaties of peace) shall be made by either party with the Indians living within the boundary of the other; but, both parties will endeavor to make the advantages of the Indian trade common and mutually beneficial to their respective citizens, observing in all things the most complete reciprocity."

Some conversation then took place relative to the article on the freedom of worship. The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government observed that, however they might be inclined to consent to the article as presented in the project by the plenipotentiary of the United States, the spirit and letter of the Constitution placed it out of their power to do so. The third article of the Constitution of the United Mexican States is in these words, viz: "The religion of the Mexican nation is, and always shall be, Catholic, Apostolic, Roman. The nation protects it by wise and just laws, and prohibits the exercise of every other."

The plenipotentiary of the United States, after expressing his deep regret that the Mexican nation should have adopted so intolerant a principle, observed that he would prepare an article to protect the funerals and sepulchres of the citizens of the United States.

The discussion on the subject of the exception Mexico desired to make in favor of the American nations, formerly Spanish possessions, was renewed, and the newly appointed plenipotentiary was informed of the arguments and objections which had been urged by both parties in relation to it.

J. R. POINSETT.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.
MANUEL GOMEZ PEDRAZA.

Protocol of the fifth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of Mexico on the 28th of September, 1825.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

The fifteenth article of the treaty between the United States of America and the King of Spain, signed at San Lorenzo el Real in 1795, was read, and, after being modified so as to suit the present circumstances of the two countries, was adopted as an article of the present treaty.

A conversation then took place on the subject of the exceptions Mexico desired to reserve to herself the power of making, in favor of those American nations which formerly were Spanish possessions. The plenipotentiaries of Mexico began by saying that, as the plenipotentiary of the United States had rejected the proposal made to him informally, to confine the exception to those States only which would treat with Mexico on the same basis; they had now one to submit, which might be less objectionable, especially as he had expressed an opinion that their treaty with Great Britain would be rejected in London, and this provision in it would not be agreed to by her Britannic Majesty's ministers. They then proposed to insert the following words: "With respect to the exception contained in the fourth article, which speaks of the Republics which formerly were Spanish possessions, it shall be understood in the same terms that finally shall be agreed upon in relation to this subject between Mexico and Great Britain."

The plenipotentiary of the United States objected that the political interests of Great Britain and of the United States, with regard to America, were so distinct that he would prefer agreeing to the article as it stood, rather than consent to be governed by the decision of that Government; and besides, that it did not comport with the dignity of his Government to insert such a condition; in his opinion, the interests of the Powers of Europe and of those of America were so widely different, that in treaties intended to strengthen the relations of the latter no allusion ought to be made to the former. Great Britain had concluded a treaty with Mexico, in order to secure the advantages of a profitable commerce, but her political interests were European, whereas those of the United States were, strictly speaking, American. With respect to the opinion he had advanced, that their treaty with Great Britain would not be ratified in London, he had been induced to adopt it, because he had been assured that the plenipotentiaries of her Britannic Majesty would never have agreed to this exception had not the treaty made with Colombia and ratified here, and which contained this provision, been exhibited to them. They were compelled, therefore, to agree to the exception or make no treaty; as they had declared this to be the only motive for consenting to the insertion of this article, and as the treaty between Mexico and Colombia had not been ratified by the latter, it was to be presumed that Great Britain would insist upon its being expunged from the treaty between her and Mexico; but if Great Britain did consent to this exception continuing to form a part of the treaty, she could be governed by political considerations alone, and, as forming one of the European Powers, might not object to the establishment of distinctions which would separate the interests of the American Republics, because these exceptions were manifestly contrary to the commercial interests of that nation.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico asked what would be their situation if the treaty between Mexico and Great Britain should be ratified in London, and the ratification arrive here after they had signed one with the United States on a different basis?

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that as the plenipotentiaries of Great Britain had been induced to consent to this exception, in favor of the States formerly Spanish possessions, on account of a pre-existing treaty between Mexico and Colombia, which contained that principle, and as from the non-ratification of that treaty by Colombia that reason no longer existed, it would, in his opinion, be decorous and honorable on the part of the Mexican Government to expunge that exceptionable provision from their treaty with Great Britain.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico declared, the motive now assigned by the British plenipotentiaries had not been the only one, and, therefore, they could not consent to what was proposed by the plenipotentiary of the United States.

The latter replied that he had been so assured by one of those gentlemen who had been left as her Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, and that he knew that a note had been sent in by him to that effect.

The plenipotentiaries said that it was true such a note had been sent in by Mr. Ward, but that the President had no intention of complying with that gentleman's demand. They stated that they were bound by fraternal ties to the Spanish American States, and that it was natural Mexico should seek to unite herself more intimately with States which, like herself, were in their infancy, and whose interests were identical with hers from the peculiar circumstances in which they mutually stood towards Spain, than with a nation already in adolescence, and which, from its relations with the other Powers of Europe, had to pursue a different policy towards that nation.

The plenipotentiary of the United States observed that the States which formerly were Spanish possessions had given very sufficient proofs that they required no assistance to enable them to repel the attacks of Spain; and that the United States had pledged themselves not to permit any other Powers of Europe to interfere either with their form of government or with their independence; and as, in the event of such an attempt being made by them, the United States would be compelled to take the most active and efficient part in the contest, it was not just that they should be placed by treaty on a less favorable footing than the other Republics of America, whose existence they were disposed to support at such hazards.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico here remarked that the United States had no right to insist upon being placed upon the same footing with the Spanish American States, unless they were willing to take part in the contest with Spain; that it was true the United States had declared that they would not permit the interference of any third Power, and it was equally so that they believed Mexico to be able to repel any attack of Spain, still the fortune of war was always doubtful, and in the event of Spanish troops overrunning this country, they could count upon the aid of those nations they felt disposed to favor and not upon that of the United States, and, therefore, it was just to make the difference between the two which they proposed.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that it would be highly impolitic and injurious to all parties for the United States to take part in the present contest between Spain and her former colonies; that although the power of those States was sufficient not only to put an end to the war, but, if the Powers of Europe did not interfere, to destroy Spain, still such a step on their part would inevitably produce a combination of the principal Powers of Europe against the liberties of America, which it was the interest of all the Republics of American to avoid by every means in their power.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico expressed their regret that it had been impracticable to reconcile the views of the two nations in this important particular, and proposed to address an explanatory note on the subject to the plenipotentiary of the United States.

J. R. POINSETT.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.
MANUEL GOMEZ PEDRAZA.

[Note.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Mexico, April 18, 1826.

MOST EXCELLENT SIRS: Having reflected on the tenor of the 6th article of the project, which defines what shall constitute the nationality of the vessels belonging to each of the contracting parties, I beg leave to state to your excellencies my objections to it, and to offer a substitute more analogous to the existing laws of the United States of America, and, in my opinion, more advantageous to both parties.

To stipulate that all ships built, owned, navigated, and registered, according to the laws of the United States, shall be considered as ships of that nation, but that Mexican ships shall not only be nationalized according to the laws of Mexico, owned and commanded by a citizen of these States, but have three-fourths of the mariners admitted on board with the knowledge and consent of the Government, is a useless surrender of the rights of the Republic to enact such laws on this subject as the Government may deem politic and expedient.

Neither the particular laws of the United States of America, nor the conventional maritime laws of nations, require that three-fourths of the crew of a vessel shall be of the nation whose flag she bears. It is sufficient that such vessel truly and wholly belongs to the citizens or subjects of that country, and is commanded by citizens or subjects of the same.

If, for example, the United States of America and Great Britain were belligerents, and Mexico and Holland neutrals, a Mexican vessel, with proofs of belonging wholly to Mexican citizens, that had lost her crew by sickness or desertion in a port of Holland, might take in a new crew of Hollanders without forfeiting her neutral character, which she could not do if the article is allowed to subsist in its present form.

The United States have passed laws on the subject of registering and navigating their ships, intended to promote ship-building in that country, and to encourage and to augment their own seamen. These laws define what shall constitute a national ship, and entitle her to all the rights and privileges of such. She must be built in the United States, or be a lawfully condemned prize. She must be commanded by a citizen, and three-fourths of her crew, at least, must be citizens of the United States. But these laws only concern her own mercantile marine, and are not made extensive to that of any other nation, nor would they affect the national character of the vessel on the high seas, or in any foreign port, if, by accident, she were compelled to change her crew.

The first section of the act of navigation, passed March, 1817, provides that no goods, wares, nor merchandise shall be imported into the United States from any foreign port or place, except in vessels of the United States, or in such foreign vessels as truly and wholly belong to the citizens or subjects of that country, of which the goods are the growth, production, or manufacture; or from which such goods, wares, or merchandise can only be or most usually are first shipped for transportation: provided, nevertheless, that this regulation shall not extend to the vessels of any foreign nation which has not adopted and which shall not adopt a similar regulation.

I cannot but suppose that the former plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Republic had in view the act of navigation of Great Britain, when they proposed to insert this article in the treaty with the United States.

This act provides that all goods, &c., shall be imported either in British ships or in such foreign ships as are the build of the country or place of which the goods are the growth, or of such port where the goods can only be or most usually are first shipped for transportation, and whereof the master and three-fourths of the mariners, at least, are of the said country or place.

This latter phrase has given rise to frequent discussion as to what constituted mariners of the said country or place; and it was held by the English courts to mean a native born, a denizen or one naturalized. Great latitude was given to the interpretation of this part of the act; for it was said, that it would make commerce very hazardous, if a merchant was compelled to search out the nativity of every mariner he employed, and in case of a mistake was to forfeit ship and cargo. These acts and decisions, however, concerned only vessels coming into the English ports with goods, but were never intended to affect the nationality of a vessel on the high seas. The neutral character of a vessel ought to be made to depend entirely upon the conventional laws of nations, and it is not wise so to define the nationality of the vessels of Mexico as would expose them to capture by a belligerent and deprive them of their neutral character, when they would, under similar circumstances, be protected by the maritime laws of nations.

The English prize courts have established this principle. Sir William Scott maintained in the case of the ship Vreede Sholtys, that the passport and flag were sufficient evidence of the nationality of the vessel, and would admit no opposite proof. But there exist decisions of the prize courts of France and Denmark, declaring a foreign vessel good prize upon which a supercargo, commissary, or any other officer belonging to an enemy's country was found, or whose crew consisted of more than one-third of enemy's subjects.

The prize laws of England forbid the purchase of enemy's ships in transitu, or of ships that may be involved in an expected war, and are sold in contemplation of such an event; but their courts have decided that property might be so purchased, when it appeared that it had been done without any view of relieving the vender from the presence or prospect of war.

The French code of commerce admits the purchase of vessels in transitu, and in their courts, according to the customary maritime practice, the production of the bill or bills of sale alone have been required to prove the national character of the vessel, particularly if they are creditably dated before the commencement of an existing war.

In the Petersburg convention of June 17, 1801, article VII, it is prescribed that no ship shall be considered as protected by the neutral flag it bears if the master and, at least, one-half of the crew are not subjects of the nation whose flag the vessel bears.

But this was a special provision in a treaty. Conventional maritime law requires only that the vessel should truly and wholly belong to the subjects of the nation whose flag the vessel bears, and should not be navigated by the subjects of the enemy.

The prize laws of many of the maritime Powers of Europe require that the vessel be so owned, and commanded either by a native citizen, or by one who has acquired his right of citizenship before the commencement of an existing war. The Danes, in their prize regulations of 1810, require a certificate of origin, (Biel. brief,) and bill or bills of sale to be on board every neutral, which they justify on the ground of having adopted the principle of free ships making free goods, which demands of them greater caution.

All these regulations go to prove the right of every nation to give a national character to a vessel belonging truly and wholly to one or more of its citizens or subjects.

In the United States, Great Britain, and France, a certificate of registry, or what is called the register, supplies the place of all documents not rendered necessary by treaty.

The registry contains the name, occupation, and residence of the owner, or of each part owner, the name of the vessel, the port to which she belongs, the name of the master, the time and place of her building or capture, and, in the latter case, the date of condemnation, the measurement and tonnage, together with a particular description of the vessel.

From the protocol register, a proper certificate is given by the Collector of the Customs.

It may be useful here to state the papers with which a vessel of the United States is furnished on a foreign voyage.

1. The certificate of registry above mentioned. This document is created by our laws, and belongs exclusively to vessels American built and owned, or such particular vessels as are expressly adopted as national vessels by the registering act. It is an instrument which the vessel must carry, in order to entitle her to the privilege of a vessel of the United States in our own ports.

2. The sea-letter or passport. This document is an instrument of the maritime law of nations, and treaties sometimes require it to be carried by the merchant vessels belonging to the contracting parties. It simply sets forth the ownership, and recommends the vessel to the comity of nations. It is only necessary for neutral vessels in time of war.

3. Mediterranean pass, to protect them against the Barbary Powers.

4. Certificates of property, which concern only the usage of our own custom-houses.

5. The crew list, (role d'equipage.) This instrument is required by acts of the Congress of the United States and sometimes by treaties. It is necessary for the protection of the crews of every vessel in the course of the voyage during war abroad, and to prove that there are not an undue proportion of enemy's subjects on board the vessel.

The first acts of navigation passed by the English Parliament encouraged only the purchasing of ships, and it was not until the art of ship building was well understood in England that the act of navigation defined a British ship to mean a ship built in England, or a lawfully condemned prize, and navigated by a master and three-fourths of the mariners English. Long after these rules were established, the necessities of war compelled the English Parliament to relax them both with regard to ownership and to manning and navigating English ships. By statute of Anne it was enacted that during the continuance of the then war merchant or trading ships might be navigated by foreign seamen or mariners, not exceeding three-fourths of the mariners at one time employed, and the other fourth were to be natives or naturalized subjects of Great Britain. By that act a foreigner for serving two years was to all intents and purposes to be deemed a natural born subject.

The liberty to employ foreign seamen was renewed in the year 1740 by statute, when a general power was lodged in the crown to permit merchant ships and trading vessels to be manned with foreign seamen during the continuance of any war. In 1755 a temporary permission was given to employ foreign seamen, and again in 1779. In both which acts of Parliament there was a saving of the King's power to grant such permissions under the statute above alluded to. It never was supposed that such vessels lost their national character by these acts, or were not to all intents and purposes British ships and protected by the flag they bore.

By the treaties existing between the United States and most of the maritime Powers of Europe it is stipulated that the ships and vessels of the contracting parties shall be provided with a passport in the following terms:

To all those who shall see these presents, greeting:

It is hereby made known that leave and permission have been given to ———, master and commander of the ship called the ———, of the town or port of ———, burden ——— tons or thereabouts, lying in the port or haven of ———, and bound for ———, and laden with ———, to depart and proceed with his said ship or vessel on his said voyage; such ship or vessel having been visited, and the said commander or master having made oath before the proper officer that said ship or vessel belongs to one or more of the citizens or subjects of ———, and to him or them only.

Now, therefore, as it has been clearly proved that every nation has an incontestible right to enact such laws as it may deem expedient in order to give a national character to its ships or vessels, provided they wholly and truly belong to its subjects or citizens, I propose to substitute for the sixth article of the project the following:

ARTICLE —. To the end that all manner of dissensions and quarrels may be avoided and prevented on one side and the other, it is agreed that in case either of the contracting parties should be engaged in a war the ships or vessels belonging to the citizens of the other party must be furnished with sea-letters or passports, expressing the name, property, and bulk of the ship or vessel, and also the name and place of habitation of the master and commander of the said ship, that it may appear thereby that such ship or vessel truly and wholly belongs to the citizens of one of the parties. Which passport shall be made out and granted according to the form annexed to this treaty. They shall likewise be recalled and renewed every year, that is, if the ship happens to return home within the space of a year.

I do not think any further provision necessary, for in time of peace a certificate of registry setting forth that the ship or vessel belongs wholly to a citizen or citizens of the country, and is commanded by a citizen, ought to be and always is considered a sufficient proof of the nationality of the vessel.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

Their Excellencies the PLENIPOTENTIARIES of the United Mexican States.

Protocol of the sixth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on the 6th day of May, 1826.

His excellency Don Sebastian Camacho exhibited his powers to act as one of the plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Republic.

The plenipotentiary of the United States of America opened the conference by observing that the last conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the respective countries had become a subject of discussion in the Congress of the United States, and it had been there supposed that the argument used by him, to wit: "That the United States had pledged themselves not to permit any other Power than Spain to interfere either with their independence or form of government; and that as in the event of such an attempt being made by the Powers of Europe we would be compelled to take the most active and efficient part, and to bear the brunt of the contest, it was not just that we should be placed on a less favorable footing than the other Republics of America whose existence we were ready to support at such hazards," was calculated to deceive the plenipotentiaries of Mexico, and to lead them to believe that the United States had given to Mexico and to the other new States of America such a pledge; that it was well known to the Mexican plenipotentiaries no other pledge had ever been given than what was contained in the message of President Monroe, and which, he believed, the people of the United States would have redeemed; but from the similarity of our institutions no Mexican could be ignorant that such a declaration on the part of the President of the United States was not binding on the nation without the sanction of Congress. His excellency José Ignacio Esteva, one of the former plenipotentiaries, replied, that he had so understood the plenipotentiary of the United States; and that even if the pledge had been more solemn and binding he should not have thought the United States entitled to any special privileges on that account, as they could not act otherwise in such a conjunction without betraying their best interests.

On the first article of the project being read, the plenipotentiary of the United States observed that this article had been altered at the suggestion of the Mexican plenipotentiaries in order to render it exactly conformable to the first article of the treaty between Mexico and Great Britain; but as that treaty had not been ratified, he proposed to reinstate the first article as it stood in the project, as more comprehensive. This was agreed to by the Mexican plenipotentiaries, and the first article of the project approved.

On reading the second article, the plenipotentiaries of Mexico observed that a similar article in their treaty with Great Britain had been attended with some difficulty; that they yielded the exceptions in favor of the States which formerly had been Spanish possessions; but that circumstances might arise which would render it important to them to grant privileges to another nation which should not be extensive to the United States, as, for instance, on the introduction of quicksilver from Idria, and other articles of a like nature; that the British plenipotentiaries had declared that the object of this article was meant to embrace general principles and not such particular cases, with which declaration they had been satisfied, and would be so with a similar explanation on the part of the American plenipotentiary.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that he considered the object of all commercial treaties to be the establishment of general principles, and could not, therefore, object to make a similar declaration respecting this article. It was approved.

The third article was read and approved.

On reading the fourth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries remarked that the principles herein attempted to be established of perfect reciprocity did not and could not confer reciprocal advantages, as the whole benefit of such an agreement must accrue to the United States; for that Mexico had not a single vessel capable of making a foreign voyage, while the United States covered the ocean with their merchant marine. The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that neither would the principle of the most favored nation be attended with equal advantages to the contracting parties, as in that case the whole advantage would accrue to the Mexican United States. The United States had adopted the principle here contended for in their treaties with Great Britain, Sweden and Norway, the Netherlands, Prussia, the Free and Hanseatic cities of Bremen, of Hamburg, and of Lubeck, and with Oldenburg. By these treaties the vessels of Great Britain and of the above named Powers were admitted into the ports of the United States on the same footing as their own; if, therefore, the vessels of Mexico were to be admitted into the ports of the United States on the footing of the most favored nation, they would pay only the same charges and duties as those of the United States, whereas the vessels of the latter might be subject to exorbitant discriminating duties, according to the regulations which Mexico might think proper to adopt in that particular. The plenipotentiaries of Mexico rejoined that they would be very ready to adopt the principle of reciprocity whenever Mexico possessed a competent commercial marine; but for the present the President had resolved to leave the Congress unshackled by treaties and free to adopt such regulations as might be deemed expedient in order to encourage the growth of a Mexican marine. The plenipotentiary of the United States recapitulated the arguments he had formerly advanced in a note addressed to the Mexican plenipotentiaries, and observed that they were strengthened by the course of policy pursued by Colombia in this particular. That Colombia, after the treaty with the United States had been ratified, had agreed to the principle of equal and reciprocal charges and duties in her treaty with Great Britain, convinced, after mature deliberation, that it was both more just and subject to fewer inconveniences than that of the most favored nation, and had subsequently consented to substitute the former in the treaty with the United States, agreeably to the second article of their treaty with that Government.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico observed that the situation of Colombia was different from that of Mexico; Colombia had some commercial marine, while Mexico had literally not a merchantman, and that on this subject the resolution of their Government was unalterable.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the seventh conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on the 17th of May, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

The conference was opened by reading the fourth article of the project, and, after some further discussion, the plenipotentiary of the United States yielded the point and accepted the alternative of the most favored nation, which is established in three articles, the fourth, fifth, and sixth, and which were approved.

The seventh article being read the Mexican plenipotentiaries objected to the wording of it, and, especially, to the last clause, viz: "being in all cases treated like citizens of the country where they reside," and proposed to substitute the article to a like effect, which had been agreed upon in their treaty with Great Britain. On examining the article proposed to be thus substituted it appeared to embrace precisely the same principle, and the plenipotentiary of the United States consented to its insertion.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the eighth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on the 2d of June, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

The eighth article was read, and, with the alteration of one word, not affecting the sense, was approved.

The ninth article was read, and, on the suggestion of the Mexican plenipotentiaries, the words "exclusively on them" were inserted between the words "imposed" and "any forced loan," and, with this alteration, this article was approved.

On reading the tenth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries observed that, by their regulations, a vessel was compelled to exhibit her manifest to the custom-house forty-eight hours after her arrival, and they thought this necessary in order to prevent fraud.

The plenipotentiaries of the United States replied that the exhibition of her manifest could not be construed into an obstacle or impediment.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico proposed that an expression should be introduced obliging vessels so circumstanced to conform in all things to the rules and regulations of the ports wherein they may take refuge.

The plenipotentiary of the United States objected to this proposition, that some regulations might, in certain cases, amount to a serious obstacle or impediment; as, for instance, if such regulations compelled the unlading of the vessel and deposit of the cargo until the vessel sailed. This would subject the owners to great expense and present such an impediment as would render this article of little importance; that the common rights of humanity demanded the existence of such an agreement as that contained in this article; and that each of the contracting parties was at liberty to adopt whatever measures were deemed expedient to prevent smuggling or fraud.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries observed that they saw no other objection to the article, which appeared consistent both with the rights of nations and of humanity; they only wished to prevent fraud, and, requesting time to consider the subject, this point was reserved.

The eleventh article was agreed to, with the addition of the words "reckoning from the capture of the vessel or merchandise," so as to fix more positively the rights of claimants. This addition was made at the suggestion of the Mexican plenipotentiaries.

On reading the twelfth article the same difficulty presented itself to the Mexican plenipotentiaries as in the tenth—the fraudulent introduction of goods. It was, after some discussion, agreed to insert the words "with the precautions that may be thought expedient, on the part of the respective Governments, in order to prevent fraud."

The plenipotentiary of the United States observed that such a right was implied in every case, and therefore it was unnecessary to insert the words proposed by the Mexican plenipotentiaries; that he considered it as much the interest of the United States to prevent their vessels from smuggling on the Mexican coast as that of the Mexican Government itself, for this illegal trade was destructive of the interests of the fair dealer; and he would not therefore object to the insertion of any phrase that was judged necessary to effect this desirable object.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries continued to consider the insertion of these words as essential to a proper understanding of the article, and the plenipotentiary of the United States assented.

The article thus altered was approved.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the ninth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on the 12th of June, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

The tenth article of the treaty having been suspended at the request of the Mexican plenipotentiaries, they proposed to add the words "with the precautions which may be deemed expedient by the respective Governments to avoid fraud."

The plenipotentiary of the United States again objected that this article, as it stood, did not prevent either Government from adopting such measures as might be judged expedient to prevent fraud—an inherent right which every Government possessed, and which the insertion of these words would seem to render doubtful.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries thought it better to have the right expressed, and, thus modified, the article was approved.

On reading the thirteenth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries expressed a desire that the subject referred to in the last clause should not be touched upon, viz: real estate, there being a law now before Congress relating to the right of aliens to hold real property, and they wished to avoid the discussion of that important subject incidentally in this treaty. They proposed, instead of "personal effects," to insert the words "effects of whatever class or condition they may be," being the words adopted in a similar article in their treaty with Great Britain.

The plenipotentiary of the United States objected that such a provision was adverse to the laws of some of the United States of America, but that, as he was desirous of meeting the views of the Mexican plenipotentiaries, he would examine the article alluded to in their treaty with Great Britain, and if he found it not essentially different from this he would agree to adopt it. It remained, therefore, suspended.

To the fourteenth article it had been formerly objected by the Mexican plenipotentiaries that they could not interfere with or alter the manner of conducting business in their courts of justice, and they proposed to strike out the last clause and insert the following: "And such citizens or their agents shall enjoy in every respect the same rights in the prosecution and defence of their persons or property as the citizens of the country where the cause may be tried."

The plenipotentiary of the United States had likewise consented to this alteration, and the article, thus modified, was approved.

The fifteenth article had been fully discussed in former conferences; and on the ground that the constitution of the United Mexican States effectually prevented the introduction of the principle of religious toleration into any treaty Mexico might make with a foreign Power, the plenipotentiary of the United States agreed to substitute for this article that introduced into the first treaty between Mexico and Great Britain.

On reading the sixteenth article, which establishes the principle that free ships shall make free goods, a desultory conversation took place on the subject, which ended in the Mexican plenipotentiaries requesting time for consideration.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the tenth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on June 13, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

The plenipotentiary of the United States signified his willingness to yield to the wishes of the Mexican plenipotentiaries, and to adopt the article they had proposed in lieu of the thirteenth article of the project, striking out therefrom the word "personal," so as to embrace real as well as personal estate, and the words "likewise in the administration of justice," that being provided for in the fourteenth article of the project. So the article relating to this subject in the first treaty between Mexico and Great Britain, with these modifications, was approved.

The sixteenth article was again read, when the Mexican plenipotentiaries renewed their objection, viz: the difficulty of avoiding smuggling on their Atlantic coast, if they consented to this article without any qualification.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that, in his opinion, the addition proposed by the Mexican plenipotentiaries in their former conferences respecting this article provided amply against the evil they apprehended.

They proposed to place this principle on the same footing as that respecting reciprocity of trade, omitting it altogether, and barely stating that Mexico allowed its justice and policy, and would adopt it whenever she possessed a commercial marine.

To this proposal the plenipotentiary of the United States objected, that the two principles were widely different; that he had yielded the first, because Mexico had no commercial marine at all; but the second was intended to apply to a state of war, and Mexico had cruisers and might extend her means of offensive maritime warfare. He considered it of the deepest interest to all the American Governments that this principle should be engrafted in their policy and form a part of their treaties, and therefore never would consent to abandon it.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries declared that they never would consent to the exception contained in the last clause; and after some further conversation it was again agreed to suspend the further discussion of this and the succeeding article.

The twentieth article was read and approved.

The twenty-first article, containing the same principle as the sixteenth, was reserved.

The twenty-second article was likewise read and approved.

The twenty-third article was read, when some conversation took place respecting the meaning of the last clause, as to what cases it might apply, and what ought to be considered testimony entirely equivalent to the defect of the papers; and after some conversation thereon it was proposed by the Mexican plenipotentiaries, and agreed to by the plenipotentiary of the United States, to introduce the words "to the satisfaction of the competent tribunal" at the close of the article. Thus amended, this article was approved.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the eleventh conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on June 15, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

On reading the twenty-fourth article the plenipotentiaries of Mexico observed that they feared this might give rise to much inconvenience; that the United States had a great many small cruisers out for the protection of their commerce, and that the captains of those cruisers being called upon, as they frequently are, to give convoy to their merchantmen, could not know what cargoes they carried, and in that manner prohibited goods might be introduced into their ports, or, in the event of any point of the Mexican coast being again occupied by an enemy, might enter such port with goods belonging to that enemy, and succor their forces, although besieged and blockaded by the small means Mexico might possess to render such a blockade effectual, as, for instance, one or two gun-boats.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that the article respecting vessels attempting to enter blockaded ports obviated the latter objection, as no officer in the service of his Government would dare to force a legal blockade, and that every reliance might be placed on the honor of the American officers of the Navy, and, finally, that this article was necessary to prevent collision between the cruisers of the respective parties, for that it was not to be expected that the commanders of ships-of-war would suffer the vessels under their convoy to be searched by the cruisers of the opposite party.

After some further conversation this article was approved.

The twenty-fifth article, with the insertion of the additional words "in conformity with the usages and laws of the country," was approved.

On reading the twenty-sixth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries asked if the protection therein promised to the citizens of the respective parties, who exercised any trade or calling other than that of a merchant, would prevent either Government from taking such precautions as they might judge necessary by removing such persons from the coasts and limits of the respective Governments.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that he certainly did not consider this clause in the article as at all affecting the right of each party to take such precautions as, in their opinion, the necessity of the case required, or to remove such persons as are herein designated from the coasts or limits of the respective Governments.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries expressed themselves satisfied with this explanation, and the article was approved.

The twenty-seventh article was read and approved.

On reading the twenty-eighth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries expressed a wish that the word "public" might be expunged therefrom, as it might give rise to some mistake. It being well known to the members of Congress that consuls were not entitled to the privileges of any class of ministers, this expression might be objected to by them.

The plenipotentiary of the United States observed, in reply, that consuls were, to all intents and purposes, public agents of the nation whose commercial interests are committed to their charge; but as he did not think the insertion of the word "public" necessary to a correct understanding of what was the character of a consul, he should not object to its being expunged.

With this alteration the article was approved.

On reading the twenty-ninth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries asked whether the last clause of this article might not be attended with some inconvenience; that consuls were generally merchants, and might, with other merchants, be called upon to exhibit their books.

The plenipotentiary of the United States stated distinctly, in reply, that this clause was intended only to protect the archives and papers of the consulate, not the books and papers of the consul, who, if a merchant, was subject to all the laws and regulations of the respective Governments touching his mercantile transactions.

This article was approved.

The thirtieth article being read, some conversation took place on the manner of proving whether the mariner who was arrested had or not accomplished the term of time for which he was engaged; on which the plenipotentiary of the United States explained the usage practiced in the United States for the engagement of sailors.

The article was approved.

The thirty-first article was read and approved.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the twelfth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on June 16, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

On reading the thirty-second article a conversation took place on the subject of the trade carried on by the citizens of the United States with the tribes of Indians inhabiting the territory of Mexico, by which these people were supplied with arms and other means of annoying the white settlers.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries proposed that all trade between the citizens of the respective parties and the Indian tribes inhabiting the territories of the other should be prohibited altogether.

To this the plenipotentiary of the United States replied that he had no doubt regulations might be adopted with regard to that trade which would produce useful and salutary effects, but did not think this the time to consider this subject. It required much reflection, and all parties were equally anxious to conclude the present treaty. When the treaty of limits is under discussion this important subject can be settled, and, in the meantime, each party might prepare a project in relation to it; but that he could, by no means, consent to the suspension of the trade in the meantime, nor could he conceive it necessary to do so, as each party was at liberty to make its own internal regulations respecting the trade with the Indians.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico observed that they perceived no objection to the first part of the inherent right which every Government possessed, and which the insertion of these words would seem to render doubtful.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries thought it better to have the right expressed, and, thus modified, the article was approved.

On reading the thirteenth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries expressed a desire that the subject referred to in the last clause should not be touched upon, viz: real estate, there being a law now before Congress relating to the right of aliens to hold real property, and they wished to avoid the discussion of that important subject incidentally in this treaty. They proposed, instead of "personal effects," to insert the words "effects of whatever class or condition they may be," being the words adopted in a similar article in their treaty with Great Britain.

The plenipotentiary of the United States objected that such a provision was adverse to the laws of some of the United States of America, but that, as he was desirous of meeting the views of the Mexican plenipotentiaries, he would examine the article alluded to in their treaty with Great Britain, and if he found it not essentially different from this he would agree to adopt it. It remained, therefore, suspended.

To the fourteenth article it had been formerly objected by the Mexican plenipotentiaries that they could not interfere with or alter the manner of conducting business in their courts of justice, and they proposed to strike out the last clause and insert the following: "And such citizens or their agents shall enjoy in every respect the same rights in the prosecution and defence of their persons or property as the citizens of the country where the cause may be tried."

The plenipotentiary of the United States had likewise consented to this alteration, and the article, thus modified, was approved.

The fifteenth article had been fully discussed in former conferences; and on the ground that the constitution of the United Mexican States effectually prevented the introduction of the principle of religious toleration into any treaty Mexico might make with a foreign Power, the plenipotentiary of the United States agreed to substitute for this article that introduced into the first treaty between Mexico and Great Britain.

On reading the sixteenth article, which establishes the principle that free ships shall make free goods, a desultory conversation took place on the subject, which ended in the Mexican plenipotentiaries requesting time for consideration.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the tenth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on June 13, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

The plenipotentiary of the United States signified his willingness to yield to the wishes of the Mexican plenipotentiaries, and to adopt the article they had proposed in lieu of the thirteenth article of the project, striking out therefrom the word "personal," so as to embrace real as well as personal estate, and the words "likewise in the administration of justice," that being provided for in the fourteenth article of the project. So the article relating to this subject in the first treaty between Mexico and Great Britain, with these modifications, was approved.

The sixteenth article was again read, when the Mexican plenipotentiaries renewed their objection, viz: the difficulty of avoiding smuggling on their Atlantic coast, if they consented to this article without any qualification.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that, in his opinion, the addition proposed by the Mexican plenipotentiaries in their former conferences respecting this article provided amply against the evil they apprehended.

They proposed to place this principle on the same footing as that respecting reciprocity of trade, omitting it altogether, and barely stating that Mexico allowed its justice and policy, and would adopt it whenever she possessed a commercial marine.

To this proposal the plenipotentiary of the United States objected, that the two principles were widely different; that he had yielded the first, because Mexico had no commercial marine at all; but the second was intended to apply to a state of war, and Mexico had cruisers and might extend her means of offensive maritime warfare. He considered it of the deepest interest to all the American Governments that this principle should be engrafted in their policy and form a part of their treaties, and therefore never would consent to abandon it.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries declared that they never would consent to the exception contained in the last clause; and after some further conversation it was again agreed to suspend the further discussion of this and the succeeding article.

The twentieth article was read and approved.

The twenty-first article, containing the same principle as the sixteenth, was reserved.

The twenty-second article was likewise read and approved.

The twenty-third article was read, when some conversation took place respecting the meaning of the last clause, as to what cases it might apply, and what ought to be considered testimony entirely equivalent to the defect of the papers; and after some conversation thereon it was proposed by the Mexican plenipotentiaries, and agreed to by the plenipotentiary of the United States, to introduce the words "to the satisfaction of the competent tribunal" at the close of the article. Thus amended, this article was approved.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the eleventh conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on June 15, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

On reading the twenty-fourth article the plenipotentiaries of Mexico observed that they feared this might give rise to much inconvenience; that the United States had a great many small cruisers out for the protection of their commerce, and that the captains of those cruisers being called upon, as they frequently are, to give convoy to their merchantmen, could not know what cargoes they carried, and in that manner prohibited goods might be introduced into their ports, or, in the event of any point of the Mexican coast being again occupied by an enemy, might enter such port with goods belonging to that enemy, and succor their forces, although besieged and blockaded by the small means Mexico might possess to render such a blockade effectual, as, for instance, one or two gun-boats.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that the article respecting vessels attempting to enter blockaded ports obviated the latter objection, as no officer in the service of his Government would dare to force a legal blockade, and that every reliance might be placed on the honor of the American officers of the Navy, and, finally, that this article was necessary to prevent collision between the cruisers of the respective parties, for that it was not to be expected that the commanders of ships-of-war would suffer the vessels under their convoy to be searched by the cruisers of the opposite party.

After some further conversation this article was approved.

The twenty-fifth article, with the insertion of the additional words "in conformity with the usages and laws of the country," was approved.

On reading the twenty-sixth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries asked if the protection therein promised to the citizens of the respective parties, who exercised any trade or calling other than that of a merchant, would prevent either Government from taking such precautions as they might judge necessary by removing such persons from the coasts and limits of the respective Governments.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that he certainly did not consider this clause in the article as at all affecting the right of each party to take such precautions as, in their opinion, the necessity of the case required, or to remove such persons as are herein designated from the coasts or limits of the respective Governments.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries expressed themselves satisfied with this explanation, and the article was approved.

The twenty-seventh article was read and approved.

On reading the twenty-eighth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries expressed a wish that the word "public" might be expunged therefrom, as it might give rise to some mistake. It being well known to the members of Congress that consuls were not entitled to the privileges of any class of ministers, this expression might be objected to by them.

The plenipotentiary of the United States observed, in reply, that consuls were, to all intents and purposes, public agents of the nation whose commercial interests are committed to their charge; but as he did not think the insertion of the word "public" necessary to a correct understanding of what was the character of a consul, he should not object to its being expunged.

With this alteration the article was approved.

On reading the twenty-ninth article the Mexican plenipotentiaries asked whether the last clause of this article might not be attended with some inconvenience; that consuls were generally merchants, and might, with other merchants, be called upon to exhibit their books.

The plenipotentiary of the United States stated distinctly, in reply, that this clause was intended only to protect the archives and papers of the consulate, not the books and papers of the consul, who, if a merchant, was subject to all the laws and regulations of the respective Governments touching his mercantile transactions.

This article was approved.

The thirtieth article being read, some conversation took place on the manner of proving whether the mariner who was arrested had or not accomplished the term of time for which he was engaged; on which the plenipotentiary of the United States explained the usage practiced in the United States for the engagement of sailors.

The article was approved.

The thirty-first article was read and approved.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Protocol of the twelfth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on June 16, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

On reading the thirty-second article a conversation took place on the subject of the trade carried on by the citizens of the United States with the tribes of Indians inhabiting the territory of Mexico, by which these people were supplied with arms and other means of annoying the white settlers.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries proposed that all trade between the citizens of the respective parties and the Indian tribes inhabiting the territories of the other should be prohibited altogether.

To this the plenipotentiary of the United States replied that he had no doubt regulations might be adopted with regard to that trade which would produce useful and salutary effects, but did not think this the time to consider this subject. It required much reflection, and all parties were equally anxious to conclude the present treaty. When the treaty of limits is under discussion this important subject can be settled, and, in the meantime, each party might prepare a project in relation to it; but that he could, by no means, consent to the suspension of the trade in the meantime, nor could he conceive it necessary to do so, as each party was at liberty to make its own internal regulations respecting the trade with the Indians.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico observed that they perceived no objection to the first part of the article, and only wished to introduce the words "confined only to this object" after the words "treaties of peace;" and they proposed that each party should bind itself to prevent all traffic in arms and munitions of war.

The plenipotentiary of the United States said that he had no objection to the insertion of the words "confined only to this object," but could not consent to the addition to the article which was proposed by the Mexican plenipotentiaries; he would prefer striking out the words which related to the mutual commerce of the parties with the Indian tribes.

This proposal was accepted by the Mexican plenipotentiaries, and the latter clause was struck out.

An additional clause was added to the article, in the following words, viz: "And in the event of any person or persons being captured by the Indians inhabiting the territories of either of the contracting parties, being hereafter, or having been, brought into the territories of the other, both Governments engage, and bind themselves in the most solemn manner, to send back all such persons as soon as they receive notice of their entrance into their respective territories, or to deliver them up to the agent or person authorized by the Government which claims them, reciprocally giving notice to each of the parties, respectively, and the claimant paying the expenses incurred in the transmission and maintenance of such person or persons, who, in the meantime, shall be treated with the utmost hospitality by the authorities of the place where they may be. Nor shall it be lawful, on any pretext whatsoever, for the citizens of either of the contracting parties to purchase, or to hold captive, prisoners made by the Indians inhabiting the territory of the other."

The reasons assigned for introducing this clause were, that it had become the practice of late for the Indians inhabiting the territory of Mexico to capture the white settlers and convey them over the border, where they were ransomed by the citizens of the United States, who detained them until that ransom was repaid, with costs. This state of things encouraged the Indians to make war upon the whites, and it was the interest of all parties to put a stop to this odious traffic.

This article, thus modified, was agreed to.

The thirty-third article, relating to the delivery of fugitive slaves and of murderers and forgers taking refuge in the territories of either of the contracting parties, was read and agreed to.

The thirty-fourth article was likewise read and agreed to.

The discussion respecting the sixteenth article was renewed. The Mexican plenipotentiaries observed that they feared the expression "from one port belonging to an enemy to another port belonging to an enemy" might be so interpreted as to authorize the direct trade between Mexico and Spain in vessels belonging to the United States.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that such was not the interpretation he gave to these words; that, in his opinion, they only meant to authorize the trade by a neutral from one of the ports of an enemy to another port belonging to the same enemy, as, for instance, from a port of Spain, situated on the Mediterranean, to another port in Spain, situated on the Atlantic, viz: from Barcelona to Cadiz. And he interpreted the words "whether they be under the jurisdiction of one Power or of many" to allude to a state of war between one of the parties with two or more Powers, rendering it lawful for the neutral to trade to the ports belonging to such belligerent Power.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries recurred to their former objection respecting vessels of the United States being found within the sack of the Gulf with Spanish goods on board: that if such vessels were permitted to pass free it would be impossible for the marine of the Republic to prevent smuggling on that coast.

The plenipotentiary of the United States repeated that it was the earnest wish of his Government to prevent all illegal trade, and was of opinion that vessels of the United States, found within that part of the Gulf embraced by the limits of Mexico, with prohibited goods on board, might fairly be inferred to be bound to some port of the Republic, unless they could clearly show that they had been driven there by stress of weather.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries then proposed that these explanations should make a part of the treaty.

The plenipotentiary of the United States observed, in reply, that he had no other objection to insert the first explanation in the treaty, but that he considered the text so very intelligible that it would appear strange to insert so obvious an interpretation; and that, with respect to the latter, he could not consent to embody in the treaty, as a rule which was to govern the two parties, a particular case, which applied only to one party, and grew out of a state of war in which that party was accidentally involved; and that, in his opinion, the explanations he had given, which would be entered upon the protocol, ought to be sufficient, especially as any claims that might be hereafter made for vessels thus captured must come from the Government of the United States.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries asked if the plenipotentiary of the United States would object to insert at the close of the article that the explanations on this article, entered upon the protocol, should be considered a part of the article?

The plenipotentiary of the United States said, in reply, that he could not consent to such a declaration being inserted in the body of the treaty, because it was contrary to usage, but offered to prepare a note explanatory of his views on this point.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries observed that they thought the words of that article of the treaty between the United States and Spain, which establishes this principle, more clear than that proposed in the project.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that he had no objection to its being substituted for the one he had proposed, provided the same exception was added which his project contained, and which was adopted subsequently by the United States and Spain in the treaty of limits, which had been concluded at Washington by Mr. Adams, the actual President of the United States, and Don Luis Onis.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries said that they trusted the plenipotentiary of the United States would not insist upon the insertion of this exception, as they had the positive instructions of his excellency the President not to assent to it.

The plenipotentiary of the United States then submitted a note, which he had prepared on that subject, to the consideration of the Mexican plenipotentiaries.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

[Note.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Mexico, June 16, 1826.

MOST EXCELLENT SIRS: As the objections made by your excellencies to the sixteenth article of the project are not directed against the principle therein established, that free ships shall make free goods, but are limited to the exception contained in the last clause, viz: that the flag of the neutral shall cover the property of enemies, whose Government acknowledges this principle, and not of others, I shall confine my remarks to that clause.

If it were necessary to examine the question whether free ships ought of right to make free goods, it would not be difficult to prove, to every unprejudiced mind, that this rule is sanctioned by the laws of nations, and is already a part of the public law.

When this principle has not governed the acts of belligerents, it is only because they possess the power, not the right, to annoy the peaceable and defenceless commerce of a neutral. Is it, then, just that those Governments which will not acknowledge this rule because they possess the power to violate a principle of international law should be placed in a situation to profit by a declaration of what shall be the rule between us?

If, for example, a war should break out between the United States of America and Great Britain, a contingency which I regard as more remote than a war between those States and any other of the Powers of Europe, the cruisers of his Britannic Majesty might capture the goods and merchandise belonging to citizens of the United States if found on board a Mexican vessel, whereas the goods and merchandise belonging to the subjects of his Britannic Majesty, if found on board Mexican ships, would be protected against capture from the cruisers of the United States. So that the Government which acts without regard to public law, and violates neutral rights, would profit by the existence of this salutary rule between ourselves, and the Government that holds this principle sacred would suffer by it.

Mexico would submit to have her ships searched on the high seas, and goods belonging to a neutral taken out; indeed, most frequently, to have her vessels sent into a foreign port, and liable to great detention, in order that they may carry the goods of Great Britain free from capture by the cruisers of the United States, an advantage which will be merely nominal, from the vast superiority of the commercial marine of that country, and its great maritime means to protect their commerce in time of war. A very short experience of the evils resulting from a violation of this principle, of the vexation and annoyance to which Mexican ships would be exposed from acknowledging the right of search for goods belonging to a belligerent party, would convince this Government that every effort ought to be made to induce other nations to accede to the salutary rule we are about to adopt, and that the advantages of carrying the goods of one belligerent ought not to weigh against the policy of generalizing a principle so important to the weaker maritime Powers. The United States can no longer be classed in that rank; they are, beyond all contradiction, one of the great maritime Powers, but they are just in all their dealings towards other nations, and the principle they contended for in their weakness they still advocate in the full consciousness of their strength.

Let us suppose the United States to be involved in a war with France, can there be a doubt that, with the maritime force of the United States, the commerce of France, in single ships, would be swept from the ocean? her merchantmen could only navigate under the protection of powerful convoys, and even then exposed to great risks. As the rule is now laid down between the United States and France, Mexico might become the free carriers of the rich products and manufactures of France from Europe to the ports of Mexico, and to the French colonies and islands, and of the products and manufactures of the United States to Mexico and to Europe; but if one of the contracting parties, for example, the United States, did not acknowledge this principle, would it be just towards France that the vessels of Mexico should carry the goods of the citizens of the United States free from search and from capture, while the cruisers of that Power might search for and capture the goods belonging to the subjects of his most Christian Majesty?

Knowing the time of your excellencies to be very precious at this particular moment, I will not press this argument any further, and trust that sufficient has been advanced to convince your excellencies of the justice of the exception here contended for.

I have the honor to be, with much respect, your excellencies' most obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

Their Excellencies the PLENIPOTENTIARIES of the United Mexican States.

[Note.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Mexico, June 17, 1826.

MOST EXCELLENT SIRS: Your excellencies having expressed a doubt as to the real interpretation which may hereafter be given to an expression contained in the 16th article of the project under discussion, which is in these words, "not only directly from the places of the enemy aforementioned to neutral places, but also from one place belonging to an enemy to another place belonging to an enemy, whether they be under the jurisdiction of the same Power or of many," and entertain some fears that the trade between Mexico and Spain, in vessels belonging to the United States, might be authorized thereby, I beg leave to assure your excellencies that I do not interpret these words in this sense. I regard the meaning of the words, "but also from one place belonging to an enemy to another place belonging to an enemy," to be that it shall be lawful for the vessels of either of the contracting parties, being neutral, to carry the goods of the belligerent from one point in his dominions to another point in his dominions; as, for example, for the vessels of the United States to transport the goods and merchandise of Spain from Barcelona to Cadiz, or from either of those ports to the Philippine islands, if they be still under the dominion of Spain. And the words, "whether they be under the jurisdiction of the same Power or under several," I understand to apply to a state of war between either of the contracting parties with allied Powers; for example, if the United States were to be involved in a war with France and Spain at once, and Mexico neutral, it would be lawful, under the stipulation, for the vessels of Mexico to carry on a free commerce, not only between two ports of France, but likewise between the ports of that nation and those of Spain. And this is the interpretation which, on the part of the United States, will be given in all future times to this clause of the article under discussion. With respect to the fears your excellencies have expressed, that, availing themselves of this article of the treaty, the citizens of the United States might introduce the products and manufactures of Spain into the ports of Mexico, I can assure your excellencies that it is not the meaning or intention of this article to sanction the introduction into the ports of either of the contracting parties of the goods or merchandise belonging to its enemies. And the Government of the United States will not object to any regulations this nation may think proper to adopt to prevent the introduction into its ports of Spanish or other prohibited goods. And from the peculiar formation of a part of the Mexican Atlantic coast, viz: the Gulf of Mexico, it may fairly be inferred that vessels found within that part of the Gulf which is embraced by the limits of the Mexican United States intend to enter some one of their ports, unless it shall be clearly made to appear that they were forced by stress of weather out of the direct course of their voyage.

I have the honor to be, with much respect, your excellencies' most obedient servant,

J. R. POINSETT.

Their Excellencies THE PLENIPOTENTIARIES of the United Mexican States.

Protocol of the thirteenth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on the 17th of June, 1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries observed that they had maturely considered the note submitted to them by the plenipotentiary of the United States, in relation to the exception contained in the last clause of the sixteenth article, "that the flag of the neutral shall cover the property of enemies whose Governments acknowledge this principle, and not of others;" that, in their opinion, this exception could apply only to Great Britain, and, as they had negotiations pending with that Power, it would be impolitic on their part to consent to the insertion of an exception which was calculated to wound and irritate the feelings of that Power.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that the exception was not confined to Great Britain, but was intended to embrace all nations that would not acknowledge this useful and salutary principle, and that Great Britain had not shown herself to have been offended with Colombia for having adopted this principle, together with the exception, in her treaty with the United States.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries said that they did not consider the United Mexican States to be placed, in any respect, in a similar situation with Colombia, and, in this particular, the difference was very great; that Colombia had made her treaty with the United States before she had entered into negotiations with Great Britain, but that Mexico had not only had negotiations pending with that Government, but had difficult questions to adjust, and, in the last treaty, this very principle had formed one of those difficulties; that they could not conceive the United States had any right to insist upon introducing this rule into their treaty with Mexico as a sine qua non, much less the exception, inasmuch as they had made a treaty with Great Britain on a different basis.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that the United States did not insist upon the insertion of this principle in their treaties as a sine qua non; but, as it was so obviously just and of such vast importance to all nations that desired to establish their wealth and greatness on the basis of peace and justice, that they urged its adoption, in all their treaties with foreign Powers, with an honest zeal for the promotion of just principles, and were especially anxious to establish this rule, and make it general among the nations of America.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries observed that, in their opinion, the United States ought to be content with settling the principle, without insisting upon the insertion of the exception; the first they were willing to admit, but they regarded the second of so little real importance to the United States in the present state of the Mexican mercantile marine, and so prejudicial to their own interests in the actual stage of their negotiations with Great Britain, that they could not consent to admit it.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that, although he was aware of the importance attached by his Government to the exception in question, and was himself perfectly convinced of it, still, as he was willing on this occasion to give to the Mexican plenipotentiaries a proof of his earnest desire to conclude this long pending negotiation, and an assurance that his Government was disposed rather to promote the negotiations of Mexico with Great Britain than to obstruct them, he would yield this point.

The fifteenth article of the treaty of friendship, limits, and navigation, between the United States of America and Spain, signed at San Lorenzo el Real in the year 1795, and which establishes the principle that free ships make free goods, was substituted for the sixteenth article of the project, and approved.

The seventeenth article, the consideration of which had been suspended because it related to the same subject, was examined and approved.

On reading the nineteenth article, which had been suspended on the same account, the Mexican plenipotentiaries asked whether this article was to be interpreted in the same manner and with the same explanations as the sixteenth article.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that he regarded this as a correlative of the sixteenth article, and wished it to be understood that all the explanations he had given on those points, which the Mexican plenipotentiaries had regarded as obscure in the sixteenth article, were meant to apply equally to this. The nineteenth article was then approved.

The last article was read, and some conversation took place on what was the precise meaning of the words "unreasonably delayed;" and it was agreed that they should be understood an excessive and unreasonable term of time, for which no excuse could be alleged.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico then observed that they had an additional article to propose, which, considering the peculiar situation of their country, they trusted would readily be assented to by the plenipotentiary of the United States. It was in these words: "All Spaniards naturalized in the United States of America, from the year 1820 and subsequently thereunto, are excepted from the stipulations of the third article of this treaty during the continuance of the present war between the United Mexican States and Spain."

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that, from the nature of the institutions of his country, all citizens were placed upon an equal footing, native or naturalized, without distinction as to what country they may have belonged, they being compelled to take an oath, on becoming citizens, to renounce all allegiance to any other Government, and more especially to the one to which they last belonged, and that he thought the Mexican Government might adopt such precautionary measures and internal regulations as would prevent the danger they appeared to apprehend from that class of citizens of the United States of America.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries rejoined that the struggle between the United States and the mother country was too recent for that Government not to be aware of the difficulties Mexico had to contend with in the present contest; that this was not a common war, which, if it terminated unfortunately for them, would be attended only with a loss of money or of territory, but on its success depended the national existence of Mexico, and common rules did not, therefore, apply to such a state of things; that the excessive obstinacy of Spain was well known, and, therefore, the war might be protracted so as to enable that Government to pour into the Mexican States innumerable Spaniards, under the guise of citizens of the United States of America, who might, by virtue of the stipulations of the third article of this treaty, frequent the bays, harbors, and rivers of Mexico, and reside in her territories for the purpose of promoting the rebellious dispositions of the Spaniards that now resided there; that such stipulations in favor of Spanish subjects, however disguised, they regarded as incompatible with the safety of the Mexican Republic, and never could consent to their being inserted into a treaty with the United States of America during the continuance of the present war with Spain.

The plenipotentiary of the United States of America withdrew his objections, and the article was approved.

[Translation]

To his Excellency J. R. Poinsett, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America.

PALACE, June 19, 1826.

MOST EXCELLENT SIR: The undersigned plenipotentiaries of the United Mexican States have the honor to submit to the consideration of your excellency the article which they proposed in their last conference, and which is as follows:

"Whereas, it being equally important to the two contracting parties that their boundaries should be definitively settled by means of a solemn treaty, they bind themselves, mutually, to take into consideration this point as early as possible, affording, in their respective territories, the succors that may be required by the Commissioners, or persons sent out by the other party to make scientific observations, reconnaissances, discoveries, and all operations relative to the conclusion of the aforementioned convention, on the basis of justice, and in conformity to the friendly relations which now exist between the two parties, the persons requiring such succors paying for them what is just. Nor shall any acts of possession that may be made in the meantime by the citizens, people, or Indians of the territory of the one party, within the territory of the other, create a right to claims or pretensions to indemnities at the period of concluding the definitive treaty."

The undersigned abstain from making any further observations on the justice and reciprocal expediency of this article, after having fully exposed them to your excellency in the course of the last conference, it being the principal object that so delicate a subject should not remain open to the different opinions of the respective Governments of the two countries, but specified in such terms that neither Government can avoid attending to its settlement in the most just and friendly manner.

The undersigned have the honor to offer to your excellency the assurances of their perfect consideration.

CAMACHO.
ESTEVA.

[Note.]

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Mexico, June 26, 1826.

MOST EXCELLENT SIRS: The undersigned has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellencies' note of the 19th instant, proposing an article respecting the definitive treaty of limits between our respective countries, and which your excellencies propose should form an additional article to the treaty of amity, navigation, and commerce.

The undersigned assents to the article, with the addition of the words "unauthorized by the Government" before the words "acts of possession," for were either Government to authorize such acts, pending the negotiations to establish the boundaries between the two nations, such acts might give rise to well founded claims. It ought, likewise, to be distinctly understood that grants, during that period of time, made to individuals, by either Government, of lands so situated as to render it probable that they may be included within the limits of the other, will not be considered valid.

In accepting this article, as proposed by your excellencies, the undersigned deems it a duty he owes his own Government to state distinctly, that such a provision is totally unnecessary to bind them to take this important subject into immediate consideration, and at once to act upon it, and to conclude with Mexico a definitive treaty of limits.

The treaty of limits between the United States of America and his Catholic Majesty, concluded at Washington on the 22d of February, 1819, having been ratified by both parties when Mexico composed a part of the Spanish dominions, is considered by the United States as obligatory upon both the United States and Mexico. And as a proof of the light in which that treaty was viewed by this Government, I herewith enclose the copy of a note addressed by Mr. Torrens, Chargé d'Affaires from Mexico to the Government of the United States, and dated February 15, 1824, in which he declares the willingness of the supreme executive power of Mexico to accede to the limits agreed upon in the third article of the aforementioned treaty, and its readiness to co-operate with the United States in carrying it into complete effect. The undersigned was instructed, however, by his Government, to accede to the wishes of that of Mexico, if it desired to fix a new line, that might obviate some difficulties which are supposed to attend the existence of the present limits as agreed upon by the treaty aforesaid. But he was especially instructed not to insist upon changing this line contrary to the wishes of the Mexican Government, but to agree to carry all the provisions of the treaty of Washington, concluded between the United States of America and Spain, into full effect, so far forth as relates to the boundaries between the two countries, if required to do so by the Mexican Government. The most excellent President of these States signified to the undersigned, through your excellencies' predecessor, his desire that a new line should be agreed upon, and for that purpose proposed that the two Governments should appoint their Commissioners, who, examining together the frontiers in a given parallel of latitude, and from one sea to the other, might present exact data upon which the limits might be fixed as is desired.

This proposition was transmitted to the Government of the United States, and the Secretary of State of that Government, in his reply, states: "The President of the United States does not perceive the utility of a joint appointment, by the two Governments, of Commissioners for the purpose indicated. After agreeing upon the principles on which a line of demarkation between the territories of two nations should be run, it has been usual to appoint conjointly Commissioners to proceed to mark and abut the line. Their duty is then prescribed, and if any variance arises between them, observations and experiments with proper instruments generally enable them to reconcile it. But it has not been customary to send forth Commissioners, either to agree upon a suitable boundary, or to collect data upon which the parties are subsequently to establish one. Such a course would be to reverse the order of proceeding which is recommended by the practice and experience of nations. It would probably leave the state of information which should guide the two Powers pretty much where it now is. There is but little likelihood that the Commissioners would agree, and each set would be influenced by the separate views of policy which it might happen to take of the particular country which it represented. If it were needful for both parties to acquire the knowledge which the Mexican Government supposes to be wanted, it would be better for each party to send out its own exploring Commissioners, under its separate instruction. For ourselves, although much, undoubtedly, remains to be known of the countries through which the line may be fixed, we believe that the stock of our information is sufficient to enable us to agree upon a boundary that would be satisfactory to us. In declining, however, to accede to the measure of creating a joint commission, the President would not be understood as objecting to a resort by the Mexican Government, for its own satisfaction, to the appointment of Commissioners for the purpose of collecting any information which it may desire. Should it persist in attaching importance to such a measure, the hope is indulged that no unnecessary time will be lost in sending out the commission, so that the negotiation, with regard to the limits, may be resumed with as little delay as possible."

The undersigned trusts that your excellencies will perceive, in these communications, the earnest desire on the part of the Government of the United States to settle this important question as early as may be consistent with the convenience of the Mexican Government.

The undersigned profits by this opportunity to reiterate to your excellencies the assurances of his most perfect consideration.

J. R. POINSETT.

Their Excellencies THE PLENIPOTENTIARIES of the United Mexican States.

Protocol of the fourteenth conference held by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States on July 10,1826.

Present, the plenipotentiaries.

The plenipotentiary of the United States observed that the more he reflected on the tenor of the first additional article to the treaty, as proposed by the Mexican plenipotentiaries, the more objectionable it appeared to him. By the Constitution of the United States, every citizen, native or naturalized, enjoyed equal privileges and immunities, and he feared that to except any class of citizens from the protection due to them by the laws of the United States, after such individuals had complied with the laws and become citizens of those States, would be regarded as a violation of the Constitution; there was also another objection, which had not occurred to him on the day that this subject was first discussed, and which was insuperable: the article embraced all the Spanish inhabitants of East and West Florida, and would be in violation of an existing treaty between the United States of America and Spain, which secured to the inhabitants of the ceded territories all the privileges, rights, and immunities of the citizens of the United States.

The plenipotentiaries of the Mexican Government declared that they did not contemplate excluding the inhabitants of the Floridas from any of the benefits of this treaty; they had fixed the period at 1820, because the solemn declaration of the inhabitants of Mexico, to live free or to perish, had been made in that year, an event which was supposed to have exasperated Spain still more against them, and which might induce the Spaniards to avail themselves of every means to overturn the fabric of their liberty; they had supposed the treaty of Washington, by which Spain ceded the Floridas to the United States, to have been ratified in 1819.

The plenipotentiary of the United States replied that the treaty of Washington was signed in February, 1819, but was not ratified by the King of Spain until October, 1820; the article, therefore, as at present worded, included all the Spanish inhabitants of the Floridas who had been naturalized in virtue of that treaty.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries repeated that such was not their intention, but that it was essential to the welfare, if not to the existence, of their country that the Government should possess the right of taking precautionary measures against persons born in Spain, although they might be naturalized in other countries; such persons may have renounced their allegiance to the mother country, but might retain all their prejudices against America, and might be employed by Spain to the injury of Mexico; they desired, therefore, if the safety of the Republic should, in the opinion of the Government, call for precautionary measures against such individuals, to have the right to adopt them without giving rise to any claim on the part of the United States; they stated that there were vessels now in the Pacific, commanded by Spaniards, and navigated by Spaniards calling themselves citizens of the United States, which had been permitted to enter their ports out of respect for that Government, but that circumstances might arise which would render it extremely dangerous to the Republic to permit vessels containing forty or fifty Spaniards to enter a port of Mexico, and for such persons to reside there, or travel through the country. It was the right to provide against this danger that they desired to preserve.

The plenipotentiary of the United States observed, in reply, that it was the inherent right of every Government to provide for the safety of the State, especially in time of war, by such general laws as might be deemed expedient and necessary, nor would the United States desire to protect any of their citizens whose conduct might render them obnoxious to the penalties of such laws.

The plenipotentiaries of Mexico rejoined, that the measures of precaution which the circumstances of the country might require the Government to take would be so far general that they would be directed against all persons born in the European dominions of the King of Spain, in whatever country they might be domiciliated; that the safety of the Republic might compel the Mexican Government to prevent such persons from coming into the country, and it had been resolved to reserve that right, especially as it was well known that, even the most liberal among the Spaniards, the friends of the constitution and of the liberty of the Peninsula, had proved themselves, at all times, inimical to the independence of the Americas; these persons had emigrated in great numbers to different parts of the world, and, in the event of a rebellion against the existing authorities of Mexico or of an invasion of the country by Spain, it ought not to be expected that the Government of Mexico should cede the right of shutting out all ingress into the country to persons who, under such circumstances, could not be regarded but as dangerous to the safety of the State, although they should be established in the States and territories of friendly Powers.

The plenipotentiary of the United States said, in reply, that it would be necessary to change entirely the phraseology of the article, and to express the sense of it in more general terms, and that it must be distinctly understood such measures as the Government of Mexico might judge expedient to adopt for the safety of the Republic in this particular were to be general in their nature, and not confined to the Spaniards established in the United States of America.

The Mexican plenipotentiaries assented to this proposition, and the first additional article to the treaty was extended in the following words, viz:

"The United States of America will not oppose nor reclaim any measure of precaution which the government of Mexico may deem expedient to adopt for the safety of the Republic, during the continuance of the present war between the United Mexican States and Spain, with respect to persons born in the European dominions of his Catholic Majesty, although such persons may be established in the United States of America, any article of this treaty to the contrary notwithstanding."

This article was approved, and the treaty was then signed by the respective plenipotentiaries.

J. R. POINSETT.
S. CAMACHO.
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA.

Project of a treaty between the United States of America and the United Mexican States.

ART. 1. There shall be a firm, inviolable, and universal peace, and a true and sincere friendship between the United States of America and the United Mexican States in all the extent of their possessions and territories, and between their people and citizens, respectively, without distinction of persons or places.	Agreed to.
ART. 2. The United States of America and the United Mexican States, desiring to take for the basis of their agreement the most perfect equality and reciprocity, engage mutually not to grant any particular favor to other nations, in respect to commerce and navigation, which shall not immediately become common to the other party, who shall enjoy the same freely, if the concession was freely made, or on allowing the same compensation, if the concession was conditional.	Agreed to.
ART. 3. The inhabitants of the two countries, respectively, shall have liberty freely and securely to come with their ships and cargoes to all such places, ports, and rivers, in the territories of the United States of America and in the territories of the United Mexican States, to which other foreigners are permitted to come, to enter into the same, and to remain and reside in any parts of the said territories, respectively; also to hire and occupy houses and warehouses for the purposes of their commerce, and to trade in all sorts of produce, manufactures, and merchandise; and, generally, the merchants and traders of each nation shall enjoy the most complete protection and security for their commerce, but subject always to the laws, usages, and statutes of the two countries, respectively.	Agreed to. A provision was here introduced respecting the coasting trade.
ART. 4. No higher or other duties or charges shall be imposed in any of the ports of the United Mexican States on vessels of the United States of America than those payable in the same ports by vessels of the United Mexican States; nor in the ports of the United States of America on the vessels of the United Mexican States than shall be payable in the same ports on vessels of the United States of America.	Rejected, and the fourth, fifth, and sixth articles of the treaty adopted.

The same duties shall be paid on the importation into the United Mexican States of any articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States of America, whether such importation shall be in vessels of the United States of America or in vessels of the United Mexican States; and the same duties shall be paid on the importation into the ports of the United States of America of any article the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United Mexican States, whether such importation shall be in vessels of the United Mexican States or of the United States of America.

The same duties shall be paid and the same bounties allowed on the exportation of any articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States of America to the United Mexican States, whether such exportation shall be in vessels of the United Mexican States or in the vessels of the United States of America; and the same duties shall be paid and the same bounties allowed on the exportation of any article the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United Mexican States to the United States of America, whether such exportation shall be in vessels of the United States of America or in the vessels of the United Mexican States.

ART. 5. The merchants, commanders of vessels, and other citizens of both countries shall be free to manage, themselves, their own business in all the ports and places subject to the jurisdiction of each other, with respect to the sale of their goods and merchandise by wholesale or retail, and with respect to loading, unloading, and sending off their vessels, or to consign the management of it to whomsoever they may think proper to employ, either as brokers, factors, agents, or interpreters; and they shall not be obliged to employ for the aforesaid purposes any other person, nor to pay higher salaries or remunerations than, in the same operations, the citizens of either of the countries employ or pay, and, in all cases, shall enjoy perfect freedom of buying and selling, and to agree and fix, as they may deem fit, the price of whatever articles of goods or merchandise imported into or exported from either of the countries, respectively; they being, in all such cases, to be treated as the citizens of the country where they reside.

Rejected, and the seventh article of the treaty adopted; same in substance.

ART. 6. The citizens of neither of the contracting parties shall be liable to any embargo, nor shall their vessels, cargoes, merchandise, or effects be detained for any military expedition, nor for any public or private purpose whatsoever, without a sufficient indemnification.

Eighth article of the treaty agreed to.

ART. 7. The citizens of both countries, respectively, shall be exempt from compulsory service in the army or navy; nor shall any forced loan be imposed upon them; nor shall they be subjected to any other charges, or contributions, or taxes, than such as are paid by the citizens of the States in which they reside.

Ninth article of the treaty agreed to.

ART. 8. Whenever the citizens of either of the contracting parties shall be forced to seek refuge or asylum in the rivers, bays, ports, or dominions of the other with their vessels, whether merchant or of war, public or private, through stress of weather, pursuit of pirates, or enemies, they shall be received and treated with humanity, giving to them all favor and protection for repairing their ships, procuring provisions, and placing themselves in a situation to continue their voyage, without obstacle or hinderance of any kind.

Tenth article of the treaty agreed to.

ART. 9. All the ships, merchandise, and effects belonging to the citizens of one of the contracting parties which may be captured by pirates, whether within the limits of its jurisdiction or on the high seas, and may be carried or found in the rivers, bays, ports, or dominions of the other, shall be delivered up to the owners, they proving, in due and proper form, their rights before the competent tribunals; it being well understood that the claim shall be made within the term of one year by the parties themselves, their attorneys, or agents of the respective Governments.

Eleventh article of the treaty agreed to.

ART. 10. When any vessel belonging to the citizens of either of the contracting parties shall be wrecked, foundered, or shall suffer any damage on the coasts, or within the dominions of the other, there shall be given to them all assistance and protection, in the same manner which is usual and customary with the vessels of the nation where the damage happens, permitting them to unload the said vessel, if necessary, of its merchandises and effects, without exacting for it any duty, impost, or contribution whatever, until they may be exported.

Twelfth article of the treaty agreed to.

ART. 11. The citizens of each of the contracting parties shall have power to dispose of their personal goods, within the jurisdiction of the other, by sale, donation, testament, or otherwise, and their representatives, being citizens of the other party, shall succeed to their said personal goods, whether by testament or ab intestato; and they may take possession thereof, either by themselves or others acting for them, and dispose of the same at their will, paying such duties only as the inhabitants of the country wherein the said goods are shall be subject to pay in like cases; and if, in the case of real estate, the said heirs would be prevented from entering into the possession of the inheritance on account of their character of aliens, there shall be granted to them the term of three years to dispose of the same as they may think proper, and to withdraw the proceeds without molestation, and exempt from all rights of detraction on the part of the Government of the respective States.

Rejected.

Thirteenth article of treaty adopted; same in substance.

ART. 12. Both the contracting parties promise, and engage formally, to give their special protection to the persons and property of the citizens of each other, of all occupations, who may be in the territories subject to the jurisdiction of the one or the other, transient or dwelling therein, leaving open and free to them the tribunals of justice, for their judicial recourse, on the same terms which are usual and customary with the natives or citizens of the country in which they may be; for which they may employ, in defence of their rights, such advocates, solicitors, notaries, agents, and factors, as they may judge proper, in all their trials at law; and such citizens or agents shall have free opportunity to be present at the decisions and sentences of the tribunals in all cases which may concern them, and likewise at the taking of all examinations and evidence which may be exhibited in the said trials.

Fourteenth article of the treaty agreed to.

ART. 13. It is likewise agreed that the most perfect and entire security of conscience shall be enjoyed by the citizens of both the contracting parties in the countries subject to the jurisdiction of the one and the other, without their being liable to be disturbed or molested on account of their religious belief, so long as they respect the laws and established usages of the country. Moreover, the bodies of the citizens of one of the contracting parties who may die in the territories of the other shall be buried in the usual burying grounds, or in other decent and suitable places, and shall be protected from violation and disturbance.

Rejected; fifteenth article of treaty adopted; same in substance.

ART. 14. It shall be lawful for the citizens of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States to sail with their ships with all manner of liberty and security, no distinction being made who are the proprietors of the merchandise laden thereon, from any port to the places of those who now are, or hereafter shall be, at enmity with either of the contracting parties. It shall, likewise, be lawful for the citizens aforesaid to sail with the ships and merchandises before mentioned, and to trade with the same liberty and security from the places, ports, and havens of those who are enemies of both or either party, without any opposition or disturbance whatsoever, not only directly from the places of the enemy before mentioned to neutral places, but, also, from one place belonging to an enemy to another place belonging to an enemy, whether they be under the jurisdiction of one Power or under several. And it is hereby stipulated that free ships shall also give freedom to goods, and that everything shall be deemed to be free and exempt which shall be found on board the ships belonging to the citizens of either of the contracting parties, although the whole lading, or any part thereof, should appertain to the enemies of either, contraband goods being always excepted. It is also agreed, in like manner, that the same liberty be extended to persons who are on board a free ship, with this effect, that, although they be enemies to both or either party, they are not to be taken out of that free ship, unless they are officers or soldiers, and in the actual service of the enemies: Provided, however, and it is hereby agreed, that the stipulations in this article contained, declaring that the flag shall cover the property, shall be understood as applying to those Powers only who recognize this principle; but if either of the two contracting parties shall be at war with a third, and the other neutral, the flag of the neutral shall cover the property of enemies whose Governments acknowledge this principle, and not of others.

Rejected; sixteenth article of treaty adopted; same in substance.

This provision was not agreed to.

ART. 15. It is likewise agreed that in the case where the neutral flag of one of the contracting parties shall protect the property of the enemies of the other, by virtue of the above stipulations, it shall always be understood that the neutral property found on board such enemy's vessel shall be held and considered as enemy's property, and as such shall be liable to detention and confiscation, except such property as was put on board such vessel before the declaration of war, or even afterwards, if it were done without the knowledge of it; but the contracting parties agree that, two months having elapsed after the declaration, their citizens shall not plead ignorance thereof. On the contrary, if the flag of the neutral does not protect the enemy's property, in that case the goods and merchandises of the neutral, embarked in such enemy's ships, shall be free.

Seventeenth article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 16. This liberty of navigation and commerce shall extend to all kinds of merchandises, excepting those only which are distinguished by the name of contraband; and under this name of contraband, or prohibited goods, shall be comprehended, first, cannons, mortars, howitzers, swivels, blunderbusses, muskets, fuses, rifles, carbines, pistols, pikes, swords, sabres, lances, spears, halberds, and grenades, bombs, powder, matches, balls, and all other things belonging to the use of these arms; secondly, bucklers, helmets, breast-plates, coats of mail, infantry belts, and clothes made up in the form, and for a military use; thirdly, cavalry belts, and horses with their furniture; fourthly, and generally, all kinds of arms and instruments of iron, steel, brass, and copper, or of any other materials, manufactured, prepared, and formed expressly to make war by sea or land.

Eighteenth article of the treaty agreed to.

ART. 17. All other merchandises and things, not comprehended in the articles of contraband, explicitly enumerated and classified as above, shall be held and considered as free and subjects of free and lawful commerce, so that they may be carried and transported in the freest manner by both the contracting parties, even to places belonging to an enemy, excepting only those places which are at that time besieged or blocked up. And, to avoid all doubt in this particular, it is declared that those places only are besieged or blockaded which are actually attacked by a belligerent force capable of preventing the entry of the neutral.

Nineteenth article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 18. The articles of contraband before enumerated and classified, which may be found in a vessel bound for an enemy's port, shall be subject to detention and confiscation, leaving free the rest of the cargo and the ships, that the owners may dispose of them as they see proper. No vessel of either of the Twentieth article of treaty agreed to.

two nations shall be detained on the high seas, on account of having on board articles of contraband, whenever the master, captain, or supercargo of said vessel will deliver up the articles of contraband to the captor, unless the quantity of such articles be so great, and of so large a bulk, that they cannot be received on board the capturing ship without great inconvenience; but in this and in all other cases of just detention, the vessel detained shall be sent to the nearest convenient and safe port for trial and judgment according to law.

Twenty first article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 19. And whereas it frequently happens that vessels sail for a port or place belonging to an enemy, without knowing that the same is besieged, blockaded, or invested, it is agreed that every vessel so circumstanced may be turned away from such port or place, but shall not be detained, nor shall any part of her cargo, if not contraband, be confiscated, unless, after warning of such blockade or investment from the commanding officer of the blockading forces, she shall again attempt to enter; but she shall be permitted to go to any other port or place she may think proper. Nor shall any vessel of either party that may have entered into such port before the same was actually besieged, blockaded, or invested by the other, be restrained from quitting such place with her cargo, nor, if found therein after the reduction and surrender, shall such vessel or her cargo be liable to confiscation, but she shall be restored to the owners thereof.

Twenty-second article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 20. In order to prevent all kind of disorder in the visiting and examination of the ships and cargoes of both the contracting parties on the high seas, they have agreed, mutually, that whenever a vessel-of-war, public or private, shall meet with a neutral of the other contracting party, the first shall remain out of cannon shot, and may send its boat with two or three men only, in order to execute the said examination of the papers concerning the ownership and cargo of the vessel, without causing the least extortion, violence, or ill-treatment, for which the commanders of the said armed ships shall be responsible with their persons and property; for which purpose the commanders of said private armed vessels shall, before receiving their commissions, give sufficient security to answer for all the damages they may commit. And it is expressly agreed that the neutral party shall in no case be required to go on board the examining vessel for the purpose of exhibiting her papers, or for any other purpose whatever.

Twenty-third article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 21. To avoid all kind of vexation and abuse in the examination of papers relating to the ownership of the vessels belonging to the citizens of the two contracting parties, they have agreed, and do agree, that in case one of them should be engaged in war, the ships and vessels belonging to the citizens of the other must be furnished with sea-letters or passports, expressing the name, property, and bulk of the ship, as also the name and place of habitation of the master or commander of said vessel, in order that it may thereby appear that the ship really and truly belongs to the citizens of one of the parties; they have likewise agreed that such ships being laden, besides the said sea-letters or passports, shall also be provided with certificates containing the several particulars of the cargo, and the place whence the ship sailed, so that it may be known whether any forbidden or contraband goods be on board the same; which certificate shall be made out by the officers of the place whence the ship sailed in the accustomed form; without which requisites the said vessel may be detained to be adjudged by the competent tribunal, and may be declared legal prize, unless the said defect shall be satisfied or supplied by testimony entirely equivalent.

Twenty-fourth article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 22. It is further agreed that the stipulations above expressed, relative to the visiting and examination of vessels, shall apply only to those which sail without convoy, and when said vessels are under convoy the verbal declaration of the commander of the convoy, on his word of honor, that the vessels under his protection belong to the nation whose flag he carries; and when they are bound to an enemy's port, that they have no contraband goods on board shall be sufficient.

ART. 23. It is further agreed that in all cases the established courts for prize causes in the country to which the prizes may be conducted shall alone take cognizance of them. And whenever such tribunal of either party shall pronounce judgment against any vessel, or goods, or property, claimed by the citizens of the other party, the sentence or decree shall mention the reason or motives on which the same shall have been founded; and an authenticated copy of the sentence or decree, and of all the proceedings of the case, shall, if demanded, be delivered to the commander or agent of said vessel without any delay, he paying the legal fees for the same.

Twenty-fifth article of treaty agreed to.

ART 24. For the greater security of the intercourse between the citizens of the United States of America and the United Mexican States, it is agreed now, for then, that if there should be, at any time hereafter, an interruption of the friendly relations which now exist, or a war unhappily break out between the two contracting parties, there shall be allowed the term of six months to the merchants residing on the coasts and one year to those residing in the interior of each other's States and territories, respectively, to arrange their business, dispose of their effects, or transport them wherever they please, giving them a safe conduct to protect them to the port they may designate. Those citizens who may be established in the States and territories aforesaid, exercising any other trade or occupation, shall be permitted to remain in the uninterrupted enjoyment of their liberties and property so long as they conduct themselves peaceably and do not commit any offence against the laws; and their goods and effects, of whatever class and condition they may be, shall not be subject to any embargo or sequestration whatever, nor to any charge nor tax other than may be established upon similar goods and effects belonging to the citizens of the States in which they reside, respectively; nor shall the debts between individuals, nor moneys in the public funds or in public or private banks, nor shares in companies, be confiscated, embargoed, or detained.

Twenty-sixth article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 25. Both the contracting parties being desirous of avoiding all inequality in relation to their public communications and official intercourse, have agreed, and do agree, to grant to the envoys, ministers, and other public agents, the same favors, immunities, and exemptions which those of the most favored nation do or shall enjoy; it being understood that whatever favors, immunities, or privileges the United States of America or the United Mexican States may find it proper to give to the ministers and public agents of any other power shall, by the same act, be extended to those of each of the contracting parties.

Twenty-seventh article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 26. In order that the consuls and vice-consuls of the two contracting parties may enjoy the rights, prerogatives, and immunities which belong to them by their public character, they shall, before entering upon the exercise of their functions, exhibit their commission or patent, in due form, to the Government to which they are accredited; and having obtained their exequatur, they shall be held and considered as such by all the authorities, magistrates, and inhabitants in the consular district in which they reside.

Twenty-eighth article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 27. It is likewise agreed that the consuls, their secretaries, officers, and persons attached to the service of consuls, they not being citizens of the country in which the consul resides, shall be exempt from the public service, and also from all kind of taxes, imposts, and contributions, except those which they shall be obliged to pay on account of commerce, or their property, to which the citizens and inhabitants, native and foreign, of the country in which they reside are subject, being in everything besides subject to the laws of the respective States. The archives and papers of the consulate shall be respected inviolably, and under no pretext whatever shall any magistrate seize or in any way interfere with them.

Rejected in the first conference, but afterwards agreed to, twenty-ninth article of treaty.

Thirtieth article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 28. The said consuls shall have power to require the assistance of the authorities of the country for the arrest, detention, and custody of deserters from the public and private vessels of their country, and for that purpose they shall address themselves to the courts, judges, and officers competent, and shall demand the said deserters in writing, proving by an exhibition of the registers of the vessel's or ship's roll, or other public documents, that those men were part of the said crews; and on this demand so proved, (saving, however, where the contrary is proved,) the delivery shall not be refused. Such deserters, when arrested, shall be put at the disposal of the said consul, and may be put in the public prisons at the request and expense of those who reclaim them, to be sent to the ships to which they belonged, or to others of the same nation. But if they be not sent back within two months, to be counted from the day of their arrest, they shall be set at liberty, and shall be no more arrested for the same cause.

Thirty-first article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 29. For the purpose of more effectually protecting their commerce and navigation, the two contracting parties do hereby agree, as soon hereafter as circumstances will permit them, to form a consular convention, which shall declare specially the powers and immunities of the consuls and vice consuls of the respective parties.

Thirty-second article of treaty agreed to.

ART. 30. The United States of America and the United Mexican States, desiring to make as durable as circumstances will permit the relations which are to be established between the two parties by virtue of this treaty or general convention of peace, amity, commerce, and navigation, have declared solemnly, and do agree, to the following points:

Firstly. The present treaty shall remain in full force and virtue for the term of twelve years, to be counted from the day of the exchange of the ratifications, in all the parts relating to commerce and navigation; and in all those parts relating to peace and friendship it shall be permanently and perpetually binding on both Powers.

Secondly. If any one or more of the citizens of either party shall infringe any of the articles of this treaty, such citizen shall be held personally responsible for the same, and the harmony and good correspondence between the two nations shall not be interrupted thereby; each party engaging in no way to protect the offender, or sanction such violation.

Thirdly. If, (what indeed cannot be expected,) unfortunately, any of the articles contained in the present treaty shall be violated or infringed in any other way whatever, it is expressly stipulated that neither of the contracting parties will order or authorize any acts of reprisal, nor declare war against the other on complaints of injuries or damages, until the said party considering itself offended shall first have presented to the other a statement of such injuries or damages, verified by competent proof, and demanded justice and satisfaction, and the same shall have been either refused or unreasonably delayed.

Fourthly. Nothing in this treaty contained shall, however, be construed or operate contrary to former and existing public treaties with other Sovereigns or States.

The present treaty of peace, amity, commerce, and navigation shall be approved and ratified by the President of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof, and by the President of the United Mexican States, with the consent and approbation of the Congress of the same, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in the city of Washington, within ——— months, to be counted from the date of the signature hereof, or sooner, if possible.

In faith whereof, we, the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States, have signed and sealed these presents.

Done in the city of Mexico, on the ——— day of ———, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, in the fiftieth year of the independence of the United States of America, and the sixth of that of the United Mexican States.

[SEAL.]

[SEAL.]

[SEAL.]

IN SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, February 12, 1827.

The following treaty was read twice, by unanimous consent, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Treaty of amity, navigation, and commerce, between the United States of America and the United Mexican States.

The United States of America and the United Mexican States, desiring to establish, in an equitable and permanent manner, the rules which ought to govern the commercial intercourse and friendly relations that happily prevail between the two parties, and considering that this end can only be obtained by taking for the basis of their agreement the most perfect equality and reciprocity, and by avoiding all preferences to other nations, but reserving to each party the liberty of admitting them, at its pleasure, to a full participation of the same advantages, have resolved to conclude, on this basis, a treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation.

With this intention, the President of the United States of America has appointed, for their plenipotentiary, Joel Roberts Poinsett, a citizen of the United States of America, and their envoy extraordinary near the United Mexican States; and the President of the United Mexican States, his excellency Don Sebastian Camacho, Secretary of State and of Exterior and Interior Relations, and his excellency Don José Ignacio Esteva, Secretary of State and of the Treasury of the Mexican Republic; and the said plenipotentiaries have concluded and agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE FIRST. There shall be a firm, inviolable, and universal peace, and a true and sincere friendship between the United States of America and the United Mexican States, in all the extent of their possessions and territories, and between their people and citizens, respectively, without distinction of persons or places.

ARTICLE SECOND. The United States of America and the United Mexican States, desiring to take for the basis of their agreement the most perfect equality and reciprocity, engage, mutually, not to grant any particular favor to other nations, in respect of commerce and navigation, which shall not immediately become common to the other party, who shall enjoy the same freely, if the concession was freely made, or on allowing the same compensation, if the concession was conditional.

ARTICLE THIRD. The inhabitants of the two countries, respectively, shall have liberty freely and securely to come with their vessels and cargoes to all such places, ports, and rivers, in the territories of the United States of America, and in the territories of the United Mexican States, to which other foreigners are permitted to come, to enter into the same, and to remain and reside in any part of the said territories, respectively; also, to hire and occupy houses and warehouses for the purposes of their commerce, and to trade there in all sorts of produce, manufactures, and merchandise; and, generally, the merchants and traders of each nation shall enjoy the most complete protection and security for their commerce; and they shall not pay other or higher duties, imposts, or fees whatsoever than those which the most favored nations are or may be obliged to pay, and shall enjoy all the rights, privileges, and exemptions, with respect to navigation and commerce, which the citizens of the most favored nation do now or may enjoy; but subject always to the laws, usages, and statutes of the two countries respectively.

The liberty to enter and discharge the vessels of both nations of which this article treats shall not be understood to authorize the coasting trade permitted only to national vessels.

ARTICLE FOURTH. No other or higher duties shall be imposed on the importation into the United Mexican States of any article, the produce, growth, or manufacture of the United States of America, than those which the same or like articles, the produce, growth, or manufacture of any other foreign country, do now or may hereafter pay; nor shall articles the produce, growth, or manufacture of the United Mexican States be subject, on their introduction into the United States of America, to other or higher duties than those which the same or like articles of any other foreign country do now or may hereafter pay. Higher duties shall not be imposed in the respective States, on the exportation of any article to the States of the other contracting party, than those which are now or may hereafter be paid on the exportation of like articles to any other foreign country; nor shall any prohibition be established on the exportation or importation of any articles the produce, growth, or manufacture of the United States of America, nor of the United Mexican States, respectively, in either of them, which shall not in like manner be established with respect to other foreign countries.

ARTICLE FIFTH. That which is agreed upon in the preceding article with respect to duties of importation and exportation is understood in the same manner, and subject to the same restrictions, with respect to duties on tonnage, light-houses, ports, pilots, salvage in case of damage or shipwreck, recapture of vessels, or any other local imports or charges whatsoever, which are, or may hereafter be, established in the respective States of the contracting parties.

ARTICLE SIXTH. If the importation into the Territories and States of the United States of America of any article, the produce, growth, or manufacture of the States or Territories of the United Mexican States, take place in the vessels of the United Mexican States, they shall not pay other nor higher duties than those which, in like case, the vessels of the most favored nation do now or may hereafter pay; and in the same manner, if the importation into the Territories and States of the United Mexican States of any article, the produce, growth, or manufacture of the Territories and States of the United States of America, take place in the vessels of the United States of America, they shall not pay other nor higher duties than those which the vessels of the most favored nation do now or may hereafter pay. Articles, the produce, growth, or manufacture of the States and Territories of the United States of America, which may be exported from the United States of America, in a Mexican vessel, shall not pay higher duties, and shall enjoy the same drawbacks and bounties as if the exportation took place in vessels of the most favored nation; and, reciprocally, articles, the produce, growth, or manufacture of Mexico, exported from the Territories and States of Mexico, in vessels of the United States of America, shall not pay higher duties, and shall enjoy the same drawbacks and bounties as the vessels of the most favored nation.

When, hereafter, the mercantile marine of Mexico shall be augmented in such a manner as to render it sufficient for the necessities of its commerce, there may be established between the contracting parties, by common accord, a perfect equality of duties, bounties, and drawbacks of importation and exportation, in their respective States and Territories, on articles of the produce, growth, or manufacture of their respective States or Territories, indiscriminately in vessels of both nations.

ARTICLE SEVENTH. All merchants, captains, or commanders of vessels, and others, citizens of the United States of America, shall have full liberty in the United Mexican States to direct or manage, themselves, their own affairs, or to commit the management of them to whomsoever they may think proper, either as a broker, factor, agent, or interpreter, nor shall they be obliged to employ, for the aforesaid purposes, any other persons than those employed by Mexicans, nor to pay them higher salaries or remunerations than such as are in like cases paid by Mexicans; and absolute freedom shall be allowed in all cases to the buyer and seller to bargain and fix the price of any goods, wares, or merchandise imported into, or exported from, the United Mexican States, as they may think proper, observing the laws, usages, and customs of the country. The citizens of Mexico shall enjoy the same privileges in the States and Territories of the United States of America, being subject to the same conditions.

ARTICLE EIGHTH. The citizens of neither of the contracting parties shall be liable to any embargo, nor shall their vessels, cargoes, merchandise, or effects be detained for any military expedition, nor for any public or private purpose whatever, without a corresponding compensation.

ARTICLE NINTH. The citizens of both countries, respectively, shall be exempt from compulsory service in the army or navy; nor shall any forced loan be imposed exclusively upon them, nor shall they be subjected to any other charges, or contributions or taxes, than such as are paid by the citizens of the States in which they reside.

ARTICLE TENTH. Whenever the citizens of either of the contracting parties shall be forced to seek refuge or asylum in the rivers, bays, ports, or dominions of the other, with their vessels, whether merchant or of war, public or private, through stress of weather, pursuit of pirates or enemies, they shall be received and treated with humanity, with the precautions which may be deemed expedient on the part of the respective Governments, in order to avoid fraud, giving to them all favor and protection for repairing their vessels, procuring provisions, and placing themselves in a situation to continue their voyage without obstacle or hindrance of any kind.

ARTICLE ELEVENTH. All vessels, merchandise, and effects belonging to the citizens of one of the contracting parties, which may be captured by pirates, whether within the limits of its jurisdiction or on the high seas, and may be carried into or found in the rivers, bays, ports, or dominions of the other, shall be delivered up to the owners, they proving, in due and proper form, their rights before the competent tribunals; it being well understood that the claim shall be made within the term of one year, counting from the capture of said vessel or merchandise, by the parties themselves, or their attorneys, or by agents of the respective Governments.

ARTICLE TWELFTH. When any vessel, belonging to the citizens of either of the contracting parties, shall be wrecked, foundered, or shall suffer any damage on the coasts or within the dominions of the other, there shall be given to it all assistance and protection, in the same manner which is usual and customary with the vessels of the nation where the damage happens, permitting them to unload the said vessel, if necessary, of its merchandise and effects, with the precautions which may be deemed expedient on the part of the respective governments, in order to avoid fraud, without exacting therefor any duty, impost, or contribution whatever, until they be exported.

ARTICLE THIRTEENTH. In whatever relates to the succession of estates, either by will or ab intestato, disposal of such property, of whatever sort or denomination it may be, by sale, donation, exchange, or testament, or in any other manner whatsoever, the citizens of the two contracting parties shall enjoy in their respective States and Territories the same privileges, exemptions, liberties, and rights, as the citizens of the most favored nation, and shall not be charged, in any of these respects, with other and higher duties or imposts than those which are now or may hereafter be paid by the citizens of the power in whose States or Territories they may be resident.

ARTICLE FOURTEENTH. Both the contracting parties promise and engage formally to give their especial protection to the persons and property of the citizens of each other, of all occupations, who may be in the Territories subject to the jurisdiction of the one or of the other, transient or dwelling therein; leaving open and free to them the tribunals of justice for their judicial recourse, on the same terms which are usual and customary with the natives or citizens of the country in which they may be, for which they may employ in defence of their rights such advocates, solicitors, notaries, or agents and factors, as they may judge proper, in all their trials at law; and said citizens, or their agents, shall enjoy, in every respect, the same rights in the prosecution or defence of their persons or property as the citizens of the country where the cause may be tried.

ARTICLE FIFTEENTH. The citizens of the United States of America, residing in the United Mexican States, shall enjoy in their houses, persons, and properties, the protection of the government; and continuing in the possession of what they now enjoy, they shall not be disturbed nor molested in any manner on account of their religion, provided they respect that of the country where they reside, and its constitution, laws, usages, and customs; they shall likewise continue to enjoy the privilege of burying, in places assigned for that purpose, such citizens of the United States of America as may die within the aforesaid United Mexican States, nor shall the funerals or sepulchres of the dead be disturbed in any manner, nor under any pretext.

The citizens of the United Mexican States shall enjoy throughout the States and Territories of the United States of America the same protection, and shall be entitled to the free exercise of their religion, in public or in private, either within their own houses or in the chapels and places of worship set apart for that purpose.

ARTICLE SIXTEENTH. It shall be lawful for all and singular the citizens, people, and inhabitants of the United States of America, and of the United Mexican States, respectively, to sail with their vessels with all manner of security and liberty, no distinction being made who are the proprietors of the merchandise laden thereon, from any port, to the places of those who now are, or hereafter shall be, at enmity with the United States of America or with the United Mexican States. It shall likewise be lawful for the citizens, respectively, aforesaid, to sail with the vessels and merchandises before mentioned, and to trade with the same liberty and security from the places, ports, and havens of those who are enemies of both or either party, without any opposition or disturbance whatsoever, not only directly from the places of the enemy before mentioned to neutral places, but also from one place belonging to an enemy to another place belonging to an enemy, whether they be under the jurisdiction of the same government or under several; and it is hereby stipulated that free ships shall also give freedom to goods, and that everything shall be deemed free and exempt which shall be found on board the vessels belonging to the citizens of either of the contracting parties, although the whole lading, or any part thereof, should appertain to the enemies of either; contraband goods being always excepted. It is also agreed that the same liberty be extended to persons who are on board a free vessel, so that, although they be enemies to either party, they shall not be made prisoners, or taken out of that free vessel, unless they are soldiers, and in actual service of the enemy.

ARTICLE SEVENTEENTH. It is likewise agreed, that in the case where the neutral flag of one of the contracting parties shall protect the property of the enemies of the other, by virtue of the above stipulation, it shall always be understood that the neutral property found on board such enemy's vessels shall be held and considered as enemy's property, and, as such, shall be liable to detention and confiscation, except such property as was put on board such vessel before the declaration of war, or even afterwards, if it were done without the knowledge of it; but the contracting parties agree that, two months having elapsed after the declaration, their citizens shall not plead ignorance thereof. On the contrary, if the flag of the neutral does not protect the enemy's property, in that case, the goods and merchandises of the neutral embarked in such enemy's ships shall be free.

ARTICLE EIGHTEENTH. This liberty of navigation and commerce shall extend to all kinds of merchandises, excepting those only which are distinguished by the name of contraband, and under this name of contraband or prohibited goods shall be comprehended, first, cannons, mortars, howitzers, swivels, blunderbusses, muskets, fusees, rifles, carbines, pistols, pikes, swords, sabres, lances, spears, halberts, and grenades, bombs, powder, matches, balls, and all other things belonging to the use of those arms. Secondly, bucklers, helmets, breast-plates, coats of mail, infantry belts, and clothes made up in the form and for a military use. Thirdly, cavalry belts, and horses with their furniture. Fourthly, and generally, all kinds of arms and instruments of iron, steel, brass, and copper, or of any other materials manufactured, prepared, and formed expressly to make war by sea or land.

ARTICLE NINETEENTH. All other merchandise and things not comprehended in the articles of contraband, explicitly enumerated and classified as above, shall be held and considered as free, and subjects of free and lawful commerce, so that they may be carried and transported in the freest manner by both the contracting parties, even to places belonging to an enemy, excepting only those places which are at that time besieged or blockaded. And to avoid all doubt in this particular, it is declared that those places only are besieged or blockaded which are actually besieged or blockaded by a belligerent force, capable of preventing the entry of the neutral.

ARTICLE TWENTIETH. The articles of contraband before enumerated and classified, which may be found in a vessel bound for an enemy's port, shall be subject to detention and confiscation, leaving free the rest of the cargo and the vessel, that the owners may dispose of them as they see proper. No vessel of either of the two nations shall be detained on the high seas on account of having on board articles of contraband, whenever the master, captain, or supercargo of said vessel will deliver up the articles of contraband to the captor, unless the quantity of such articles be so great, and of so large a bulk, that they cannot be received on board the capturing ship without great inconvenience; but in this, and in all other cases of just detention, the vessel detained shall be sent to the nearest convenient and safe port for trial and judgment, according to law.

ARTICLE TWENTY-FIRST. And whereas it frequently happens that vessels sail for a port or place belonging to an enemy, without knowing that the same is besieged, blockaded, or invested, it is agreed that every vessel so circumstanced may be turned away from such port or place; but shall not be detained, nor shall any part of her cargo, if not contraband, be confiscated, unless, after warning of such blockade or investment from the commanding officer of the blockading forces, she shall again attempt to enter the aforesaid port; but she shall be permitted to go to any other port or place she may think proper. Nor shall any vessel of either of the contracting parties, that may have entered into such port before the same was actually besieged, blockaded, or invested by the other, be restrained from quitting such place with her cargo, nor, if found therein after the reduction and surrender, shall such vessel or her cargo be liable to confiscation, but she shall be restored to the owners thereof.

ARTICLE TWENTY-SECOND. In order to prevent all kind of disorder, in the visiting and examination of the ships and cargoes of both the contracting parties on the high seas, they have agreed, mutually, that whenever a vessel of war, public or private, shall meet with a neutral vessel of the other contracting party, the first shall remain out of cannon-shot, and may send its boat with two or three men only, in order to execute the said examination of the papers concerning the ownership and cargo of the vessel, without causing the least extortion, violence, or ill-treatment, for which the commanders of the said armed ships shall be responsible with their persons and property, for which purpose the commanders of said private armed vessels shall, before receiving their commissions, give sufficient security to answer for all the damages they may commit. And it is expressly agreed, that the neutral vessel shall in no case be required to go on board the examining vessel for the purpose of exhibiting her papers, or for any other purpose whatever.

ARTICLE TWENTY-THIRD. To avoid all kind of vexation and abuse in the examination of papers relating to the ownership of the vessels belonging to the citizens of the two contracting parties, they have agreed, and do agree, that, in case one of them should be engaged in war, the ships and vessels belonging to the citizens of the other must be furnished with sea-letters or passports, expressing the name, property, and bulk of the vessel, and also the name, and place of habitation, of the master or commander of said vessel, in order that it may thereby appear that the vessel really and truly belongs to the citizens of one of the parties; they have likewise agreed, that such vessels being laden, besides the said sea-letters or passports, shall also be provided with certificates containing the several particulars of the cargo, and the place whence the vessel sailed, so that it may be known whether any forbidden or contraband goods be on board the same; which certificate shall be made out by the officers of the place whence the vessel sailed, in the accustomed form; without which requisites the said vessel may be detained, to be adjudged by the competent tribunal, and may be declared legal prize, unless the said defect shall be satisfied or supplied by testimony entirely equivalent, to the satisfaction of the competent tribunal.

ARTICLE TWENTY-FOURTH. It is further agreed that the stipulations, above expressed, relative to the visiting and examination of vessels, shall apply only to those which sail without convoy; and when said vessels are under convoy the verbal declaration of the commander of the convoy, on his word of honor, that the vessels under his protection belong to the nation whose flag he carries, and when they are bound to an enemy's port, that they have no contraband goods on board, shall be sufficient.

ARTICLE TWENTY-FIFTH. It is further agreed that, in all cases, the established courts for prize causes in the country to which the prizes may be conducted shall alone take cognizance of them. And whenever such tribunal, of either party, shall pronounce judgment against any vessel or goods or property claimed by the citizens of the other party, the sentence or decree shall mention the reasons or motives on which the same shall have been founded; and an authenticated copy of the sentence or decree, in conformity with the usages and laws of the country, and of all the proceedings of the case, shall, if demanded, be delivered to the commander or agent of said vessel without any delay, he paying the legal fees for the same.

ARTICLE TWENTY-SIXTH. For the greater security of the intercourse between the citizens of the United States of America and the United Mexican States, it is agreed, now for then, that if there should be, at any time hereafter, an interruption of the friendly relations which now exist, or a war unhappily break out between the contracting parties, there shall be allowed the term of six months to the merchants residing on the coasts, and one year to those residing in the interior of each others States and Territories, respectively, to arrange their business, dispose of their effects, or transport them wherever they please, giving them a safe conduct to protect them to the port they may designate. Those citizens who may be established in the States and Territories aforesaid, exercising any other trade or occupation, shall be permitted to remain in the uninterrupted enjoyment of their liberties and property so long as they conduct themselves peaceably, and do not commit any offence against the laws; and their goods and effects, of whatever class and condition they may be, shall not be subject to any embargo or sequestration whatever, nor to any charge nor tax other than may be established upon similar goods and effects belonging to the citizens of the States in which they reside, respectively; nor shall the debts between individuals, nor moneys in the public funds, or in public or private banks, nor shares in companies, be confiscated, embargoed, or detained.

ARTICLE TWENTY-SEVENTH. Both the contracting parties, being desirous of avoiding all inequality in relation to their public communications and official intercourse, have agreed, and do agree, to grant to the envoys, ministers, and other public agents, the same favors, immunities, and exemptions which those of the most favored nations do now or shall enjoy; it being understood that whatever favors, immunities, or privileges the United States of America or the United Mexican States may find it proper to give to the ministers and public agents of any other power, shall, by the same act, be extended to those of each of the contracting parties.

ARTICLE TWENTY-EIGHTH. In order that the consuls and vice-consuls of the two contracting parties may enjoy the rights, prerogatives, and immunities which belong to them by their character, they shall, before entering upon the exercise of their functions, exhibit their commission or patent, in due form, to the Government to which they are accredited; and having obtained their exequatur, they shall be held and considered as such by all the authorities, magistrates, and inhabitants in the consular district in which they reside. It is agreed likewise to receive and admit consuls and vice-consuls in all the ports and places open to foreign commerce, who shall enjoy therein all the rights, prerogatives, and immunities of the consuls and vice-consuls of the most favored nation, leaving, however, each of the contracting parties at liberty to except those ports and places in which the admission and residence of such consuls and vice-consuls may not appear expedient.

ARTICLE TWENTY-NINTH. It is likewise agreed that the consuls, their secretaries, officers, and persons attached to the service of consuls, they not being citizens of the country in which the consul resides, shall be exempt from all compulsory public service, and also from all kind of taxes, imposts, and contributions, levied especially on them, except those which they shall be obliged to pay on account of commerce or their property, to which the citizens and inhabitants, native and foreign, of the country in which they reside, are subject, being in everything besides subject to the laws of the respective States. The archives and papers of the consulates shall be respected inviolably, and under no pretext whatever shall any magistrate seize, or in any way interfere with them.

ARTICLE THIRTIETH. The said consuls shall have power to require the assistance of the authorities of the country for the arrest, detention, and custody of deserters from the public and private vessels of their country, and for that purpose they shall address themselves to the courts, judges, and officers competent, and shall demand the said deserters in writing, proving by an exhibition of the registers of the vessel's or ship's roll, or other public documents, that those men were part of the said crews; and on this demand, so proved, (saving, however, where the contrary is proved,) the delivery shall not be refused. Such deserters, when arrested, shall be placed at the disposal of the said consuls, and may be put in the public prisons, at the request and expense of those who reclaim them, to be sent to the vessels to which they belonged, or to others of the same nation. But if they be not sent back within two months, to be counted from the day of their arrest, they shall be set at liberty, and shall be no more arrested for the same cause.

ARTICLE THIRTY-FIRST. For the purpose of more effectually protecting their commerce and navigation, the two contracting parties do hereby agree, as soon hereafter as circumstances will permit, to form a consular convention, which shall declare, specially, the powers and immunities of the consuls and vice-consuls of the respective parties.

ARTICLE THIRTY-SECOND. It is likewise agreed that the two contracting parties shall, by all the means in their power, maintain peace and harmony among the several Indian nations who inhabit the country adjacent to the lines and rivers which form the boundaries of the two countries; and the better to obtain this object both parties oblige themselves, expressly, to restrain, by force, all hostilities and incursions on the part of the Indian nations living within their respective boundaries, so that the United States of America will not suffer their Indians to attack the citizens of the United Mexican States, nor the Indians inhabiting their Territory, nor will the United Mexican States permit the last mentioned Indians to commit hostilities against the citizens of the United States of America, or their Indians in any manner whatever. And, whereas several treaties of friendship exist between the two contracting parties and the said nations of Indians, it is hereby agreed that in future no treaty of alliance or other whatever, except treaties of peace, and confined to that object only, shall be made by either party with the Indians living within the boundary of the other. And in the event of any person or persons captured by the Indians who inhabit the Territory of either of the contracting parties being or having been carried into the Territories of the other, both Governments engage and bind themselves, in the most solemn manner, to return them to their country as soon as they know of their being within their respective Territories, or to deliver them up to the agent, or the representative of the Government that claims them, giving to each other, reciprocally, timely notice, and the claimant paying the expenses incurred in the transmission and maintenance of such person or persons, who, in the mean time, shall be treated with the utmost hospitality by the local authorities of the place where they may be. Nor shall it be lawful, under any pretext whatsoever, for the citizens of either of the contracting parties to purchase or hold captive prisoners made by the Indians inhabiting the Territories of the other.

ARTICLE THIRTY-THIRD. It is likewise agreed that, in the event of any slaves escaping from their owners, residing in the States or Territories of one of the contracting parties, and passing over into the States or Territories of the other, it shall be lawful for the owner or owners of such slaves, or their lawful agents, to require the assistance of the authorities of the country where they may be found for their arrest, detention, and custody, and for that purpose the proprietors, or their agents, shall address themselves to the nearest magistrate or competent officer. On such demand being made, it shall be the duty of the magistrate or competent officer to cause the said slaves to be arrested and detained; and if it shall appear that such slaves be actually the property of the claimant, the magistrate or competent officer shall surrender them to the proprietors, or their agents, to be conveyed back to the country from whence they had escaped, the claimants paying the expenses incurred by the arrest, detention, and custody of such slaves, and none other. And it is further agreed by the contracting parties that, on mutual requisitions by them, respectively, or by their respective ministers or officers authorized to make the same, they will deliver up to justice all persons who, being charged with murder or forgery, committed within the jurisdiction of either, shall seek an asylum within any of the countries of the other; provided, that this shall only be done on such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive or person so charged shall be found, would justify his apprehension or commitment for trial if the offence had been there committed. The expense of such apprehension and delivery shall be borne and defrayed by those who make the requisition and receive the fugitive.

ARTICLE THIRTY-FOURTH. Whereas, from the intimate relations which are established between the Territories and citizens of the United States of America and those of the United Mexican States, there must necessarily result new and important points, which will require a special convention, it is agreed that such points shall be taken into consideration at the termination of six years, to be counted from the day on which the ratifications of this treaty are exchanged, and the articles which may be then concluded and agreed upon, with the constitutional sanction of both Governments, respectively, shall be considered as making a part of this treaty, and shall have the same force as those which are contained in it.

ARTICLE THIRTY-FIFTH. The United States of America and the United Mexican States, desiring to make as durable as circumstances will permit the relations which are to be established between the two parties by virtue of this treaty, or general convention of amity, commerce, and navigation, have declared solemnly, and do agree to the following points:

First. The present treaty shall remain in full force and virtue for the term of twelve years, to be counted from the day of the exchange of the ratifications, in all the parts relating to commerce and navigation; and in all those parts which relate to peace and friendship, it shall be perpetually and permanently binding on both Powers.

Secondly. If any one or more of the citizens of either party shall infringe any of the articles of this treaty, such citizen shall be held personally responsible for the same, and the harmony and good correspondence between the two nations shall not be interrupted thereby, each party engaging in no way to protect the offender or sanction such violation.

Thirdly. If, (what indeed cannot be expected,) unfortunately, any of the articles contained in the present treaty shall be violated or infringed in any other way whatever, it is stipulated that neither of the contracting parties will order or authorize any acts of reprisal, nor declare war against the other on complaints of injuries or damages, until the said party considering itself offended shall first have presented to the other a statement of such injuries or damages, verified by competent proof, and demanded justice and satisfaction, and the same shall have been either refused or unreasonably delayed.

Fourthly. Nothing in this treaty contained shall, however, be construed to operate contrary to former and existing public treaties with other Sovereigns or States.

The present treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation, shall be approved and ratified by the President of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof, and by the President of the United Mexican States, with the consent and approbation of the Congress of the same; and the ratifications shall be exchanged in the city of Washington within eight months, to be counted from the date of the signature hereof, or sooner, if possible.

In faith whereof, we, the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of the United Mexican States, have signed and sealed these presents.

Done in the city of Mexico, on the 10th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, in the fifty-first year of the independence of the United States of America, and the sixth of that of the United Mexican States.

J. R. POINSETT. [SEAL.]
S. CAMACHO. [SEAL.]
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA. [SEAL.]

ADDITIONAL ARTICLES.

FIRST. The United States of America will not oppose nor reclaim any measure of precaution which the Government of Mexico may judge expedient to adopt for the safety of the Republic during the continuance of the present war between the United Mexican States and Spain, with respect to persons born in the European dominions of his Catholic Majesty the King of Spain, although such persons may be established in the United States of America, any article in the present treaty to the contrary notwithstanding.

SECOND. Whereas, it being equally important to the two contracting parties that their boundaries should be definitively settled by means of a solemn treaty, they bind themselves mutually to take into consideration this point as early as possible, affording in their respective Territories the succors that may be required by the Commissioners or persons sent by the other party to make scientific observations, reconnaissances, discoveries, and all operations relative to the conclusion of the aforementioned convention, on the basis of justice, and in conformity to the friendly relations which now exist between the two parties; the persons requiring such succors paying for them what is just; nor shall any acts of possession which may be made in the mean time by the citizens, people, or Indians of the Territory of the one party within the Territory of the other, without the authority and consent of the Government, create a right to claims or pretensions to indemnities at the period of concluding the definitive convention. The two additional articles shall have the same force and value as if they had been inserted, word for word, in the present treaty. In faith whereof, we, the respective plenipotentiaries, have hereunto affixed our signs and seals in the capital of Mexico on the tenth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six.

J. R. POINSETT. [SEAL.]
S. CAMACHO. [SEAL.]
JOSÉ IGNACIO ESTEVA. [SEAL.]

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 455. [2D SESSION.

SPOLIATIONS BY FRANCE BETWEEN THE YEARS 1805 AND 1813.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE FEBRUARY 12, 1827.

Mr. SANFORD, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, having considered the memorial of certain merchants of Portsmouth, in New Hampshire; the memorial of certain merchants of the city of New York; the memorial of certain merchants of the city of Philadelphia, and the memorial of certain merchants of the city of Baltimore, reported:

The memorialists have claims upon the Government of France, arising from seizures and spoliations of their property made under the authority of France at different times between the year 1805 and the year 1813, and they pray that these claims may be prosecuted against France by such measures as the magnitude and justice of the claims and the obligations of this Government to its citizens may require.

Full and numerous expositions of these claims are before this Government and the public, and the committee deem it unnecessary here to enter into any detail of facts. It is sufficient to state that the seizure and sequestration of the vessels and merchandise of our citizens in French ports by order of the French Government, and the capture of some of our vessels and the destruction of others on the high seas by the authority of France, are the grave injuries for which our citizens seek redress.

For these injuries France is responsible; these claims of our citizens are clearly just, and it is the duty of this Government to prosecute them against the Government of France.

The efforts which have been heretofore made by this Government to obtain redress for these injuries from France are also well known. They have been able, strenuous, and repeated; but they have been wholly without success. Still, the committee are unwilling to believe that France has definitively refused to listen to the voice of justice; and they are of opinion that one further effort should be solemnly made by negotiation to obtain redress. Entertaining this opinion the committee do not at this time recommend any legislative measure. Negotiation belongs to the Executive branch of the Government; and it is not doubted that every proper exertion of the Executive authority will be made to pursue this object and obtain just redress.

The committee therefore ask to be discharged from further consideration of these memorials.

19TH CONGRESS.] No. 456. [2D SESSION.

SPOLIATIONS BY FRANCE, NAPLES, HOLLAND OR THE NETHERLANDS, AND DENMARK SINCE 1805.

COMMUNICATED TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES FEBRUARY 23, 1827.

Mr. EVERETT, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom have been referred the memorials, respectively, of sundry citizens of Portland, of Portsmouth, of Salem, of Rhode Island, of New York, of Philadelphia, and of Baltimore; also, the petition of Benjamin Fry, and of John and Alexander Johnston; also, a letter of the Secretary of State, of January 30, accompanied by a schedule of claims on foreign Governments, prepared in obedience to a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 19th of May, 1826; also, an additional schedule of claims of citizens of New York, reported:

That the subject of the claims of American citizens on foreign Governments for captures and spoliations on the high seas, and for sequestrations, confiscations, and illegal detentions in port during the continental system, so called, is well known to the House of Representatives. The above named memorials contain the representations of large and respectable bodies of merchants in some of the most important commercial towns in the United States, and also of individual citizens. Similar memorials have on former occasions been presented to the House, and have received the respectful notice of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The general nature of the claims preferred in these memorials is the same, although the merits of the question vary in a certain degree in reference to the different Governments against whom the claims exist. The extent of individual hardship and outrage was also various. The document from the Department of State, alluded to above, furnishes a great deal of important information on both points. It will, in the opinion of the committee, expose to the American people a series of cases of oppression and injury not less seriously affecting the national character than fatal to the private interest of the parties concerned. It is, in fact, the circumstance which entitles these claims to the consideration of the House that they grew out of violations of national law and the faith of treaties, deeply involving the honor of the American people.

The claims preferred are on the Governments of France, the Netherlands, Naples, and Denmark. The proceedings of the American Government, in the attempt to procure by friendly negotiation that indemnity which is due as a matter alike of national and private right, have at various times been communicated to the House of Representatives. Obvious considerations have led the Executive to press with the greatest urgency the claims on the Government of France. Justice could not, perhaps, with propriety be enforced from the other Powers before, nor dispensed with after it shall have been done to our citizens by this powerful, prosperous, and magnanimous State, of whose elevated and liberal policy the people of the United States have had too many proofs to fear a final difference of sentiment on this subject. The committee are not unmindful of the plausible nature of the plea that it is hard that the present Government of France should be called upon to make reparation for the illegal acts of the late Emperor. It is, however, known to the whole world that immense sums were in the first years of the restored monarchy paid by France to the various Governments of Europe, and that the United States, the only people whose arms were not turned against France, is the only one which has been excluded from this general distribution of indemnity. There is, in fact, no hardship in now refunding to the American merchant the value of those supplies, so long since wrested from him, which were often specifically applied to the public service of France, and always formed an accession to the public stock or the private means of her citizens. However great the evils which France may have endured under the reign of Napoleon, the exhaustion and impoverishment resulting to that country were alleviated by the entire amount of the many millions of property acquired by violence from our peaceful merchants. It is not asking much that this amount should be regarded as having been loaned to France, and that it should now, after fifteen or twenty years' use, be repaid to its rightful owners. The question of hardship might be safely rested on the single consideration, whether the citizens of America ought to be the final losers of property of which, in consequence of the arbitrary measures of the late Emperor, France has for so many years gratuitously enjoyed the benefit.

But the committee deem it the less necessary to press this point as the French Government, though often alluding to it, has never denied the justice of these claims, has admitted the validity of several portions of them, and makes their allowance and payment contingent on the adjustment of another question in controversy, viz: the privileges claimed by France, in the ports of Louisiana, under the eighth article of the convention by which Louisiana was ceded to the United States. The Government of France maintains an interpretation of that article, in virtue of which French vessels are gratuitously to be admitted into the ports of Louisiana on the same terms as the vessels of Powers between which and the United States the discriminating duties have been mutually abrogated. This claim has long formed the subject of negotiation between the Governments of the United States and France, and the former has ever expressed a willingness to continue or revive the discussion. It has, however, protested, and, as the committee think, with great reason, against making the indemnification justly due to individuals for wrongs admitted to have been suffered contingent on the settlement of a political question between the two Governments. Allowing, for a moment, and for the sake of argument, that the Government of the United States is wrong in its interpretation of the eighth article of the Louisiana convention, this wrong can afford France no justification for withholding from individual citizens of the United States the payment of debts acknowledged to be due. It is, however, a satisfactory consideration that the difficulty thus arising is in a fair course of removal. In the operation of the existing commercial convention with France the discriminating duties will, on the 1st day of October next, be mutually repealed, and the controversy arising on the interpretation of the eighth article of the Louisiana convention will be thus practically settled. When this shall be the case the known character of the French Government is a pledge to the United States that justice will not long be withheld from our citizens. Once rendered by France, the indemnity so long delayed will, no doubt, be promptly accorded by the other Powers.

From the report of the Secretary of State, above alluded to, it appears that the claims on the various Powers (omitting parts of a dollar) amount to the following sums:

On France	$9,600,332
On Naples	2,032,939
On the Netherlands	750,059
On Denmark	2,662,280
	15,045,610

This aggregate is exclusive of a large amount of claims that have been presented since the preparation of the schedule, and there is also, no doubt, a considerable amount which, from various causes, has never been reported to the Department of State. So large an amount of property, of which our citizens have been deprived under circumstances closely connected with the nation, is too important an object ever to be lost sight of. It may safely be pronounced a claim which this Government, however temperately and patiently it may pursue it, will never abandon. The confidence which the committee entertain that the measures within the competence of the Executive will eventually prove successful is measured by the reliance which is felt in the justice and honor of foreign Governments. Till those measures shall have been exhausted and found inadequate the time will not have arrived for legislative interference. The committee therefore ask to be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

Memorial of merchants and other citizens of Portland for claims on France and other European States for spoliations committed on their lawful commerce.

The subject of our claims on foreign Powers for spoliations on our commerce is one which deeply concerns us as individuals whose property has been wrongfully wrested from them and as Americans whose national honor has been violated with impunity. The duty, then, of asking a reparation of our wrongs is binding on us both as individuals and as citizens. And when we humbly implore remuneration for our lost property we cannot be unmindful that we are entitled to it on the fundamental principle of government, that protection is due when obedience is yielded. In the pursuits of lawful commerce, the success of which contributes to national power as well as individual wealth, our vessels, bearing the American flag, and entitled to its protection, have been taken from us, sometimes by lawless decrees, enacted for belligerent purposes, sometimes, by a summary process, sold to supply the deficiencies of an exhausted treasury, without even the form of trial to hide the injustice of the act. Other nations suffered from the injustice of the belligerents, but the justice of their claims, supported by the strong arm of power, was speedily acknowledged and reparation made; so that we have not the poor consolation of hailing them as brethren in our disgrace.

From the commencement of the French Revolution until the final restoration of the Bourbon Sovereign the United States were almost the only important commercial Power which continued neutral for any length of time, and, of course, our commerce suffered the most severely from the acts of the belligerents; where, however, our vessels have been condemned on just principles of national law we submit without a murmur; and in those cases where they were sold, after an open trial, for contravening decrees not construed retrospectively, although contradictory principles of international law, we would not overlook the expedient in obtaining the rights; but where sales and confiscations took place, sanctioned only by the "fiat" of the French Emperor, we cannot but believe that our Government will interfere to protect its subjects against such outrageous assumption of power.

But we are not unmindful that Government, impressed with a sense of the justice of our claims on France, has been laboring to procure reparation from that Power; but where so large a sum has been withdrawn from the active capital of our country, and where the national honor is so intimately connected with the reparation which we claim, we trust that it will not be considered rash to say that our Government will never ignominiously submit to have its citizens robbed and its sovereignty defied by any foreign Power, whether great or small. In 1811, in the instructions given to our Minister to France, his first attention was called to "the claims on France, which it is expected that her Government will satisfy to their full extent without delay."

In Mr. Madison's message to Congress, in June, 1812, after some observations on our French claims, he uses the following language: "I abstain, at this time, from recommending to the consideration of Congress definite measures with respect to that nation, in the expectation that the result of unclosed discussions between our Minister Plenipotentiary at Paris and the French Government will speedily enable Congress to decide, with greater advantage, on the course due to the rights, the interest, and the honor of our country." In the general instructions to Mr. Gallatin, in 1816, after professing our friendly disposition to France, the letter adds: "The history of the last ten years is replete with wrongs received from that Government, for which no justifiable pretext can be assigned." Soon after Mr. Gallatin's arrival at Paris he addressed his celebrated letter of the 9th November to the Duke de Richelieu, in which the justice of our claims is supported by the most convincing arguments. Not only, says the letter, were the Berlin and Milan decrees an evident and acknowledged violation of the law of nations, but they were also an open infraction of the 12th, 13th, and 14th articles of the convention of 1800, which did not expire until July 31, 1809. To this letter no answer was returned, but, in a personal interview, the Duke stated that he could not offer beyond an indemnity for vessels burnt at sea, and for those the proceeds of which had only been sequestered and deposited in the "caisse d'amortissement." And at a subsequent interview he concluded that a silent postponement of the subject was the least objectionable course. Mr. Gallatin replied that he was not authorized to accede to this indefinite and unexpected delay, and that it could not be viewed favorably by the United States. In 1819 his excellency Baron Louis, the Minister of Finance, in a letter to Mr. Parish, who had applied for restitution of the value of three cargoes, the proceeds of which had been placed in the Sinking Fund, thus writes: "I admit with you, sir, the iniquity of these measures, and with you I deplore the effects; but to repair them is not within the compass of my power." In the same year indemnity was also refused by the Council of State for the vessels burnt at sea under the Berlin and Milan decrees, after the revocation of those decrees, so far as they applied to American commerce.—(Mr. Gallatin's letter to Baron Pasqueir, March 15, 1820.) A part of one of these cargoes, for restitution of the value of which Mr. Parish applied and was refused, was sold to a Mr. Tillietaz, who was a Belgian subject, and has since been remunerated for his loss. In the whole of the correspondence between Mr. Gallatin and the French ministers, although he always urged the justice of the claims, there is no attempt on their part to meet or answer his arguments; on the contrary, they often admit their justice and request postponement, or profess their inability to pay them. In 1822 Mr. Gallatin holds the following language in a letter to his excellency Count de Villele: "I have, in the mean while, for six years made unceasing application to his Majesty's Government for the settlement of claims, to a vast amount, affecting the interest of numerous individuals, and arising from flagrant violations of the law of nations, and of the rights of the United States, without having ever been able to obtain, to this day, satisfaction in a single instance, or even that the subject should be taken into consideration and discussed." And, finally, our minister, after meeting with delay after delay, and finding that when one obstacle was removed another was substituted, thus writes to the Secretary, when he is assured that the 8th article of the Louisiana treaty must be jointly treated with our claims: "The subject is too obvious to require any comments on my part, and the final decision leaves me no other course than to refer the whole to my Government." Such was the result of six years' almost constant intercession of our minister with the French Government. The justice, then, of our claims has been fully recognized and distinctly urged by our Government, and France, it would seem, has virtually acknowledged their obligation to compensate us for our wrongs; and yet six years' intercession has effected little better than nothing. Our negotiations with France have not been concealed from the world, but have been open to the public eye, and there is not a nation of Europe but what may have seen the American Government entreating France to make remuneration for the robberies she has committed on our property. With what opinion they may justly regard us in such circumstances is easy to foretell; and how far our submission may operate to induce a repetition of the like outrages, in the case of European wars, is for our Government to determine. In the mean time, with the passage of each year, the evidence which is necessary to substantiate our losses is growing more precarious, and the French nation, we presume, are growing every day more unwilling to satisfy old claims. In a short time, too, justice will come too late to recompense those who have been actual sufferers, and the property which has been taken from them may erect tombstones over those who lingered out life in indigence and obscurity. Besides, apathy and indifference are rapidly succeeding to the general indignation which was expressed at the losses of the sufferers, and the nation are forgetful of the past in the engrossing cares of the present.

For these reasons, your memorialists humbly believe that the proper adjustment of these claims will become more difficult by delay; and as France has now improved her finances by ten or more years of peace and prosperity, the present seems the most favorable time to urge a speedy settlement.

Believing that our claims are just; that our Government has recognized its obligations to support them under successive administrations; that France has not officially denied them; and that now is a favorable time to urge their adjustment, we respectfully request the honorable Legislature of our nation to adopt such measures for their immediate adjustment as to them the importance of the case seems to demand.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of Thomas Sheafe et al., merchants of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, respecting their claims upon the French Government for spoliations on their commerce, respectfully shows:

That the subscribers, citizens of Portsmouth, in the State of New Hampshire, are interested, as owners or underwriters, in various claims against the French Government, arising from the arbitrary and unjustifiable edicts of the Emperor Napoleon during the period between the commencement of the year 1806 and the year 1813.

These claims are susceptible of a division into several different classes:

First. The seizure and sequestration of our vessels and cargoes in French ports, by order of the French Government or some military officer, on the alleged ground that the vessel had been in an English port, either voluntarily or by stress of weather, or had been, during her voyage, visited by an English cruiser.

Second. The capture on the high seas of American vessels and carrying them into French ports for an alleged violation of the Berlin and Milan and other decrees.

Third. The seizure and sequestration of American vessels after a public notice of the repeal of those decrees had been communicated to our Government.

Fourth. The burning and destruction of American vessels on the high seas during the continuance and after the alleged repeal of those decrees.

In the three first classes the cases were submitted to the Emperor Napoleon, or to the examination and judgment of his prize courts, but in the latter there was only the momentary examination of papers by the commander of a national fleet or ship, and no other record of the proceeding than the log-book of the capturing vessel.

Representations of their particular cases, as they from time to time happened, have heretofore been made to the Government, and your memorialists are aware that the Government has made earnest and repeated demands of the French nation for satisfaction of their depredations on our commerce, and of the various shifts and pretences by which the admission of their justice has been eluded and their payment delayed.

The full extent of the losses sustained by the citizens of this town by these flagrant aggressions upon their commerce has not been yet ascertained, but, from the best opinion which your memorialists have been able to form of their amount, they will exceed the sum of two hundred thousand dollars.

These claims are principally holden by widows, orphans, and persons whose fortunes have been undermined or wholly destroyed by these very depredations upon their property; and if a just remuneration could be obtained it would alleviate much suffering and produce much private comfort and happiness.

Believing it to be the duty of the Government to protect its citizens in the prosecution of its lawful commerce against the unprincipled assaults of foreign Powers—assaults in violation of the laws of nations and the usages of civilized communities—your memorialists respectfully request and earnestly pray that these claims may be prosecuted against the French Government by those ulterior measures to which their justice and magnitude are entitled, the obligations of the Government to its citizens require, and which the wisdom of Congress may suggest.

PORTSMOUTH, December 30, 1826.

To the honorable the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the subscribers, a committee of the merchants of Salem, having claims on the Governments of France, Naples, Holland, and Denmark for spoliations on their commerce, respectfully showeth:

That the amount of said claims, as they have reason to believe, exceeds a million and a half of dollars, arising from unjust captures and condemnations of their vessels engaged in lawful commerce, and from unjust seizures and confiscation of their property in the ports of said nations during the last war in Europe.

By these depredations many of them lost a large portion of their property, and all of them are sufferers to a considerable extent. Your memorialists believe that no class of citizens have a stronger claim to the interposition of Government in their behalf than the merchants, for they are peculiarly dependent upon it; they have ever largely contributed to its support, and it is only through such interposition that they can hope to obtain redress for injuries sustained from foreign nations.

Your memorialists hope that it will not be deemed improper in them to observe that the commerce of Salem, which was once so flourishing, has greatly declined; that, from the pressure of the times, many insolvencies have recently taken place, and a general gloom pervades a town which a few years since was enlivened by cheerful and successful industry.

Could your memorialists and the merchants whom they represent obtain anything like a just indemnity for the wrongs that they have sustained, it would go far to restore the former prosperity of the town and preserve many of them from ruin.

Your memorialists would not presume to suggest to the wisdom of Congress what measures they ought to adopt, but they would respectfully ask whether, under existing circumstances, a special embassy to the Court of France might not be productive of the most satisfactory results. It was by those who administered the Government of France during the late war in Europe that a large portion of the injuries of which they complain were directly or indirectly inflicted. That Government possesses most ample means of satisfying all just claims upon it, and it is believed that there are none more so than those of the merchants of the United States, who suffered by the lawless depredations committed on their property during the period aforesaid. Should that Government be prevailed on to do justice in this respect there is no reason to doubt that the other Governments above mentioned will readily follow their example.

Your memorialists would, in conclusion, observe, that they have perfect confidence in the disposition of Congress to obtain justice for them. They feel that they have a rightful claim to the aid of their Government, and they believe that the honor and permanent interest of the country require that no just demands upon foreign nations should be abandoned until they are satisfied.

SALEM, MASSACHUSETTS, December 12, 1826.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of sundry merchants of the city of Philadelphia, upon the subject of spoliations committed under the authority or decrees of the Government of France, respectfully showeth:

That in conformity to a resolution of the House of Representatives, passed the last session of Congress, they have furnished the Department of State with statements of their claims upon the Government of France for spoliations and losses sustained under its authority or various decrees, with the hope and expectation that the information therein contained would form the basis of some new measure leading to the great object of indemnity, so long and so unjustly withheld. That refraining from a painful repetition and enumeration of the sufferings and grievances referred to, which, falling in the first instance on your memorialists, have, in their consequences and effects, reached even the agricultural and manufacturing sources of prosperity of this Union, they venture respectfully to suggest to your honorable bodies the adoption of an expedient which, under analogous circumstances, has been resorted to with success on several former occasions. They refer to the institution of a special mission to France, which, according with the mild and pacific, yet firm and dignified character and policy of this Government, has heretofore been productive of the happiest results in adjusting similar demands on some of the principal powers of Europe.

Such a mission, your memorialists conceive, could not fail, from its respectful and special character, to insure the most favorable reception and immediate attention from the French Government, which, having recognized and paid the claims of their European neighbors, and even those of Algiers, for similar violations of the law of nations during the dynasty of Napoleon, could not consistently even with the ordinary rules of comity and civility reject an amicable and special overture for a renewed negotiation and investigation of their claims.

Were additional arguments wanting to prove the sound policy of such an attempt, they might be found in the recent success of our present able minister at the court of London, who, it is understood, has effected an arrangement with the British Government on a long contested and unadjusted claim under the treaty of Ghent.

Discarding all partial and selfish views of the subject, your memorialists are deeply impressed with the important truth, that the prosperity and interests of the commerce of the United States are indissolubly connected and closely interwoven with those of other great branches of national industry, more especially with agriculture and manufactures, and that every loss sustained by the merchant, by impairing and lessening the active capital of the country, necessarily affects both the farmer and artisan, and has a tendency to diminish the value of the soil, as well as its produce, while at the same time it injures the public revenue, and thereby saps the very strength of the naval and military power of the country. Even the factories, which consume our wool, our cotton, and other raw materials; the canals and turnpikes which intersect our country, and conduct its produce to the seaports, are the offspring of our commercial capital and enterprise. And your memorialists respectfully and fervently pray that the hand of a beneficent Government may be extended, by means of a special mission or otherwise, to preserve the great amount of property which is now unjustly withheld by France, in violation of the faith of treaties and of the acknowledged law of nations.

PHILADELPHIA, December 30, 1826.

To the honorable the Senate and the honorable the House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The undersigned, a native citizen of the United States, residing in Newport, in the State of Rhode Island, merchant, begs leave respectfully to represent: That on the 30th day of November, A. D. 1800, he being at that time sole owner of a brig or vessel called the Favorite, of Newport aforesaid, despatched her, with a valuable cargo of his own property on board, on a voyage from the port of Newport to the Island of St. Christopher, in the West Indies, under the command of Benjamin Seabury, of Little Compton, in said State of Rhode Island, who was captain of said brig for her intended voyage; that whilst prosecuting the same, and on her outward passage, on the 19th day of December, of the same year, said brig was captured by a French privateer called the Dugomier, commanded by Captain Ragondin, and owned by a citizen of the French Island of Guadaloupe; that said brig was carried for adjudication into Basseterre, in said island, and, together with her cargo, was there finally condemned under the forms of law; that the said brig, at the time of her sailing as aforesaid, was regularly cleared for the voyage aforesaid from the custom-house at said Newport, and was furnished with all the documents and papers necessary, under the then existing treaties and laws of the United States, for her safe conduct during her contemplated voyage; that upon her arrival at Basseterre, as aforesaid, the captain and crew were immediately immured in prison, and kept in close confinement during the whole time of their stay there; that upon their liberation and subsequent arrival at the Island of St. Christopher, a solemn protest, in due form, was made, in relation to the said capture and condemnation, by the master, mate, and one of the seamen of the said brig, and an additional and supplemental protest was afterwards made by the said master upon his arrival at said Newport, viz: on the 15th day of January, A. D. 1802.

Your petitioner would further respectfully represent that, by the convention entered into by and between the Government of the United States and the French Republic, on the 3d day of September, A. D. 1800, and in and by the fourth article thereof, provision was made for the restoration or payment of all property that should thereafter be so illegally captured and condemned; and your petitioner, confiding in the ability and disposition of the Government of the United States to protect the rights and the property of its citizens engaged in legal commercial pursuits on the high seas, made early application to the then Secretary of State for advice and direction as to the proper measures to be by him pursued in order to effect a restoration of the property of the said brig and cargo, or payment therefor, by the Government of the French Republic, according to the terms and spirit of the last clause of the fourth article of the convention above referred to; and your petitioner was thereupon informed that Mr. Livingston, then American minister in France, was authorized and instructed, by the American Executive, to employ a suitable agent to urge such claims upon the French Government, and was supplied with funds for that purpose; whereupon your petitioner, at great expense of time and money, provided himself with all the documents considered necessary for the favorable exhibition of his claim, and made a voyage himself to France, exclusively for the purpose of effecting a restoration of the value of the said brig and cargo; that, upon his arrival there, he had an interview with the said American minister, and was by him referred to Mr. Fulwar Skipwith, as the agent of the American Government for prosecuting claims for French spoliations, and to him and his care he confided the documentary evidence he had collected; and, after some time spent there in unavailing endeavors to effect his object, he returned, disappointed and impoverished, to the United States; from which time to the present the claim of your petitioner, so committed by him to the authorized agent of the Government of the United States, has been suffered to repose in silence. In the mean time the circumstances of your petitioner have been exceedingly straightened and his comforts abridged by being so long and so unjustly deprived of his property.

Your petitioner would further represent that, as the convention above alluded to was entered into on the 3d day of September, A. D. 1800, and the capture of the Favorite was not made until the 19th day of December following, it follows that this claim cannot be considered as having been embraced by the stipulation for indemnity at that time entered into for such captures as had been made prior to that time, but falls within the intent of the provision made for captures which might happen at a subsequent period, and so is a subsisting valid claim of the Government of the United States against the Government of France.

Under these circumstances, therefore, your petitioner comes before the honorable Congress as his last and only resort for relief in the premises, and respectfully prays that his case may be taken into consideration, and that Congress will extend to him such protection, indemnity, and relief as are due to him as a citizen of a free and sovereign State, and such as, in his particular case, to right and justice appertain. And, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

BENJAMIN FRY.

NEWPORT, RHODE ISLAND, January 5, 1817.

To the honorable Senate and honorable House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

The memorial of John Johnston and Alexander Johnston, both of Wiscasset, in the State of Maine, and citizens of the United States, respectfully shows: That, in the year 1810, they were the sole owners of the ship Cleopatra, of Wiscasset, of three hundred and seventy-eight tons burden, James Brown, master, said ship being nearly new, having been built in Wiscasset in 1807; that, in the month of June, 1810, she sailed from Liverpool, bound to Petersburg, with a cargo of salt, wholly owned by your memorialists, and one of them (John Johnston) was on board during the voyage; that, in the month of July, 1810, while prosecuting said voyage and proceeding up the Baltic, said ship was captured in the Great Belt, by a Danish armed boat, and carried into the Island of Zealand, and soon afterwards she, with her said cargo, were condemned at Copenhagen, by the Government of Denmark, and sold, and the proceeds of the sale kept by that Government, so that your memorialists totally lost the same, the Government of Denmark having never made any reparation whatever. The ship was a valuable vessel, worth twenty-five thousand dollars, she having cost your memorialists that sum, as they built her by the day, with great care and labor, for their own particular use. The cargo was worth five thousand dollars.

Your memorialists respectfully request that their case may receive your consideration, and that such measures may be adopted by the wisdom of Congress so that adequate relief may be granted them.

JOHN JOHNSTON.
ALEX. JOHNSTON.

WISCASSET, January 11, 1827.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the undersigned merchants of Baltimore respectfully represents:

That, in common with many others, they have sustained great and grievous losses under the edicts of France and her dependencies in the war which, during the reign of the Emperor Napoleon, was waged between that country and Great Britain. The injuries arising during this war out of the mutual usurpations of the belligerents, though they have been cancelled, as to Great Britain, by the extreme remedy of an appeal to arms, remain, as regards France, without atonement of any sort. Your memorialists moreover respectfully represent, that the return to peace, while it affords to the latter Power the leisure to review and redress these injuries, has restored to her a prosperity which leaves her no longer the excuse of inability to repair them. Under these circumstances your memorialists approach the Government of their country, praying that vindication of their rights which, though wisely suspended at a former period, seems now to be demanded, not only by the extent of loss which its citizens will in default of it sustain, but by a sense of national dignity and regard to the violated principles of the law of nations.

Your memorialists are not aware that France denies the justice of these claims. Indeed, the maxims of public law universally admitted by nations; treaties contracted with Napoleon by all the chief Powers of Europe, the benefits of which are, in various instances, retained by France to this day; claims for indemnity preferred by her allies, and admitted by her, for injuries sustained under his administration; the fact that actual compensation has been made by her in many cases; all these, independently of successive admissions of various parts of our claims by different ministers of France, would sufficiently demonstrate that, as regards foreign nations, the illegal acts of Napoleon are, to all intents, the acts of the ruling Government of France, and that it, by consequence, is as responsible to the sufferers as if those wrongs had emanated immediately from itself. And these facts and principles are now adverted to by your memorialists with a view to demonstrate, not a responsibility which is undenied, but the obligation which attaches to the restored Government of France in her present prosperity, and after the allowance of like claims to other Powers, to liquidate those of our citizens without delay.

Your honorable bodies are well aware that not only were the decrees complained of in contravention of acknowledged principles of public law, but the adjudications under them were, for the most part, irregular. They were made, in many cases, without any of the formalities intended for the protection of the captured neutral; they were pronounced, in others, by incompetent tribunals, as, by the Executive power, usurping the place of the courts ordinarily recognized for this purpose; they often attached on property which could, by no rational interpretation, be considered as having come within the prohibitions of the edicts; and lastly, they, as well as the decrees themselves, were made to operate retrospectively, or on property captured after the revocation of the decrees, both being in violation of sacred principles of national law. To complete the climax of oppression, the vessels and cargoes of American citizens were burnt on the high seas without even the mockery of a prize process. To all which is to be added, that a large portion of these invasions of our neutral rights were made in the face of express stipulations to the contrary, in the convention of 1800, between France and the United States.

For all the property lost to them by these usurpations your memorialists humbly apprehend themselves entitled to indemnification from the French Government, and to the interposition, to that end, of the protecting hand of their own. But they beg leave to call the attention of your honorable bodies more particularly to certain cases, not more unjust, perhaps, than the rest, but distinguished by some peculiar circumstances, which place their right to indemnity in a stronger point of light. Your memorialists allude, in the first place, to the vessels and cargoes which, in the beginning of 1807 and shortly after the promulgation of the Berlin decree, were either driven by stress of weather or compelled by warlike force into British ports, and which subsequently arrived at Antwerp. A doubt having arisen whether property thus compelled into England was within the operation of the decree, it was placed in the public stores to abide the decision of the Emperor, and was finally sold, and the proceeds deposited in the French treasury. They refer, secondly, to those seized at St. Sebastian towards the close of 1809, and sold in conformity to the subsequent decree of Rambouillet. And, lastly, to fourteen vessels driven by rigorous weather, in the winter of 1809–'10 into, the ports of Holland, then a kingdom nominally independent of France, and subsequently, by a treaty between King Louis and the Emperor, put under sequestration, and at the disposal of France. All these cases of seizure had this circumstance in common, that in none of them was there either trial or condemnation. The vessels and cargoes were simply seized and sold by order of the Government, for all whom it might concern, and the proceeds deposited in the public treasury. This seizure and sequestration took place, in regard to one or more vessels, under circumstances of yet greater injustice. The vessels in question went, indeed, direct from the United States to Holland. But before they ventured in they requested instructions of the Dutch consignees, by whose advice, and under a protection from capture by the King's ships, they entered the port of Amsterdam, where their cargoes were, nevertheless, deposited in the King's stores, and the greater part afterwards confiscated and placed at the disposal of France. Your memorialists humbly suggest that, in these and other like cases, they are entitled to claim of France either the regular condemnation of their property hy the authorized tribunals or else the restoration, from the French treasury, of its illegal spoils. That the French Government is not insensible of the justice of this claim may appear from the following facts: That in no instance has any bond, given in these cases by European consignees, been enforced; and, in one instance, indemnification has been actually made by the restored Government to a Belgian house for property sequestered.

Your memorialists would now respectfully invite the attention of your honorable bodies to the circumstances under which the delay of France to liquidate and pay these claims has been vexatiously prolonged. It is known that different parts of all the claims thus accruing have, at different times, been allowed by successive French ministries, and that no positive denial has been made of any. It is not to be supposed, indeed, that that power can seriously maintain either its irresponsibleness for the acts of the imperial Government, or the legality of the Berlin and Milan decrees; and even supposing the validity of these to be insisted on, the largest number of cases in which compensation is asked are those of irregular condemnations under them, or of decisions, regular or irregular, under other decrees, incontestably contravening the law of nations, or under extra-judicial acts of the imperial Government. Of other pretences for delaying the liquidation of these claims, set up from time to time, the tonnage question has been put at rest by the negotiation of the Convention of Commerce; and the objection arising on the eighth article of the Louisiana treaty is too plainly unfounded in sound sense to be regarded as serious or honest. There remains, therefore, on the part of France, only the plea of pecuniary inability to meet our demands. That plea may have been of some validity while she was yet unrecovered from her disorders, and while claims were pressed on her from all sides. If the United States then allowed the reasonableness of this excuse, there is so much the more reason that their forbearance shall not be converted to their loss. It is left to the consideration of your honorable bodies whether—with the prosperity and wealth which twelve years of peace have restored to her; with her revenue of one hundred and seventy millions of dollars collected with ease, and, for the most part, independent of the fluctuations of foreign commerce; and with her ingenious population of thirty-five millions, inhabiting a country of various and precious productions—France shall be longer permitted to plead her pecuniary inability to pay claims arising out of the injuries of a former Government. If even the private interests of their own citizens could, for a moment, be passed over by the United States, they will not be insensible to what is due, at their hands, to the rights and justice of nations. Yet a Government whose position renders of the first importance the fostering of a commercial marine will be profoundly impressed with the necessity of vindicating claims such as those set forth in this appeal, not merely for the reparation of past losses, but for the security and encouragement of future enterprize. The property of the American merchant has been seized under the arbitrary decrees of other nations, at the time under the control of the French Empire. The claims arising against all these Powers require, and will no doubt receive, effectual enforcement from Government. But those existing against France will appear to the national wisdom to require the earliest adjustment on account of their magnitude, because that Government was the original fountain of mischief, and because a previous assertion of our rights against her, besides comporting better with the national dignity, will facilitate arrangement with the secondary Powers.

Your memorialists, &c.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the subscribers, a committee appointed at a general meeting of the merchants and traders of New York, having claims upon France and other European States for spoliations committed on their commerce, respectfully showeth:

That during the late war between France and Great Britain they were engaged in the shipping business and carrying trade between this country and Europe. In the prosecution of this business they endeavored strictly to conform to the laws of nations and of the respective countries with which they traded, and confidently relied upon the protection which the Government of every civilized nation feels bound to extend to its citizens whilst engaged in their legitimate pursuits. Shortly after the commencement of that war, the belligerent Powers began a career of plunder and aggression upon neutral commerce, which served the double purpose of filling their own treasures and diminishing the resources of their enemies by cutting off their trade with neutrals.

It has always been the favorite policy of powerful belligerents to narrow the limits of neutral commerce by multiplying the pretext of seizure and confiscation; but, during the late war, this system was carried to an extent of which history had afforded no example, and was sought to be justified on principles which no civilized nation had yet dared to avow. It was upon the wealth and resources of these United States, it cannot be doubted, that the measures to which we refer were meant chiefly to operate, and it was the policy of our Government that they were intended to control. The grasping spirit of European monopoly attempted to impose upon us new shackles in place of the colonial fetters that had been shaken off, and displayed itself in continual efforts to cripple the commerce it could not prohibit, lessen the resources it was not suffered to appropriate, and arrest the growth of the prosperity it had no longer the power to crush. The first act in a series of aggressions, continually advancing in mischief and enormity, was an exclusion from an extensive branch of the carrying trade, by a sudden revival, in a new form, and with a wider application of the rule of 1756; a rule of which the injustice was confessed by its subsequent disuse, whilst its very name indicates its recent, and, therefore, unlawful origin. Our partial submission to this measure was construed into an inability to defend our neutral rights; it provoked, and was followed by, successive outrages by all the belligerent Powers upon our commerce, and the persons of those engaged in it, until the period arrived when it was believed and decided that further acquiescence would be a surrender of our national independence. The last remedy for national injuries was resorted to, and the settlement of our claims on England placed on the arbitrament of arms. By this extreme remedy the accounts between the Governments were closed; but the beneficial effects of the contest are still felt, not only in the elevation of the national character, but the greater security of the citizens of this country, when on the ocean, from the visitation of armed vessels, and in the silent abolition of pretensions which, if not expressly renounced, we venture to predict will not again be urged.

From Spain, satisfaction has been obtained by the cession of Florida, and claims of our citizens, to the amount of $5,000,000, been liquidated and paid. There still exists, however, claims upon the Governments of France and other continental Powers of Europe, formidable in their amount, and the settlement of which is of the highest importance to the national character.

The claim upon Denmark rests upon grounds different from those upon France and the dependent kingdoms of that Power.

They grew out of a system of piratical privateering upon American commerce, which was countenanced by the Admiralty courts of that kingdom without pretence of right.

Some vessels were captured for having French consular certificates on board; the Emperor Napoleon having notified the northern courts that his consuls in the United States would not issue any neutral certificates after the 22d of September, 1810, when, in fact, his order to his consuls was not received in the United States until the 13th of November following. Still, those vessels having certificates of the French consuls, issued previous to that period, were captured and condemned; and by this celebrated juggle between these courts the property of your memorialists has been sacrificed without their having been able to obtain redress for this violation of faith and public law. Other vessels were condemned as having accepted British convoy, which your memorialists contend is, in no case, good ground of condemnation, but which certainly ought never to have been applied to those vessels which were compelled to accept, by superior force, of that protection which proved so fatal to them.

The claims upon France, however, are of a paramount character, both on account of their magnitude and of the nature of the considerations by which they are recommended to the attention of Congress. A concise statement of the origin of our claims will show that no language can too strongly characterize the transactions by which we have been deprived of our property.

In the year 1806, November 21, the Emperor of France, on the alleged ground that England had infringed the rights of neutrals in blockading the coasts of France and Holland, and prohibiting them from carrying on the trade between the colonies and the belligerent mother countries, issued his celebrated Berlin decree. By this decree the British islands were declared to be in a state of blockade, and all correspondence with them prohibited. Letters written in English were made liable to seizure, all trade in English merchandise forbidden, and the goods made lawful prize. Vessels coming directly from England or her colonies, or having been there since the publication of the decree, were prohibited from entering any French port; and any attempt to evade that regulation by means of a false declaration was punished by confiscation.

Under this decree, a number of the vessels of your memorialists, which arrived in France after its promulgation, were seized because they had put into England; being forced in by stress of weather, or sent in by English cruisers for examination. This seizure was unauthorized, even by the decree itself, which imposed no other penalty on vessels coming from English ports than their compulsory departure from those of the continent, and limited the right to seize to the single case of an attempt to evade this provision by a false declaration. At this time, too, the convention between France and the United States of September 30, 1800, was in full force. By the 22d article of that convention, it was agreed that the established courts for prize causes should alone take cognizance of the vessels and property of American and French citizens, and that, when judgment should be pronounced against them, the sentence should mention the reasons of the decision.

It was accordingly provided in the Berlin decree that the Council of Prizes, at Paris, should decide upon all questions arising under that decree. When these American vessels were seized, a question arose whether they were liable to seizure under that decree, on the ground that they had not gone voluntarily, but had been coerced into the ports of England. The question was never submitted to the Council of Prizes; but, on the 4th of September, 1807, the Director General of the Customs issued a circular, giving the most rigorous construction to the decree, and a retrospective effect to his own decision, so as to extend it over all the American vessels which had been previously seized, and were then waiting for trial. The injustice, therefore, of the condemnations which took place under this construction of the decree did not consist merely in their infringement of the law of nations, but was heightened by their violation of the express terms of a solemn treaty.

On the 11th of December, 1807, the Berlin decree was followed by the Milan decree, also in professed retaliation of the invasions of neutral rights by England. This decree provided that any ship which should have submitted to be searched by an English vessel, or had been carried into England, or paid any duty to the English Government, should be adjudged to have forfeited the protection of its own Government, to have become English property, and to be good and lawful prize.

The British islands were declared to be in a state of blockade; and all ships, of whatever nation, sailing from or to English ports were declared to be lawful prize, and liable to capture. This article was a new and further infraction of the convention of 1800, which was still in force. By the 12th and 14th articles of that convention, the French Government had expressly stipulated that free ships should give freedom to the goods of an enemy, and that American vessels might pass and repass freely to and from the ports of the enemies of France, unless the same were "actually blockaded, besieged, or invested." This decree, like that issued at Berlin, was nominally applicable to all neutral vessels; but the chief operation of both was upon American commerce. It was soon made the pretext of the seizure and sale of a great number of American vessels and cargoes, the proceeds of which, without scruple, were applied to the service of the French Government. Orders were given to capture, and even to destroy, every American vessel bound to England or her dependencies. Nor were the armed vessels of France slow or scrupulous in executing these orders. Numbers of American vessels were burnt at sea, without even the form of a trial, and condemned by no other sentence than the will of the captors. And this wanton violation of neutral rights was, in some instances, carried so far as to cause the destruction of American vessels bound from their own country, not to hostile, but neutral ports.

The violent and inimical spirit shown by both belligerents towards the commerce of the United States at last induced our Government to lay an embargo, for the purpose of withdrawing the property of its citizens from the grasp of their unprincipled policy. Even this measure, pacific as it was, had the effect of provoking further aggressions upon the remnant of our commerce, in the shape of a decree, at Bayonne, April 17, 1808, ordering the seizure of all American vessels then in the ports of France, or which might afterwards arrive there, without any pretence, except one which was false in fact, and, in its spirit, most offensive and insulting to our Government and derogatory to our national independence.

The pretence was that an embargo having been laid by Congress, no American vessel could be lawfully abroad, and consequently that those which appeared as such could have no title to the national character, but ought to be condemned as British property.

This most extraordinary claim on the part of the French Government to enforce and punish violation of our municipal regulations was met not only by proper remonstrances made by the American minister, but by an explanation, showing that, at the time of laying the embargo, there were many American vessels abroad, which were ordered not to return to the United States until that law should be repealed. The operation of the embargo on the commercial and agricultural interests of the country finally induced Congress to repeal the law in respect to all countries except England and France, and the non-intercourse system was adopted in its stead. By that system all English and French vessels and merchandise were excluded from our ports until they had revoked or so modified their hostile decrees as to exempt our commerce from their destructive operation.

In that event, the commercial intercourse of the United States was to be renewed with that belligerent which should thus evince its disposition to return to the observance of the rights of friendly nations.

On the 29th of April, 1809, this law was communicated by the American minister to the French Government. No indication was given by that Government that it was regarded as a hostile measure, and no remonstrance was made against it.

Towards the end of that year, however, orders were given to seize all American vessels in all the ports of France, or in possession of her armies; and, after a great number had been thus seized, a decree was issued, dated at Rambouillet, March 23, 1810, confirming those seizures; extending, by a retrospective operation, the principle to all American vessels which had entered France or the dependent countries since May 20, 1809, and directing the proceeds arising from their sale to be paid into the public treasury. Even this "outrageous measure," as it has been justly styled in the official correspondence of the American minister, was not the limit of the aggressions of the continental belligerents nor of our injuries.

In pursuance of the continental system promulgated in the Berlin and Milan decrees, which were communicated as orders to the dependent allies of France, many American vessels were seized in the kingdom of Naples, forty-seven in number, and valued at four millions of dollars; were enticed into the Neapolitan ports by a decree of Murat, which relaxed the rigor of the blockade decrees as to American vessels, and, when they had trusted themselves to this plighted faith, the Neapolitan Government caused them to be seized, with their cargoes, which were sold for the benefit of the Government, and some of the vessels taken into the public service. Nor were these the limits of fraud and violence. They compelled the masters of those to pay the port charges and quarantine dues, and detained them at Naples until they had drawn on their owners for the full amount of these unrighteous exactions.

In Holland the American vessels belonging to your memorialists, which arrived in her ports in 1809, some of them forced in by stress of weather, were sequestered without any pretence of their having infringed the laws of the kingdom, and their cargoes placed in the public stores. The vessels were permitted to depart, as not having violated any law; but the cargoes were detained, without any, the least, reason being given, until the 16th of March, 1810, when, under an article of a treaty signed at Paris on the 16th of January, 1810, between Holland and France, they were delivered to the French Government as American, and by them received as such, to be dealt with "according to circumstances and the political relations between France and the United States."

At this time a treaty existed between the United States and Holland, by which the citizens of this country were put on the most favored footing; and Holland stipulated to protect American property within its jurisdiction, and guarantied its exemption from seizure either for public or private use.

Notwithstanding this treaty, these cargoes, which had been stored in the King's warehouses to be examined by sworn brokers (as directed by a new municipal regulation in Holland) to determine if they accorded with the accompanying certificates of origin, were then detained until the following year, and then transferred to the French Government as American property, without the least reflection being cast on them, or even a show of trial, and were sequestered by France in the lawless policy of anticipated war with the United States. By this step the property of your memorialists was identified with the sovereign rights of their country; it was not sequestered as the property of private merchants, but on account of its nationality, and on the ground of prospective difficulties with the American Government.

The United States were thus made parties to this sequestration, which was, in the most pointed manner, directed against them as the public enemies of France, unless the American Government would vindicate the rights of neutrals by such means and in such a mode as the French Government chose to prescribe. If the independence and sovereignty of the United States mean anything, it is concerned to resist pretensions like these, and to insist on a full reparation for the wrongs sustained by their citizens from such arbitrary and unjustifiable proceedings.

Other nations have demanded and obtained indemnity for their citizens for less atrocious wrongs. In 1805 a French squadron, under L'Allemand, destroyed several neutral vessels at sea, among which were four American ships. The owners of all the vessels, excepting the American, were paid for their property during the reign of Napoleon. The American owners are yet unpaid. The French Government admit the justice of making compensation for these captures, as well as for all vessels destroyed at sea; but in no instance have your memorialists been able to procure any indemnity for their losses. It is, therefore, a great addition to the hardship of which your memorialists complain, that, while the citizens of other nations, similarly aggrieved, have met with full redress, the claims of American citizens have been contemptuously rejected; for in no other light than that of a contemptuous rejection of their claims can your memorialists regard the weak and futile pretences that have been opposed to their just demands; pretences so urged and persisted in that they have deprived your memorialists of all hope or refuge but in the energetic interposition of their own Government.

In reference, indeed, to every class and description of claims has this preference for the subjects of European Powers over American citizens been strongly manifested, as if the French Government meant to impress on the public mind, in the most marked manner, that a nation which is wanting to itself is not entitled to an equal measure of justice.

In 1814, when Napoleon was compelled to abdicate, and the Bourbons were restored by the allied forces, the present Government of France, by a treaty with the principal Powers of Europe, engaged to liquidate and pay all the legal obligations which the former Government was under to individuals "in countries beyond its territories." This it was bound to do without the formality of a treaty. In the practice of the civilized world, and according to every principle of public law, it is well established that the obligations of treaties, and other official acts of Government, are never affected by revolutions or changes of dynasty.

Indeed, the principle of making an indemnity was distinctly admitted by the representatives of France, in their note to the ministers of the allies, September 21, 1815; and in the treaty by which the pacification of Europe was made it was inserted, to prevent any doubt as to the settled practice of nations which might be started as growing out of the extraordinary revolutions which had taken place.

By this article, which was meant as a general declaration on the part of France to the civilized world, and not merely as a covenant in favor of the parties to the treaty, all acts of violence not included within the description of damages of war were provided for, and, by a supplemental article with Great Britain, losses by assignats in the heat of the revolution, and all claims for illegal confiscations or sequestrations by the revolutionary Government, or by Napoleon, were liquidated and paid to English subjects.

If, therefore, the pretences upon which the American vessels and cargoes were sequestered under these illegal decrees were true, viz: that they really belonged to English merchants, then France would be liable to restore their value, in pursuance of that supplemental article; and if it be unfounded, it is indeed a strange and mysterious distinction that places neutral and friendly nations on a worse footing even than the enemies of France, unless (as has been well observed by a committee of the House of Representatives) that power wishes to inculcate the lesson "that it is better to be her enemy than her friend."

In pursuance of this treaty declaration, the Government of France, since the restoration, has proceeded to liquidate and extinguish claims of the subjects, both of the great Powers and petty States of Europe. Among others, your memorialists beg leave to refer to the following: Marshal Davoust, when in command at Hamburgh, in consequence of the alleged inability of the city to comply with one of his requisitions, sequestered the property deposited in the bank of that city. For all which belonged to foreigners and neutrals the French Government has acknowledged its liability, and paid to the claimants the amount of their losses. It has also discharged a private claim for some cotton and colonial produce seized by the French authorities in the Grand Duchy of Berg. Nay, even a claim amounting to 506,000 francs, by a Belgian subject, for part of one of the American cargoes seized at Antwerp, under the Berlin decree, and sold to him by the owner (one of your memorialists) after it was deposited in the public store, has been allowed and paid, with interest for its detention, while the remainder of the cargo, confessedly belonging to an American citizen, has been sold without a trial, and its proceeds expended in the public service, without any remuneration to the owner, and without even the form of any explanation to him or his Government.

The principle of indemnity has been even extended to the subjects of Algiers, and their claims, to the amount of six millions of francs, for supplies furnished to the armies of the Directory, have been admitted and paid by the present Government.

No comment is surely necessary on facts like these. The distinctions which they imply, the inferences which they justify, are deeply injurious to our national character, and call loudly for the interference of Congress to vindicate the honor of the country and the dignity of the Government.

Your memorialists were not wanting to themselves in maintaining their rights until the exercise of official violence left them no tribunal to appeal to but their own Government.

The Executive of the United States has urged their demands for justice with great ability upon the Governments of France and Holland, and these Governments, presuming upon the apathy of the American people towards the rights of the claimants, or upon the weakness of the Government, have met these remonstrances with the most futile excuses, or with cold and silent contempt.

Mr. Gallatin complained, in 1822, that, notwithstanding his repeated applications, during six years, to the French Government, he had not only failed in obtaining redress in a single instance, but that he had not even been honored with an answer. The Governments of Naples and Holland, presuming less upon their strength, have evaded our demands for justice upon various allegations, which, when examined, are found to be alike destitute of truth and reason, and which manifest an equal contempt of the common sense of mankind and of the established maxims of public and international law. They have denied their responsibility for the measures of the late Governments, and have presumed to set up, as a rule of national law, against the United States a principle directly opposite to that which they successfully asserted in the settlement of the claims of their own subjects upon France.

Committed, as France is, by the treaty of Paris, on the principle of indemnity, the French Government does not resort to such a defence.

Beneath all its smooth evasions and delays it conceals a determination to defend and enforce the validity of the Berlin and Milan decrees so far as it respects the United States.

In the cases of the Telegraph and Dolly, two American vessels burnt at sea in November and December, 1811, by French vessels-of-war, the Council of State at Paris decided, as late as 1820, that, inasmuch as the commanders of those frigates did not know that the decrees were repealed, the destruction of the American vessels was justifiable.

This extraordinary decision, which was approved and sanctioned by the King himself, your memorialists are compelled to regard as a formal adoption of the illegal decrees to which it referred, and consequently as an adoption of all the acts of aggression which those decrees have been urged to justify. There no longer exists, it therefore seems to your memorialists, even a moral distinction between the successive Governments of France, but its present rulers, justifying and enforcing, as they do, the acts of the former, are equally responsible for the injuries which those acts had occasioned. There can be no difference between the authors of the unjust and violent measures of which your memorialists complain and the Government that denies redress to American citizens on the sole ground that those very measures were justifiable.

Indeed, at no time has that Government set up against our claims the absurd and indefensible doctrine that the liabilities of the former rulers of France did not descend to her present governors, notwithstanding the change of dynasty. No! It has not been by such a plea that our demands for justice have been resisted. They have been met by silence, by delays, by evasions, and, finally, by a refusal to negotiate concerning them, unless the Government of the United States will connect them with the claim lately made by France to be admitted into the ports of Louisiana upon the same footing as British vessels. This demand was brought up and connected with our claims after all other pretences had been unavailingly resorted to, for the purpose of interposing an insurmountable obstacle to their settlement, and after more than five years had elapsed subsequent to the treaty which gave rise to that claim.

To prefer such a claim at all, to expect under any circumstances it could be admitted, was to insult the sagacity or the integrity of the American Government; but to require its admission in connexion with, or as an equivalent for, our indisputable demands for justice, is not to meet, but to trifle with the remonstrances of the United States, and is not so properly an evasion of our claims as a denial of our right.

No nation which values its honor and independence can submit to such a connexion as the French Government has demanded. The practice of the civilized world to sever all questions affecting national honor and the rights of its flag from those which grow out of the construction of treaties is too well established to require decision. Your memorialists, however, will refer to a few instances illustrating the course of every Government tenacious of its rights and its character.

A short time previous to the establishment of our national independence, an English settlement was removed, by order of a Spanish Governor, from the Falkland islands, which he considered as within his Government and as the territory of the Crown of Spain. The British Government, upon hearing of this exercise of force, immediately demanded a prompt reparation of the injury by a restoration of the settlement and a disavowal of the act. It would not listen to a discussion of the right of sovereignty; and an attempt on the part of Spain to introduce that question into the negotiation was resented as a public insult, and the Government began to arm, with the unanimous consent of the British nation.

So, again, during the administration of the younger Pitt, the British Crown acted in the same manner in relation to the vessels taken in Nootka Sound, for an alleged violation of the territorial rights of Spain. It insisted on a restitution of the vessels, full indemnification to the owners for their detention, and satisfaction to the Government for the insult offered to the flag, previous to any discussion of the right of sovereignty. In both instances these manifestations of national spirit produced the desired effect. Spain made satisfaction for the injuries; disavowed the acts of her officers; atoned for the insult offered to the flag; and then the question of sovereignty was settled by negotiation.

The same deliberate satisfaction, accompanied with an apology, was given by the British Government to the Crown of Portugal, for the violation of its neutral rights, in the destruction of some French ships by Admiral Boscawen. It is this principle, which every Government has constantly asserted, which, respecting itself, has preserved and commanded the respect of other nations; and its surrender would imply a voluntary degradation, to which your memorialists cannot suppose the Government of a free people will ever submit.

The idea of coercing an independent nation into the admission of a disputed claim, by refusing to settle claims of the paramount nature of those of the citizens of this country upon France, could only have originated in an erroneous estimate of the spirit of the American people and the character of their Government.

France must have presumed that the forbearance too long extended towards her arbitrary and unjustifiable course was not yet exhausted; that a Government which had only resorted to unheeded remonstrance against the systematized plunder of its citizens; to neglected complaints on account of treaties violated and public law infringed; and to unanswered letters asking for the liquidation of undisputed claims, long after the subjects of every other civilized nation, and even of the piratical State of Algiers, had received full indemnity for similar losses, would never be driven from its submissive and pacific policy, but would prefer a fruitless negotiation to an explicit asssertion of its rights.

It must have believed that a Government which depended upon and was regulated by popular sentiment would not venture to enforce the rights of your memorialists by any manifestation of the national power.

But even the proverbial forbearance of a republican Government may be carried too far. There are some injuries to which a nation cannot submit without degradation and loss of honor. These wrongs cannot be estimated by any pecuniary standard. They refer directly to that national feeling which is the best support of the Republic in great emergencies, and has carried the country through the war of the Revolution, and its subsequent conflicts for American rights, to that elevation among the Powers of the earth which induces its citizens to claim with pride the protection of their national character.

Of the protection of that Government your memorialists seek to avail themselves.

It has been disregarded and violated by the Governments of Denmark, France, Holland, and Naples. The remonstrances and efforts of the Executive Department have proved unavailing in obtaining redress; and they ask for the interposition of your honorable body to vindicate the rights of your memorialists, the dignity of the Government, and the honor of the United States.

Your memorialists cannot so far forget their character of petitioners as to prescribe the measures which the character of the country and the peculiar nature of their claims would seem to require. Submitting themselves, however, entirely to the wisdom of Congress, they may be permitted to suggest that experience has demonstrated that nothing is to be gained or hoped from a course of ordinary negotiation. An explicit and final answer, your memorialists are compelled to believe, will not be obtained from the Government of France until a minister shall be appointed, whose sole and special duty it shall be made to enforce the demands of justice that have hitherto been urged in vain.

If, however, any considerations of public policy should induce the Government of the United States to adopt a course which is incompatible with the vigorous prosecution of their rights, your memorialists would observe that their claims upon the attention of their own Government for remuneration will be greatly increased by such a compromise. The interests of the mercantile class of the community, while on the ocean or in foreign ports, are necessarily under the protection of their own Government. They have ventured their capital upon the sea, and within the jurisdiction of other Governments under the cover of their flag, and the public faith is pledged by that symbol to vindicate them against all unjust violence. This is their only protection; and the necessary condition of their profession renders them dependent upon the Executive and Legislative Departments of the Government for that redress which all other classes can obtain in the ordinary judicial tribunals of the country. If the Government abstains from enforcing that redress from a regard to other interests; if, from considerations of public policy, your memorialists are deprived of that indemnity to which they are entitled from foreign Governments, is it not reasonable and just that their losses should be compensated by the community to whose general interests the particular rights of your memorialists are sacrificed?

To the wisdom of Congress it belongs to decide upon the means to be adopted. But, if the justice of their claims be undeniable, your memorialists, in conclusion, humbly submit that it is their right as citizens to claim that they shall be enforced or redressed.

And, as in duty bound, will ever pray,

FRED. DE PEYSTER.
PHILIP KEARNY.
G. GRISWOLD.
ELISHA TIBBITS.
CHARLES KING.

NEW YORK, January 20, 1827.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 457. [1ST SESSION.

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT AT THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE SESSION.—DOCUMENTS RELATING TO THE IMPRISONMENT OF JOHN BAKER, AN AMERICAN CITIZEN, BY THE BRITISH AUTHORITIES OF NEW BRUNSWICK.—PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE TREATY WITH GREAT BRITAIN FOR INDEMNITY FOR SLAVES CARRIED AWAY IN 1815.—PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT UNDER THE ACT OF CONGRESS RELATING TO COMMERCE WITH THE BRITISH COLONIAL PORTS.

COMMUNICATED TO CONGRESS DECEMBER 4, 1827.

Fellow-citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

A revolution of the seasons has nearly been completed since the representatives of the people and States of this Union were last assembled at this place to deliberate and to act upon the common important interests of their constituents. In that interval the never-slumbering eye of a wise and beneficent Providence has continued its guardian care over the welfare of our beloved country. The blessing of health has continued generally to prevail throughout the land. The blessing of peace with our brethren of the human race has been enjoyed without interruption; internal quiet has left our fellow-citizens in the full enjoyment of all their rights and in the free exercise of all their faculties, to pursue the impulse of their nature and the obligation of their duty in the improvement of their own condition. The productions of the soil, the exchanges of commerce, the vivifying labors of human industry, have combined to mingle in our cup a portion of enjoyment as large and liberal as the indulgence of heaven has perhaps ever granted to the imperfect state of man upon earth; and as the purest of human felicity consists in its participation with others, it is no small addition to the sum of our national happiness, at this time, that peace and prosperity prevail to a degree seldom experienced over the whole habitable globe; presenting, though as yet with painful exceptions, a foretaste of that blessed period of promise, when the lion shall lie down with the lamb, and wars shall be no more. To preserve, to improve, and to perpetuate the sources, and to direct in their most effective channels the streams which contribute to the public weal, is the purpose for which Government was instituted. Objects of deep importance to the welfare of the Union are constantly recurring to demand the attention of the Federal Legislature; and they call with accumulated interest at the first meeting of the two Houses after their periodical renovation. To present to their consideration, from time to time, subjects in which the interests of the nation are most deeply involved, and for the regulation of which the legislative will is alone competent, is a duty prescribed by the Constitution, to the performance of which the first meeting of the new Congress is a period eminently appropriate, and which it is now my purpose to discharge.

Our relations of friendship with the other nations of the earth, political and commercial, have been preserved unimpaired; and the opportunities to improve them have been cultivated with anxious and unremitting attention. A negotiation upon subjects of high and delicate interest with the Government of Great Britain has terminated in the adjustment of some of the questions at issue upon satisfactory terms, and the postponement of others for future discussion and agreement. The purposes of the convention concluded at St. Petersburg on the 12th day of July, 1822, under the mediation of the late Emperor Alexander, have been carried into effect by a subsequent convention concluded at London on the 13th of November, 1826, the ratifications of which were exchanged at that place on the 6th day of February last. A copy of the proclamation issued on the 19th day of March last, publishing this convention, is herewith communicated to Congress. The sum of twelve hundred and four thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars, therein stipulated to be paid to the claimants of indemnity under the first article of the treaty of Ghent, has been duly received, and the commission instituted, conformably to the act of Congress of the second of March last, for the distribution of the indemnity to the persons entitled to receive it, are now in session and approaching the consummation of their labors. This final disposal of one of the most painful topics of collision between the United States and Great Britain not only affords an occasion of gratulation to ourselves, but has had the happiest effect in promoting a friendly disposition and in softening asperities upon other objects of discussion. Nor ought it to pass without the tribute of a frank and cordial acknowledgment of the magnanimity with which an honorable nation, by the reparation of their own wrongs, achieves a triumph more glorious than any field of blood can ever bestow.

The conventions of 3d July, 1815, and of 20th October, 1818, will expire by their own limitation on the 20th of October, 1828. These have regulated the direct commercial intercourse between the United States and Great Britain upon terms of the most perfect reciprocity, and they effected a temporary compromise of the respective rights and claims to territory westward of the Rocky mountains. These arrangements have been continued for an indefinite period of time after the expiration of the abovementioned conventions; leaving each party the liberty of terminating them by giving twelve months' notice to the other. The radical principle of all commercial intercourse between independent nations is the mutual interest of both parties. It is the vital spirit of trade itself; nor can it be reconciled to the nature of man or to the primary laws of human society that any traffic should long be willingly pursued, of which all the advantages are on one side and all the burdens on the other. Treaties of commerce have been found, by experience, to be among the most effective instruments for promoting peace and harmony between nations whose interests, exclusively considered on either side, are brought into frequent collisions by competition. In framing such treaties, it is the duty of each party not simply to urge with unyielding pertinacity that which suits its own interests, but to concede liberally to that which is adapted to the interest of the other. To accomplish this, little more is generally required than a simple observance of the rule of reciprocity; and were it possible for the statesmen of one nation, by stratagem and management, to obtain from the weakness or ignorance of another an over-reaching treaty, such a compact would prove an incentive to war, rather than a bond of peace. Our conventions with Great Britain are founded upon the principles of reciprocity. The commercial intercourse between the two countries is greater in magnitude and amount than between any two other nations on the globe. It is, for all purposes of benefit or advantage to both, as precious and, in all probability, far more extensive than if the parties were still constituent parts of one and the same nation. Treaties between such States, regulating the intercourse of peace between them, and adjusting interests of such transcendent importance to both, which have been found, in a long experience of years, mutually advantageous, should not be lightly cancelled or discontinued. Two conventions, for continuing in force those above mentioned, have been concluded between the plenipotentiaries of the two Governments on the 6th of August last, and will be forthwith laid before the Senate for the exercise of their constitutional authority concerning them.

In the execution of the treaties of peace of November, 1782, and September, 1783, between the United States and Great Britain, and which terminated the war of our Independence, a line of boundary was drawn as the demarcation of territory between the two countries, extending over near twenty degrees of latitude, and ranging over seas, lakes, and mountains, then very imperfectly explored, and scarcely opened to the geographical knowledge of the age. In the progress of discovery and settlement by both parties since that time several questions of boundary between their respective territories have arisen, which have been found of exceedingly difficult adjustment. At the last war with Great Britain four of these questions pressed themselves upon the consideration of the negotiators of the treaty of Ghent, but without the means of concluding a definitive arrangement concerning them. They were referred to three separate commissions, consisting of two Commissioners, one appointed by each party, to examine and decide upon their respective claims. In the event of disagreement between the Commissioners, it was provided that they should make reports to their several Governments, and that the reports should finally be referred to the decision of a Sovereign the common friend of both. Of these commissions, two have already terminated their sessions and investigations—one by entire and the other by partial agreement. The Commissioners of the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent have finally disagreed, and made their conflicting reports to their own Governments. But from these reports a great difficulty has occurred in making up a question to be decided by the arbitrator. This purpose has, however, been effected by a fourth convention, concluded at London by the plenipotentiaries of the two Governments on the 29th of September last. It will be submitted, together with the others, to the consideration of the Senate.

While these questions have been pending, incidents have occurred of conflicting pretensions and of dangerous character upon the territory itself in dispute between the two nations. By a common understanding between the Governments it was agreed that no exercise of exclusive jurisdiction by either party, while the negotiation was pending, should change the state of the question of right to be definitively settled. Such collision has, nevertheless, recently taken place, by occurrences the precise character of which has not yet been ascertained. A communication from the Governor of the State of Maine, with accompanying documents, and a correspondence between the Secretary of State and the Minister of Great Britain, on this subject, are now communicated. Measures have been taken to ascertain the state of the facts more correctly by the employment of a special agent to visit the spot where the alleged outrages have occurred, the result of whose inquiries, when received, will be transmitted to Congress.

While so many of the subjects of high interest to the friendly relations between the two countries have been so far adjusted, it is matter of regret that their views respecting the commercial intercourse between the United States and the British colonial possessions have not equally approximated to a friendly agreement.

At the commencement of the last session of Congress they were informed of the sudden and unexpected exclusion by the British Government of access, in vessels of the United States, to all their colonial ports, except those immediately bordering upon our own territories. In the amicable discussions which have succeeded the adoption of this measure, which, as it affected harshly the interests of the United States, became a subject of expostulation on our part, the principles upon which its justification has been placed have been of a diversified character. It has been at once ascribed to a mere recurrence to the old, long-established principle of colonial monopoly, and at the same time to a feeling of resentment, because the offers of an act of Parliament, opening the colonial ports upon certain conditions, had not been grasped at with sufficient eagerness by an instantaneous conformity with them. At a subsequent period it has been intimated that the new exclusion was in resentment, because a prior act of Parliament of 1822, opening certain colonial ports under heavy and burdensome restrictions to vessels of the United States, had not been reciprocated by an admission of British vessels from the colonies, and their cargoes, without any restriction or discrimination whatever. But, be the motive for the interdiction what it may, the British Government have manifested no disposition, either by negotiation or by corresponding legislative enactments, to recede from it; and we have been given distinctly to understand that neither of the bills which were under the consideration of Congress at their last session would have been deemed sufficient in their concessions to have been rewarded by any relaxation from the British interdict. It is one of the inconveniences inseparably connected with the attempt to adjust by reciprocal legislation interests of this nature, that neither party can know what would be satisfactory to the other; and that, after enacting a statute for the avowed and sincere purpose of conciliation, it will generally be found utterly inadequate to the expectations of the other party, and will terminate in mutual disappointment.

The session of Congress having terminated without any act upon the subject, a proclamation was issued on the 17th of March last, conformably to the provisions of the 6th section of the act of March 1, 1823, declaring the fact that the trade and intercourse authorized by the British act of Parliament of June 24, 1822, between the United States and the British enumerated colonial ports, had been, by the subsequent acts of Parliament of July 5, 1825, and the order of council of July 27, 1826, prohibited. The effect of this proclamation, by the terms of the act under which it was issued, has been, that each and every provision of the act concerning navigation of April 18, 1818, and of the act supplementary thereto of May 15, 1820, revived, and is in full force. Such, then, is the present condition of the trade, that useful as it is to both parties, it can, with a single momentary exception, be carried on directly by the vessels of neither. That exception itself is found in a proclamation of the Governor of the island of St. Christopher and of the Virgin islands, inviting, for three months, from the 28th of August last, the importation of the articles of the produce of the United States, which constitute their export portion of this trade, in the vessels of all nations. That period having already expired, the state of mutual interdiction has again taken place. The British Government have not only declined negotiation upon this subject, but, by the principle they have assumed with reference to it, have precluded even the means of negotiation. It becomes not the self-respect of the United States either to solicit gratuitous favors or to accept as the grant of a favor that for which an ample equivalent is exacted. It remains to be determined by the respective Governments whether the trade shall be opened by acts of reciprocal legislation. It is, in the meantime, satisfactory to know that, apart from the inconveniences resulting from a disturbance of the usual channels of trade, no loss has been sustained by the commerce, the navigation, or the revenue of the United States, and none of magnitude is to be apprehended from this existing state of mutual interdict.

With the other maritime and commercial nations of Europe our intercourse continues with little variation. Since the cessation, by the convention of June 24, 1822, of all discriminating duties upon the vessels of the United States and of France in either country, our trade with that nation has increased and is increasing. A disposition on the part of France has been manifested to renew that negotiation; and in acceding to the proposal, we have expressed the wish that it might be extended to other objects, upon which a good understanding between the parties would be beneficial to the interests of both. The origin of the political relations between the United States and France is coeval with the first years of our Independence. The memory of it is interwoven with that of our arduous struggle for national existence. Weakened as it has occasionally been since that time, it can by us never be forgotten; and we should hail with exultation the moment which should indicate a recollection equally friendly in spirit on the part of France. A fresh effort has recently been made by the Minister of the United States residing at Paris to obtain a consideration of the just claims of citizens of the United States to the reparation of wrongs long since committed, many of them frankly acknowledged, and all of them entitled, upon every principle of justice, to a candid examination. The proposal last made to the French Government has been to refer the subject, which has formed an obstacle to this consideration, to the determination of a Sovereign the common friend of both. To this offer no definitive answer has yet been received; but the gallant and honorable spirit which has at all times been the pride and glory of France will not ultimately permit the demands of innocent sufferers to be extinguished in the mere consciousness of the power to reject them.

A new treaty of amity, navigation, and commerce has been concluded with the Kingdom of Sweden, which will be submitted to the Senate for their advice with regard to its ratification. At a more recent date, a Minister Plenipotentiary from the Hanseatic Republics of Hamburg, Lubeck, and Bremen has been received, charged with a special mission for the negotiation of a treaty of amity and commerce between that ancient and renowned league and the United States. This negotiation has accordingly been commenced, and is now in progress, the result of which will, if successful, be also submitted to the Senate for their consideration.

Since the accession of the Emperor Nicholas to the imperial throne of all the Russias the friendly dispositions towards the United States, so constantly manifested by his predecessor, have continued unabated, and have been recently testified by the appointment of a Minister Plenipotentiary to reside at this place. From the interest taken by this Sovereign in behalf of the suffering Greeks, and from the spirit with which others of the great European Powers are co-operating with him, the friends of freedom and of humanity may indulge the hope that they will obtain relief from that most unequal of conflicts which they have so long and so gallantly sustained; that they will enjoy the blessings of self-government, which, by their sufferings in the cause of liberty, they have richly earned; and that their independence will be secured by those liberal institutions of which their country furnished the earliest examples in the history of mankind, and which have consecrated to immortal remembrance the very soil for which they are now again profusely pouring forth their blood. The sympathies which the people and Government of the United States have so warmly indulged with their cause have been acknowledged by their Government in a letter of thanks, which I have received from their illustrious President, a translation of which is now communicated to Congress, the representatives of that nation to whom this tribute of gratitude was intended to be paid, and to whom it was justly due.

In the American hemisphere the cause of freedom and independence has continued to prevail; and if signalized by none of those splendid triumphs which had crowned with glory some of the preceding years, it has only been from the banishment of all external force against which the struggle had been maintained. The shout of victory has been superseded by the expulsion of the enemy over whom it could have been achieved. Our friendly wishes and cordial good will, which have constantly followed the southern nations of America in all the vicissitudes of their war of independence, are succeeded by a solicitude, equally ardent and cordial, that, by the wisdom and purity of their institutions, they may secure to themselves the choicest blessings of social order and the best rewards of virtuous liberty. Disclaiming alike all right and all intention of interfering in those concerns which it is the prerogative of their independence to regulate as to them shall see fit, we hail with joy every indication of their prosperity, of their harmony, of their persevering and inflexible homage to those principles of freedom and of equal rights, which are alone suited to the genius and temper of the American nations. It has been therefore with some concern that we have observed indications of intestine divisions in some of the Republics of the south, and appearances of less union with one another than we believe to be the interest of all. Among the results of this state of things has been that the treaties concluded at Panama do not appear to have been ratified by the contracting parties, and that the meeting of the Congress at Tacubaya has been indefinitely postponed. In accepting the invitations to be represented at this Congress, while a manifestation was intended on the part of the United States of the most friendly disposition towards the southern Republics, by whom it had been proposed, it was hoped that it would furnish an opportunity for bringing all the nations of this hemisphere to the common acknowledgment and adoption of the principles, in the regulation of their international relations, which would have secured a lasting peace and harmony between them, and have promoted the cause of mutual benevolence throughout the globe. But as obstacles appear to have arisen to the re-assembling of the Congress, one of the two ministers commissioned on the part of the United States has returned to the bosom of his country, while the minister charged with the ordinary mission to Mexico remains authorized to attend at the conferences of the Congress whenever they may be resumed.

A hope was for a short time entertained that a treaty of peace actually signed between the Governments of Buenos Ayres and Brazil would supersede all further occasion for these collisions between belligerent pretensions and neutral rights, which are so commonly the result of maritime war, and which have unfortunately disturbed the harmony of the relations between the United States and the Brazilian Governments. At their last session Congress were informed that some of the naval officers of that Empire had advanced and practiced upon principles in relation to blockades and to neutral navigation which we could not sanction, and which our commanders found it necessary to resist. It appears that they have not been sustained by the Government of Brazil itself. Some of the vessels captured under the assumed authority of these erroneous principles have been restored; and we trust that our just expectations will be realized, that adequate indemnity will be made to all the citizens of the United States who have suffered by the unwarranted captures which the Brazilian tribunals themselves have pronounced unlawful.

In the diplomatic discussions, at Rio de Janeiro, of these wrongs sustained by citizens of the United States, and of others which seemed as if emanating immediately from that Government itself, the Chargé d'Affaires of the United States, under an impression that his representations in behalf of the rights and interests of his countrymen were totally disregarded and useless, deemed it his duty, without waiting for instructions, to terminate his official functions, to demand his passports, and return to the United States. This movement, dictated by an honest zeal for the honor and interests of his country—motives which operated exclusively upon the mind of the officer who resorted to it—has not been disapproved by me. The Brazilian Government, however, complained of it as a measure for which no adequate intentional cause had been given by them; and upon an explicit assurance, through their Chargé d'Affaires, residing here, that a successor to the late representative of the United States near that Government, the appointment of whom they desired, should be received and treated with the respect due to his character, and that indemnity should be promptly made for all injuries inflicted on citizens of the United States, or their property, contrary to the laws of nations, a temporary commission as Chargé d'Affaires to that country has been issued, which it is hoped will entirely restore the ordinary diplomatic intercourse between the two Governments, and the friendly relations between their respective nations.

Turning from the momentous concerns of our Union in its intercourse with foreign nations to those of the deepest interest in the administration of our internal affairs, we find the revenues of the present year corresponding as nearly as might be expected with the anticipations of the last, and presenting an aspect still more favorable in the promise of the next. The balance in the Treasury on the first of January last was six millions three hundred and fifty-eight thousand six hundred and eighty-six dollars and eighteen cents. The receipts from that day to the 30th September last, as near as the returns of them yet received can show, amount to sixteen millions eight hundred and eighty-six thousand five hundred and eighty-one dollars and thirty-two cents. The receipts of the present quarter, estimated at four millions five hundred and fifteen thousand, added to the above, form an aggregate of twenty-one millions four hundred thousand dollars of receipts. The expenditures of the year may perhaps amount to twenty-two millions three hundred thousand dollars, presenting a small excess over the receipts. But of these twenty-two millions, upwards of six have been applied to the discharge of the principal of the public debt; the whole amount of which, approaching seventy-four millions on the first of January last, will, on the first day of next year, fall short of sixty-seven millions and a half. The balance in the Treasury on the first of January next, it is expected, will exceed five millions four hundred and fifty thousand dollars; a sum exceeding that of the first of January, 1825, though falling short of that exhibited on the first of January last.

It was foreseen that the revenue of the present year would not equal that of the last, which had itself been less than that of the next preceding year. But the hope has been realized which was entertained, that these deficiencies would in nowise interrupt the steady operation of the discharge of the public debt by the annual ten millions devoted to that object by the act of March 3, 1817.

The amount of duties secured on merchandise imported from the commencement of the year until the 30th of September last is twenty-one millions two hundred and twenty-six thousand, and the probable amount of that which will be secured during the remainder of the year is five millions seven hundred and seventy-four thousand dollars; forming a sum total of twenty-seven millions. With the allowances for drawbacks and contingent deficiencies which may occur, though not specifically foreseen, we may safely estimate the receipts of the ensuing year at twenty-two millions three hundred thousand dollars; a revenue for the next equal to the expenditure of the present year.

The deep solicitude felt by our citizens of all classes, throughout the Union, for the total discharge of the public debt, will apologize for the earnestness with which I deem it my duty to urge this topic upon the consideration of Congress—of recommending to them again the observance of the strictest economy in the application of the public funds. The depression upon the receipts of the revenue which had commenced with the year 1826, continued with increased severity during the first two quarters of the present year. The returning tide began to flow with the third quarter, and, so far as we can judge from experience, may be expected to continue through the course of the ensuing year. In the meantime, an alleviation from the burden of the public debt will, in the three years, have been effected to the amount of nearly sixteen millions, and the charge of annual interest will have been reduced upwards of one million. But among the maxims of political economy which the stewards of the public moneys should never suffer without urgent necessity to be transcended, is that of keeping the expenditures of the year within the limits of its receipts. The appropriations of the last two years, including the yearly ten millions of the Sinking Fund, have each equalled the promised revenue of the ensuing year. While we foresee with confidence that the public coffers will be replenished from the receipts as fast as they will be drained by the expenditures, equal in amount to those of the current year, it should not be forgotten that they could ill suffer the exhaustion of larger disbursements.

The condition of the Army, and of all the branches of the public service under the superintendence of the Secretary of War, will be seen by the report from that officer, and the documents with which it is accompanied.

During the course of the last summer a detachment of the Army has been usefully and successfully called to perform their appropriate duties. At the moment when the Commissioners appointed for carrying into execution certain provisions of the treaty of August 19, 1825, with various tribes of the northwestern Indians, were about to arrive at the appointed place of meeting, the unprovoked murder of several citizens, and other acts of unequivocal hostility committed by a party of the Winnebago tribe, one of those associated in the treaty, followed by indications of a menacing character, among other tribes of the same region, rendered necessary an immediate display of the defensive and protective force of the Union in that quarter. It was accordingly exhibited by the immediate and concerted movements of the Governors of the State of Illinois and of the Territory of Michigan, and competent levies of militia under their authority; with a corps of seven hundred men of United States troops under the command of General Atkinson, who, at the call of Governor Cass, immediately repaired to the scene of danger, from their station at St. Louis. Their presence dispelled the alarms of our fellow-citizens on those borders, and overawed the hostile purposes of the Indians. The perpetrators of the murders were surrendered to the authority and operation of our laws, and every appearance of purposed hostility from those Indian tribes has subsided.

Although the present organization of the Army and the administration of its various branches of service are, upon the whole, satisfactory, they are yet susceptible of much improvement in particulars, some of which have been heretofore submitted to the consideration of Congress, and others are now first presented in the report of the Secretary of War.

The expediency of providing for additional numbers of officers in the two corps of engineers will, in some degree, depend upon the number and extent of the objects of national importance upon which Congress may think it proper that surveys should be made, conformably to the act of the 30th of April, 1824. Of the surveys which, before the last session of Congress, had been made under the authority of that act, reports were made—

1. Of the Board of Internal Improvement, on the Chesapeake and Ohio canal.
2. On the continuance of the National Road from Cumberland to the tide-waters within the District of Columbia.
3. On the continuation of the National Road from Canton to Zanesville.
4. On the location of the National Road from Zanesville to Columbus.
5. On the continuation of the same road to the seat of government in Missouri.
6. On a post road from Baltimore to Philadelphia.
7. Of a survey of Kennebec river, (in part.)
8. On a national road from Washington to Buffalo.
9. On the survey of Saugatuck harbor and river.
10. On a canal from Lake Pontchartrain to the Mississippi river.
11. On surveys at Edgartown, Newburyport, and Hyannis harbor.
12. On survey of La Plaisance bay, in the Territory of Michigan.

And reports are now prepared and will be submitted to Congress—

On surveys of the peninsula of Florida, to ascertain the practicability of a canal to connect the waters of the Atlantic with the Gulf of Mexico, across that peninsula; and also of the country between the bays of Mobile and of Pensacola, with the view of connecting them together by a canal;

On surveys of a route for a canal to connect the waters of James and Great Kenhawa rivers;

On the survey of the Swash in Pamplico sound, and that of Cape Fear, below the town of Wilmington, in North Carolina;

On the survey of the Muscle shoals in the Tennessee river, and for a route for a contemplated communication between the Hiwassee and Coosa rivers, in the State of Alabama.

Other reports of surveys upon objects pointed out by the several acts of Congress of the last and preceding sessions are in the progress of preparation, and most of them may be completed before the close of this session. All the officers of both corps of engineers, with several other persons duly qualified, have been constantly employed upon these services from the passage of the act of 30th April, 1824, to this time. Were no other advantage to accrue to the country from their labors than the fund of topographical knowledge which they have collected and communicated, that alone would have been a profit to the Union more than adequate to all the expenditures which have been devoted to the object; but the appropriations for the repair and continuation of the Cumberland road, for the construction of various other roads, for the removal of obstructions from the rivers and harbors, for the erection of light-houses, beacons, piers, and buoys, and for the completion of canals undertaken by individual associations, but needing the assistance of means and resources more comprehensive than individual enterprise can command, may be considered rather as treasures laid up from the contributions of the present age for the benefit of posterity, than as unrequited applications of the accruing revenues of the nation. To such objects of permanent improvement to the condition of the country, of real addition to the wealth as well as to the comfort of the people by whose authority and resources they have been effected, from three to four millions of the annual income of the nation have, by laws enacted at the three most recent sessions of Congress, been applied, without intrenching upon the necessities of the Treasury, without adding a dollar to the taxes or debts of the community, without suspending even the steady and regular discharge of the debts contracted in former days, which, within the same three years, have been diminished by the amount of nearly sixteen millions of dollars.

The same observations are, in a great degree, applicable to the appropriations made for fortifications upon the coasts and harbors of the United States, for the maintenance of the Military Academy at West Point, and for the various objects under the superintendence of the Department of the Navy. The report of the Secretary of the Navy, and those from the subordinate branches of both the Military Departments, exhibit to Congress, in minute detail, the present condition of the public establishments dependent upon them; the execution of the acts of Congress relating to them, and the views of the officers engaged in the several branches of the service, concerning the improvements which may tend to their perfection. The fortification of the coast, and the gradual increase and improvement of the Navy, are parts of a great system of national defence which has been upwards of ten years in progress, and which, for a series of years to come, will continue to claim the constant and persevering protection and superintendence of the legislative authority. Among the measures which have emanated from these principles, the act of the last session of Congress for the gradual improvement of the Navy holds a conspicuous place. The collection of timber for the future construction of vessels of war; the preservation and reproduction of the species of timber peculiarly adapted to that purpose; the construction of dry docks for the use of the Navy; the erection of a marine railway for the repair of the public ships; and the improvement of the navy yards for the preservation of the public property deposited in them, have all received from the Executive the attention required by that act; and will continue to receive it, steadily proceeding towards the execution of all its purposes. The establishment of a Naval Academy, furnishing the means of theoretic instruction to the youths who devote their lives to the service of their country upon the ocean, still solicits the sanction of the Legislature. Practical seamanship and the art of navigation may be acquired upon the cruises of the squadrons which, from time to time, are despatched to distant seas; but a competent knowledge, even of the art of ship-building; the higher mathematics and astronomy; the literature which can place our officers on a level of polished education with the officers of other maritime nations; the knowledge of the laws, municipal and national, which, in their intercourse with foreign States and their Governments, are continually called into operation; and, above all, that acquaintance with the principles of honor and justice, with the higher obligations of morals, and of general laws, human and divine, which constitute the great distinction between the warrior patriot and the licensed robber and pirate; these can be systematically taught and eminently acquired only in a permanent school, stationed upon the shore, and provided with the teachers, the instruments, and the books, conversant with and adapted to the communication of the principles of these respective sciences to the youthful and inquiring mind.

The report from the Postmaster General exhibits the condition of that Department as highly satisfactory for the present, and still more promising for the future. Its receipts for the year ending the first of July last amounted to one million four hundred and seventy-three thousand five hundred and fifty-one dollars, and exceeded its expenditures by upwards of one hundred thousand dollars. It cannot be an over sanguine estimate to predict that in less than ten years, of which one-half have elapsed, the receipts will have been more than doubled. In the meantime a reduced expenditure upon established routes has kept pace with increased facilities of public accommodation, and additional services have been obtained at reduced rates of compensation. Within the last year the transportation of the mail in stages has been greatly augmented. The number of post offices has been increased to seven thousand; and it may be anticipated that while the facilities of intercourse between fellow-citizens, in person or by correspondence, will soon be carried to the door of every villager in the Union, a yearly surplus of revenue will accrue, which may be applied as the wisdom of Congress, under the exercise of their constitutional powers, may devise, for the further establishment and improvement of the public roads, or by adding still further to the facilities in the transportation of the mails. Of the indications of the prosperous condition of our country, none can be more pleasing than those presented by the multiplying relations of personal and intimate intercourse between the citizens of the Union dwelling at the remotest distances from each other.

Among the subjects which have heretofore occupied the earnest solicitude and attention of Congress is the management and disposal of that portion of the property of the nation which consists of the public lands. The acquisition of them, made at the expense of the whole Union, not only in treasure but in blood, marks a right of property in them equally extensive. By the report and statements from the General Land Office, now communicated, it appears that under the present Government of the United States a sum little short of thirty-three millions of dollars has been paid from the common Treasury for that portion of this property which has been purchased from France and Spain, and for the extinction of the aboriginal titles. The amount of lands acquired is near two hundred and sixty millions of acres, of which, on the first of January, 1826, about one hundred and thirty-nine millions of acres had been surveyed, and little more than nineteen millions of acres had been sold. The amount paid into the Treasury by the purchasers of the lands sold is not yet equal to the sums paid for the whole, but leaves a small balance to be refunded; the proceeds of the sales of the lands have long been pledged to the creditors of the nation; a pledge from which we have reason to hope that they will, in a very few years, be redeemed. The system upon which this great national interest has been managed was the result of long, anxious, and persevering deliberation; matured and modified by the progress of our population, and the lessons of experience, it has been hitherto eminently successful. More than nine-tenths of the lands still remain the common property of the Union, the appropriation and disposal of which are sacred trusts in the hands of Congress. Of the lands sold a considerable part were conveyed under extended credits, which, in the vicissitudes and fluctuations in the value of lands, and of their produce, became oppressively burdensome to the purchasers. It can never be the interest or the policy of the nation to wring from its own citizens the reasonable profits of their industry and enterprise by holding them to the rigorous import of disastrous engagements. In March, 1821, a debt of twenty-two millions of dollars, due by purchasers of the public lands, had accumulated, which they were unable to pay. An act of Congress, of the 2d of March, 1821, came to their relief, and has been succeeded by others, the latest being the act of the 4th of May, 1826, the indulgent provisions of which expired on the 4th of July last. The effect of these laws has been to reduce the debt from the purchasers to a remaining balance of about four millions three hundred thousand dollars due; more than three-fifths of which are for lands within the State of Alabama. I recommend to Congress the revival and continuance, for a further term, of the beneficent accommodations to the public debtors of that statute; and submit to their consideration, in the same spirit of equity, the remission, under proper discriminations, of the forfeitures of partial payments on account of purchases of the public lands, so far as to allow of their application to other payments.

There are various other subjects of deep interest to the whole Union which have heretofore been recommended to the consideration of Congress, as well by my predecessors as, under the impression of the duties devolving upon me, by myself. Among these are the debt, rather of justice than gratitude, to the surviving warriors of the revolutionary war; the extension of the judicial administration of the Federal Government to those extensive and important members of the Union, which, having risen into existence since the organization of the present judiciary establishment, now constitute at least one-third of its territory, power, and population; the formation of a more effective and uniform system for the government of the militia, and the melioration, in some form or modification, of the diversified and often oppressive codes relating to insolvency. Amidst the multiplicity of topics of great national concernment which may recommend themselves to the calm and patriotic deliberations of the Legislature, it may suffice to say that on these and all other measures which may receive their sanction my hearty co-operation will be given, conformably to the duties enjoined upon me, and under the sense of all the obligations prescribed by the Constitution.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, December 4, 1827.

DOCUMENTS ACCOMPANYING THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE AT THE OPENING OF THE FIRST SESSION OF THE TWENTIETH CONGRESS, RELATING TO THE IMPRISONMENT OF JOHN BAKER, AN AMERICAN CITIZEN, BY THE BRITISH AUTHORITIES OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

Mr. Clay to Mr. Vaughan.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, November 17, 1827.

SIR: In the note which I had the honor to address to you on the 19th day of September last I informed you that I would transmit a copy of yours of the 17th, in answer to mine of the 14th of the same month, to his excellency Enoch Lincoln, Governor of Maine, to obtain from him such information on the subject to which that correspondence related as he might communicate. I now transmit to you an extract from a letter of Governor Lincoln, under date the 2d instant, together with copies of two affidavits, to which he refers. From one of those affidavits (that of William Dalton) it would appear that he had resided during three years on the Aroostic river, thirty miles within the line on the American side; that the constables and officers of the province of New Brunswick, have been in the habit, under the pretence of collecting debts, of coming to the settlement where he lived, with precepts, and taking and carrying away every species of property they could find; that they generally carried it to the parish of Kent or Fredericton, and there sold it at auction; that in a particular instance, of which the circumstances are detailed in the affidavit, the acting British officer declared that he did not care whether he was within or without his jurisdiction, for that a higher officer would bear him out in anything he did; that he even employed a menace of resorting to physical force, using at the same time opprobrious language; that the witness, in consequence of the disturbances created in the settlement by British officers, sold his possessions at a great sacrifice in their value, and removed to another part of the State of Maine; and that the inhabitants of the Aroostic settlement have been unwilling and afraid to sleep in their own houses, and have spent the night on the banks of the river and in the woods, and kept watch night and day, as is customary in Indian warfare.

The affidavit of the other witness (Jonathan Wilson) states that, at Woodstock, in the province of New Brunswick, he learned that Mr. Baker had been arrested by the British authorities, with the agency of forty-five men sent up in barges armed; that he was taken from his bed in the night; that the charge against him was for refusing and objecting to permit the British mail to pass over his land; that he was confined in a jail, which is known to the witness to be extremely loathsome, filthy, and dangerous to health; that he has been tried and sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and to the payment of £150; that he lived on Madawaska river, within the American line; and that the witness had learned from his son, who had recently been on the Aroostic, that the settlers there complained bitterly of the oppression of the officers and subjects of the British provinces; that their property was taken forcibly from them, and carried off, to the last cow.

Such is the case made out by this testimony. I shall abstain at this time from particular comments upon it. The proceedings which it discloses being incompatible with the rights of the United States, at variance with that forbearance and moderation which it has been understood between us were to be mutually observed, and exhibiting the exercise of rigorous acts of authority within the disputed territory, which could only be justified by considering it as constituting an incontestable part of the British dominions, I have to request such explanations as the occasion calls for.

In the meantime I avail myself of the opportunity to tender to you assurances of my high consideration.

H. CLAY.

Rt. Hon. C. R. VAUGHAN, &c., &c., &c.

Mr. Lincoln to Mr. Clay.

STATE OF MAINE, Executive Department, Portland, November 2, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to you, for the consideration of the President, copies of the affidavits of William Dalton and Jonathan Wilson to the truth of the statements, in which I have reason to attach full credit. I also enclose a copy of a proclamation relating to the same subject.

I am, sir, with the highest respect, your obedient servant,

ENOCH LINCOLN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State of the United States, Washington.

I, William Dalton, born in Bloomfield, State of Maine, county of Somerset, say, that for the last three years I have resided on the Aroostic river, thirty miles within the line on the American side, thirty-three miles up said river.

Many of the settlers on the river are emigrants from New Brunswick; others from the States. Many of these settlers are poor. The constables and officers of the provinces have been in the habit, under the pretence of collecting debts, of coming to the settlement where I lived, with precepts, and taking and carrying away every species of property they could find. They generally carried it to the parish of Kent or Fredericton, and there sold it at auction. As an instance of violent proceedings of the officers and subjects of the provinces, I would state that, at the settlement where I lived, a certain man named Joseph Arnold had a dispute with one William M'Cray about a cow, which was referred to three referees chosen among the neighbors, who decided that Arnold should keep the cow. Said M'Cray then went to one Esquire Morehouse, said to be a magistrate in the parish of Kent. Morehouse sent M'Neil, a constable of that parish, to the Aroostic settlement; the constable came with five men, armed with guns, pistols, and sword, and took the cow by force from Arnold. Whilst they were there I asked the constable for his precept, and for his authority to come into the American territory. He said Morehouse told him to go and take the animal and the man wherever he could find them. I saw the writ....it....an order to replevy in the parish of Kent. I asked him if he did not know that he was out of the parish of Kent. He said he did not care, for Morehouse would bear him out in anything he did. I told him he had better not come again on any such business. He said, "when I come again I shall not be obliged to show my authority to a parcel of d——d Yankee settlers from Aroostic; that if twenty-five or fifty men would not do, he would bring five hundred, armed and equipped, and take every soul, men, women, and children, to Fredericton jail." He did not pretend that he was in the parish of Kent; he said he was doing his duty, and would go wherever his master would send him.

In consequence of this state of things, I have sold out all I possessed for what I could get, and left the country to return to China, in the county of Kennebec, in the State of Maine. I raised this year 150 bushels of wheat, 175 of oats, 60 of corn, 200 of potatoes, and garden vegetables. I had built a decent and comfortable log house and a barn. I had five swine, one cow, and farming utensils. I had cleared thirty acres. I sold all my property for $184 28, all on credit, except $32 in cash. I made this sacrifice solely on account of public difficulties. My farm, I think, was as good land as any in North America, and the whole of the country on the Aroostic is very excellent land, and would be rapidly settled if it were not for public difficulties. My family were contented before the troubles, and had it not been for them I would not have taken $700 for my property. For the last seven weeks the inhabitants of the Aroostic settlement have been unwilling and afraid to sleep in their own houses, and have retired to the lower part of the settlement and spent the night on the banks of the river and in the woods, and kept watch night and day, as in an Indian war.

I arrived here, at Bangor, this 27th of October, 1827, direct from Aroostic.

WM. DALTON.

STATE OF MAINE,
Penobscot, Town of Bangor, } ss.

On this 27th day of October, 1827, the aforesaid William Dalton personally appeared, and made oath to the truth of the foregoing statement.

Before me—

EDWARD KENT, Justice of the Peace.

STATE OF MAINE, Secretary of State's Office, Portland, November 2, 1827.

I do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the original deposited in this office.

ELLIOTT G. VAUGHAN,
For A. NICHOLS,
Secretary of State, (he being absent.)

I, Jonathan Wilson, of Fairfield, county of Somerset, State of Maine, on oath depose and say that I left Fairfield about the 1st October instant for Houlton plantation and the British provinces to collect some debts due to me and others. I arrived at Houlton about the 10th instant, and from thence went to Woodstock, in the province of New Brunswick, to collect debts. Woodstock is about sixty-five miles above Fredericton. I there learned that Mr. Baker had been arrested by the British authorities. I was told this by Jos. Harvey, formerly of Bangor, State of Maine; that he was arrested by forty-five men sent up in barges armed; that he was taken from his bed in the night; that the charge against Baker was for refusing and objecting to permit the British mail to pass over his land; that they confined Baker in jail, have since tried him, and sentenced him to pay a fine of £150, and to six months' imprisonment in jail, which, to my knowledge, is extremely loathsome, filthy, and dangerous to health, and that Baker is now confined there. Baker lived on Madawaska river, within the American line. I also learnt at Houlton, by my son, Leonard Wilson, who has recently been at the Aroostic, that the settlers there complained bitterly of the oppression of the officers and subjects of the provinces; that their property was forcibly taken from them and carried off, even to the last cow.

JONATHAN WILSON.

STATE OF MAINE,
Penobscot, Town of Bangor, } ss.

On the 27th day of October, 1827, the aforesaid deponent personally appeared, and made oath to the truth of the foregoing statement.

Before me— EDWARD KENT, Justice of the Peace.

STATE OF MAINE, Secretary of State's Office, Portland, November 2, 1827.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the original deposited in this office.

ELLIOTT G. VAUGHAN,
For A. NICHOLS,
Secretary of State, (he being absent.)

STATE OF MAINE.

By the Governor of the State of Maine.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas it has been made known to this State that one of its citizens has been conveyed from it by a foreign power to a jail in the province of New Brunswick, and that many trespasses have been committed by inhabitants of the same province on the sovereignty of Maine, and the rights of those she is bound to protect—

Be it also known that, relying on the Government and people of the Union, the proper exertion will be applied to obtain reparation and security.

Those, therefore, suffering wrong, or threatened with it, and those interested by sympathy and principle on account of the violation of our territory and immunities, are exhorted to forbearance and peace, so that the preparations for preventing the removal of our landmarks, and guarding the sacred and inestimable rights of American citizens, may not be embarrassed by any unauthorized acts.

ENOCH LINCOLN.

By the Governor:

AMOS NICHOLS, Secretary of State.

COUNCIL CHAMBER, Portland, November 9, 1827.

Mr. Vaughan to Mr. Clay.

WASHINGTON, November 21, 1827.

The undersigned, his Britannic Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a note from the Secretary of State of the United States, relative to the proceedings of the magistrates acting under the authority of his Britannic Majesty, in the province of New Brunswick, against two citizens of the United States established in British settlements upon the rivers Aroostic and Madawaska.

The proceedings, as described in Mr. Clay's note, are supported by two depositions on oath, which have been transmitted to the Government of the United States by his excellency Enoch Lincoln, the Governor of the State of Maine.

The affidavit of William Dalton, residing upon the river Aroostic, relates to legal process having been instituted against him by magistrates acting under British authority for the recovery of debts, or for a misdemeanor. The affidavit of Jonathan Wilson relates to the arrest at Woodstock, upon the Madawaska river, within 65 miles of Fredericton, of Mr. Baker, for having interrupted the passage of the mail from New Brunswick to Canada.

The rivers Aroostic and Madawaska are to be found, on a reference to a map made by the British Commissioners of boundary, under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, in that portion of the territory of New Brunswick enclosed between two lines of boundary laid down—the one by the British Commissioners, which runs by Mars Hill, and the other by the American Commissioners, which runs at the distance of about 144 miles from Mars Hill, to the north of it.

Whatever may have induced the Commissioners, on both sides, to trace the lines above mentioned as according with the true intent of the boundary laid down in the treaty of 1783, and subsequently in that of Ghent, the Governments of Great Britain and of the United States have not yet been able to reconcile the different reports of their Commissioners; and the territory in which the proceedings have occurred lately, and which form the subject of Mr. Clay's note, is still in dispute. The sovereignty and jurisdiction over that territory has consequently remained with Great Britain, having been in the occupation and possession of the crown previously to the conclusion of the treaty of 1783.

The undefined or rather unsettled claim of the United States to a portion of that territory cannot furnish any pretext for an interference with, or an interruption of, the exercise of the jurisdiction within that territory by magistrates acting under British authority on the part of the citizens of the United States who may choose to reside in those ancient settlements. The undersigned, therefore, is convinced that Mr. Clay will agree with him, that there cannot be any grounds for complaint of an undue and illegal exercise of jurisdiction, whatever motive there may be for remonstrance against the severity with which the laws may have been executed.

With regard to one of the affidavits transmitted by the Governor of Maine, that of Jonathan Wilson, it appears that he undertakes to relate the circumstances attending the arrest of Baker on the Madawaska from what he had been told by Joshua Harvey, formerly of Bangor, in the State of Maine. The undersigned takes this opportunity of communicating to the Secretary of State some circumstances attending that transaction, with which he has been made acquainted by his Majesty's Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick. In a letter which the undersigned received on the 7th October last from his excellency, dated the 11th September, he was informed that an alien of the name of Baker, residing in a British settlement on the Madawaska, had, on the 18th July last, interrupted the passage of the mail from New Brunswick to Canada by the long-established road through that settlement. Sir Howard Douglas transmitted to him at the same time copies of depositions, taken on oath, respecting the conduct of Baker; and feeling that it was his duty as Lieutenant Governor not to abandon any right of practical sovereignty which had been exercised in the disputed territory, which has been held, occupied, and located as British settlements for any period within the last century, or even later, he considered that the report which had been made to him of the conduct of Baker was fit matter for the cognizance of the law officers of the crown; and his excellency accordingly directed the Attorney General to take such measures as he might deem necessary to enforce the municipal laws of the province, and to repress and punish the disorders which had been committed.

The undersigned has not received from Sir Howard Douglas any report yet of the proceedings against Baker subsequently to his arrest. He has the honor to submit to the consideration of the Secretary of State the accompanying documents, namely: No. 1, a report made to the Lieutenant Governor by Mr. Morehouse, a magistrate in the neighborhood of Madawaska; No. 2, the deposition of Peter Sileste, relative to the stopping of the mail; No 3, the deposition of William Feirio, relative to the flag of the United States having been hoisted by Baker; Nos. 4 and 5, the depositions of Abraham Chamberland and Peter Markee, relative to a paper circulated in a settlement upon the Madawaska for signature amongst the inhabitants, by which they were to bind themselves to resist the British authority; No. 6, the opinion of the Attorney and Solicitor General of the province.

The Secretary of State will observe in the enclosed depositions that Baker and others asserted that in the measures which they took they would be supported by the Government of the United States. It is hardly necessary for the undersigned to repeat the assurances which he has received from the Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick, that his excellency is convinced that the Government of the United States was not, in any shape, aware of the intentions of Baker and his associates.

It is evident, from the enclosed documents, that the offensive conduct of Baker was not confined to stopping the mail, but that he had hoisted the flag of the United States, in defiance of British claims, and had sought to engage a party, in an ancient British settlement, to transfer the possession to the United States.

The undersigned has already communicated to the Secretary of State sufficient proofs of the decided resolution of his Majesty's Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick to maintain the disputed territory in the same state in which his excellency received it after the conclusion of the treaty of Ghent; and the undersigned is convinced that a mutual spirit of forbearance animates the General Government of the United States. It is painful to reflect upon the collisions of authority to which both countries are so repeatedly exposed by the long delay which has taken place in finally adjusting the line of boundary on the northeast frontier of the United States. In the present state of uncertainty the limits of the jurisdiction of each Government are misapprehended and misunderstood by the class of persons becoming, from time to time, settlers in the disputed district; and too much vigilance cannot be exerted by the authorities on both sides to remove that misapprehension, and control all misconduct arising out of it.

The undersigned requests that Mr. Clay will accept the assurance of his highest consideration.

CHARLES R. VAUGHAN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, &c., &c., &c.

No. 1.

KENT, August 11, 1827.

SIR: In compliance with your request, contained in your letter of the 31st of July, I proceeded without delay to Madawaska to inquire into the conduct of Baker and the American citizens in that settlement, on which, for the information of Government, I beg leave to make the following report: After getting the affidavits of some of the French settlers, I went up the river to where there is a settlement forming by Americans, and endeavored to get in my possession the paper which had been offered for signatures, but found that quite out of the question; they positively refused to let me see it. As soon as it was known that I was in the settlement, Baker and others hoisted the American flag as a token of defiance. I ordered him to pull it down; instead of complying, Baker, as their organ, made the following declaration: That they had hoisted that flag, and that they had mutually entered into a written agreement to keep it there, and that nothing but force superior to their own should take it down; that they considered, and had a right to consider, themselves on the territory of the United States; and that they had bound themselves to resist by force the execution of the laws of Great Britain amongst them; and that they had a right to expect and would receive the protection of their Government in what they were doing.

It seems the flag in question was first raised on the 4th of July last, when Baker a few days previous personally invited the most of the French settlers to join them in that act; but I am happy to have it in my power to say that but few complied.

I find they are using every argument to induce the French people to declare themselves American subjects, and I fear if those fellows are not well looked after they will eventually succeed in their designs, for I find their insinuations have already had the effect to throw some of the people in doubt whether they are to consider themselves as British or American subjects; and I trust that his Majesty's Government will speedily take such measures as will convince the French settlers of Madawaska that the Americans have no right to act as they do, and crush this banditti; for I feel convinced that unless this transaction is promptly followed by some other to suppress them, that the French, it is more than probable, will shortly consider us the intruders.

I herewith send the affidavits of the postman whom Baker was said to have stopped, which will show what passed between them; also a list of American citizens settled on the river St. John, above the French settlements.

I have, &c.,

G. MOREHOUSE.

THOMAS WETMORE, Esq., &c., &c., &c.

No. 2.

NEW BRUNSWICK, York, sc.

Peter Sileste, of the Madawaska settlement, in the parish of Kent and county of York, in the province of New Brunswick, maketh oath and saith, that on the 18th day of July, 1827, as this deponent was proceeding up the river St. John, in charge of the mail for Canada, one John Baker, an American citizen, who resides in Madawaska, met him near the chapel, when the said Baker demanded of this deponent what he had in his canoe; on being told by this deponent that it was the mail for Canada, the said Baker then declared that England had no right to send her mails that route, and that he (Baker) had received orders from the Government of the United States to stop them; but on the deponent's saying that he should not have that mail without he was a better man than deponent, he (Baker) said it might pass for that time, but for the future it should not, as he was determined to put the orders of his Government into execution.

PETER his mark SILESTE.

Sworn before me, at Madawaska, in the parish of Kent, this 9th day of August, 1827.

GEORGE MOREHOUSE, Magistrate for the County of York.

No. 3.

NEW BRUNSWICK, York, sc.

William Feirio, of Madawaska, in the parish of Kent, county of York, and province of New Brunswick, maketh oath and saith, that by an invitation from John Baker, an American citizen, who resides in Madawaska, he, the deponent, went to the said Baker on the 4th of July last, 1827; that Baker and the other American citizens then raised a flag-staff and placed the American flag thereon; that he, the said Baker, then declared that place to be an American territory, which he repeated to this deponent and other French settlers then there; and that they must for the future look upon themselves as subjects of the United States, who would protect them and him in what he was doing.

WILLIAM his mark FEIRIO.

Sworn before me, at Madawaska, in Kent, this 8th day of August, 1827.

GEORGE MOREHOUSE, Justice of the Peace.

No. 4.

NEW BRUNSWICK, York, sc.

Abraham Chamberland, of the Madawaska settlement, in the parish of Kent and county of York, in the province of New Brunswick, maketh oath and saith, that on or about the 15th of July, 1827, one Charles Studson, an American citizen, residing in Madawaska, presented a written paper to deponent and asked him to sign it; that deponent asked him the contents of the said paper, when the said Studson informed him that by that paper they bound themselves to oppose the execution of the laws of England amongst them in Madawaska, and that his Government, the United States, would protect them in what they were doing.

his
ABRAHAM ⋈ CHAMBERLAND.
mark.

Sworn before me, at Madawaska, in the parish of Kent and county of York, this 7th August, 1827.

GEORGE MOREHOUSE,
Justice of the Peace for the County of York.

No. 5.

NEW BRUNSWICK, York, sc.

Peter Markee, of the Madawaska settlement, in the parish of Kent and county of York, in the province of New Brunswick, maketh oath and saith, that on or about the 15th July last, 1827, three persons, John Baker, James Bacon, and Charles Studson, American citizens, residing in the Madawaska settlement, came to this deponent and presented a paper to him to sign his name thereto; that on deponent's asking them the contents of it, they declared it was a document drawn up by them and others residing in Madawaska, the intention of which was that they bound themselves to defend each other against any act of a British officer, civil or military; that they did not intend to allow the British laws to be put in force amongst them in the Madawaska settlement; that the British Government had no right to exercise any authority over them, as that was American territory, and that the Government of the United States would protect them in what they were doing.

his
PETER ⋈ MARKEE.
mark.

Sworn before me, at Kent, in the county of York, this 7th day of August, 1827.

GEORGE MOREHOUSE,
Justice of the Peace for the County of York.

No. 6.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Having considered with the attention which its great importance demands the communication from George Morehouse, Esq., of the 11th instant, with five affidavits transmitted by him, and also the other papers accompanying the despatch from your excellency's private secretary of the 22d instant, we feel quite prepared to express our opinion as to the nature of the offence committed by John Baker and other American citizens at Madawaska, and also as to the course to be pursued with them. We consider the Madawaska settlement to be within the British territory, and unquestionably in his Majesty's possession; and that Baker and his coadjutors were, and are, under the protection, and owe a temporary allegiance to his Majesty; but as they profess to act under the authority of the United States, and to lay claim to the place as part of its territory, we beg to recommend that such such steps only should be pursued as will be necessary to preserve the possession free from any infringement, either by stratagem or open violence, until the question of right shall be finally settled.

The offence with which those persons stand charged is, at least, a high misdemeanor in law, punishable by fine and imprisonment; and we beg leave to advise that Mr. Morehouse be desired, without delay, to proceed upon the evidence now before him, (which we think quite sufficient,) to arrest the offenders, and to commit them to jail, unless they will give sufficient security for their appearance at the next term of the Supreme Court to take their trials, and, in the meantime, to be of good behavior; and that the high sheriff be directed to attend in person the execution of the process. And we further recommend that informations for trespass and intrusion be immediately filed against the persons named in Mr. Morehouse's list.

Respectfully submitted.

O. WETMORE, Attorney General
C. PETERS, Solicitor General.

His Excellency Sir H. DOUGLAS, &c., &c., &c.

[Enclosure No. 1.]

In Mr. Vaughan's note to Mr. Clay, dated November 21, 1827.

KENT, July 26, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a letter addressed to me by Mr. Francis Rice, adjutant of the Madawaska militia, by which you will see the American subjects residing in that settlement are disposed to acts of aggression which his excellency may think proper to take measures to put a stop to. I therefore request that you will lay this before his excellency for his consideration.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE MOREHOUSE.

W. P. ODELL, Esq., &c., &c., &c., Fredericton.

GRAND RIVER, Madawaska, July 25, 1827.

SIR: Having commenced, Saturday, 21st instant, the militia company training, and finding some disorder amongst the people, occasioned by Baker and others, in the upper settlement, I find it my duty to let you know as much as I am informed concerning them. In the first place, they have a written document, wherein they say they have authority from the States to have it signed by the French people of Madawaska. This they have proposed to many of the inhabitants, and I am sorry to say they have persuaded some of them to sign it. The name of one of the signers is Abraham Chamberland. Baker is the head man. All this can be proved on oath. In the second place, Baker met the postman, and asked him what he had got with him; he told him it was the province mail. Then Baker told the postman that he had orders from the States to stop it; the man told him that if he was a better man than him, to try and take it; Baker answered, and said he would let it pass for this time, but at a future period he would put his orders in execution.

Sir, if this Baker, and others, is not stopped immediately they will corrupt a great part of our militia. You have heard of the liberty pole he has raised in this settlement; I need not give you any information as to that. Anything strange that may happen in this place I will trouble you with the shortest notice.

I am, &c.,

FRANCIS RICE.

GEORGE MOREHOUSE, Esq., Kent.

FREDERICTON, July 31, 1827.

SIR: Your letter of the 26th to the Provincial Secretary, enclosing a letter from Mr. Francis Rice to you, dated 25th instant, having been referred to me by his excellency the Lieutenant Governor, with directions to procure the necessary affidavits of the facts stated by Mr. Rice, I must request you will be pleased, with the least possible delay, to proceed to the place and possess yourself of the best proofs of the conduct of Baker and others, which you will forward to me under cover to the Secretary.

I send herewith a copy of Mr. Rice's letter for your guidance.

You will be particularly careful to ascertain, if possible, whether Baker is acting under any pretended authority or not; and procure, if you can, a copy of the paper which has been offered for signature.

Should Baker, or any other person, use any violence or force to obstruct the post, you will, of course, consider it your duty, upon receiving the complaint, under oath, [to] cause the offender to be arrested and committed to jail, unless he gives satisfactory security for his appearance at the next Supreme Court to answer to the charge.

I must beg you will furnish me with a sketch or general description of the lands which Baker, or any other American citizen, is in possession of in the neighborhood of Madawaska, and the length of time they have possessed the same.

I have, &c.,

P. WETMORE, Attorney General.

GEORGE MOREHOUSE, Esq.

[Endorsed.]

Refer to the Attorney General to procure the necessary affidavits of the facts, as stated in this.

H. D.

JULY 31, 1827.

[Translation.]

CORFU, June 15–27, 1827.

To his Excellency the President of the United States of America:

EXCELLENCY: The President of the General National Congress of my nation has just transmitted to me a letter, addressed to your excellency, in which he expresses the sentiments of gratitude with which the liberal conduct of the American nation has filled the nation over which he presides.

I deem myself exceedingly happy in having been selected as the organ of this communication; and I pray God, the Protector of America and Greece, to afford me, in future, other opportunities of witnessing the reciprocal sentiments of two nations, to one of whom I belong, and offer to the other the sentiments of my admiration and the homage of my gratitude.

I take great pleasure in availing myself of the honor afforded me by this opportunity of presenting to your excellency the homage of my own sentiments of profound respect. Your excellency's most humble and devoted servant,

COUNT CAPO D'ISTRIAS.

[Translated from a French translation of the Greek text.]

To his Excellency the President of the United States of North America:

EXCELLENCY: In extending a helping hand towards the Old World, and encouraging it in its march to freedom and civilization, the New World covers itself with increased glory, and does honor to humanity.

Greece, sir, has received with gratitude the signal testimonies of the philanthropic sentiments of the people of North America, as well as its generous assistance.

Commissioned to express to your excellency the sincere feelings of my nation, I esteem myself happy in being the organ of communication between free communities which, although separated by space, are, nevertheless, drawn towards one another by the principles of morals, and by whatever is truly beneficial to human society.

I am, with respect,

E. SISSINY,
President of the Third National Assembly of Greece.

TREZENE, May 5, 1827, O. S.

N. SPILIADY, Secretary.

A proclamation by the President of the United States of America promulgating the convention between the United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. Concluded November 13, 1826.

Whereas a convention between the United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland was concluded and signed at London on the thirteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six, which convention is, word for word, as follows:

Difficulties having arisen in the execution of the convention concluded at St. Petersburg on the twelfth day of July, 1822, under the mediation of his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, between the United States of America and Great Britain, for the purpose of carrying into effect the decision of his Imperial Majesty upon the differences which had arisen between the said United States and Great Britain, on the true construction and meaning of the first article of the treaty of peace and amity concluded at Ghent on the twenty-fourth day of December, 1814, the said United States and his Britannic Majesty being equally desirous to obviate such difficulties, have respectively named plenipotentiaries to treat and agree respecting the same, that is to say:

The President of the United States of America has appointed Albert Gallatin their Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to his Britannic Majesty;

And his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Honorable William Huskisson, a member of his said Majesty's most honorable Privy Council, a member of Parliament, President of the Committee of Privy Council for Affairs of Trade and Foreign Plantations, and Treasurer of his said Majesty's Navy; and Henry Unwin Addington, Esquire, late his Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to the United States of America:

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon, and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland agrees to pay, and the United States of America agree to receive, for the use of the persons entitled to indemnification and compensation by virtue of the said decision and convention, the sum of twelve hundred and four thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars, current money of the United States, in lieu of, and in full and complete satisfaction for, all sums claimed or claimable from Great Britain, by any person or persons whatsoever, under the said decision and convention.

ARTICLE 2. The object of the said convention being thus fulfilled, that convention is hereby declared to be cancelled and annulled, save and except the second article of the same, which has already been carried into execution by the Commissioners appointed under the said convention, and save and except so much of the third article of the same as relates to the definitive list of claims, and has already likewise been carried into execution by the said Commissioners.

ARTICLE 3. The said sum of twelve hundred and four thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars shall be paid at Washington to such person or persons as shall be duly authorized on the part of the United States to receive the same, in two equal payments, as follows:

The payment of the first half to be made twenty days after official notification shall have been made by the Government of the United States to his Britannic Majesty's minister in the said United States of the ratification of the present convention by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof.

And the payment of the second half to be made on the first day of August, 1827.

ARTICLE 4. The above sums being taken as a full and final liquidation of all claims whatsoever arising under the said decision and convention, both the final adjustment of those claims and the distribution of the sums so paid by Great Britain to the United States shall be made in such manner as the United States alone shall determine, and the Government of Great Britain shall have no further concern or liability therein.

ARTICLE 5. It is agreed that from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention the joint commission appointed under the said convention of St. Petersburg of the twelfth of July, 1822, shall be dissolved; and, upon the dissolution thereof, all the documents and papers in possession of the said commission relating to claims under that convention shall be delivered over to such person or persons as shall be duly authorized on the part of the United States to receive the same; and the British Commissioner shall make over to such person or persons so authorized all the documents and papers (or authenticated copies of the same where the original cannot conveniently be made over) relating to claims under the said convention which he may have received from his Government for the use of the said Commission, conformably to the stipulations contained in the third article of the said convention.

ARTICLE 6. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in London in six months from this date, or sooner, if possible.

In witness whereof, the plenipotentiaries aforesaid, by virtue of their respective full powers, have signed the same and have affixed thereunto the seals of their arms.

Done at London, this thirteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six.

ALBERT GALLATIN. [L. S.]
WILLIAM HUSKISSON. [L. S.]
HENRY UNWIN ADDINGTON. [L. S.]

And whereas the said convention has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications of the same were exchanged at London on the sixth day of February last, by Albert Gallatin, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America, and Henry Unwin Addington, Esquire, late his Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to the said United States, on the part of their respective Governments:

Now, therefore, I, John Quincy Adams, President of the United States, have caused the said convention to be made public, to the end that the same, and every clause and article thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this nineteenth day of March, in the year of our Lord one [L. S.] thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States the fifty-first.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

By the President:
H. CLAY, Secretary of State.

Proclamation by the President of the United States, and the act of Congress relating to the commerce of the British colonial ports.

Whereas, by the sixth section of an act of Congress entitled "An act to regulate the commercial intercourse between the United States and certain British colonial ports," which was approved on the first day of March, in the year of our Lord 1823, it is enacted "that this act, unless repealed, altered, or amended by Congress, shall be and continue in force so long as the above enumerated British colonial ports shall be open to the admission of the vessels of the United States, conformably to the provisions of the British act of Parliament of the twenty-fourth of June last, being the forty-fourth chapter of the acts of the third year of George the Fourth: but if at any time the trade and intercourse between the United States and all or any of the above enumerated British colonial ports, authorized by the said act of Parliament, should be prohibited by a British order in council, or by act of Parliament, then, from the day of the date of such order in council, or act of Parliament, or from the time that the same shall commence to be in force, proclamation to that effect having been made by the President of the United States, each and every provision of this act, so far as the same shall apply to the intercourse between the United States and the above enumerated British colonial ports in British vessels, shall cease to operate in their favor; and each and every provision of the 'Act concerning navigation,' approved on the eighteenth of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighteen, and of the act supplementary thereto, approved on the fifteenth of May, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, shall revive and be in full force."

And whereas, by an act of the British Parliament, which passed on the fifth day of July, in the year of our Lord 1825, entitled "An act to repeal the several laws relating to the customs," the said act of Parliament of the 24th of June, 1822, was repealed; and by another act of the British Parliament, passed on the fifth day of July, in the year of our Lord 1825, in the sixth year of the reign of George the Fourth, entitled "An act to regulate the trade of the British possessions abroad," and by an order of his Britannic Majesty in council, bearing date the 27th of July, 1826, the trade and intercourse authorized by the aforesaid act of Parliament of the 24th June, 1822, between the United States and the greater part of the said British colonial ports therein enumerated, have been prohibited upon and from the first day of December last past, and the contingency has thereby arisen on which the President of the United States was authorized by the sixth section aforesaid of the act of Congress of 1st March, 1823, to issue a proclamation to the effect therein mentioned:

Now, therefore, I, John Quincy Adams, President of the United States of America, do hereby declare and proclaim that the trade and intercourse authorized by the said act of Parliament of the 24th of June, 1822, between the United States and the British colonial ports enumerated in the aforesaid act of Congress of the 1st of March, 1823, have been, and are, upon and from the 1st day of December, 1826, by the aforesaid two several acts of Parliament of the 5th of July, 1825, and by the aforesaid British order in council of the 27th day of July, 1826, prohibited.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, this 17th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1827, and the fifty-first year of the Independence of the United States.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

By the President:
H. CLAY, Secretary of State.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 458. [1ST SESSION.

CONVENTION WITH GREAT BRITAIN FOR CONTINUING IN FORCE THE COMMERCIAL CONVENTION OF THE THIRD OF JULY, 1815.—CONVENTION WITH GREAT BRITAIN FOR CONTINUING IN FORCE THE THIRD ARTICLE OF THE CONVENTION OF THE 20TH OF OCTOBER, 1818, IN RELATION TO THE TERRITORIES WESTWARD OF THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.—CONVENTION WITH GREAT BRITAIN FOR THE REFERENCE TO A FRIENDLY SOVEREIGN THE POINTS OF DIFFERENCE RELATING TO THE NORTH-EASTERN BOUNDARY OF THE UNITED STATES.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 12, 1827.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit to the Senate—

1. A convention between the United States and Great Britain for the continuance in force of the convention of July 3, 1815, after the 20th October, 1828, the term at which it would otherwise expire.

2. A convention between the same parties for continuing in force, after the 20th of October, 1828, the provisions of the third article of the convention of October 20, 1818, in relation to the territories westward of the Rocky mountains.

3. A convention between the same parties for the reference to a friendly Sovereign of the points of difference betweeen them relating to the northeastern boundary of the United States.

The first and second of these conventions were signed by the plenipotentiaries of the respective parties, at London, on the 6th day of August, and the third on the 29th day of September last.

Copies of them are also communicated, together with the correspondence and documents illustrative of their negotiation.

I request the advice of the Senate with regard to the ratification of each of them.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

A CONVENTION TO REGULATE COMMERCE AND NAVIGATION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN.

The United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being desirous of continuing in force the existing commercial regulations between the two countries, which are contained in the convention concluded between them on the 3d of July, 1815, and further renewed by the fourth article of the convention of the 20th October, 1818, have, for that purpose, named their respective plenipotentiaries, that is to say: The President of the United States of America, Albert Gallatin, their Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to his Britannic Majesty; and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Honorable Charles Grant, a member of his said Majesty's most honorable Privy Council, a member of Parliament, and Vice President of the Committee of Privy Council for Affairs of Trade and Foreign Plantations, and Henry Unwin Addington, Esquire: who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. All the provisions of the convention concluded between the United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland on the 3d of July, 1815, and further continued for the term of ten years by the fourth article of the convention of the 20th of October, 1818, (with the exception therein contained as to St. Helena,) are hereby further indefinitely, and without the said exception, extended and continued in force, from the date of the expiration of the said ten years, in the same manner as if all the provisions of the said convention of the 3d of July, 1815, were herein specifically recited.

ARTICLE 2. It shall be competent, however, to either of the contracting parties, in case either should think fit, at any time after the expiration of the said ten years, (that is, after the 20th of October, 1828,) on giving due notice of twelve months to the other contracting party, to annul and abrogate this convention; and it shall, in such case, be accordingly entirely annulled and abrogated, after the expiration of the said term of notice.

ARTICLE 3. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in nine months, or sooner, if possible.

In witness whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have affixed thereto the seals of their arms.

Done at London, the sixth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven.

ALBERT GALLATIN. [L. S.]
CHARLES GRANT. [L. S.]
HENRY UNWIN ADDINGTON. [L. S.]

The following is the convention referred to in the preceding:

A convention to regulate commerce between the territories of the United States and his Britannic Majesty.

The United States of America and his Britannic Majesty, being desirous, by a convention, to regulate the commerce and navigation between their respective countries, territories, and people, in such a manner as to render the same reciprocally beneficial and satisfactory, have respectively named plenipotentiaries, and given them full powers to treat of and conclude such convention, that is to say: The President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof, hath appointed for their plenipotentiaries John Quincy Adams, Henry Clay, and Albert Gallatin, citizens of the United States; and his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, acting in the name and on behalf of his Majesty, has named for his plenipotentiaries the Right Honorable Frederick John Robinson, Vice President of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade and Plantations, joint paymaster of his Majesty's forces, and a member of the Imperial Parliament; Henry Goulborn, Esq., a member of the Imperial Parliament, and under Secretary of State, and William Adams, Esq., doctor of civil laws; and the said plenipotentiaries having mutually produced and shown their said full powers, and exchanged copies of the same, have agreed on and concluded the following articles, videlicet:

ARTICLE 1. There shall be between the territories of the United States of America and all the territories of his Britannic Majesty in Europe a reciprocal liberty of commerce. The inhabitants of the two countries, respectively, shall have liberty freely and securely to come with their ships and cargoes to all such places, ports, and rivers, in the territories aforesaid, to which other foreigners are permitted to come, to enter into the same, and to remain and reside in any parts of the said territories, respectively; also, to hire and occupy houses and warehouses for the purposes of their commerce; and generally the merchants and traders of each nation, respectively, shall enjoy the most complete protection and security for their commerce, but subject always to the laws and statutes of the two countries, respectively.

ARTICLE 2. No higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the United States of any articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of his Britannic Majesty's territories in Europe, and no higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the territories of his Britannic Majesty in Europe of any articles the growth, produce, or manufactures of the United States, than are or shall be payable on the like articles being the growth, produce, or manufacture of any other foreign country; nor shall any higher or other duties or charges be imposed in either of the two countries on the exportation of any articles to the United States, or to his Britannic Majesty's territories in Europe, respectively, than such as are payable on the exportation of the like articles to any other foreign country; nor shall any prohibition be imposed on the exportation or importation of any articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, or of his Britannic Majesty's territories in Europe, to or from the said territories of his Britannic Majesty in Europe, or to or from the said United States, which shall not equally extend to all other nations.

No higher or other duties or charges shall be imposed in any of the ports of the United States on British vessels than those payable in the same ports by vessels of the United States; nor in the ports of any of his Britannic Majesty's territories in Europe on the vessels of the United States than shall be payable in the same ports on British vessels.

The same duties shall be paid on the importation into the United States of any articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of his Britannic Majesty's territories in Europe, whether such importation shall be in vessels of the United States or in British vessels; and the same duties shall be paid on the importation into the ports of any of his Britannic Majesty's territories in Europe of any article the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, whether such importation shall be in British vessels or in vessels of the United States.

The same duties shall be paid, and the same bounties allowed on the exportation of any articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of his Britannic Majesty's territories in Europe to the United States, whether such exportation shall be in vessels of the United States or in British vessels; and the same duties shall be paid, and the same bounties allowed on the exportation of any articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States to his Britannic Majesty's territories in Europe, whether such exportation shall be in British vessels or in vessels of the United States.

It is further agreed that in all cases where drawbacks are or may be allowed upon the re-exportation of any goods the growth, produce, or manufacture of either country, respectively, the amount of the said drawbacks shall be the same, whether the said goods shall have heen originally imported in a British or American vessel; but when such re-exportation shall take place from the United States in a British vessel, or from the territories of his Britannic Majesty in Europe, in an American vessel, to any other foreign nation, the two contracting parties reserve to themselves, respectively, the right of regulating or diminishing, in such case, the amount of the said drawback.

The intercourse between the United States and his Britannic Majesty's possessions in the West Indies and on the continent of North America shall not be affected by any of the provisions of this article, but each party shall remain in the complete possession of his rights with respect to such an intercourse.

ARTICLE 3. His Britannic Majesty agrees that the vessels of the United States of America shall be admitted and hospitably received at the principal settlements of the British dominions in the East Indies, videlicet: Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Prince of Wales island; and that the citizens of the said United States may freely carry on trade between the said principal settlements and the said United States in all articles of which the importation and exportation, respectively, to and from the said territories, shall not be entirely prohibited; provided only, that it shall not be lawful for them, in any time of war between the British Government and any State or Power whatever, to export from the said territories, without the special permission of the British Government, any military stores, or naval stores, or rice. The citizens of the United States shall pay for their vessels, when admitted, no higher or other duty or charge than shall be payable on the vessels of the most favored European nations, and they shall pay no higher or other duties or charges on the importation or exportation of the cargoes of the said vessels than shall be payable on the same articles when imported or exported in the vessels of the most favored European nations.

But it is expressly agreed that the vessels of the United States shall not carry any articles from the said principal settlements to any port or place, except to some port or place in the United States of America where the same shall be unladen.

It is also understood that the permission granted by this article is not to extend to allow the vessels of the United States to carry on any part of the coasting trade of the said British territories; but the vessels of the United States having, in the first instance, proceeded to one of the said principal settlements of the British dominions in the East Indies, and then going with their original cargoes, or part thereof, from one of the said principal settlements to another, shall not be considered as carrying on the coasting trade. The vessels of the United States may also touch for refreshment, but not for commerce, in the course of their voyage to or from the British territories in India, or to or from the Emperor of China, at the Cape of Good Hope, the island of St. Helena, or such other places as may be in the possession of Great Britain, in the African or Indian seas; it being well understood that, in all that regards this article, the citizens of the United States shall be subject, in all respects, to the laws and regulations of the British Government from time to time established.

ARTICLE 4. It shall be free for each of the two contracting parties, respectively, to appoint consuls for the protection of trade, to reside in the dominions and territories of the other party; but before any consul shall act as such, he shall, in the usual form, be approved and admitted by the Government to which he is sent; and it is hereby declared that, in case of illegal or improper conduct towards the laws or Government of the country to which he is sent, such consul may either be punished according to law, if the laws will reach the case, or be sent back, the offended Government assigning to the other the reasons for the same.

It is hereby declared that either of the contracting parties may except from the residence of consuls such particular places as such party shall judge fit to be so excepted.

ARTICLE 5. This convention, when the same shall be duly ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and by his Britannic Majesty, and the respective ratifications mutually exchanged, shall be binding and obligatory on the said United States and his Majesty for four years from the date of its signature; and the ratifications shall be exchanged in six months from this time, or sooner, if possible.

Done at London, this third day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifteen.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS. [L. S.]
H. CLAY. [L. S.]
ALBERT GALLATIN. [L. S.]
FREDERICK JOHN ROBINSON. [L. S.]
HENRY GOULDBURN. [L. S.]
WILLIAM ADAMS. [L. S.]

DECLARATION.

The undersigned, his Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in the United States of America, is commanded by his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, acting in the name and on the behalf of his Majesty, to explain and declare, upon the exchange of the ratifications of the convention concluded at London on the third of July of the present year, for regulating the commerce and navigation between the two countries, that, in consequence of events which have happened in Europe, subsequent to the signature of the convention aforesaid, it has been deemed expedient, and determined, in conjunction with the allied Sovereigns, that St. Helena shall be the place allotted for the future residence of General Napoleon Bonaparte, under such regulations as may be necessary for the perfect security of his person; and it has been resolved, for that purpose, that all ships and vessels whatever, as well British ships and vessels as others, excepting only ships belonging to the East India Company, shall be excluded from all communication with, or approach to, that island.

It has therefore become impossible to comply with so much of the third article of the treaty as relates to the liberty of touching for refreshment at the island of St. Helena, and the ratifications of the said treaty will be exchanged under the explicit declaration and understanding that the vessels of the United States cannot be allowed to touch at or hold any communication whatever with the said island so long as the said island shall continue to be the place of residence of the said Napoleon Bonaparte.

ANTHONY ST. JNO. BAKER.

WASHINGTON, November 24, 1815.

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN RELATIVE TO THE NORTHWESTERN BOUNDARY.

The United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being equally desirous to prevent, as far as possible, all hazard of misunderstanding between the two nations, with respect to the territory on the Northwest Coast of America, west of the Stony or Rocky mountains, after the expiration of the third article of the convention concluded between them on the 20th of October, 1818; and also with a view to give further time for maturing measures which shall have for their object a more definite settlement of the claims of each party to the said territory, have, respectively, named their plenipotentiaries to treat and agree concerning a temporary renewal of the said article, that is to say:

The President of the United States of America, Albert Gallatin their Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to his Britannic Majesty;

And his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Honorable Charles Grant, a member of his said Majesty's most honorable Privy Council, a member of Parliament, and Vice President of the Committee of Privy Council for Affairs of Trade and Foreign Plantations; and Henry Unwin Addington, Esq.:

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. All the provisions of the third article of the convention concluded between the United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland on the 20th of October, 1818, shall be, and they are hereby, further indefinitely extended and continued in force, in the same manner as if all the provisions of the said article were herein specifically recited.

ARTICLE 2. It shall be competent, however, to either of the contracting parties, in case either should think fit, at any time after the 20th of October, 1828, on giving due notice of twelve months to the other contracting party, to annul and abrogate this convention; and it shall, in such case, be accordingly entirely annulled and abrogated after the expiration of the said term of notice.

ARTICLE 3. Nothing contained in this convention, or in the third article of the convention of the 20th of October, 1818, hereby continued in force, shall be construed to impair or in any manner affect the claims which either of the contracting parties may have to any part of the country westward of the Stony or Rocky mountains.

ARTICLE 4. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in nine months, or sooner, if possible.

In witness whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have affixed thereto the seals of their arms.

Done at London, the sixth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven.

ALBERT GALLATIN. [L. S.]
CHARLES GRANT. [L. S.]
HENRY UNWIN ADDINGTON. [L. S.]

The following is the convention above referred to:

CONVENTION WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

The United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, desirous to cement the good understanding which happily subsists between them, have, for that purpose, named their respective plenipotentiaries, that is to say: The President of the United States, on his part, has appointed Albert Gallatin their Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of France, and Richard Rush their Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of his Britannic Majesty; and his Majesty has appointed the Right Honorable Frederick John Robinson, Treasurer of his Majesty's Navy, and President of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade and Plantations, and Henry Goulbourn, Esq., one of his Majesty's under Secretaries of State: who, after having exchanged their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed to and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. Whereas differences have arisen respecting the liberty claimed by the United States for the inhabitants thereof to take, dry, and cure fish on certain coasts, bays, harbors and creeks of his Britannic Majesty's dominions in America, it is agreed between the high contracting parties that the inhabitants of the said United States shall have, forever, in common with the subjects of his Britannic Majesty, the liberty to take fish of every kind on that part of the southern coast of Newfoundland which extends from Cape Ray to the Rameau islands, on the western and northern coast of Newfoundland, from the said Cape Ray to the Quirpon islands, on the shores of the Magdalen islands, and also on the coasts, bays, harbors and creeks, from Mount Joly, on the southern coast of Labrador, to and through the Straits of Bellisle, and thence northwardly indefinitely along the coast, without prejudice, however, to any of the exclusive rights of the Hudson Bay Company; and that the American fishermen shall also have liberty, forever, to dry and cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbors and creeks of the southern part of the coast of Newfoundland hereabove described, and of the coast of Labrador; but so soon as the same, or any portion thereof, shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said fishermen to dry or cure fish at such portion so settled without previous agreement for such purpose with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground. And the United States hereby renounce, forever, any liberty heretofore enjoyed or claimed by the inhabitants thereof to take, dry, or cure fish on or within three marine miles of any of the coasts, bays, creeks or harbors of his Britannic Majesty's dominions in America not included within the above-mentioned limits: Provided, however, that the American fishermen shall be admitted to enter such bays or harbors for the purpose of shelter and of repairing damages therein, of purchasing wood, and of obtaining water, and for no other purpose whatever; but they shall be under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent their taking, drying, or curing fish therein, or in any other manner whatever abusing the privileges hereby reserved to them.

ARTICLE 2. It is agreed that a line drawn from the most northwestern point of the Lake of the Woods, along the forty-ninth parallel of north latitude, or if the said point shall not be in the forty-ninth parallel of north latitude, then that a line drawn from the point due north or south, as the case may be, until the said line shall intersect the said parallel of north latitude; and from the point of such intersection due west along and with the said parallel shall be the line of demarcation between the territories of the United States and those of his Britannic Majesty, and that the said line shall form the northern boundary of the said territories of the United States, and the southern boundary of the territories of his Britannic Majesty, from the Lake of the Woods to the Stony mountains.

ARTICLE 3. It is agreed that any country that may be claimed by either party on the Northwest Coast of America, westward of the Stony mountains, shall, together with its harbors, bays and creeks, and the navigation of all rivers within the same, be free and open, for the term of ten years from the date of the signature of the present convention, to the vessels, citizens and subjects of the two Powers; it being well understood that this agreement is not to be construed to the prejudice of any claim which either of the two high contracting parties may have to any part of the said country, nor shall it be taken to affect the claims of any other Power or State to any part of the said country; the only object of the high contracting parties, in that respect, being to prevent disputes and differences amongst themselves.

ARTICLE 4. All the provisions of the convention "to regulate the commerce between the territories of the United States and of his Britannic Majesty," concluded at London on the third day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifteen, with the exception of the clause which limited its duration to four years, and excepting also, so far as the same was affected by the declaration of his Majesty respecting the island of St. Helena, are hereby extended and continued in force for the term of ten years from the date of the signature of the present convention, in the same manner as if all the provisions of the said convention were herein specially recited.

ARTICLE 5. Whereas it was agreed by the first article of the treaty of Ghent that "all territory, places and possessions whatsoever, taken by either party from the other during the war, or which may be taken after the signing of this treaty, excepting only the islands hereinafter mentioned, shall be restored without delay, and without causing any destruction, or carrying away any of the artillery or other public property originally captured in said forts or places which shall remain therein upon the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty, or any slaves or other private property;" and whereas, under the aforesaid article, the United States claim for their citizens, and as their private property, the restitution of, or full compensation for, all slaves who, at the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the said treaty, were in any territory, places or possessions whatsoever, directed by the said treaty to be restored to the United States, but then still occupied by the British forces, whether such slaves were at the date aforesaid on shore, or on board any British vessel lying in waters within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States; and whereas differences have arisen whether, by the true intent and meaning of the aforesaid article of the treaty of Ghent, the United States are entitled to the restoration of, or full compensation for, all or any slaves as above described, the high contracting parties hereby agree to refer the said differences to some friendly Sovereign or State to be named for that purpose; and the high contracting parties further engage to consider the decision of such friendly Sovereign or State to be final and conclusive on all the matters referred.

ARTICLE 6. This convention, when the same shall have been duly ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of their Senate, and by his Britannic Majesty, and the respective ratifications mutually exchanged, shall be binding and obligatory on the said United States and on his Majesty; and the ratifications shall be exchanged in six months from this date, or sooner, if possible.

In witness whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have hereunto affixed the seal of their arms.

Done at London, this twentieth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighteen.

ALBERT GALLATIN. [L. S.]
RICHARD RUSH. [L. S.]
FREDERICK JOHN ROBINSON. [L. S.]
HENRY GOULBOURN. [L. S.]

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN RELATIVE TO THE NORTHEASTERN BOUNDARY.

Whereas it is provided by the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent that, in case the Commissioners appointed under that article, for the settlement of the boundary line therein described, should not be able to agree upon such boundary line, the report or reports of those Commissioners, stating the points on which they have differed, should be submitted to some friendly Sovereign or State, and that the decision given by such Sovereign or State on such points of difference should be considered by the contracting parties as final and conclusive: That case having now arisen, and it having, therefore, become expedient to proceed to and regulate the reference as above described, the United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland have, for that purpose, named their plenipotentiaries, that is to say: The President of the United States has appointed Albert Gallatin, their Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of his Britannic Majesty; and his said Majesty, on his part, has appointed the Right Honorable Charles Grant, a member of Parliament, a member of his said Majesty's most honorable Privy Council, and President of the Committee of the Privy Council for Affairs of Trade and Foreign Plantations, and Henry Unwin Addington, Esq.: who, after having exchanged their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed to and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. It is agreed that the points of difference which have arisen in the settlements of the boundary between the American and British domains, as described in the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, shall be referred, as therein provided, to some friendly Sovereign or State, who shall be invited to investigate and make a decision upon such points of difference.

The two contracting Powers engage to proceed in concert to the choice of such friendly Sovereign or State as soon as the ratifications of this convention shall have been exchanged, and to use their best endeavors to obtain a decision, if practicable, within two years after the arbiter shall have signified his consent to act as such.

ARTICLE 2. The reports and documents thereunto annexed of the Commissioners appointed to carry into execution the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent being so voluminous and complicated as to render it improbable that any Sovereign or State should be willing or able to undertake the office of investigating and arbitrating upon them, it is hereby agreed to substitute for those reports new and separate statements of the respective cases, severally drawn up by each of the contracting parties in such form and terms as each may think fit.

The said statements, when prepared, shall be mutually communicated to each other by the contracting parties, that is to say: by the United States to his Britannic Majesty's Minister or Chargé d'Affaires at Washington, and by Great Britain to the Minister or Chargé d'Affaires of the United States at London, within fifteen months after the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention.

After such communication shall have taken place, each party shall have the power of drawing up a second and definitive statement, if it thinks fit so to do, in reply to the statement of the other party, so communicated; which definitive statement shall also be mutually communicated, in the same manner as aforesaid, to each other, by the contracting parties, within twenty-one months after the exchange of ratifications of the present convention.

ARTICLE 3. Each of the contracting parties shall, within nine months after the exchange of ratifications of this convention, communicate to the other, in the same manner as aforesaid, all the evidence intended to be brought in support of its claim, beyond that which is contained in the reports of the Commissioners, or papers thereunto annexed, and other written documents laid before the commission under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent.

Each of the contracting parties shall be bound, on the application of the other party, made within six months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, to give authentic copies of such individually specified acts of a public nature, relating to the territory in question, intended to be laid as evidence before the arbiter, as have been issued under the authority, or are in the exclusive possession, of each party.

No maps, surveys, or topographical evidence of any description, shall be adduced by either party beyond that which is hereinafter stipulated, nor shall any fresh evidence of any description be adduced or adverted to by either party, other than that mutually communicated or applied for as aforesaid.

Each party shall have full power to incorporate in or annex to either its first or second statement any portion of the reports of the Commissioners, of papers thereunto annexed, and other written documents, laid before the commission under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, or of the other evidence mutually communicated or applied for as above provided, which it may think fit.

ARTICLE 4. The map called Mitchell's map, by which the framers of the treaty of 1783 are acknowledged to have regulated their joint and official proceedings, and the map A, which has been agreed on by the contracting parties, as a delineation of the water courses, and of the boundary lines in reference to the said water courses, as contended for by each party respectively, and which has accordingly been signed by the above named plenipotentiaries at the same time with this convention, shall be annexed to the statements of the contracting parties, and be the only maps that shall be considered as evidence mutually acknowledged by the contracting parties of the topography of the country.

It shall, however, be lawful for either party to annex to its respective first statement, for the purposes of general illustration, any of the maps, surveys, or topographical delineations, which were filed with the Commissioners under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, any engraved map heretofore published, and also a transcript of the above mentioned map A, or of a section thereof, in which transcript each party may lay down the highlands, or other features of the country, as it shall think fit; the water courses and the boundary lines, as claimed by each party, remaining as laid down in the said map A.

But this transcript, as well as the other maps, surveys, and topographical delineations, other than the map A, and Mitchell's map, intended to be thus annexed, by either party, to the respective statements, shall be communicated to the other party, in the same manner as aforesaid, within nine months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, and shall be subject to such objections and observations as the other contracting party may deem it expedient to make thereto, and shall annex to his first statement, either in the margin of such transcript, map, or maps, or otherwise.

ARTICLE 5. All the statements, papers, maps, and documents above mentioned, and which shall have been mutually communicated as aforesaid, shall, without any addition, subtraction, or alteration whatsoever, be jointly and simultaneously delivered in to the arbitrating Sovereign or State, within two years after the exchange of ratifications of this convention, unless the arbiter should not, within that time, have consented to act as such; in which case, all the said statements, papers, maps, and documents shall be laid before him within six months after the time when he shall have consented so to act. No other statements, papers, maps, and documents shall ever be laid before the arbiter except as hereinafter provided.

ARTICLE 6. In order to facilitate the attainment of a just and sound decision on the part of the arbiter, it is agreed that, in case the said arbiter should desire further elucidation or evidence in regard to any specific point contained in any of the said statements submitted to him, the requisition for such elucidation or evidence shall be simultaneously made to both parties, who shall thereupon be permitted to bring further evidence, if required, and to make, each, a written reply to the specific questions submitted by the said arbiter, but no further; and such evidence and replies shall be immediately communicated by each party to the other.

And in case the arbiter should find the topographical evidence laid as aforesaid before him insufficient for the purposes of a sound and just decision, he shall have the power of ordering additional surveys to be made of any portions of the disputed boundary line or territory as he may think fit; which surveys shall be made at the joint expense of the contracting parties, and be considered as conclusive by them.

ARTICLE 7. The decision of the arbiter, when given, shall be taken as final and conclusive, and it shall be carried, without reserve, into immediate effect by Commissioners appointed for that purpose by the contracting parties.

ARTICLE 8. This convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in nine months from the date hereof, or sooner, if possible.

In witness whereof, we, the respective plenipotentiaries, have signed the same, and have affixed thereto the seals of our arms.

Done at London, the twenty-ninth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven.

ALBERT GALLATIN. [SEAL.]
CHARLES GRANT. [SEAL.]
HENRY UNWIN ADDINGTON. [SEAL.]

Extract of a letter from Henry Clay, Secretary of State, to Albert Gallatin, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Great Britain.

JUNE 19, 1826.

"2. The establishment of a boundary between the territories of the two parties beyond the Rocky mountains and on the Northwest Coast of America.

"It is not thought necessary to add much to the argument advanced on this point in the instructions given to Mr. Rush, (a copy of which is herewith communicated,) and that which was employed by him, in the course of his negotiation, to support our title as derived from prior discovery and settlement at the mouth of the Columbia, and from the treaty with Spain concluded on the 22d of February, 1819. That argument is believed to have conclusively established our title on both grounds. Nor is it conceived that Great Britain has, or can make out, even a colorable title to any portion of the Northwest Coast. If she had any claim prior to the treaty of 1763, it was renounced by that treaty, according to which the Mississippi was fixed as the western limit of her territories on this continent. If she acquired any title subsequent to that epoch, we have yet to learn how and by what means it was obtained. The settlement at Nootka Sound, in 1788, cannot be admitted to have conferred any; but if it did, that settlement was north of the line to which we are now willing to agree. By the renunciation and transfer contained in the treaty with Spain of 1819, our right extended to the 60th degree of north latitude. By our treaty with Russia of April, 1824, it has been agreed to limit it to the 54th degree. By agreeing to our proposal to adopt the parallel of 49, which is conceived in a genuine spirit of concession and conciliation, and under the operation of the Russian treaty Great Britain will acquire what she had not before, or, at least, what was open to much controversy, a clear title to an extent of five degrees of latitude fronting on the Pacific, which is but little short of that which will appertain to the United States. It was stated by the British plenipotentiaries to Mr. Rush that the surrender to the United States of the post at the mouth of the Columbia river was in fulfilment of the stipulations of the first article of the treaty of Ghent, without affecting questions of right on either side. It is most true that the restoration was in conformity to that article, but there is nothing in the terms of the article which implies any reservation of right on the part of Great Britain. And does not the stipulation itself, in virtue of which she was bound to restore it, demonstrate that at the date of that treaty she had no pretensions to the mouth of the Columbia? If she then had any claim, would she have contracted to restore the possession unconditionally and without even the formality of a reservation of her right? The course which was adopted in regard to another territorial possession claimed by both parties was very different. She had reduced by her arms Moose island, in the bay of Passamaquoddy, as well as the post at Columbia. She refused to restore Moose island, on the ground of the title which she set up to it as being included within the limits of Nova Scotia, and the respective titles of both parties were agreed to be referred to a Board of Commissioners. Now if, with respect to two possessions taken by her arms during the war, she agreed to restore one unconditionally, and insisted upon retaining the occupancy of the other as belonging to her, is not the inference irresistible that her present claim to that which was so restored did not then exist, but has been subsequently gotten up?

"It is true that the third article of the convention of 1818 recognizes that Great Britain then had claims on the Northwest Coast, but it neither defines nor settles them, nor specifies when they had their origin. The same article contains an express declaration that it is not to affect the claims of any other power. Now it having been shown that the title of Spain extended to the 60th degree of north latitude, that must have been one of those which were particularly in the contemplation of the parties to the above convention of 1818. And we have already seen that, subsequent to that period, the United States acquired from Spain all her territorial rights on the Northwest Coast north of the parallel of 42, as far as they extended, and consequently up to 60. As by the convention of 1818 the 49th parallel of north latitude has been agreed to be the line of boundary between the territories of the United States and Great Britain, east of the Stony mountains, there would seem to arise, from that stipulation, a strong consideration for the extension of the line along the same parallel, west of them, to the Pacific Ocean. In bringing themselves to consent to this boundary the Government of the United States feel that they are animated by a spirit of concession and compromise which, they persuade themselves, that of Great Britain cannot but recognize, and ought not to hesitate in reciprocating. You are then authorized to propose the annulment of the third article of the convention of 1818, and the extension of the line on the parallel of 49 from the eastern side of the Stony mountains, where it now terminates, to the Pacific Ocean, as the permanent boundary between the territories of the two Powers in that quarter. This is our ultimatum, and you may so announce it. We can consent to no other line more favorable to Great Britain. You are authorized further to agree that, if the above line shall pass any of the branches of the Columbia river which are navigable from where it intersects them to the ocean, British subjects shall not be disturbed in the right freely to navigate such branches and the Columbia itself to the ocean, in common with the citizens of the United States. That, in the meantime, until the line is actually traced and marked out, this right of navigation shall be so enjoyed in common; that the contracting parties will adopt measures in concert to have the line marked within the next ensuing term of fifteen years; and that if, upon the experiment being made, the branches of the Columbia are not navigable by boats from where the line passes them to the Columbia, the British right to navigate them shall cease. If the British plenipotentiaries should insist upon British subjects, who may have made any settlements or establishments south of 49, being allowed time for removal, you may agree to the term of five years for that purpose; making the stipulation reciprocal, so as to comprehend American settlements or establishments, if there be any, north of that parallel. And you will further propose, as a regulation which is deemed by the Government of the United States to be material in preventing collisions, that the citizens and subjects of the two parties shall, in trading with the natives and in the pursuit of game and fur, be restricted to the sides of the line, agreed upon, of their respective countries. It would be competent for each Government, after the fixation of the line, by its separate legislation, to exclude foreigners; but it is better that notice of such exclusion, to all persons concerned, should be at once promulgated in the body of the treaty itself.

"The third and fourth articles of the convention of the 20th day of October, 1818, negotiated by you and Mr. Rush, are limited, respectively, to a period of ten years from that date. As the term will now soon run out, it is necessary for the parties to consider whether those articles shall be allowed to expire, or be continued with or without modifications. The third article relates to the territories claimed by the contracting parties on the Northwest Coast of America, westward of the Stony mountains, and provides, among other things, that they shall be free and open, for the above mentioned term, to the vessels, citizens, and subjects of the two Powers. If you should be able, according to the instructions herein previously given, to agree with the British Government on a boundary between the territories of the two parties, that article may be rescinded, or left to expire by the lapse of time. If you should be unable to come to any such agreement, you may consent to that article remaining in force during another term of ten years. From a despatch just received from Mr. King, communicating a note from Mr. Canning, under date the 20th of April last, (copies of both are herewith,) the probability is strong that you will find no difficulty in arranging this question of boundary satisfactorily.

"The fourth article relates to the convention concluded at London on the 3d of July, 1815, and continues and extends it for the before mentioned term of ten years. You are authorized to agree to its further extension for another period of ten years; and, beyond the expiration of that time, until one party shall give to the other six calendar months' written notice of his desire to put an end to it, at the end of which time it shall altogether cease."

Mr. Canning to Mr. King.

FOREIGN OFFICE, April 20, 1826.

The undersigned, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has the honor to request Mr. Rufus King, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States, to have the goodness to inform the undersigned whether Mr. King is provided with instructions for the resumption of the negotiations of last year, with respect to a settlement of boundaries upon the Northwest Coast of America? The undersigned is particularly induced to make this inquiry by having received from Mr. Vaughan a copy of the communication, lately addressed by the President of the United States to the House of Representatives, of that part of Mr. Rush's correspondence of last year which relates to this important subject.

The undersigned has to add that the British plenipotentiaries, Mr. Huskisson and Mr. Addington, are perfectly prepared to enter into conferences with Mr. King thereupon; and either to renew the proposal brought forward by Mr. Huskisson and Mr. Stratford Canning in their conference of the 13th of July, 1824, and unanswered, or to bring forward another; or to discuss any new proposal, on the same subject, which may be suggested on the part of the plenipotentiary of the United States. The undersigned has the honor to renew to Mr. Rufus King the assurance of his high consideration.

GEORGE CANNING.

RUFUS KING, Esq., &c., &c., &c.

No. 5.

Mr. Clay to Mr. Gallatin.

[Extract.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, June 23, 1826.

"Mr. Crook's information adds but little to what was previously possessed. If the land on the Northwest Coast, between the mouth of the Columbia river and the parallel of 49, be bad, and, therefore, we should lose but little in relinquishing it, the same consideration will apply to the British. The President cannot consent to vary the line proposed in your instructions; and I think when you come to examine them in connexion with the late note transmitted by Mr. King from Mr. Canning you will not think it necessary."

Extracts of a letter, No. 6, from Mr. Clay, Secretary of State, to Mr. Gallatin, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Great Britain, dated LEXINGTON, August 9, 1826.

"Your letter, under date at New York on the 29th of June last, having been duly received at the Department of State, and submitted to the President, was subsequently transmitted to me at this place, and I now have the honor to address you agreeably to his directions.

"He is very desirous of an amicable settlement of all the points of difference between Great Britain and the United States on just principles. Such a settlement alone would be satisfactory to the people of the United States, or would command the concurrence of their Senate. In stating in your instructions the terms on which the President was willing that the several questions pending between the two Governments might be arranged, he yielded as much to a spirit of concession as he thought he could consistently with the interests of this country. He is especially not now prepared to authorize any stipulations involving a cession of territory belonging to any State in the Union, or the abandonment, express or implied, of the right to navigate the St. Lawrence, or the surrender of any territory south of latitude forty-nine on the Northwest Coast. Adhering to these restrictions, the President would, in other respects, be willing that you should exercise more latitude in the conclusion of a treaty which you believe would be acceptable to the people of our country, and would obtain the constitutional sanction. Desirable as it is to arrange all matters of difference between the two countries, it is much better that they should remain unadjusted than be settled on terms disadvantageous to the United States, and which would therefore be unsatisfactory to the people and to other Departments of the Government. With these observations, the motive of which your candor will enable you justly to appreciate, I will now proceed more particularly to notice the several subjects of which your letter treats in the order in which they are there stated.

"II. The President cannot consent that the boundary between the territories of the two Powers on the Northwest Coast should be south of forty-nine. The British Government has not been committed by a positive rejection of a line on the parallel of forty-nine; but if it had been, its pride may take refuge in the offer which, for the first time, you are to propose, of a right in common with us to the navigation of the Columbia river. There is no objection to an extension of the time to be allowed to British settlers to remove from south of forty-nine to a period of fifteen years if you should find that it would facilitate an arrangement."

Extract of a letter, No. 18, from Mr. Clay, Secretary of State, to Mr. Gallatin, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Great Britain, dated FEBRUARY 24, 1827.

"Your despatches from No. 26 to 48, inclusive, have been received, together with the accompanying documents, and have been all laid before the President. And I shall now, under his direction, communicate to you such instructions as appear to be called for by the state of the pending negotiations between the United States and Great Britain with which you are charged. In doing this I shall take up the several subjects which require notice in the order in which they have been considered in the conferences which you have had with the British plenipotentiaries, beginning with—

"1st. The northwestern boundary.

"As there seems to be no prospect of an agreement at this time upon a permanent boundary which shall separate the territories of the two Powers beyond the Stony mountains, and as no utility is perceived in prolonging the discussions which have arisen on that subject, I shall abstain from any particular notice of the written statement annexed by the British plenipotentiaries to the protocol of the sixth conferences of the claims and views of Great Britain relative to that country. New and extraordinary as those claims and views strike us, they will, nevertheless, receive all the consideration which is due to the high respect which is sincerely felt for the Government of Great Britain, and to the official and deliberate exhibition which has been made of them. They certainly have not yet produced any conviction in the mind of the President of the validity of the pretensions brought forward, nor raised any doubts of the strength and solidity of our own title. I repeat what has been already stated in your general instructions, that the offer of a boundary on the parallel of 49° was made in a spirit of liberal concession, and notwithstanding our belief that our title might be satisfactorily made out much further north. Supposing Great Britain to have any well-founded claim, if there be, as there are believed to be, no other Powers than the United States and Great Britain who can assert rights of territorial sovereignty between 42° and 54° 40′, there can be no equitable division of the intermediate space, but an equal partition. Such an equal partition would assign about the parallel of 49° as the common boundary. The President regrets that the British plenipotentiaries have thought proper to decline the proposal which you made of that line; and I am charged by him to direct you to communicate the expression of this regret, and to declare that the American Government does not hold itself bound hereafter, in consequence of any proposal which it has heretofore made, to agree to the line which has been so proposed and rejected, but will consider itself at liberty to contend for the full extent of our just claims; which declaration you will have recorded in the protocol of one of your conferences. Such a protest you have already made, and had recorded in the protocol of the third conference; but it will give more weight to it to have it stated that it has been done by the express direction of the President.

"As you have not been able to conclude any agreement fixing a permanent boundary, it is preferred that there should be a simple renewal of the third article in the convention of 1818, without any other alteration than that which you proposed, of the omission of the clause respecting the claims of other Powers, and on that modification you will not insist if it be objected to.

"The second article in the projet presented by the British plenipotentiaries is inadmissible. So far as its tendency would be to prevent the United States from exercising acts of exclusive sovereignty at the mouth of the Columbia, it would be contrary to their rights, as acknowledged both in the treaty of Ghent and by the surrender of that place, made by the British Government in consequence of that treaty. It is also objectionable because it does not define, but leaves open to disputation, the acts which might be deemed the exercise of an exclusive sovereignty. And it has been properly observed by you that, from the nature of our institutions, our rights in that quarter must be protected and our citizens secured in their lawful pursuits by some species of government different from that which it has been or may be the pleasure of the British Government to establish. The form of territorial Government is that which is most approved by our experience; but such a Government might be considered incompatible with the second article if it were agreed to. If there be a simple renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818, Great Britain will have abundant security in the good faith of the United States for the fulfilment of all its stipulations; and you will therefore resist the adoption of the second article in the British projet, if it should even render you unable to come to any agreement for the renewal of the provision in the convention of 1818.

"With respect to the assignment of certain portions of the territory to each Power over which they may respectively exercise acts of exclusive sovereignty, leaving an intermediate debatable space, it does not appear probable that such an arrangement as would be satisfactory to both parties can be made. If, for example, we were to agree that such exclusive sovereignty might be exerted by the United States over all the territory, from the mouth of the Columbia south to the 42d parallel, and by Great Britain over all the territory from 49° to 54° 40′, the intermediate space between the Columbia and 49° being common to both parties, a larger extent of territory would be assigned to Great Britain than to the United States; and in the end that which was thus held in common would probably be equally divided between the two parties as the only equitable mode of separating it. Such a division would place the common boundary line south of the parallel of 49°, and would give us less territory on the Pacific than if we were at once to agree to an equal division of the entire space between 42° and 54° 40′. If, which is not likely, Great Britain would consent to the exercise of exclusive sovereignty on the part of the United States over the whole space, from the mouth of Columbia south to the 42d°, leaving the residue, from the mouth of the Columbia to 54° 40′, in common, as is provided for in the third article of the convention of 1818, we should be willing to agree to such a stipulation.

"In respect to the duration of the renewed provision, the President prefers that it should be fixed for the same term of ten years, which is limited in the convention of 1818. But if the article in regard to this subject should not be thrown into the shape of a separate convention, but should be inserted in the same convention which regulates our commercial intercourse with the British European possessions, you are then authorized to agree that the whole convention shall continue in force after the expiration of the term of ten years, and until one party shall have given to the other six months' written notice of his desire to put an end to the convention."

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 17.] LONDON, October 30, 1826.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 6, dated the 5th of August last.

I beg leave to observe that, of the three general restrictions laid down by the President, it was only to the second, which relates to the territory west of the Stony mountains, that I had suggested a modification. It was not my intention, in case it had been approved, to have proposed it to the British Government. But it had appeared to me that it might be expected to come from them, as it was natural that they should wish to keep possession of the mouth of the river Caledonia, almost the whole course of which is north of the forty-ninth degree of latitude. And it had seemed to me at least questionable whether it was not more eligible to yield that point, in case an arrangement could not be concluded without it, rather than to agree, as I am instructed, * * * * to a renewal of the agreement contained in the convention of 1818, which will leave to Great Britain for ten years longer, and consolidate their actual possession of the whole or nearly the whole territory in dispute. The President having, on due consideration, decided that suggestion to be inadmissible, I will of course use my best endeavors to carry his intentions into effect. But I consider it as consistent with the spirit of my instructions to agree, if required, that the British should be allowed the navigation of the river Caledonia to the sea, on the same principle on which the right of navigating the river Columbia is to be admitted.

I had understood from the beginning that no abandonment, express or implied, must be made of the right to navigate the St. Lawrence; and all my observations have been directed to the terms on which it might be practicable to make a temporary arrangement, founded on mutual convenience, but without abandoning or impairing the right. But this difficult subject will demand a serious investigation, and I reserve it for a distinct despatch, as intimated in my last.

I not only acquiesce but entirely concur in the President's opinion, that no stipulation involving a cession of territory belonging to any State in the Union ought, or indeed, perhaps, can be made without the consent of the State. A compromise founded on that assent cannot be concluded now, since the States concerned in the northeastern boundary have not been consulted; and, under those circumstances, the instructions allow me all the latitude that, in all probability, can be wanted. My first object will be, as heretofore stated, to try to clear up the subject from the difficulties and obscurity in which the proceedings of the commission have involved it, to make it more intelligible to the umpire, which I am satisfied will be highly advantageous to us. The next will be to transfer the negotiation to Washington, for the double purpose of either agreeing to a joint statement or of attempting a compromise. It will only be in case this Government should refuse thus to transfer the negotiation, and should agree to negotiate here, that I will assent to this course; and, in that case, new instructions on the subject of a compromise will be necessary.

It is extremely improbable that this Government should agree with us, not on a compromise, but on the true construction of the treaty. Even if they were satisfied that ours is correct, the pretensions of New Brunswick, the importance of obtaining a boundary that will connect that province with Canada, and public opinion, would prevent them from acceding to it, and induce them to try the chance of the arbitration. It is, nevertheless, the ground which I must take to open the negotiation here, in order to be able to clear the ground and to reduce the discussion, before the umpire, to some distinct and intelligible questions. The great probability is that we will not agree; and then the question of compromise will suggest itself, and I will try to have it referred to Washington. But there are some real difficulties on the true construction of the treaty, which render it proper that I should state what is my view of the subject. In doing it I will not enter into the argument, but only give the result of my investigation.

There are three principal points which are controverted: 1. The boundary of Maine. 2. The designation of the northwesternmost head of the Connecticut river. 3. The northern boundary of Vermont and New York, from that river to the St. Lawrence.

I think that, strictly speaking, the northwesternmost head of Connecticut river is that source of the said river from which a line extending northeast on one hand and southwest on the other, (that is to say, a line perpendicular to the northwest course,) shall not cross any branch or stream whatever that empties into the said river. But I am not prepared to say that there may not be collateral arguments, which would prove that some other source and branch of the river might be established consistent with the treaty. This, however, which is the only question that affects New Hampshire, and affects only that State, is the least important of the three, and might probably be arranged if the two Governments could agree on the two other points.

The boundary of Maine depends principally, if not altogether, on the spot which shall be considered as the northwest corner of Nova Scotia: in other words, on the place at which the line, running directly north from the source of the river St. Croix, must stop, and the line thence extend along the dividing highlands to the source of Connecticut river. Supposing all the other arguments of the British Commissioner to be abandoned, and our construction of the treaty, that the river St. John's empties into the Atlantic Ocean, to be adopted, there still remains a difficulty, arising from a want of knowledge of the geography of the country when the treaty of 1783 was concluded. It was not then known that the headwaters of the rivers Ristigouche and Matapediac, which empty into the Bay des Chaleurs, or into some other inlet of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, penetrated so far inland, or westward, as that the abovementioned line, running north from the source of the river St. Croix, must cross those headwaters. This, indeed, might have been suspected, from a narrow inspection of Mitchell's map, which is, however, confused in that respect. But an unfortunate expression was substituted, in the article drawn by the old Congress and adopted in the treaty, to the designation theretofore used in the public acts of the British Government. This was the insertion of the words "Atlantic Ocean," instead of the word "sea." And now, on account of the aforesaid north line crossing the headwaters of rivers emptying into the Gulf St. Lawrence, not a single point can be found on the said line that, according to the words of the treaty, is on the highlands (or, as we are used to express it in America, on the dividing ridge) which divide the rivers which fall into the Atlantic Ocean from those which fall into the river St. Lawrence. For, rejecting altogether the British pretension of stopping at Mars Hill, south of the St. John's, and adopting our own construction that the river St. John's falls into the Atlantic Ocean, the line, after crossing the said river, reaches, at the distance of about one hundred miles north from the source of the St. Croix, the highland or ridge which divides the waters which fall into the Atlantic Ocean from those which fall into the Gulf St. Lawrence; and the said line, after crossing the headwaters of the last mentioned river or rivers, reaches, at the distance of about one hundred and forty-five miles north from the source of the St. Croix, the highland or ridge, (which we claim as that designated by the treaty,) and which divides the waters which fall into the Gulf St. Lawrence from those which fall into the river St. Lawrence. The Gulf St. Lawrence, not having been mentioned in the treaty, must, (unless the designation of this boundary by the treaty be considered as a nullity,) and may almost equally, be construed as meaning either the river St. Lawrence or the Atlantic Ocean. In the first case, the north line must stop at about one hundred miles from the source of the St. Croix; in the other case, which I think the most correct construction, the north line would extend as far as we claim—that is to say, about forty-five miles further north. In both cases we keep all the territory watered by the branches of the St. John's which lies west of the north line. The only difference between those two constructions consists in that tract of land of about 300,000 acres lying west of the north line, which is drained by waters emptying into the Gulf St. Lawrence. Both constructions are admissible and consistent with the spirit of the treaty of 1783, the letter of which it is impossible to fulfil. An agreement, by which the north line would stop at one hundred miles from the source of the St. Croix, and the line would then run along the highlands which divide the waters emptying into the St. John's river and other rivers that fall into the Atlantic Ocean from the waters of the rivers which fall either into the Gulf of St. Lawrence or into the river St. Lawrence, would not only be advantageous, but, being in conformity with the treaty of 1783, may be concluded without consulting any State, since whatever right Massachusetts or Maine may have to that territory is derived from the treaty.

The forty-fifth degree of latitude, which is the boundary line from the river Connecticut to the river St. Lawrence, was considered as established by ancient surveys. But I have no doubt that that made jointly by the surveyors under the late commission must, in conformity with the treaty of Ghent, be confirmed. If we complain of its accuracy, and obtain a resurvey, we will only gain some delay; since, considering the skill of the persons employed, the coincidence of their observations, and the perfection of the instruments used, it is hardly possible that an error of more than one, and seems impossible that one of more than four seconds should have been made, which, in the last case, would make a difference of little more than four hundred feet. The claim derived from an undisputed possession of thirty-four years cannot, with propriety, be urged, since the treaty of Ghent, with a full knowledge of that possession, and without regard for it, provides expressly for a revision of that boundary; besides which, the principle of possession, if admitted, would operate against us to an indefinite extent, as relates to the boundary of Maine. Mr. Hassler's suggestion of claiming the geocentric instead of the observed latitude is altogether untenable. This correction is, indeed, indispensable in relation to certain astronomical observations, and has of late years been introduced even in the English Nautical Almanac. But it never has been, and, without a total subversion of the whole system of received geography, cannot be, admitted in pure geographical questions. There is not a single map or table of latitudes in which the parallels of latitude are not laid down according to the observed and not to the geocentric latitude. This last has never been resorted or heretofore been appealed to in the execution of any treaty; and the parallel of thirty-one degrees of latitude, which, before the acquisition of Louisiana and Florida, was the boundary line between the United States and the Spanish provinces, was actually surveyed and ascertained, by the mutual consent of both parties, and without any suggestion to the contrary, in conformity with the observed latitude.

You are at the same time aware that the forty-fifth parallel of latitude, as thus ascertained by the two surveyors under the late joint commission, is extremely disadvantageous to the United States, since this parallel has thereby been found to be about two miles south of the ancient line, leaving to Great Britain Rouse's Point, which commands the entrance of Lake Champlain, and the fortress which has been erected there at a considerable expense by the United States. This circumstance is, therefore, a strong, perhaps the strongest, argument in favor of an attempt to arrange the whole controversy by compromise. The British Government is as well aware as that of the United States of the weakness of the British claim as relates to the boundary of Maine, and of the hold the newly-discovered situation of the forty-fifth parallel of latitude gives them against us. And I have no doubt that, when alluding, in the negotiation of the year 1824, to a liberal proposal they were disposed to make, the British Commissioners intended to offer to confirm the ancient boundary, in whole or in part, from the river Connecticut to the river St. Lawrence, as a part of the compensation to be made to the United States for agreeing to such boundary of Maine as would answer the views of Great Britain. But what thus constitutes one of the strongest inducements for a compromise is also one of the greatest obstacles to it. However advantageous an arrangement on that basis might be deemed to the United States, the State of Maine will, undoubtedly, object to a cession of their territory for the benefit either of other States or of the Union at large. Yet it seems necessary that, when that State is consulted on the propriety of a compromise, this important consideration should be kept in view, and not be concealed from them. It is in that view of the subject that it may become proper to remind the State that they can produce no charter, no grant prior to the treaty of 1783, of the territory east of Kennebec river and north of forty-five degrees of latitude; at least, that no such charter or grant has come within the knowledge of the Government of the United States; that any claim the States of Massachusetts or Maine may have on that territory is derived from that treaty; that, in fact, that territory, if not previously included within the boundaries of the State of Massachusetts, was an acquisition made by that treaty, and became thereby, not the property and part of that State, but the joint property and territory of the United States. I am aware that this fact, at least I think it to be an incontestable fact, must be resorted to with caution, and I certainly never will advert to it here, since a plausible though only specious argument might be drawn from it against us in our controversy on the main question with Great Britain.

Permit me to add an observation on the subject of compromise. Agents had been appointed by the States of Massachusetts and Maine, whose operations have since been suspended at the request of the General Government, for purposes connected with the rights of sovereignty and soil of these States to the disputed territory. It would seem, from certain proceedings of the Legislature of New Brunswick, that some of those agents, besides performing their duties, suggested that an amicable arrangement of the boundary might take place by making the river St. John's the line of division. This suggestion appears to me incautious, and I think that the States ought to be put on their guard on that subject. It must not be forgotten that the chance of an arrangement by compromise is extremely uncertain, and the necessity of resorting to the arbitration very probable. An umpire, whether he be a King or a farmer, rarely decides on strict principles of law: he has always a bias to try if possible to split the difference, and, with that bias, he is very apt to consider any previous proposal from either party as a concession that his title was defective, and as justifying a decision on his part that will not displease too much either party, instead of one founded on a strict investigation of the title. It seems, indeed, that in any negotiation which may take place for a compromise, any proposition on our part inconsistent with our construction of the treaty, and which would not secure to us all the waters that empty into the St. John's west of the line running north from the source of the St. Croix, would be dangerous. If such proposal, deemed on the whole better than to run the chance of an arbitration, comes from Great Britain, it may then, but, I think, not till then, be taken into consideration.

I have, in my last despatch, communicated all that has as yet occurred to me in relation to the colonial intercourse. Whether the subjects embraced by the proposals of the British Commissioners to Mr. Rush at their twenty-second conference will be taken into consideration at this time depends on the course the negotiation may take. I would feel inclined to make them the subject of a distinct convention, not on account of the reluctance I naturally feel to be the instrument of their being agreed to without other objects being provided for at the same time, but because, whilst I allow that you are a much better judge than I can be of the present state of public opinion, I still feel an apprehension that, if included in a convention for other important objects, they might endanger the whole, and perhaps prevent a ratification.

I omitted to say in the first part of this letter that there was no difficulty, so far as argument was concerned, in supporting the claim of the United States against Great Britain to the whole territory west of the Stony mountains which lies south of the forty-ninth degree of latitude. But it was, I believe, unfortunate to have made the arrangement with Russia before we had concluded one with Great Britain.

In speaking of the several branches of Connecticut river which might be considered as embraced by the designation made in the treaty, I alluded to the inferences which might be drawn from the magnitude or acknowledged name of any particular branch, or from the fact of its having been the acknowledged boundary between the States of Vermont and New Hampshire. The observations I made respecting the want of title on the part of Massachusetts to the disputed territory are equally applicable to New Hampshire, whose charter did not extend north of the forty-fifth degree of latitude.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 20.] LONDON, November 7, 1826.

SIR: I alluded in my letter of the 30th ultimo to the defective title of the State of Maine to a portion of their territory. I wrote from recollection, and find that I was under a mistake. The part of the State to which my observation applied is the northern part of the territory west of the Kennebec river, which is not disputed by Great Britain, and not that part which lies east of the Kennebec, and which embraces the whole territory in controversy with Great Britain. For particulars I beg leave to refer to the grant of the ancient Maine territory to Gorges, which was the foundation of the claim of Massachusetts to it, and to the charter of 1691 of Massachusetts, by which that Maine territory (viz: west of Kennebec) is annexed to that then province, as well as the territory between said Maine and Nova Scotia (viz: between Kennebec and the river St. Croix) and Nova Scotia itself. The act by which this last province was finally erected into a distinct regal government may affect the general question if it fixes any boundaries. It must bear date some time after the treaty of Utrecht; but I have not been able to procure it.

My observation was correct as related to the State of New Hampshire. No part of the territory controverted in that quarter with Great Britain, and the question respecting which depends on the ascertainment of the northwest source of the river Connecticut, is within the chartered boundaries of that State, inasmuch as it lies north of the 45th degree of latitude.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 26.] LONDON, November 16, 1826.

SIR: The pending negotiation, and the researches they render necessary, do not permit me to communicate more than a brief account of what it seems most important that you should know without delay.

The negotiations on the subject of the convention signed on the 13th instant had been conducted in presence of Mr. Canning, and rather with him than with the British plenipotentiaries. Yesterday, 15th, the first regular conference was held with these alone, when we agreed to take up, in the first place, the subject of the territorial claims west of the Stony mountains. The British plenipotentiaries stated that the last proposal having come from Great Britain, and being one of those which, at the close of the negotiation, (of 1824,) had been referred to Washington, they now expected our answer to that proposal, and that, if not acceded to, I would make any new one I might be authorized to offer. I answered that, without reference to any point of form, I was prepared to say that my Government could not agree to the boundary line proposed by Great Britain, but that, whilst insisting on the 49th parallel of latitude, I was authorized to modify Mr. Rush's proposal by the addition of a condition calculated to remove the most important objection of Great Britain to the line we had proposed; and I accordingly offered the article, of which a copy is enclosed, and which has been taken for consideration till our next meeting. This, on account of the opening of Parliament, has been appointed for the 22d instant.

I had but little to add to the arguments used by Mr. Rush in support of the right of the United States to the territory in question. Mr. Baylies' report supplied me with additional arguments in opposition to the pretended discoveries of Ad. Drake north of 40° or 42° of north latitude. I pointed out the discovery of Gray's harbor, now improperly called "Whitby's," north of the Columbia river, by Captain Gray; referred to the line established in pursuance of the treaty of Utrecht, and made a short recapitulation of the whole. But what it imports you most to know is the ground on which, as far as I could understand it, Great Britain founds her pretensions.

As relates to discoveries, they refer to Meares and Dixon's voyages to prove that the prior right, as respects the Straits of Fuca or Gulf of Georgia, is incontestably theirs, several English vessels having entered them before Captain Gray did; and they also attempt to lessen his discoveries of Gray's harbor and of the mouth of Columbia river, by saying that Captain Meares had previously discovered and named Cape Shoalwater, south of Gray's harbor, Cape Disappointment, the northern entrance of Columbia river, and Deception bay, which was in fact just outside of the said entrance. I state the facts as the British plenipotentiaries gave them, not having had time to verify them. The inference which I understood them to draw was, that, so far as the United States and British discoveries could constitute a title, we could establish none along the seacoast north of the mouth of the Columbia, the whole coast having, without reference to Drake's or Cook's voyages, been explored by British navigators from that river, northwardly prior to the date of any American discovery.

But the general ground assumed by the British plenipotentiaries is, that the mere discovery, without occupancy, constitutes no title. They insist that the United States have not any right to the sovereignty of any part of the country; and I understood that they disclaimed any on the part of Great Britain, although, from the general tenor of their argument, I should infer that they intend ultimately to claim such right of sovereignty with respect to the settlements of their subjects made prior to the convention of 1818.

The whole of this doctrine, which excludes titles derived from prior discovery and substitutes occupancy, rests on the Nootka convention, of the 28th October, 1790, between Spain and Great Britain. By the third article of that instrument it was agreed "that the respective subjects of the two parties should not be disturbed or molested, either in navigation or carrying on their fisheries in the Pacific Ocean or in the South Seas, or in landing on the coasts of those seas, in places not already occupied, for the purpose of carrying on their commerce with the natives of the country, or of making settlements there." This agreement is made subject to certain restrictions and provisions, the only one of which applicable to the present discussion is that "as well in the places which are to be restored to the British subjects (Nootka sound) as in all other parts of the northwestern coasts of North America, or of the islands adjacent, situate to the north of the parts of the said coast already occupied by Spain, wherever the subjects of either of the two Powers shall have made settlements since the month of April, 1789, or shall hereafter make any, the subjects of the other shall have free access, and shall carry on their trade without any disturbance or molestation." From these provisions the British plenipotentiaries draw the following inferences:

1. The United States cannot claim, under their treaty with Spain, any greater right than Spain then had; and as the Nootka convention has no reference to the discoveries of either party, and is unlimited in its duration, they cannot resort to any Spanish discovery in support of their presumed title to any part of the country.

2. As, at the time of concluding the Nootka convention, Louisiana did belong to Spain, and she made no exception to the provisions of that convention on account of any presumed boundaries of that province having been established by former treaties with Great Britain or of right extending to the Pacific, the United States cannot claim any territory on that ocean as owners of Louisiana, either as a natural extension of its boundaries westwardly, or as implied from the designation of the boundary line (the forty-ninth parallel of latitude) settled, between Canada and Louisiana on the one part, and the British possessions of Hudson's bay on the other part, by the Commissioners appointed in pursuance of the treaty of Utrecht.

3. This convention (the Nootka) must be considered generally as having become an international law, at least for the Pacific; superseded the claims ascribed to mere prior discovery; set aside the exclusive pretensions of Spain to the northwest part of the American Continent, and opened it to the commerce and settlements of all countries whatever, including the United States.

4. Actual occupancy and regard to mutual convenience are, therefore, the only bases of any arrangement for the establishment of a boundary, for the partition, between the only Powers having settlements or laying claims thereto, of a country which was heretofore held in common.

As neither Meares' discoveries nor the Nootka convention had been mentioned in the negotiation of 1815, and as that convention appeared to have been only alluded to in that of 1818, and as, in this last, the objection to the right derived from discoveries was not general, but applied only to the circumstance of those of the United States having been made by private vessels, much of the argument was new to me. From some expressions in your instructions, I am led to infer that, at all events, it is for the first time brought forth in so distinct a shape, and have thought it important to lay it before you. It is my intention to invite the British plenipotentiaries to commit it to writing, at least in an informal manner. The grounds which I took in answer, and on which I intend to enlarge at the next conference, will be communicated hereafter. There are, indeed, several facts which must be previously investigated.

Mr. Huskisson, amongst the reasons for taking up that subject first, mentioned that it had for several sessions occupied the attention of Congress, and that it was not possible to foresee the effect which the measures they might adopt would have on the question and on the friendly relations of the two countries. In a subsequent part of the conversation he said that the joint occupancy would cease in 1828 unless renewed; and that the removal by the United States of any settlement made by British subjects would be considered as an act of aggression. This having already been intimated in the course of the negotiation of 1824, I asked whether he would consider as an aggression the removal of such British subjects from Astoria or such other of our settlements as were directed to be restored by the treaty of Ghent. To which it was answered, that those were considered as in our possession; and Mr. Addington added that the British had removed from Astoria to the opposite side of the river, where I understood they had now a fort called "Vancouver."

The renewal of the convention of 1818 was mentioned as the other subject which required immediate consideration. I said that I preferred taking up the subject of boundaries first, having applied to my Government for new instructions on the renewal of the convention. I was, indeed, authorized to treat on that subject, as on former occasions, although that of the colonial intercourse should not be included. But the determination of the British Government, as communicated by Mr. Canning, not to negotiate on that subject, together with the intimation that our exclusion from the British colonies might be permanent, would perhaps be considered by the Government of the United States as giving a new aspect to the question; and I had thought it proper to make the inquiry. There was also an advantage in taking up the question of the western boundary first. The result of our negotiation on that point might have an effect on either party, as related to the question, Whether the article of the convention which provided for a joint occupancy of the western territory should be continued, and on what terms?

We had some general conversation on the northeastern boundary. The difficulty of making a joint statement was alluded to: and it was suggested that it might be better that each party should make a brief statement of the case, both which, together, might with advantage be substituted to the eight volumes of arguments, reports, and proceedings of the late commission. I mentioned that the statement, joint or separate, must by me be submitted to my Government before I could agree that it should be considered as final. The reasons I assigned appeared conclusive; and this course will, I think, be agreed to. I must here observe that it is only the extreme length of the reports which, with reference to the umpire, appears inconvenient. In other respects they are very valuable; contain, I believe, all the facts and arguments that can be resorted to; and some of them are drawn with great ability. But I apprehend much difficulty from the want of surveys approved as correct by both parties. It seems to me that, without any commitment as to the inferences that might be drawn from them, the commission might have ordered and approved those which were necessary to establish facts.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY,
Secretary of State, Washington.

[With Mr. Gallatin's No. 26.]

ARTICLE A.—It is agreed that the boundary line between the territories claimed by the United States and those claimed by his Britannic Majesty west of the Stony mountains shall be drawn due west from the said mountains, where the boundary line agreed on by the second article of the convention of London of the 20th October, 1818, terminates, along the forty-ninth parallel of north latitude, to the Pacific Ocean. If the said line shall cross the great northwesternmost branch of the Columbia river, marked in the map as McGillivray's river, or any of the other branches of the Columbia river, at a place or places from which the said McGillivray's river, or any such other branch of the Columbia river, is navigable to the main last mentioned river; the navigation of the said McGillivray's river, and of any such other branch or branches to the Columbia river, and of the Columbia itself to the ocean, shall be perpetually free to the subjects of Great Britain, in common with the citizens of the United States. The high contracting parties shall adopt measures, in concert, to have the said boundary line ascertained within fifteen years from the date of the signature of this convention, and the right of navigation shall in the meantime be enjoyed; but if it shall be found that neither the said McGillivray's river nor any of the other branches of the Columbia river is navigable by boats from where the boundary line crosses them to the main Columbia river, the navigation of the said main river and of its branches within the limits of the United States shall cease to be free to the subjects of Great Britain. It is further specially agreed that neither of the high contracting parties, their respective citizens or subjects, shall henceforward form any settlements within the limits assigned by the boundary line aforesaid to the other; it being, at the same time, understood that any such settlement already formed by the citizens or subjects of either party within the limits of the other shall continue to be occupied and enjoyed at the pleasure of the present occupants without let or hindrance of any kind until the expiration of the term of ten years from the date hereof and no longer. The provisions of the third article of the convention of London of the 20th of October, 1818, shall, in every other respect, continue in force for the said term of ten years; at the end of which term the citizens and subjects of the two parties shall, in trading with the natives and in the pursuit of game and fur, be restricted to the side of the boundary line of their respective countries.

A true copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE,
Secretary of Legation.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 29.] LONDON, November 25, 1826.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose copy of the protocol of the first conference with the British plenipotentiaries. They considered the refusal of Mr. Rush, at the 20th conference of 1824, to accede to their verbal proposal of making the Columbia river the boundary as owing to his not being authorized by his instructions to agree to it, and the article which they had, at the 23d conference, given in writing as one of the subjects referred to Washington according to the 25th conference. As I was ready both to reject their article and to offer the new one, it appeared of no importance in what form this was done. Before this article A was attached to the protocol, I struck out the word northwesternmost, as descriptive of McGillivray's river, as it appeared as inapplicable as that of northeasternmost, used in the article P, proposed in 1824 by the British plenipotentiaries. This alteration must therefore be made in the copy of the article already forwarded.

At our second conference of the 22d instant the British plenipotentiaries said that they had referred to their Government the article offered by me, and that they were not yet prepared to give an answer. A general, desultory conversation ensued on the subject, in the course of which nearly all the grounds assumed and objections raised on both sides were brought forward, but not thoroughly discussed. I have already given the outlines of the argument of the British plenipotentiaries, and will now state mine.

1. The United States claimed a natural extension of their territory to the Pacific Ocean, on the ground of contiguity and population, which gave them a better right to the adjacent unoccupied land than could be set up by any other nation. This was strengthened by the doctrine admitted to its fullest extent by Great Britain, as appeared by all her charters, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, to colonies established then only on the borders of the Atlantic. How much more natural and stronger the claim, when made by a nation whose population extended to the central parts of the continent, and whose dominions were by all acknowledged to extend to the Stony mountains. If the principle assumed by Great Britain from 1580 to 1732, as related to Atlantic colonies, was correct, she could not deny its application to the United States, now owners of Louisiana. The boundary line agreed on by the Commissioners appointed in pursuance of the treaty of Utrecht, (the 49th parallel of latitude,) though falling short of what might be claimed by the United States on other grounds, was offered by them, and must at all events be binding on Great Britain. That line was indefinite; it had already been confirmed to the Stony mountains; there was no reason why it should not be continued as far as the claims of both parties extended. In point of fact, the occupancy, on which Great Britain principally relied, was solely owing to that westwardly extension of their trading settlements of Hudson's bay and its waters.

2. In right of their own discoveries, viz: the mouth of Columbia river by Captain Gray, and the complete exploration of the river, from its most westerly sources to its mouth, before any of its branches had been explored by the British, the United States had a right to claim against Great Britain and every other nation the whole territory drained by that river and its various branches, together with a certain portion of the coast north and south of the mouth of the river. In this also we were supported by the established usage amongst nations, and as adopted by Great Britain in various instances, (and amongst other, in her charter to the Hudson Bay Company, which charter extends to all the territory watered by the rivers emptying into the bay.)

3. By virtue of their treaty with Spain, the United States claimed all which Spain might have lawfully claimed north of 42° of latitude, either as derived from Spanish discoveries or by virtue of rights of sovereignty acknowledged by other nations, and by Great Britain particularly. On the last subject I did not dwell, having not yet sufficiently investigated the articles of the treaty of Utrecht, which may affect that question. As to discoveries, I gave to the British plenipotentiaries a copy of the same extract, from the official Spanish account published in 1802, which I had transmitted from Paris to the Department of State in the despatch No. 235, dated September 26, 1821, [1822.] That Spanish work, which I could then only borrow, I have now found here and purchased.

It was not merely, I said, by examining each of these grounds separately that the claim of the United States could be justly appreciated. To each of them, taken by itself, objections might be made tending to show that it did not constitute a complete right of sovereignty. Considered together, and supporting each other as they did, they appeared to us to establish our claim on the most solid foundation. But our never having refused to agree to a line of demarcation with Great Britain, was a sufficient proof that we admitted that she had claims that deserved and to which we paid due consideration. It was on that account that the United States had reduced the extent of their own to the boundary line they had offered, and had added to it the proposal of allowing to British subjects the free navigation of the Columbia river. Claiming, themselves, by right of discovery and settlement, they allowed what was due to Great Britain on the same account, and all that she could justly claim under the Nootka convention, according to its true construction. But they could not admit her pretensions to the extent now set up, or as impairing their claim within the boundary (at least) offered by them.

In the first place, the Nootka convention, on which so much reliance was put, was a compact only between Spain and Great Britain. Whatever construction was given to that instrument, it could affect the United States so far only as they claimed under the Spanish title. Their claim, in their own right, and as derived from their own discoveries and subsequent settlement, could not, in the slightest degree, be affected by that compact.

But what was the true intent and meaning of the Nootka convention? Though not limited in its duration by any express stipulation, it was necessarily so from its nature. Though the settlements which might be made by either party were not expressly qualified or restricted, it was evident that the sole object of the convention was commerce, and commerce with the natives; and that it was for that, and for that object alone, that the country was left open to the subjects of the two contracting Powers. That the object of the convention was not to settle the territorial claims of the parties; that it had no connexion with an ultimate partition of the country, or with its colonization for permanent purposes, was evident from the provisions of that instrument. It permitted promiscuous and intermixed settlements everywhere on the coast to the subjects of both parties, and it even made every such settlement made by either party common to the other. This clearly excluded any possibility of distinct jurisdiction, territorial rights, or sovereignty. In all these respects the convention left the parties where it found them, and in possession of all such rights, either of discovery or others, as might affect those questions, whenever that of permanent and separate possession and sovereignty came to be discussed and finally settled by the contracting Powers.

Supposing, even, for the sake of argument, that the convention was susceptible of the construction now put on it by Great Britain: was it now any longer in force? The war between her and Spain, which had been terminated by the treaty of 1809, had intervened. The treaties of commerce between the two countries had been renewed by the treaty of July, 1814. So far as the Nootka convention was of a commercial nature, and the United States considered it as exclusively of that character, it was still in force; but if its stipulations were, as contended for by Great Britain, of a different nature, the question would arise whether they were such as to be, according to the doctrine held by her on that subject, still binding, or whether they had been abrogated by the war.

To this exposition of the Nootka convention the British plenipotentiaries did not agree. They considered its principles and provisions as permanent, and not abrogated by war; as only declaratory of what was already previously the natural law; as having established this, and made it, in an incontrovertible manner, the international law on that subject. Those vague claims of ancient discoveries and of distant settlements, on which Spain had founded hers, to the exclusive sovereignty of the whole western coast of America, had been set at rest by that convention. In order to resist that claim, Great Britain had, in 1790, been willing to run the risk of a war. Not for her benefit alone, but for that of all nations, she had contended for and established that principle of natural law by which vacant land belongs to the first occupant. Under this she did not claim exclusive rights of sovereignty; she only denied ours. In making a final arrangement with the United States, she considered the whole country as still open equally to both parties, and to be divided as such and on that principle. Of this we had no right to complain, since she might plead claims derived from occupancy or discoveries to a much greater extent than ourselves.

I observed that this argument was less founded on the positive stipulations of the Nootka convention than on a recurrence to antecedent presumed principles of natural law. But the answer was the same in either case. As an abstract principle, that of first occupancy, being the foundation of property and sovereignty between individuals and nations, respectively, might be admitted; but it was not sufficient alone to preserve peace amongst them. The impossibility of reconciling the general right of promiscuous and intermixed settlements by different nations with any correct notion of tranquil possession and distinct jurisdiction had already been mentioned. It was on that account, in order to prevent otherwise unavoidable collisions, for the purpose of assigning to each nation a distinct portion of vacant territory, that the right of prior discovery; that of contiguity to territory already occupied; that of extending the claim of a nation possessing the mouth of a river to the whole of its waters, if not previously occupied by others, had been recognized by nations in general, and enforced by Great Britain herself. As the arguments brought forward by each party on this subject were unsatisfactory to the other, we may be considered as at issue on that question.

I observed, as related to the settlements of the British in that quarter: 1st. That those made subsequent to the convention of 1818 added nothing to the claims of the British, the rights of both parties having been expressly reserved by that convention, which allowed of a joint occupancy. 2d. That none certainly existed on the Columbia, even so late as at the time when that river was explored by Lewis and Clark, and that there were none to our knowledge south of the 49th degree of latitude when our settlement of Astoria was commenced. 3d. That those British settlements were only factories for commercial purposes, which gave no more permanent territorial rights than similar establishments made in a civilized country. No notice has, as yet, been taken of that observation. Some allusion was made to Indian purchases, on which I do not think that any reliance is placed.

The dates and nature of the respective discoveries south of the 49th degree underwent some discussion. In reply to the attempt made to lessen the merit of Captain Gray's discovery of the Columbia river,

I said that the fact of the coast extending from 42° to 50° being once known, (as it had been ascertained by Cook and several Spanish navigators, Perez, Maurelle, Martinez, Quadra, &c.,) the sole object of discovery for subsequent navigators was the entrance of straits, or of a large river communicating with the interior of the country. It was what Meares sought and what he failed in, as had been the case with Maurelle and other of his predecessors, and as was also the case with Vancouver, who had, in his journal, recorded the fact. Meares had given names indicative of his total failure—Cape Disappointment and Deception bay. Under date of April 28, 1792, Vancouver states that from 42° to 48° there was no large river; nothing but small brooks. On the next day he met Captain Gray, of the Columbia, who informed him that he had discovered the mouth of a large river, into which the winds and currents had prevented him to enter. Persevering in his effort, Gray returns southwardly, and, on the 11th May following, enters the river, and ascends it about 25 miles. On his return he met again Vancouver at Nootka, and, with that information, he (Vancouver) sent one of his lieutenants to survey the river. This duty was performed in October following by that officer, who ascended the river about 20 miles higher up than Gray. It was impossible to deny, with those facts, that the discovery was Gray's, and exclusively his own. The only other harbor on that coast south of Fuca's straits was also discovered by Gray, and bears his name on Vancouver's map, though since changed into Whitby's by subsequent English map-makers, whom our own have copied with great servility. And here permit me to observe that I cannot see the policy of substituting the fabulous name of Oregon to that of Columbia, which was that of Gray's ship, and perpetuates his discovery.

The next most important discovery, and most intimately connected with the present discovery, is that of the Straits of Fuca. We cannot draw any argument in our favor from the supposed ancient discovery (in 1592) by a man of that name, said to have been in the Spanish service. The whole story rests on the evidence of an Englishman named Locke, who is said to have met at Venice that Fuca, a Greek, from Cephalonia, who gave him verbally that relation, which has been printed in ancient English collections, (Purchas, &c.) Not only the greater part of that relation is certainly fabulous, for it states that in thirty days he reached, by sea, Hudson's bay, but the Spanish official account disclaims any knowledge, either of Fuca or of any such voyage, although it gives a short abstract of other voyages made in 1595 and 1603 by Vizcairo, who did not reach further than Cape Mendocino, and about 43° of north latitude. The facts, well ascertained, are as followeth:

In 1778 Captain Cook discovered Cape Flattery, the southern entrance of the straits, which he did not perceive.

In 1787 Captain Barclay, of the Imperial Eagle, discovered Barclay's sound, now called Nitinat, near the northern entrance of the straits, and the straits themselves, into which he sent his boat, which ascended them several miles.

In August, 1788, Captain Duncan, in the British ship Princess Royal, entered the straits, and traded at the village of Classet, on the southern shore, and within two miles of the entrance.

In July of the same year Captain Meares, in the Felice, anchored, as Barclay, in Barclay's sound, and, like him, sent his boat in the straits, which she ascended about thirty miles, (not leagues, as he says.)

In the same year, date unknown, but, it is said, subsequent to Meares, the same Captain Gray, then commanding the Washington, entered the straits with his vessel, and penetrated fifty miles up. He went in and traded with the natives several times afterwards. It must be observed that, excepting the mouth of the Columbia river, we know nothing of Gray's discoveries but through British accounts. By these it appears that he had also made some between the 54th and 56th degrees of north latitude.

In June, 1790, Captain Quimper, of the Spanish Navy, explored the straits as far as Point Quadra, (Vancouver's port of discovery.)

In May, June, and July, 1791, Captain Eliza, of the Spanish packet San Carlos, explored the straits as far as the channel of San Rosario, between the 49th and 50th degrees of north latitude.

In May, 1792, Vancouver entered the straits and completed the exploration, partly in company with the Spanish vessels Sutil and Mexicano, with whom he re-entered the ocean by the northern entrance of the straits, and from whom he learnt, with mortification, that one-half had already been explored the preceding years by Quimper and Eliza.

You will perceive that all this makes a complex case. To the first discovery made by Barclay I have objected that it was not properly an English one, as, in order to avoid the monopoly of the South Sea Company, his ship, though English property, was fitted at Ostend, and must, it is presumed, have sailed under the Austrian flag.

There was, in the course of the conversation, more susceptibility shown by the British plenipotentiaries than was called for by my observations. That the United States had no right to dispossess a single British subject, or in any way to exercise jurisdiction in any part of the territory in question, was again repeated, saying, however, that they claimed no such right on their side. I said that I thought it fair to state that, although the United States would avoid any act tending to produce collision, yet, as, from local position, the British traders were daily making new settlements, my Government must also take possession, and that they could not do it otherwise than by establishing military posts. This did not seem to me to appear objectionable; at least, no objection was made to it. On the subject of jurisdiction we must, if we do not agree on a boundary line, come to some understanding.

The latter part of our conversation was of a more conciliatory nature. Mr. Huskisson said that it would be lamentable that, in this age, two such nations as the United States and Great Britain should be drawn to a rupture on such a subject as the uncultivated wilds of the Northwest Coast. But the honor and dignity of both countries must be respected, and the mutual convenience of both parties should also be consulted. He then objected to the straight line which we proposed, as having no regard to such convenience, and observed particularly that its cutting off the southern portion of Quadra and Vancouver's island, (that on which Nootka sound is situated,) was quite inadmissible. I told him that, taking only convenience into consideration, their proposal was far more objectionable. The survey of the Columbia river, which was on the table, had the soundings marked, from which it appeared that, with the exception of a small harbor of very little depth, the channel was, for fifteen or twenty miles, exclusively close to the northern shore, so as to give to the British the whole command of the entrance and navigation of the river, if this had been made the boundary. I added that, from the forty-second parallel of latitude to Fuca's straits, there was not a single port of any consequence but the mouth of Columbia river, and that, on account of the breakers and bar, was of difficult access, and fitted only for commercial purposes. By allowing the free navigation of the river to the British, we gave them all the advantages attached to that port. On the other hand, from Fuca's straits, inclusively, to the Russian boundary line, the coast abounded with ports of any depth, and fitted for naval stations. To agree to a line that would leave all of these to them, would be giving them the exclusive naval command of the coast. It was impossible that we would agree to this, and we could have a share in that respect only by a boundary line that would give us a portion of the straits.

Writing this letter in great haste, and not having time to correct, I may not have stated the arguments as clearly and forcibly as might have been done. The British plenipotentiaries insisted that, according to the law of nations, as acknowledged by all, discovery without settlement gave no title, and that in the ancient British charters places already occupied by other civilized nations had always been excepted.

Whether there is a disposition to come to a reasonable agreement is yet doubtful. If such disposition does exist, there will still be two difficulties. I think that the first, their insisting on a more convenient and natural line than the forty-ninth parallel of latitude, may be obviated by adhering to that line only as a basis, that is to say, by insisting on an equivalent north of the line, in compensation of what, for convenience sake, we may yield south of it.

The other difficulty relates to the restriction on the right of navigating the Columbia, by the insertion of the words "if found navigable, &c." The British will say that they are useless, since the right cannot be enjoyed if the river is not navigable, and that they can therefore be used only to call their right in question, even though the river was navigable. But what is meant by "navigable?" It is well known that the navigation of the main Columbia river is interrupted by the great falls, around which boats are generally, if not always, carried by land. As it was certain that the offer made by the Government of the United States was not intended as nugatory, I took care to frame the article so that those falls should not be included in the restriction. But there may be, for aught we know, falls and rapids in the branches of the Columbia below the forty-ninth degree, such as to render them not navigable for common boats. The whole navigation of the rivers of that country above tide-water, except, perhaps, on the main river, is carried on by the British traders in bark canoes, to which such falls and rapids are a difficulty, but not an impediment. From Lake Superior to the Pacific the intercourse is carried on in those canoes, which are carried around the portages. It is, indeed, to that mode of conveyance that the British are exclusively indebted for the extension of their commerce to the western sea. They have all that is necessary for it—the species of birch which does not grow in more southern latitudes, and Canadians for canoe men. They will therefore object to any restrictive words that might impede what is the ordinary navigation of the country.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

27th.—Mr. Huskisson has requested that our next conference, which had been fixed for Tuesday, should be postponed to Friday, December 1.

[With Mr. Gallatin's No. 29.]

Protocol of the first conference of the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Foreign Office on the 15th of November, 1826.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

After the communication of the respective full powers, it was agreed that the negotiations should be conducted as in 1824, by conference and protocol, each party being at liberty to annex to the protocol any written statement which he might think expedient.

The plenipotentiaries then agreed to take up, in the first place, the subject of territorial claims on the Northwest Coast of America, west of the Rocky mountains.

After some general discussion, the British plenipotentiaries observed that a proposal of settlement on that subject having been offered on the part of Great Britain during the course of the negotiations in 1824, which proposal had been taken by the American plenipotentiary for reference to his Government, they presumed that Mr. Gallatin was prepared to give an answer to that or to offer some new proposal.

The American plenipotentiary stated that the Government of the United States could not accede to the boundary line which had been offered by Great Britain, but that, whilst insisting on the forty-ninth parallel of north latitude, he was authorized to substitute for the proposal made by Mr. Rush in 1824, which must be considered withdrawn, another with a new condition, which would evince the earnest desire of the United States to arrange the subject of difference; and he accordingly offered the annexed article A.

This article the British plenipotentiaries took, without further observation, for reference to their Government.

Adjourned to Wednesday, the 22d instant, at two o'clock.

A true copy. W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 31.] LONDON, December 2, 1826.

SIR: There is no prospect of an agreement with the British Government on the subject of a boundary line west of the Stony mountains.

Our third conference took place yesterday. I opened it by some further observations on the true meaning and effect of the Nootka convention. Considered, which it really is, as purely of a commercial nature, it was still in force, and binding upon the United States, so far as they claimed in right of Spain. If, as seemed to be contended by Great Britain, its stipulations extended beyond a commercial arrangement, the question would arise, whether, since they had not been renewed, they were abrogated by war? This I was not prepared, and, indeed, did not think necessary to discuss. That the convention had no other object but to recognize a freedom of commerce with the natives was evident, both from its tenor and from the incident out of which it had grown. It was conceded that the promiscuous settlements, common to both parties, which might be made in conformity with that instrument, were incompatible with any notion of distinct jurisdiction and of sovereignty; that a division line, a partition of the country, could not take place but by virtue of a new agreement. It necessarily followed that the convention had stipulated nothing in that respect, and that whenever such agreement came under consideration, the parties might claim all that, according to the law and usages of nations, they had a right to claim, in the same manner as if the convention had not taken place. To that law and usages, as not having in any manner been abrogated by the convention, the United States did appeal, both in their own right and in the right of Spain. Whatever right be claimed, either as a natural extension of Louisiana, or under the arrangement made in pursuance of the treaty of Utrecht, or by virtue of the first discoveries of Spain, the United States had now as much right to claim as what they considered theirs by virtue of their own discoveries. These arguments were neither admitted nor refuted by the British plenipotentiaries.

They spoke in general terms of the right of Great Britain to make settlements anywhere north of the thirty-eighth parallel of latitude, and to the navigation of all the rivers emptying into the Pacific north of that latitude. And they took occasion to animadvert on the condition upon which, by the article I had proposed, their right to navigate the Columbia was made to depend ; a condition which would be inadmissible, even if they were to receive the privilege as a grant, instead of its being a right already belonging to Great Britain.

In answer to that special objection, I said that, if the right to navigate the river, contemplated by the article, had been confined to the navigation from the forty-ninth degree of latitude to tide-water, the condition would have been unnecessary, since the British actually navigating the river would have been a complete proof that it was navigable. But it was contemplated by the article that they should have also the free navigation of the river from and to the sea. This was intended for the special and sole purpose of giving them an uninterrupted water communication between the upper branches of the river north of the forty-ninth parallel of latitude and the sea. If the condition complained of was omitted, they would have an absolute right (and without any reciprocity within the British territories) to navigate the river in ships, from tide-water to the sea, and vice versa, although its upper branches, from the forty-ninth degree downwards, should not be navigable, and the water communication above stated should not exist. It was not the intention of the United States that they should have that right in that case ; and therefore the condition was annexed. If the expressions used in the article were susceptible of doubt, or liable to any well-founded objection, a different phraseology, consistent with the avowed object of the article, might be adopted. Although I anticipated, from the manner in which the subject was introduced, that this explanation would produce no effect, I deemed it necessary, in order to show how far the offer went, and that it was perfectly fair.

Mr. Huskisson then asked me whether I was authorized to deviate from the forty-ninth parallel of latitude as a boundary. I did not think that he had any right to ask the question ; but, as it was only from courtesy, and to avoid, at the opening of the negotiation, expressions at all savoring of harshness, that I had used the words "whilst insisting on the forty-ninth degree" instead of the word "ultimatum;" and as, in fact, the United States had nothing to conceal, I answered the question. To the forty-ninth parallel of latitude the United States would adhere as a basis. If, on account of the geographical features of the country, a deviation founded on mutual convenience was found expedient, a proposal to that effect might be entertained, provided it was consistent with that basis; that is to say, that any deviation in one place to the south of the forty-ninth parallel should be compensated by an equivalent in another place to the north of that parallel. [I must observe that what I had in view was the exchange of the southern extremity of Nootka's island, (Quadra and Vancouver's,) which the forty-ninth parallel cuts in an inconvenient manner, for the whole or part of the upper branches of the Columbia river north of that parallel.] I added that, if, as I presumed from the question, the British plenipotentiaries intended to make a new proposal, it was only after it was made that I would give a more specific answer—either accept it, refer it to my Government, or reject it at once.

After a short consultation between the British plenipotentiaries, Mr. Huskisson said that, when speaking of the line without reference to right but only to convenience, I had observed that the boundary proposed by Great Britain left to the United States but one seaport, and that of difficult access, and fitted only for commercial purposes ; and that, thinking that remark entitled to consideration, the British Government was disposed to offer us a port in Fuca's straits. Taking then Vancouver's map, he pointed out the line traced in the enclosed sketch, offering to the United States the detached territory, bounded on the west by the ocean, on the north by Fuca's straits, on the east by the entrance of Admiralty inlet, and then by the peninsula between that and Hood's inlet, and on the south by a line drawn thence to Gray's harbor on the ocean ; and he dwelt on the excellence of Port Discovery, defended by Protection island, which would thus be secured to us. On my asking how he meant that the line should run in other respects, he answered that, with that exception, the British Government adhered to the boundary proposed in 1824, viz: the Columbia river, although it might, perhaps, be agreed that the northern shore, for some distance from the mouth up the river, should remain unoccupied by both parties. I said that this proposal did not admit even of discussion as to its details, as the principle was inadmissible; that I rejected it at once, and would think it inconsistent with my instructions even to take it for reference to my Government.

The British plenipotentiaries said that since it was evident that we could not agree to a boundary line, nothing remained but to continue the joint occupancy for another period of time. To this course I expressed my assent, and some general conversation ensued on the dangers arising from collisions between the traders or settlers of the two countries, or from acts of either Government assuming exclusive jurisdiction. I understood it to be the opinion of the British plenipotentiaries that there could be no objection to the establishment of military posts, or to a jurisdiction confided by each Power to his own citizens or subjects, and that any outrages committed by either such citizens or subjects on the subjects or citizens of the other nation ought not to be considered as national acts of aggression unless authorized by Government. They alluded to the attempt of the establishment of a territorial government, which had been made in Congress, as contrary to the spirit of the existing agreement, although they declared that if they established a colony anywhere they must give it some form of government; and they spoke of the necessity of modifying the article heretofore agreed on, and still in force, on the subject of that joint occupancy. It was concluded that they should prepare an article in conformity with their own view of the subject, which, if insisted upon, and substantially differing from the present one, must, of course, be referred to the President's decision. I think that it would be more eligible to continue simply the present article, leaving it to each Government to make, through the usual channels, such communications to the other as it may deem proper on what would be considered as consistent with or infringing the agreement. But I can say nothing positive until I have seen the article they mean to propose.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. H. CLAY, Secretary of State.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 32.] LONDON, December 5, 1826.

SIR: I enclose the draught of the convention which the British plenipotentiaries propose on the subject of a continued joint occupancy of the territory west of the Stony mountains. Mr. Addington sent it to me yesterday for inspection prior to our conference, which takes place to-morrow, and the result of which cannot reach you by this packet. In returning it, I apprised, in a private note, Mr. Addington of the necessity under which I would be of referring the subject to my Government if it was deemed necessary by the British plenipotentiaries to insert new stipulations. I also gave him notice that I would object to their second proposed article.

It must always be kept in mind that Great Britain insists that the whole country west of the Stony mountains is a vacant territory, to which no nation has any exclusive right, which is open to all, and to which a title may be acquired, and can only be acquired, by actual occupancy and settlement. The second article in question is intended not only to prevent the establishment of a territorial government by the United States, but also to establish the general doctrine that no exclusive sovereignty or dominion can be assumed or exercised over any part of the country in its present situation, and, by implication, that a concurrent jurisdiction may be exercised sufficient to preserve order amongst the traders.

With a view to prevent another inference of the same nature, I intend to propose that so much of the article now in force as relates to other foreign nations should be struck out. In our view of the subject, that provision referred only to Spain and Russia as the only nations which, besides Great Britain and the United States, would possibly have any claim to any part of the country, and the claims of both are now settled. According to the British doctrine, the article must stand as it is, since they declare that every nation has an equal right with ourselves to make settlements there. Still, as my instructions contemplate a simple renewal of the article, I will not insist on that amendment. For the same reason, and thinking it very difficult to find any general stipulation to which both parties would agree, beyond what is contained in the existing article, I will try to have it done in that way, leaving any subsequent arrangement to depend on executive regulations. If it should be found impossible to renew the article without some additional stipulation, none has presented itself to my mind better calculated to preserve peace, and to enable us to acquire a good footing in the country, than the adoption of the second proposed article, but limited to the country contained between the forty-ninth parallel and the boundary insisted on by the British. This would be more favorable to us than any temporary line (beyond which settlements should not be made) to which the British would be likely to agree.

I apprehend some difficulty in settling the protocol of our last conference. From the manner in which the offer of a detached territory south of Fuca's strait was made, I anticipated that it was intended as informal. I might have had it committed to writing by pretending an intention to take it into consideration, but this was so inconsistent with the spirit of my instructions, and the proposal was so obviously inadmissible, that, as already stated, I declared that I could not refer it to my Government. I therefore expected that it should not be inserted in the protocol; but in a draught of this sent to me by the British plenipotentiaries, they propose that it should be stated that they had declined making any new proposal. To this I cannot assent, as there is a material difference between omitting to insert a fact and a positive assertion in the protocol that no such fact had taken place.

Your despatch, No. 11, of 31st October was received two days ago. I will, at to-morrow's conference, request the British plenipotentiaries to state whether, and if any, what, alterations they intend to propose to the convention of 1815. I believe that in this case also it will be found best to renew that agreement in its present form, as originally contemplated by the instructions.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your very obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. H. CLAY, Secretary of State.

[With Mr. Gallatin's No. 32.]

DRAUGHT OF CONVENTION BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.—COLUMBIA TERRITORY.

Whereas, by the third article of the convention concluded in London on the 30th of October, 1818, between his Britannic Majesty and the United States of America, it was provided that any country that might be claimed by either of the contracting parties on the Northwest Coast of America should be free and open, for the term of ten years from the date of the signature of that convention, to the subjects and citizens of the two Powers, any territorial claim which either party might have to any part of such country being mutually reserved. His Britannic Majesty and the United States, considering that the term for which the above provision was to remain in force is now not far from its expiration, and being equally desirous to preclude all danger of misunderstanding between themselves with respect to the said country, have determined to renew the provision above described, for which purpose they have respectively named plenipotentiaries to treat and agree respecting the same; that is to say, his Britannic Majesty, &c., &c., and the United States, &c., &c., who have agreed and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. It is agreed that any country which may be claimed by either of the contracting parties on the Northwest Coast of America westward of the Rocky mountains shall, together with its harbors, bays, creeks, and rivers, be free and open, for the term of fifteen years from the date of the ratification of the present convention, to the vessels, subjects, and citizens of the two Powers, it being well understood that this agreement is not to be construed to the prejudice of any claim which either of the contracting parties may have to any part of the said country, nor shall it be taken to affect the claims of any other Power or State to any part of the said country, the only object of the high contracting parties being to prevent disputes and differences between themselves.

ARTICLE 2. For the more effectual prevention of such disputes and differences, it is further agreed that, during the said term of fifteen years, neither of the contracting parties shall assume or exercise any right of exclusive sovereignty or dominion over any part of the said country, nor form therein any establishment in support or furtherance of any such claim.

claim all that, according to the law and usages of nations, they had a right to claim, in the same manner as if the convention had not taken place. To that law and usages, as not having in any manner been abrogated by the convention, the United States did appeal, both in their own right and in the right of Spain. Whatever right be claimed, either as a natural extension of Louisiana, or under the arrangement made in pursuance of the treaty of Utrecht, or by virtue of the first discoveries of Spain, the United States had now as much right to claim as what they considered theirs by virtue of their own discoveries. These arguments were neither admitted nor refuted by the British plenipotentiaries.

They spoke in general terms of the right of Great Britain to make settlements anywhere north of the thirty-eighth parallel of latitude, and to the navigation of all the rivers emptying into the Pacific north of that latitude. And they took occasion to animadvert on the condition upon which, by the article I had proposed, their right to navigate the Columbia was made to depend; a condition which would be inadmissible, even if they were to receive the privilege as a grant, instead of its being a right already belonging to Great Britain.

In answer to that special objection, I said that, if the right to navigate the river, contemplated by the article, had been confined to the navigation from the forty-ninth degree of latitude to tide-water, the condition would have been unnecessary, since the British actually navigating the river would have been a complete proof that it was navigable. But it was contemplated by the article that they should have also the free navigation of the river from and to the sea. This was intended for the special and sole purpose of giving them an uninterrupted water communication between the upper branches of the river north of the forty-ninth parallel of latitude and the sea. If the condition complained of was omitted, they would have an absolute right (and without any reciprocity within the British territories) to navigate the river in ships, from tide-water to the sea, and vice versa, although its upper branches, from the forty-ninth degree downwards, should not be navigable, and the water communication above stated should not exist. It was not the intention of the United States that they should have that right in that case; and therefore the condition was annexed. If the expressions used in the article were susceptible of doubt, or liable to any well-founded objection, a different phraseology, consistent with the avowed object of the article, might be adopted. Although I anticipated, from the manner in which the subject was introduced, that this explanation would produce no effect, I deemed it necessary, in order to show how far the offer went, and that it was perfectly fair.

Mr. Huskisson then asked me whether I was authorized to deviate from the forty-ninth parallel of latitude as a boundary. I did not think that he had any right to ask the question; but, as it was only from courtesy, and to avoid, at the opening of the negotiation, expressions at all savoring of harshness, that I had used the words "whilst insisting on the forty-ninth degree" instead of the word "ultimatum;" and as, in fact, the United States had nothing to conceal, I answered the question. To the forty-ninth parallel of latitude the United States would adhere as a basis. If, on account of the geographical features of the country, a deviation founded on mutual convenience was found expedient, a proposal to that effect might be entertained, provided it was consistent with that basis; that is to say, that any deviation in one place to the south of the forty-ninth parallel should be compensated by an equivalent in another place to the north of that parallel. [I must observe that what I had in view was the exchange of the southern extremity of Nootka's island, (Quadra and Vancouver's,) which the forty-ninth parallel cuts in an inconvenient manner, for the whole or part of the upper branches of the Columbia river north of that parallel.] I added that, if, as I presumed from the question, the British plenipotentiaries intended to make a new proposal, it was only after it was made that I would give a more specific answer—either accept it, refer it to my Government, or reject it at once.

After a short consultation between the British plenipotentiaries, Mr. Huskisson said that, when speaking of the line without reference to right but only to convenience, I had observed that the boundary proposed by Great Britain left to the United States but one seaport, and that of difficult access, and fitted only for commercial purposes; and that, thinking that remark entitled to consideration, the British Government was disposed to offer us a port in Fuca's straits. Taking then Vancouver's map, he pointed out the line traced in the enclosed sketch, offering to the United States the detached territory, bounded on the west by the ocean, on the north by Fuca's straits, on the east by the entrance of Admiralty inlet, and then by the peninsula between that and Hood's inlet, and on the south by a line drawn thence to Gray's harbor on the ocean; and he dwelt on the excellence of Port Discovery, defended by Protection island, which would thus be secured to us. On my asking how he meant that the line should run in other respects, he answered that, with that exception, the British Government adhered to the boundary proposed in 1824, viz: the Columbia river, although it might, perhaps, be agreed that the northern shore, for some distance from the mouth up the river, should remain unoccupied by both parties. I said that this proposal did not admit even of discussion as to its details, as the principle was inadmissible; that I rejected it at once, and would think it inconsistent with my instructions even to take it for reference to my Government.

The British plenipotentiaries said that since it was evident that we could not agree to a boundary line, nothing remained but to continue the joint occupancy for another period of time. To this course I expressed my assent, and some general conversation ensued on the dangers arising from collisions between the traders or settlers of the two countries, or from acts of either Government assuming exclusive jurisdiction. I understood it to be the opinion of the British plenipotentiaries that there could be no objection to the establishment of military posts, or to a jurisdiction confided by each Power to his own citizens or subjects, and that any outrages committed by either such citizens or subjects on the subjects or citizens of the other nation ought not to be considered as national acts of aggression unless authorized by Government. They alluded to the attempt of the establishment of a territorial government, which had been made in Congress, as contrary to the spirit of the existing agreement, although they declared that if they established a colony anywhere they must give it some form of government; and they spoke of the necessity of modifying the article heretofore agreed on, and still in force, on the subject of that joint occupancy. It was concluded that they should prepare an article in conformity with their own view of the subject, which, if insisted upon, and substantially differing from the present one, must, of course, be referred to the President's decision. I think that it would be more eligible to continue simply the present article, leaving it to each Government to make, through the usual channels, such communications to the other as it may deem proper on what would be considered as consistent with or infringing the agreement. But I can say nothing positive until I have seen the article they mean to propose.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. H. CLAY, Secretary of State.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 32.] LONDON, December 5, 1826.

SIR: I enclose the draught of the convention which the British plenipotentiaries propose on the subject of a continued joint occupancy of the territory west of the Stony mountains. Mr. Addington sent it to me yesterday for inspection prior to our conference, which takes place to-morrow, and the result of which cannot reach you by this packet. In returning it, I apprised, in a private note, Mr. Addington of the necessity under which I would be of referring the subject to my Government if it was deemed necessary by the British plenipotentiaries to insert new stipulations. I also gave him notice that I would object to their second proposed article.

It must always be kept in mind that Great Britain insists that the whole country west of the Stony mountains is a vacant territory, to which no nation has any exclusive right, which is open to all, and to which a title may be acquired, and can only be acquired, by actual occupancy and settlement. The second article in question is intended not only to prevent the establishment of a territorial government by the United States, but also to establish the general doctrine that no exclusive sovereignty or dominion can be assumed or exercised over any part of the country in its present situation, and, by implication, that a concurrent jurisdiction may be exercised sufficient to preserve order amongst the traders.

With a view to prevent another inference of the same nature, I intend to propose that so much of the article now in force as relates to other foreign nations should be struck out. In our view of the subject, that provision referred only to Spain and Russia as the only nations which, besides Great Britain and the United States, would possibly have any claim to any part of the country, and the claims of both are now settled. According to the British doctrine, the article must stand as it is, since they declare that every nation has an equal right with ourselves to make settlements there. Still, as my instructions contemplate a simple renewal of the article, I will not insist on that amendment. For the same reason, and thinking it very difficult to find any general stipulation to which both parties would agree, beyond what is contained in the existing article, I will try to have it done in that way, leaving any subsequent arrangement to depend on executive regulations. If it should be found impossible to renew the article without some additional stipulation, none has presented itself to my mind better calculated to preserve peace, and to enable us to acquire a good footing in the country, than the adoption of the second proposed article, but limited to the country contained between the forty-ninth parallel and the boundary insisted on by the British. This would be more favorable to us than any temporary line (beyond which settlements should not be made) to which the British would be likely to agree.

I apprehend some difficulty in settling the protocol of our last conference. From the manner in which the offer of a detached territory south of Fuca's strait was made, I anticipated that it was intended as informal. I might have had it committed to writing by pretending an intention to take it into consideration, but this was so inconsistent with the spirit of my instructions, and the proposal was so obviously inadmissible, that, as already stated, I declared that I could not refer it to my Government. I therefore expected that it should not be inserted in the protocol; but in a draught of this sent to me by the British plenipotentiaries, they propose that it should be stated that they had declined making any new proposal. To this I cannot assent, as there is a material difference between omitting to insert a fact and a positive assertion in the protocol that no such fact had taken place.

Your despatch, No. 11, of 31st October was received two days ago. I will, at to-morrow's conference, request the British plenipotentiaries to state whether, and if any, what, alterations they intend to propose to the convention of 1815. I believe that in this case also it will be found best to renew that agreement in its present form, as originally contemplated by the instructions.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your very obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. H. CLAY, Secretary of State.

[With Mr. Gallatin's No. 32.]

DRAUGHT OF CONVENTION BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.—COLUMBIA TERRITORY.

Whereas, by the third article of the convention concluded in London on the 30th of October, 1818, between his Britannic Majesty and the United States of America, it was provided that any country that might be claimed by either of the contracting parties on the Northwest Coast of America should be free and open, for the term of ten years from the date of the signature of that convention, to the subjects and citizens of the two Powers, any territorial claim which either party might have to any part of such country being mutually reserved. His Britannic Majesty and the United States, considering that the term for which the above provision was to remain in force is now not far from its expiration, and being equally desirous to preclude all danger of misunderstanding between themselves with respect to the said country, have determined to renew the provision above described, for which purpose they have respectively named plenipotentiaries to treat and agree respecting the same; that is to say, his Britannic Majesty, &c., &c., and the United States, &c., &c., who have agreed and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. It is agreed that any country which may be claimed by either of the contracting parties on the Northwest Coast of America westward of the Rocky mountains shall, together with its harbors, bays, creeks, and rivers, be free and open, for the term of fifteen years from the date of the ratification of the present convention, to the vessels, subjects, and citizens of the two Powers, it being well understood that this agreement is not to be construed to the prejudice of any claim which either of the contracting parties may have to any part of the said country, nor shall it be taken to affect the claims of any other Power or State to any part of the said country, the only object of the high contracting parties being to prevent disputes and differences between themselves.

ARTICLE 2. For the more effectual prevention of such disputes and differences, it is further agreed that, during the said term of fifteen years, neither of the contracting parties shall assume or exercise any right of exclusive sovereignty or dominion over any part of the said country, nor form therein any establishment in support or furtherance of any such claim.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 35.] LONDON, December 12, 1826.

SIR: We have had two conferences (the fourth and fifth) on the 6th and 11th instant, respectively. The British plenipotentiaries having concluded to insert in the protocol of the third conference the offer they had made of a detached territory south of Fuca's straits, that protocol, though agreed on yesterday, is not yet signed. Our fourth conference was principally employed in a discussion of the manner in which the joint occupancy must be understood. The article informally proposed, and of which I sent you a copy, has received some modifications, originating with the British plenipotentiaries; and they would have been ready to deliver it yesterday, but said they wished it to be accompanied by an exposition of their claim and view of the subject. This they expect to be prepared to annex to the protocol of our next conference, on the 16th instant, which will, I hope, enable me to send you, by the packet of the 24th, all the protocols, and whatever relates to the territory west of the Stony mountains. You know already that the negotiation for a permanent boundary has terminated without our being able to agree. The questions which will be referred for the President's decision relate exclusively to the joint occupancy, whether it shall be continued, and, if continued, whether any, and if any, what, explanatory or new provisions may be necessary. The proposals will come exclusively from the British plenipotentiaries, as I declared that I was not authorized to make any. I suggested, in the course of the conversation, as coming from myself, which was true, whether each Power might not be allowed to exercise exclusive sovereignty over a certain extent of territory, leaving between them a kind of border or debatable ground, where promiscuous settlements might be continued until a permanent boundary was agreed on. But the suggestion was not entertained by the British plenipotentiaries. In our conference of yesterday some general conversation took place on the subject of the convention of 1815. Mr. Huskisson said he would use his best endeavors to be ready on the 16th to make his proposals or to say that he had none to make. It is doubtful whether he will offer any new provision; but he seems inclined to propose some explanatory article. He complains of the distinction our laws have made between rolled and hammered iron, as applying, not to the quality of the article, but to the process by which manufactured, and says that Great Britain might have retaliated by making a distinction between our cotton and that of India or of the Levant, both which, for want of proper machinery and skill, are prepared for market in a different manner from ours, and on that account really less valuable. He also alluded to the law of South Carolina respecting seamen of color, but appeared to give up that point on my observing that the law applied equally to vessels of the United States. I then remarked that, even if some explanatory provisions were added to the convention, many cases must necessarily occur on which a difference of opinion would take place as to its true construction, and that it seemed better to leave all of them to the good faith and true interest of both parties. If, however, they insisted, there could be no doubt that some cases had already occurred which might render similar provisions necessary on our part, although I was not yet instructed in that respect, and therefore not prepared at this time to state what those provisions should be.

We had also some conversation on the northeastern boundary, on which the suggestions made in relation to a preliminary arrangement by the British plenipotentiaries appeared to me so extraordinary that I will postpone a communication on that subject to you until their views have been more clearly unfolded to me. I have pressed the propriety of every proposal which may render a reference to Washington necessary being made at this time, and hope, with the exception of the last mentioned subject, to be able to obtain them.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 40.] LONDON, December 20, 1826.

SIR: The protocol of the first conference with the British plenipotentiaries, and the proposed article annexed to it, has been already transmitted. I have now the honor to enclose the protocols of the six following conferences; the projet of a convention for the continuance of the joint occupancy of the territory west of the Stony mountains, presented by the British plenipotentiaries, and annexed to the sixth protocol; their statement of the claims and views of the British Government, annexed to the same protocol; and my counter statement, annexed to the seventh.

The negotiation for agreeing to a definitive boundary line in that quarter has for the present failed, and may be considered as terminated. What relates to it is included in the first, second, third, and seventh protocols; so much of the sixth as refers to the statement annexed to it; the American article annexed to the first, and the statements annexed to the sixth and seventh, respectively.

The arguments used on both sides being embodied in those two statements, I beg leave to refer to them, and, for the progress of the negotiation, to the protocols, and to my former despatches. You will be pleased to observe that there is a difference between the boundaries of the detached territory, offered by the British plenipotentiaries at the third conference, as delineated in the rough sketch already transmitted and those described in the protocol.

The negotiation for a continuance of the joint occupancy is not yet terminated, and its progress may be traced in the fourth and part of the sixth protocol. I would not have insisted on the amendment proposed by me at the fourth conference to the article now in force, as I would have thought it sufficient to enter on the protocol that that article was agreed to with the understanding that it was not to be construed as an admission on the part of the United States that any other foreign country had now a right to any part of the territory in question. But I could not agree to any additional or explanatory article without the previous approbation of my Government; and you will see by my declaration in the fourth protocol that the whole subject is referred to the President.

The first question is, therefore, whether there is any advantage in a renewal and continuance of the joint occupancy; and if so, for what term? The British plenipotentiaries propose fifteen, would prefer twenty, and will agree to ten years. The next question relates to the additional conditions, which they consider as explanatory of, and in conformity with, the original agreement. Only they observed that, as we had no settlements, the last condition was to our advantage. It is doubtful to me whether it is proposed in order to prevent any inference being drawn, in support of our claim to exclusive sovereignty, from the former settlement at Astoria, or whether to establish clearly and to impress on their subjects that Great Britain neither now nor hereafter means to claim such exclusive sovereignty. Mr. Huskisson, in the course of the discussion, several times repeated that there was no intention, on the part of Great Britain, to colonize the country. They have certainly no other immediate object than that of protecting the Northwest Company in her fur trade. In every other respect the question appeared to be with them rather one of national pride than anything else. Not only from them, but from several other distinct quarters, it is certain that that pride was sorely wounded by that part of the late President's message which declared that America was no longer open to European colonization. This was new doctrine, and was considered as dictatorial, and as hinting, too, with no favorable intentions to the existing British colonies. Those parts of the second report of a committee of the House of Representatives, at the last session of Congress, to which I have alluded in a former despatch, gave great, fresh, and additional offence, awakening anew the feelings which had been excited by the former passage in the President's message. I think it not improbable that we might have come to an arrangement had it not been for those causes. The Northwest Company is also very inimical, and has no inconsiderable weight. You will decide whether this last condition is, on the whole, for our interest or not. Although I cannot speak positively, I do not think that it would be adhered to on the part of Great Britain if you object to it.

With respect to the first condition, the British plenipotentiaries hesitated whether the word "exclusive" should remain or not. As they appeared indifferent or doubtful about it, I advised that it should remain for your consideration. The first question is, what is meant thereby?

The right of exercising sovereignty, provided it is not exclusive, will remain with each party; and by that, it is intended that each should have jurisdiction over its own citizens or subjects, and have a right to punish offences committed by them. The establishment of military posts, provided they do not command exclusively the mouth of the Columbia, is not objected to. Any impediment to the free navigation of harbors and rivers, the laying duties or establishment of any custom-house, the removing or disturbing any British settlement, and the exercise of any jurisdiction over British subjects, would be considered as infractions of the condition. But it must be observed that they would be equally considered as infractions of the existing article without the additional condition, and as acts of aggression if the joint occupancy is not continued by a convention. And it is in that sense that you must understand the words that "Great Britain will give protection," &c., in the latter part of the statement of her claims and views. It was also to those expressions, thus understood, that I alluded in the counter statement, in saying that there were certain parts of the statement on which I would make no remarks, and which I must refer to my Government. The establishment of a distinct territorial government on the west of the Stony mountains would also be objected to, as an attempt to exercise exclusive sovereignty. I observed that, although the Northwest Company might, from its being incorporated, from the habits of the men they employed, and from having a monopoly with respect to trade, so far as British subjects were concerned, carry on a species of government without the assistance of that of Great Britain, it was otherwise with us. Our population there would consist of several independent companies and individuals. We had always been in the habit, in our most remote settlements, of carrying laws, courts, justices of the peace with us. There was an absolute necessity, on our part, to have some species of government. Without it, the kind of sovereignty, or rather jurisdiction, which it was intended to admit, could not be exercised on our part. It was suggested, and seemed to be acquiesced in, that the difficulty might be obviated, provided the erection of a new territory was not confined exclusively to the territory west of the mountains; that it should be defined as embracing all the possessions of the United States west of a line that should be at some distance and east of the Stony mountains.

It appears, from all that has passed during the discussion, that the important point is to agree on the acts which may or may not be done during the joint occupancy. All those which have been thought of as likely to occur are stated in this letter; and to those I beg leave to call your attention. What are those on which you agree with the British plenipotentiaries? What are those you object to decidedly? When agreed on those points, the expressions which may be used, and which, after all, must always be general, become less important. The questions respecting those acts must at all events be decided, as in the event, either of a simple renewal of the existing article, or of no agreement whatever being made on the subject, they will still occur whenever our citizens or troops cross the mountains. I beg that the instructions may be comprehensive and explicit, so as not to render it necessary to make another reference.

Although the suggestion, mentioned in a former despatch, of lines defining exclusive sovereignty, and leaving between them debatable ground of joint occupancy and sovereignty, was not favorably received by the British plenipotentiaries, I would wish to have the President's opinion upon it. It is possible that, as a last alternative, it may be recurred to; and in that case I should know, not only whether the principle is admissible, but how the lines should be defined.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

Protocol of the second conference of the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 22d of November, 1826.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Addington, and Mr. Huskisson.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The subject of the territorial claims on the coast of America, west of the Rocky mountains, was resumed; and after some general discussion, in which the arguments respectively employed at the preceding conference were further developed on both sides, the further consideration of the subject was postponed, by mutual agreement, to the next meeting of the plenipotentiaries.

Adjourned to Friday, the 1st of December.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
W. HUSKISSON.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

A true copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Protocol of the third conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 1st of December, 1826.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

The British plenipotentiaries took up the subject of the article of settlement annexed by the American plenipotentiary to the protocol of the first conference, and declared that, since in that article the 49th parallel of north latitude was still insisted on by the United States as the boundary line, the said article was accordingly declined on the part of Great Britain.

Notwithstanding a declaration on the part of the American plenipotentiary, that he had no authority to depart from the basis of the 49th parallel of latitude, as above mentioned; yet, as it had been stated by him in the course of the discussion that the line proposed by Great Britain, viewed without regard to the question of right, and merely as a boundary founded on convenience, would be inadmissible, since it left no port fitted for large ships to the United States, whilst the whole northern coast of the Territory was amply supplied with such, and the United States could never agree to a line which would not give them a share in such ports; the British plenipotentiaries, in order to evince the earnest desire of their Government to afford every facility to the final adjustment of the question of boundary, submitted the following terms of accommodation, with a view to their reference to the American Government:

"That, considering that the possession of a safe and commodious port on the Northwest Coast of America, fitted for the reception of large ships, might be an object of great interest and importance to the United States, and that no such port was to be found between the 42d degree of latitude and the Columbia river, Great Britain, in still adhering to that river as a basis, was willing so far to modify her former proposal as to concede, as far as she was concerned, to the United States the possession of Port Discovery, a most valuable harbor on the southern coast of De Fuca's inlet, and to annex thereto all that tract of country comprised within a line to be drawn from Cape Flattery, along the southern shore of De Fuca's inlet, to Point Wilson, at the northwestern extremity of Admiralty inlet; from thence along the western shore of that inlet, across the entrance of Hood's inlet, to the point of land forming the northeastern extremity of the said inlet; from thence along the eastern shore of that inlet to the southern extremity of the same; from thence direct to the southern point of Gray's harbor; from thence along the shore of the Pacific to Cape Flattery, as before mentioned.

"They were further willing to stipulate that no works should at any time be erected at the entrance of the river Columbia, or upon the banks of the same, that might be calculated to impede or hinder the free navigation thereof by the vessels or boats of either party."

The American plenipotentiary considering this proposal as totally inadequate, and having declined even referring it to his Government, the British plenipotentiaries, at the same time that they left the said proposal on the protocol, protested against the offer of concession so made being even taken in any way to prejudice the claims of Great Britain included in her proposal of 1824, and declared that the offer now made was considered by the British Government as not called for by any just comparison of the grounds of those claims and of the counter claims of the United States, but rather as a sacrifice which the British Government had consented to make with a view to obviate all evils of future difference in respect to the territory west of the Rocky mountains. The proposition having, however, failed, they informed the American plenipotentiary that at a subsequent conference they should be prepared to submit a proposal for the renewal, for a fresh term of years, and in a separate form, of the provision relative to the territory in question, contained in the third article of the convention of London of 1818.

The American plenipotentiary observed that the proposal contained in the article presented by him at the first conference, and declined on the part of Great Britain, had also been made solely with a view to terminate by an amicable agreement all differences on that subject; and that he likwise protested against that proposal being ever taken in any way to prejudice the claims of the United States, as heretofore stated.

Adjourned to Wednesday, the 6th of December.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
W. HUSKISSON.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

A true copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Protocol of the fourth conference of the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 6th of December, 1826.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The subject of a renewal of the article of the convention of 1818, which provides for a joint occupancy of the territory west of the Stony mountains, was resumed, and, after some general discussion, the American plenipotentiary observed that he had been authorized by his instructions, in case no permanent boundary line could be agreed on, to agree to the renewal of the article in question for a term not exceeding ten years; proposing only to omit so much of the article as related to the claims of other nations to that territory, as the United States did not admit that any other nation, besides the two contracting Powers, had any such claim at this time, those of Spain and Russia having been settled since the year 1818. But as, from the discussion which had taken place, it might be apprehended that the two Governments did not, perhaps, altogether agree on the true meaning of that article, and on the extent of obligations imposed by it on both parties, he thought it essential that no agreement should be concluded without a previous clear and mutual understanding in that respect. He therefore believed it necessary that he should refer the whole subject to his Government, with such new or explanatory provisions as the British plenipotentiaries might deem it proper to propose. He could not himself offer any new proposal for consideration, and would only say that any that was calculated to prevent collision, and to preserve perfect harmony in that quarter, would be favorably entertained by the Government of the United States, provided it did not impair or affect their rights, nor prevent or impede their making settlements and enjoying all the benefits of the joint occupancy.

The British plenipotentiaries stated, in reply, that it had never been their intention to propose any arrangement which should not place the citizens of the United States upon an equal footing with the subjects of Great Britain, in respect to the territory in question, so long as it continued open to the exercise of those rights which were incident to a state of joint occupancy.

The sole object of any additional stipulation, which they might have to suggest for the consideration of the American plenipotentiary, would be to guard against possible misunderstanding, in respect to the nature and consequences of any acts that might be done in that territory by either party whilst liable to be so occupied.

The British plenipotentiaries added that they should certainly feel no objection to furnish the American plenipotentiary with a full and explicit statement of the claims which Great Britain makes, and of the obligations by which she considers herself bound in respect to that territory.

The British plenipotentiaries submitted to the American plenipotentiary whether, in renewing the third article of the convention of 1818, it might not be desirable to extend that renewal to a longer term than ten years. They suggested twenty, or, at least, fifteen years, subject to the understanding that the two Governments should use their best endeavors within that period to adjust their present differences in respect to the boundary to be drawn between them in the territories in question.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
W. HUSKISSON.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

A true copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Protocol of the fifth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 11th of December, 1826.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

Circumstances having prevented the British plenipotentiaries from submitting, as they had proposed, at this conference, a project of convention, for the renewal of the provision of the convention of 1818, relative to the country west of the Rocky mountains, as alluded to in the preceding protocol, the subject of the adjustment of boundary under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent was entered upon by the plenipotentiaries.

After some general conversation respecting the expediency of referring to foreign arbitration, as provided by that treaty, the differences which had arisen on that subject, as well as the mode of regulating that reference, it was agreed to postpone the further consideration of this matter to a future conference, in order to give time for further investigation of several points connected with it.

The American plenipotentiary announced his having received authority from his government to treat concerning the renewal, for a further term of ten years, of the commercial convention of 1815, concluded between the United States and Great Britain.

Adjourned to Saturday, the 16th of December.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
W. HUSKISSON.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

A true copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Protocol of the sixth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 16th of December, 1826.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The British plenipotentiaries submitted, and annexed to the protocol, the project of a convention, (A,) as alluded to in their preceding conferences, for the renewal, for a fresh term of fifteen years from the date thereof, of the provision relative to the country west of the Rocky mountains, which was contained in the convention of London of 1818. This project they accompanied with a statement, (B,) also annexed to the protocol, of the claims and views of Great Britain relative to that country.

The American plenipotentiary took both the above mentioned papers for reference to his Government, and intimated his intention of annexing to the protocol of the next conference a counter statement of the claims and views of the United States relative to the same country.

Adjourned.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
W. HUSKISSON.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

A true copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

CONVENTION BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.—COLUMBIA TERRITORY.

Whereas, by the third article of the convention concluded in London on the thirtieth of October, eighteen hundred and eighteen, between his Britannic Majesty and the United States of America, it was provided that any country that might be claimed by either of the contracting parties on the Northwest Coast of America should be free and open, for the term of ten years from the date of the signature of that convention, to the subjects and citizens of the two Powers, any territorial claim which either party might have to any part of such country being mutually reserved. His Britannic Majesty and the United States, considering that the term for which the above provision was to remain in force is now not far from its expiration, and being equally desirous to preclude all danger of misunderstanding between themselves with respect to the said country, have determined to renew the said provision; for which purpose they have respectively named plenipotentiaries to treat and agree respecting the same, that is to say: His Britannic Majesty, the Right Honorable William Huskisson, &c., &c., &c., and Henry Unwin Addington, Esq.; and the United States, Albert Gallatin, who have agreed to and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. It is agreed that any country which may be claimed by either of the contracting parties on the Northwest Coast of America, westward of the Rocky mountains, shall, together with its harbors, bays, creeks, and rivers, be free and open, for the term of fifteen years from the date of the ratification of the present convention, to the vessels, subjects, and citizens of the two Powers; it being well understood that this agreement is not to be construed to the prejudice of any claim which either of the contracting parties may have to any part of the said country, nor shall it be taken to affect the claims of any other Power or State to any part of the said country. The only object of the high contracting parties, in concluding this convention, being to prevent disputes and differences between themselves.

ARTICLE 2. For the more effectual prevention of such disputes and differences, it is further agreed that, during the said term of fifteen years, neither of the contracting parties shall assume or exercise any right of exclusive sovereignty or dominion over any part of the said country; nor shall any settlement which may now exist, or which may be hereafter formed therein by either party during the said term of fifteen years, be at any time adduced in support or furtherance of any claim to such sovereignty or dominion.

The Government of Great Britain, in proposing to renew, for a further term of years, the third article of the convention of 1818, respecting the territory on the Northwest Coast of America, west of the Rocky mountains, regrets that it has been found impossible, in the present negotiation, to agree upon a line of boundary which should separate those parts of that territory which might henceforward be occupied or settled by the subjects of Great Britain from the parts which would remain open to occupancy and settlement by the United States.

To establish such a boundary must be the ultimate object of both countries. With this object in contemplation, and from a persuasion that a part of the difficulties which have hitherto prevented its attainment is to be attributed to a misconception, on the part of the United States, of the claims and views of Great Britain in regard to the territory in question, the British plenipotentiaries deem it advisable to bring under the notice of the American plenipotentiary a full and explicit exposition of those claims and views.

As preliminary to this discussion, it is highly desirable to mark distinctly the broad difference between the nature of the rights claimed by Great Britain and those asserted by the United States in respect to the territory in question.

Over a large portion of that territory, namely, from the 42d to the 49th degree of north latitude, the United States claim full and exclusive sovereignty.

Great Britain claims no exclusive sovereignty over any portion of that territory. Her present claim, not in respect to any part, but to the whole, is limited to a right of joint occupancy in common with other States, leaving the right of exclusive dominion in abeyance.

In other words, the pretensions of the United States tend to the ejection of all other nations, and, among the rest, of Great Britain, from all right of settlement in the district claimed by the United States.

The pretensions of Great Britain, on the contrary, tend to the mere maintenance of her own rights, in resistance to the exclusive character of the pretensions of the United States.

Having thus stated the nature of the respective claims of the two parties, the British plenipotentiaries will now examine the grounds upon which those claims are founded.

The claims of the United States are urged upon these grounds:

1. As resulting from their own proper right.

2. As resulting from a right derived to them from Spain; that Power having, by the treaty of Florida, concluded with the United States in 1819, ceded to the latter all her rights and claims on the western coast of America north of forty-two degrees.

3. As resulting from a right derived to them from France, to whom the United States succeeded, by treaty, in the possession of the province of Louisiana.

The first right, or right proper, of the United States is founded on the alleged discovery of the Columbia river by Mr. Gray, of Boston, who, in 1792, entered that river, and explored it to some distance from its mouth.

To this are added the first exploration, by Lewis and Clark, of a main branch of the same river from its source downwards; and also the alleged priority of settlement, by citizens of the United States, of the country in the vicinity of the same river.

The second right, or right derived from Spain, is founded on the alleged prior discovery of the region in dispute by Spanish navigators, of whom the chief were: 1st. Cabrillo, who, in 1543, visited that coast as far as 44°? north latitude. 2d. De Fuca, who, as it is affirmed, in 1598 entered the straits known by his name in latitude 49°. 3d. Gualli, who, in 1582, is said to have pushed his researches as high as 57° north latitude. 4th. Perez and others, who, between the years 1774 and 1792, visited Nootka sound and the adjacent coasts.

The third right, derived from the cession of Louisiana to the United States, is founded on the assumption that that province, its boundaries never having been exactly defined longitudinally, may fairly be asserted to extend westward across the Rocky mountains to the shore of the Pacific.

Before the merits of these respective claims are considered, it is necessary to observe that one only out of three can be valid.

They are, in fact, claims obviously incompatible the one with the other. If, for example, the title of Spain, by first discovery, or the title of France, as the original possessor of Louisiana, be valid, then must one or the other of those Kingdoms have been the lawful possessor of that territory at the moment when the United States claim to have discovered it. If, on the other hand, the Americans were the first discoverers, there is necessarily an end of the Spanish claim; and if priority of discovery constitutes the title, that of France falls equally to the ground.

Upon the question, how far prior discovery constitutes a legal claim to sovereignty, the law of nations is somewhat vague and undefined. It is, however, admitted by the most approved writers that mere accidental discovery, unattended by exploration; by formally taking possession in the name of the discoverer's Sovereign; by occupation and settlement, more or less permanent; by purchase of the territory, or receiving the sovereignty from the natives, constitutes the lowest degree of title, and that it is only in proportion as first discovery is followed by any or all of these acts that such title is strengthened and confirmed.

The rights conferred by discovery, therefore, must be discussed on their own merits.

But before the British plenipotentiaries proceed to compare the relative claims of Great Britain and the United States in this respect, it will be advisable to dispose of the two other grounds of right put forward by the United States.

The second ground of claim advanced by the United States is the cession made by Spain to the United States by the treaty of Florida in 1819.

If the conflicting claims of Great Britain and Spain, in respect to all that part of the coast of North America, had not been finally adjusted by the convention of Nootka in the year 1790, and if all the arguments and pretensions, whether resting upon priority of discovery, or derived from any other consideration, had not been definitively set at rest by the signature of that convention, nothing would be more easy than to demonstrate that the claims of Great Britain to that country, as opposed to those of Spain, were so far from visionary or arbitrarily assumed, that they established more than a parity of title to the possession of the country in question, either as against Spain or any other nation.

Whatever that title may have been, however, either on the part of Great Britain or on the part of Spain, prior to the convention of 1790, it was from thenceforward no longer to be traced in vague narratives of discoveries, several of them admitted to be apochryphal, but in the text and stipulations of the convention itself.

By that convention it was agreed that all parts of the Northwest Coast of America not already occupied at that time by either of the contracting parties should thenceforward be equally open to the subjects of both for all purposes of commerce and settlement, the sovereignty remaining in abeyance.

In this stipulation, as it has been already stated, all tracts of country claimed by Spain and Great Britain, or accruing to either in whatever manner, were included.

The rights of Spain on that coast were, by the treaty of Florida in 1819, conveyed by Spain to the United States. With these rights, the United States necessarily succeeded to the limitations by which they were defined, and the obligations under which they were to be exercised. From those obligations and limitations, as contracted towards Great Britain, Great Britain cannot be expected gratuitously to release those countries merely because the rights of the party originally bound have been transferred to a third Power.

The third ground of claim of the United States rests on the right supposed to be derived from the cession to them of Louisiana by France. In arguing this branch of the question it will not be necessary to examine in detail the very dubious point of the assumed extent of that province, since, by the treaty between France and Spain of 1763, the whole of that territory, defined or undefined, real or ideal, was ceded by France to Spain, and, consequently, belonged to Spain, not only in 1790, when the convention of Nootka was signed between Great Britain and Spain, but also, subsequently, in 1793, the period of Gray's discovery of the mouth of the Columbia. If, then, Louisiana embraced the country west of the Rocky mountains to the south of the 49th parallel of latitude, it must have embraced the Columbia itself, which that parallel intersects; and, consequently, Gray's discovery must have been made in a country avowedly already appropriated to Spain, and, if so appropriated, necessarily included, with all other Spanish possessions and claims in that quarter, in the stipulations of the Nootka convention.

Even if it could be shown, therefore, that the district west of the Rocky mountains was within the boundaries of Louisiana, that circumstance would in no way assist the claims of the United States.

It may, nevertheless, be worth while to expose, in a few words, the futility of the attempt to include that district within those boundaries.

For this purpose it is only necessary to refer to the original grant of Louisiana made to De Crozat, by Louis XIV, shortly after its discovery by La Salle. That province is therein expressly described as "the country drained by the waters emptying, directly or indirectly, into the Mississippi." Now, unless it can be shown that any of the tributaries of the Mississippi cross the Rocky mountains from west to east, it is difficult to conceive how any part of Louisiana can be found to the west of that ridge.

There remains to be considered the first ground of claim advanced by the United States to the territory in question, namely, that founded on their own proper right as first discoverers and occupiers of that territory.

If the discovery of the country in question, or rather the mere entrance into the mouth of the Columbia river by a private American citizen, be, as the United States assert, (although Great Britain is far from admitting the correctness of the assertion,) a valid ground of national and exclusive claim to all the country situated between the 42d and 49th parallels of latitude, then must any preceding discovery of the same country by an individual of any other nation invest such nation with a more valid, because a prior, claim to that country.

Now, to set aside for the present Drake, Cook, and Vancouver, who all of them either took possession of or touched at various points of the coast in question, Great Britain can show that, in 1788—that is, four years before Gray entered the mouth of the Columbia river—Mr. Meares, a lieutenant of the Royal Navy, who had been sent by the East India Company on a trading expedition to the Northwest Coast of America, had already minutely explored that coast from the 49th degree to the 45th degree of north latitude; had taken formal possession of the Straits of De Fuca in the name of the Sovereign; had purchased land; trafficked and formed treaties with the natives; and had actually entered the bay of the Columbia, to the northern headland of which he gave the name of Cape Disappointment—a name which it bears to this day.

Dixon, Scott, Duncan, Strange, and other private British traders, had also visited these shores and countries several years before Gray; but the single example of Meares suffices to quash Gray's claim to prior discovery. To the other navigators above mentioned, therefore, it is unnecessary to refer more particularly.

It may be worth while, however, to observe, with regard to Meares, that his account of his voyage was published in London, in August, 1790—that is, two years before Gray is even pretended to have entered the Columbia. To that account are appended, first, the extracts from his log-book; secondly, maps of the coasts and harbors which he visited, in which every part of the coast in question, including the bay of the Columbia, (into which the log expressly states that Meares entered,) is minutely laid down, its delineations tallying in almost every particular with Vancouver's subsequent survey, and with the description found in all the best maps of that part of the world adopted at this moment; thirdly, the account in question actually contains an engraving, dated in August, 1790, of the entrance of De Fuca's straits, executed after a design taken in June, 1788, by Meares himself.

With these physical evidences of authenticity, it is as needless to contend for, as it is impossible to controvert, the truth of Meares' statements.

It was only on the 17*th of September,* 1788, that the Washington, commanded by Mr. Gray, first made her appearance at Nootka.

If, therefore, any claim to these countries as between Great Britain and the United States is to be deduced from priority of discovery, the above exposition of dates and facts suffices to establish that claim in favor of Great Britain on a basis too firm to be shaken.

It must, indeed, be admitted that Mr. Gray, finding himself in the bay formed by the discharge of the waters of the Columbia into the Pacific, was the first to ascertain that this bay formed the outlet of a great river—a discovery which had escaped Lieutenant Meares when, in 1788, four years before, he entered the same bay.

But can it be seriously urged that this single step in the progress of discovery not only wholly supersedes the prior discoveries both of the bay and the coast by Lieutenant Meares, but equally absorbs the subsequent exploration of the river by Captain Vancouver for near a hundred miles above the point to which Mr. Gray's ship had proceeded—the formal taking possession of it by that British navigator in the name of his Sovereign, and also all the other discoveries, explorations, and temporary possession and occupation of the ports and harbors on the coast, as well of the Pacific as within the Straits of De Fuca, up to the 49th parallel of latitude?

This pretension, however, extraordinary as it is, does not embrace the whole of the claim which the United States build upon the limited discovery of Mr. Gray, namely: that the bay of which Cape Disappointment is the northernmost headland, is, in fact, the embouchure of a river; that mere ascertainment, it is asserted, confers on the United States a title in exclusive sovereignty to the whole extent of country drained by such river and by all its tributary streams.

In support of this very extraordinary pretension, the United States allege the precedent of grants and charters accorded in former times to companies and individuals by various European Sovereigns over several parts of the American continent. Amongst other instances are adduced the charters granted by Elizabeth, James I, Charles II, and George II, to sundry British subjects and associations, as also the grant made by Louis XIV to De Crozat over the tract of country watered by the Mississippi and its tributaries.

But can such charters be considered an acknowledged part of the law of nations? Were they anything more, in fact, than a cession to the grantee, or grantees, of whatever rights the grantor might suppose himself to possess to the exclusion of other subjects of the same Sovereign?—charters binding and restraining those only who were within the jurisdiction of the grantor, and of no force or validity against the subjects of other States until recognized by treaty, and thereby becoming a part of international law.

Had the United States thought proper to issue, in 1790, by virtue of their national authority, a charter granting to Mr. Gray the whole extent of country watered, directly or indirectly, by the river Columbia, such a charter would, no doubt, have been valid in Mr. Gray's favor as against all other citizens of the United States. But can it be supposed that it would have been acquiesced in by either of the Powers—Great Britain and Spain—which, in that same year, were preparing to contest by arms the possession of the very country which would have been the subject of such a grant?

If the right of sovereignty over the territory in question accrued to the United States by Mr. Gray's discovery, how happens it that they never protested against the violence done to that right by the two Powers who, by the convention of 1790, regulated their respective rights in and over a district so belonging, as it is now asserted, to the United States?

This claim of the United States to the territory drained by the Columbia and its tributary streams, on the ground of one of their citizens having been the first to discover the entrance of that river, has been here so far entered into, not because it is considered to be necessarily entitled to notice, since the whole country watered by the Columbia falls within the provisions of the convention of 1790, but because the doctrine above alluded to has been put forward so boldly and with such confidence by the United States that Great Britain considered it equally due to herself and to other Powers to enter her protest against it.

The United States further pretend that their claim to the country in question is strengthened and confirmed by the discovery of the sources of the Columbia, and by the exploration of its source to the sea, by Lewis and Clark, in 1805–'6.

In reply to this allegation Great Britain affirms, and can distinctly prove, that, if not before, at least in the same and subsequent years, her Northwestern Trading Company had, by means of their agent, Mr. Thomson, already established their posts amongst the Flathead and Kootanie tribes, on the headwaters of the northern or main branch of the Columbia, and were gradually extending them down the principal stream of that river—thus giving to Great Britain, in this particular again, as in the discovery of the mouth of the river, a title to parity at least, if not priority, of discovery, as opposed to the United States. It was from these posts that, having heard of the American establishment forming in 1811 at the mouth of the river, Mr. Thomson hastened thither, descending the river, to ascertain the nature of that establishment. Some stress having been laid by the United States on the restitution to them of Fort George by the British, after the termination of the last war, which restitution they represent as conveying a virtual acknowledgment by Great Britain of the title of the United States to the country in which that post was situated, it is desirable to state, somewhat in detail, the circumstances attending that restitution.

In the year 1815 a demand for the restoration of Fort George was first made to Great Britain by the American Government, on the plea that the first article of the treaty of Ghent stipulated the restitution to the United States of all posts and places whatsoever taken from them by the British during the war, in which description Fort George (Astoria) was included.

For some time the British Government demurred to comply with the demand of the United States, because they entertained doubts how far it could be sustained by the construction of the treaty.

In the first place, the trading post called Fort Astoria, or Fort George, was not a national possession. In the second place, it was not a military post; and, thirdly, it was never captured from the Americans by the British.

It was, in fact, conveyed in regular commercial transfer, and accompanied by a bill of sale, for a sum of money, to the British company who purchased it, by the American company who sold it of their own free will.

It is true that a British sloop-of-war had, about that time, been sent to take possession of that post, but she arrived subsequently to the transaction above mentioned between the two companies, and found the British company already in legal occupation of their self-acquired property.

In consequence, however, of that ship having been sent out with hostile views, although those views were not carried into effect, and in order that not even the shadow of a reflection might be cast upon the good faith of the British Government, the latter determined to give the most liberal extension to the terms of the treaty of Ghent, and, in 1818, the purchase which the British company had made in 1813 was restored to the United States.

Particular care, however, was taken on this occasion to prevent any misapprehension as to the extent of the concession made by Great Britain.

Viscount Castlereagh, in directing the British Minister at Washington to intimate the intention of the British Government to Mr. Adams, then Secretary of State, uses these expressions in a despatch dated February 4, 1818:

"You will observe that whilst this Government is not disposed to contest with the American Government the point of possession as it stood in the Columbia river at the moment of the rupture, they are not prepared to admit the validity of the title of the Government of the United States to this settlement."

"In signifying, therefore, to Mr. Adams the full acquiescence of your Government in the re-occupation of the limited position which the United States held in that river at the breaking out of the war, you will at the same time assert, in suitable terms, the claim of Great Britain to that territory, upon which the American settlement must be considered an encroachment."

This instruction was executed verbally by the person to whom it was addressed.

The following is a transcript of the act by which the fort was delivered up by the British into the hands of Mr. Prevost, the American agent:

"In obedience to the command of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, signified in a despatch from the Right Honorable the Earl Bathurst, addressed to the partners or agents of the Northwest Company, bearing date the 27th of January, 1818, and in obedience to a subsequent order dated the 26th July last, from W. H. Sherriff, Esq., captain of his Majesty's ship Andromache, we, the undersigned, do, in conformity to the first article of the treaty of Ghent, restore to the Government of the United States, through its agent, J. P. Prevost, Esq., the settlement of Fort George, on the Columbia river.

"Given under our hands, in triplicate, at Fort George, Columbia river, this 6th day of October, 1818.

"F. HICKEY, Captain H. M. ship Blossom.

"J. KEITH, of the Northwest Company."

The following is the despatch from Earl Bathurst to the partners of the Northwest Company, referred to in the above act of cession:

"DOWNING STREET, January 27, 1818.

"Intelligence having been received that the United States sloop-of-war Ontario has been sent by the American Government to re-establish a settlement on the Columbia river which was held by that State on the breaking out of the last war, I am to acquaint you that it is the Prince Regent's pleasure, (without, however, admitting the right of that Government to the possession in question,) that, in pursuance of the first article of the treaty of Ghent, due facility should be given to the re-occupation of the said settlement by the officers of the United States; and I am to desire that you would contribute as much as lies in your power to the execution of his Royal Highness' commands.

"I have, &c., &c., &c.,

"BATHURST.

"The PARTNERS OR AGENTS of the Northwest Company residing on the Columbia river."

The above documents put the case of the restoration of Fort Astoria in too clear a light to require further observation.

The case, then, of Great Britain, in respect to the country west of the Rocky mountains, is shortly this:

Admitting that the United States have acquired all the rights which Spain possessed up to the treaty of Florida, either in virtue of discovery, or, as is pretended, in right of Louisiana, Great Britain maintains that the nature and extent of those rights, as well as of the rights of Great Britain, are fixed and defined by the convention of Nootka; that these rights are equal for both parties; and that in succeeding to the rights of Spain under that convention the United States must also have succeeded to the obligations which it imposed.

Admitting, further, the discovery of Mr. Gray to the extent already stated, Great Britain, taking the whole line of the coast in question, with its straits, harbors, and bays, has stronger claims on the ground of prior discovery, attended with acts of occupancy and settlement, than the United States.

Whether, therefore, the United States rest their claims upon the title of Spain or upon that of prior discovery, or upon both, Great Britain is entitled to place her claims at least upon a parity with those of the United States.

It is a fact admitted by the United States that, with the exception of the Columbia river, there is no river which opens far into the interior on the whole western coast of the Pacific Ocean.

In the interior of the territory in question the subjects of Great Britain have had for many years numerous settlements and trading posts; several of these posts on the tributary streams of the Columbia, several upon the Columbia itself; some to the northward, and others to the southward of that river; and they navigate the Columbia as the sole channel for the conveyance of their produce to the British stations nearest the sea, and for the shipment of it from thence to Great Britain. It is also by the Columbia and its tributary streams that these posts and settlements receive their annual supplies from Great Britain.

In the whole of the territory in question the citizens of the United States have not a single settlement or trading post. They do not use that river, either for the purpose of transmitting or receiving any produce of their own to or from other parts of the world.

In this state of the relative rights of the two countries, and of the relative exercise of those rights, the United States claim the exclusive possession of both banks of the Columbia, and consequently that of the river itself; offering, it is true, to concede to British subjects a conditional participation in that navigation, but subject in any case to the exclusive jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United States.

Great Britain, on her part, offers to make the river the boundary; each country retaining the bank of the river contiguous to its own territories, and the navigation of it remaining forever free and upon a footing of perfect equality to both nations.

To carry into effect this proposal on our part, Great Britain would have to give up posts and settlements south of the Columbia. On the part of the United States there could be no reciprocal withdrawing from actual occupation, as there is not, and never has been, a single American citizen settled north of the Columbia.

The United States decline to accede to this proposal, even when Great Britain has added to it the further offer of a most excellent harbor, and an extensive tract of country on the Straits of De Fuca; a sacrifice tendered in the spirit of accommodation, and for the sake of a final adjustment of all differences, but which, having been made in this spirit, is not to be considered as in any degree recognizing a claim on the part of the United States, or as at all impairing the existing right of Great Britain over the port and territory in question.

Such being the result of the recent negotiation, it only remains for Great Britain to maintain and uphold the qualified rights which she now possesses over the whole of the territory in question.

These rights are recorded and defined in the convention of Nootka.

They embrace the right to navigate the waters of those countries; the right to settle in and over any part of them; and the right freely to trade with the inhabitants and occupiers of the same.

These rights have been peaceably exercised ever since the date of that convention—that is, for a period of near forty years. Under that convention valuable British interests have grown up in those countries. It is fully admitted that the United States possess the same rights, although they have been exercised by them only in a single instance, and have not, since the year 1813, been exercised at all; but beyond these rights they possess none.

To the interests and establishments which British industry and enterprise have created Great Britain owes protection. That protection will be given, both as regards settlement and freedom of trade and navigation, with every attention not to infringe the co-ordinate rights of the United States; it being the earnest desire of the British Government, so long as the joint occupancy continues, to regulate its own obligations by the same rule which governs the obligations of any other occupying party.

Fully sensible, at the same time, of the desirableness of a more definite settlement, as between Great Britain and the United States, the British Government will be ready at any time to terminate the present state of joint occupancy by an arrangement of delimitation. But such arrangement only can be admitted as shall not derogate from the right of Great Britain as acknowledged by treaty, nor prejudice the advantages which British subjects, under the same sanction, now enjoy in that part of the world.

Protocol of the seventh conference of the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 19th December, 1826.

Present: Mr. Gallatin and Mr. Addington.

The American plenipotentiary delivered and annexed to the protocol the counter statement of the claims and views of the United States relative to the country west of the Rocky or Stony mountains.

Adjourned.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

A true copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

The American plenipotentiary has read with attention the exposition of the claims and views of Great Britain in regard to the territory west of the Rocky or Stony mountains, annexed by the British plenipotentiaries to the protocol of the last conference, and assures them that it will receive from his Government all the consideration to which it is so justly entitled.

He will not make any observations on that part of the exposition, which, as explanatory of the views of the British Government in reference to a continued joint occupancy, he can only refer to his Government. The remarks he will now offer are necessarily limited to the respective claims of the two countries, and to the proposals for a definitive arrangement which have been made by each party.

Great Britain claims no exclusive sovereignty over any portion of the territory in question. Her claim extends to the whole, but is limited to a right of joint occupancy in common with other States, leaving the right of exclusive dominion in abeyance. She insists that her and Spain's conflicting claims were finally adjusted by the convention of Nootka in 1790; that all the arguments and pretensions, whether resting upon priority of discovery or derived from any other consideration, were definitively set at rest by that convention; that, from its date, it was only in its text and stipulations that the title, either on her part or on that of Spain, was to be traced; and that it was agreed by that convention that all the parts of the Northwest Coast of America not previously occupied by either party should thenceforward be equally open to the subjects of both for all purposes of commerce and settlement, the sovereignty remaining in abeyance.

It is then declared that, in reference either to the rights derived to the United States from Spain by virtue of the treaty of 1819, or to that supposed to be derived from the acquisition of Louisiana, which province did, in the year 1790, belong to Spain, the United States have, with these rights, necessarily succeeded to the limitations by which they were defined, and the obligations under which they were to be exercised, in conformity with the stipulations of the Nootka convention. Whence it is generally inferred that, whilst it is fully admitted that the United States possess the same rights as Great Britain over the country in question, namely, to navigate its waters, to settle in any part of it, and freely to trade with the inhabitants and occupiers of the same, beyond these rights the United States possess none, and that they cannot, therefore, claim exclusive sovereignty over any part of said territory.

It will, in the first place, be observed that, admitting that convention to be still in force, and of whatever construction it may be susceptible, this compact between Spain and Great Britain could only bind the parties to it, and can affect the claim of the United States so far only as it is derived from Spain. If, therefore, they have a claim in right of their own discoveries, explorations, and settlements, as this cannot be impaired by the Nootka convention, it becomes indispensably necessary, in order to defeat such claim, to show a better prior title on the part of Great Britain, derived from some other consideration than the stipulations of that convention. But, on examining that instrument, it will be found to be apparently merely of a commercial nature, and in no shape to affect the question of distinct jurisdiction and exclusive sovereignty.

It was agreed by that convention "that the respective subjects of the two parties should not be disturbed or molested, either in navigating or carrying on their fisheries in the Pacific Ocean or in the South Seas, or in landing on the coasts of those seas in places not already occupied for the purpose of carrying on their commerce with the natives of the country, or of making settlements there;" and further, "that, in all places, wherever the subjects of either shall have made settlements since the month of April, 1789, or shall hereafter make any, the subjects of the other shall have free access, and shall carry on their trade without any disturbance or molestation."

It is difficult, on reading those provisions, and on recollecting in what cause the convention originated, to believe that any other settlements could have been contemplated than such as were connected with the commerce to be carried on with the natives. Indeed, it is as being only of a commercial nature that the Nootka convention may be positively asserted to be now in force, the commercial treaties between Great Britain and Spain having, subsequent to the war which had intervened, been alone renewed by the treaty of July, 1814.

Admitting, however, that the word "settlement" was meant in its most unlimited sense, it is evident that the stipulations had not for object to settle the territorial claims of the parties, and had no connexion with an ultimate partition of the country for the purpose of permanent colonization.

Those stipulations permitted promiscuous and intermixed settlements everywhere and over the whole face of the country to the subjects of both parties, and even declared every such settlement, made by either party, in a degree common to the other. Such a state of things is clearly incompatible with distinct jurisdiction and sovereignty. The convention, therefore, could have had no such object in view as to fix the relations of the contracting Powers in that respect. On that subject it established or changed nothing, but left the parties where it found them, and in possession of all such rights, whether derived from discovery or from any other consideration, as belonged to each, to be urged by each whenever the question of permanent and separate possession and sovereignty came to be discussed between them.

It is, indeed, expressly admitted that the convention provided for commerce and settlements, leaving the sovereignty in abeyance. And Great Britain at this time claims only a right of joint occupancy in common with other nations, leaving the right of exclusive dominion in abeyance. It is not perceived how it can, at the same time, be asserted that the arguments and pretensions of both parties were definitively set at rest by the convention, and that it is only in its text and stipulations that the title on either side is now to be traced.

Commerce and settlements might, indeed, be made by either party during the joint occupancy without regard to the respective pretensions or title from whatever consideration derived. But since the sovereignty, since the right of exclusive dominion has been left in abeyance, that right over any part of the country, to whichever party belonging, has not been extinguished, but only suspended, and must revive to its full extent whenever that joint occupancy may cease.

Whenever, therefore, a final line of demarcation becomes the subject of discussion, the United States have a right, notwithstanding and in conformity with the Nootka convention, to appeal in support of their claims, not only to their own discoveries, but to all the rights derived from the acquisition of Louisiana, and from the treaty of 1819 with Spain, in the same manner as if that convention had never been made. The question to be examined is, whether those claims are supported by the laws and usages of nations?

It may be admitted, as an abstract principle, that in the origin of society first occupancy and cultivation were the foundation of the rights of private property and of national sovereignty. But that principle, on which, principally, if not exclusively, it would seem that the British Government wishes to rely, could be permitted, in either case, to operate alone and without restriction so long only as the extent of vacant territory was such, in proportion to population, that there was ample room for every individual and for every distinct community or nation without danger of collision with others. As, in every society, it had soon become necessary to make laws regulating the manner in which its members should be permitted to occupy and to acquire vacant land within its acknowledged boundaries, so also nations found it indispensable for the preservation of peace, and for the exercise of distinct jurisdiction, to adopt, particularly after the discovery of America, some general rules which should determine the important previous question, "Who had a right to occupy?"

The two rules generally, perhaps universally, recognized and consecrated by the usage of nations have flowed from the nature of the subject.

By virtue of the first, prior discovery gave a right to occupy, provided that occupancy took place within a reasonable time, and was ultimately followed by permanent settlements and by the cultivation of the soil.

In conformity with the second, the right derived from prior discovery and settlement was not confined to the spot so discovered or first settled. The extent of territory which would attach to such first discovery or settlement might not, in every case, be precisely determined. But that the first discovery, and subsequent settlement within a reasonable time, of the mouth of a river, particularly if none of its branches had been explored prior to such discovery, gave the right of occupancy, and ultimately of sovereignty, to the whole country drained by such river and its several branches, has been generally admitted. And in a question between the United States and Great Britain her acts have, with propriety, been appealed to as showing that the principles on which they rely accord with her own.

It is, however, now contended that the British charters, extending in most cases from the Atlantic Ocean to the South Seas, must be considered as cessions of the Sovereign to certain grantees, to the exclusion only of his other subjects, and as of no validity against the subjects of other States. This construction does not appear either to have been that intended at the time by the grantors, nor to have governed the subsequent conduct of Great Britain.

By excepting from the grants, as was generally the case, such lands as were already occupied by the subjects of other civilized nations, it was clearly implied that no other exception was contemplated, and that the grants were intended to include all the unoccupied lands within their respective boundaries, to the exclusion of all other persons or nations whatsoever. In point of fact, the whole country drained by the several rivers emptying into the Atlantic Ocean, the mouths of which were within those charters, has, from Hudson's bay to Florida, and, it is believed, without exception, been occupied and held by virtue of those charters. Not only has this principle been thus fully confirmed, but it has been notoriously enforced much beyond the sources of the rivers on which the settlements were formed. The priority of the French settlements on the rivers flowing westwardly from the Alleghany mountains into the Mississippi was altogether disregarded, and the right of the Atlantic colonies to extend beyond those mountains, as growing out of the contiguity of territory, and as asserted in the ancient charters, was effectually and successfully enforced.

It is true that the two general rules which have been mentioned might often conflict with each other. Thus, in the instance just alluded to, the discovery of the main branch of the Mississippi, including the mouth of that river and the occupation of the intervening province of Louisiana by another nation, gave rise at last to a compromise of those conflicting claims, and induced Great Britain to restrain hers within narrower limits than those originally designated.

But it is the peculiar character of the claim of the United States that it is founded on both principles, which, in this case, unite both in its support, and convert it into an incontestable right. It is in vain that, in order to avert that conclusion, an attempt is made to consider the several grounds on which that right is urged as incompatible one with the other, as if the United States were obliged to select only one and to abandon the others. In different hands, the several claims would conflict one with the other; now, united in the same power, they support each other. The possessors of Louisiana might have contended, on the ground of contiguity, for the adjacent territory on the Pacific Ocean, with the discoverers of the coast and of its main rivers. The several discoveries of the Spanish and American navigators might, separately, have been considered as so many steps in the progress of discovery, and giving only imperfect claims to each party. All those various claims, from whatever consideration derived, are now brought united against the pretensions of any other nation.

1st. The actual possession and populous settlements of the valley of the Mississippi, including Louisiana, and now under one sovereignty, constitute a strong claim to the westwardly extension of that former province over the contiguous vacant territory, and to the occupation and sovereignty of the country as far as the Pacific Ocean. If some trading factories on the shores of Hudson's bay have been considered by Great Britain as giving an exclusive right of occupancy as far as the Rocky mountains; if the infant settlements on the more southern Atlantic shores justified a claim thence to the South Seas, and which was actually enforced to the Mississippi, that of the millions already within reach of those seas cannot consistently be resisted. For it will not be denied that the extent of contiguous territory, to which an actual settlement gives a prior right, must depend, in a considerable degree, on the magnitude and population of that settlement, and on the facility with which the vacant adjacent land may, within a short time, be occupied, settled and cultivated by such population, as compared with the probability of its being thus occupied and settled, from any other quarter.

It has been objected that, in the grant of Louisiana to Crozat by Louis XIV, that province is described as "the country drained by the waters emptying, directly or indirectly, into the Mississippi," excluding thereby, by implication, the country drained by the waters emptying into the Pacific.

Crozat's grant was not for the whole of the province of Louisiana, as it was afterwards extended by France herself, and as it is now held by the United States. It was bounded, in that grant, of 1712, by Carolina to the east, by New Mexico to the west, and on the north by the Illinois, which were then part of Canada. The most northerly branches of the Mississippi embraced in the grant were the Ohio, at that time called Wabash by the French, and the Missouri, the true course of which was not known at that time, and the sources of which were not supposed to extend north of the 42d parallel of latitude. No territory on the west of the Mississippi was intended to be included in the grant north of that parallel; and as New Mexico, which bounded it on the west, was understood to extend even further north, it was impossible that any territory should have been included west of the sources of the rivers emptying into the Mississippi.

All the territory north of the 42d parallel of latitude claimed by France was included, at that time, not in Louisiana, but in the government of New France, as Canada was then called; and, by referring to the most authentic French maps, it will be seen that New France was made to extend over the territory drained, or supposed to be drained, by rivers emptying into the South Seas. The claim to a westwardly extension of those seas was thus early asserted as a part, not of Louisiana, but of New France. The King has reserved to himself, in Crozat's grant, the right of enlarging the government of Louisiana. This was done by an ordonnance, dated in the year 1717, which annexed the Illinois to it, and from that time the province extended as far as the most northern limit of the French possessions in North America, and thereby west of Canada or New France. The settlement of that northern limit still further strengthens the claim of the United States to the territory west of the Rocky mountains.

The limits between the northerly possessions of Great Britain in North America, and those of France in the same quarter, namely, Canada and Louisiana, were determined by Commissioners appointed in pursuance of the treaty of Utrecht. From the coast of Labrador to a certain point north of Lake Superior, those limits were fixed according to certain metes and bounds, and from that point the line of demarcation was agreed to extend indefinitely due west, along the 49th parallel of north latitude. It was in conformity with that arrangement that the United States did claim that parallel as the northern boundary of Louisiana. It has been accordingly thus settled as far as the Stony mountains, by the convention of 1818, between the United States and Great Britain; and no adequate reason can be given why the same boundary should not be continued as far as the claims of the two countries extend—that is to say, as far as the Pacific Ocean. This argument is not weakened by the fact that the British settlements west of the Stony mountains are solely due to the extension of those previously formed on the waters emptying into Hudson's bay. And it is from respect to a demarcation, considered as binding on the parties, that the United States had consented to confine their claim to the 49th parallel of latitude, namely, to a territory of the same breadth as Louisiana east of the Stony mountains, although, as founded on prior discoveries, that claim would have extended much further north.

2d. The United States have an undoubted right to claim by virtue both of the Spanish discoveries and of their own. Setting aside all those which are not supported by authentic evidence, some of the most important were made by Spanish navigators prior to Cook's voyage. In 1774, Perez, in the Spanish corvette Santiago, discovered Nootka sound, in latitude 49° 30′, and sailed to the 55th degree, discovering Sangara island and Perez (now called Dixon's) entrance, north of Queen Charlotte island. In 1775, Quadra, in the Spanish schooner Felicidad, of which Maurelle was pilot, discovered various ports between the 55th and 58th degree, and explored the coast from 42° to 54°, landing at several places, imposing names to some, and not being at any time hardly more than ten leagues from the shore.

In other Spanish voyages of a subsequent date, those of Arteaga and Quadra in 1779, and of Martinez and Haro in 1788, various other parts of the Northwest Coast of America were explored as far north as the 60th degree of north latitude.

The Straits of Fuca were discovered, or again found, in 1787, by Captain Barclay, of the Imperial Eagle, a vessel fitted out at Ostend. The entrance was, in 1788, again visited by the English captains, Meares and Duncan. In the same year, Captain Gray, of the American sloop Washington, (who arrived at Nootka in September, coming from the south, where he had landed,) penetrated fifty miles up the straits. They were explored, in 1791, by the Spanish captains, Quimper and Eliza, beyond the 50th degree of latitude. Their complete survey and the discovery of the northern outlet, in 1792, are due principally to Captain Vancouver, who sailed through them in company with the Spanish vessels Sutil and Mexicano.

The discovery, which belongs exclusively to the United States and in their own right, is that of the river Columbia.

The continuity of the coast from the 42d to the 48th degree of latitude had been ascertained by the voyage of Quadra in 1775, and confirmed by that of Captain Cook in 1778. The object of discovery thenceforth was that of a large river, which should open a communication with the interior of the country. This had escaped Quadra, who had sailed in sight of the entrance afterwards discovered. Meares failed likewise in his attempt, in the year 1788, to make the discovery. Captain Vancouver was not more fortunate. After having also sailed along the coast from south to north to the 48th degree, he recorded in his journal of 29th April, 1792, which he had too much probity afterwards to alter, his opinion that there was no large river south of 48°, but only small creeks. On the ensuing day he met, at sea, with Captain Gray, then commanding the American ship "Columbia," who informed him of the existence of the river, at the mouth of which he (Gray) had been for several days without being able to enter it.

Captain Vancouver proceeded to Fuca's straits, and Captain Gray returned to the south, where he completed his discovery, having, on the 11th of May, entered the river which bears the name of his ship, and ascended it upwards of twenty miles. He then, having also discovered Gray's harbor, went to Nootka sound, where he again met with Captain Vancouver, to whom he communicated his discoveries, and gave him a rough chart of the river. With this information, one of Captain Vancouver's officers was sent to take a survey of Gray's harbor, and another that of the Columbia river, which he ascended about eighty miles higher up than Gray. Yet, in order to found a claim derived from a share in the discovery, that of Captain Gray is called only a step in the progress of discovery; and it is attempted to divide its merit between him, Meares, and Captain Vancouver's officer.

It must again be repeated that the sole object of discovery was "the river," and, coming from sea, the mouth of the river. Meares only followed Quadra's track. Had he suggested or suspected the existence of a river when he was near its entrance, it would have been a step in the progress of discovery. So far from it that, in his map, he has laid the presumed mouth of the great river of the west, of the traditional Oregon, of the real Columbia, in the Straits of Fuca. The very names which he imposed—Cape Disappointment and Deception bay—attest his failure.

Captain Vancouver having completed his survey of that part of the coast, with a conviction that no large river emptied there into the ocean, would not have explored it again had he not received the information from Captain Gray of his discoveries; and, in fact, in his second visit to that quarter, he surveyed or caused to be surveyed only the harbor and the river which had been indicated to him. The lieutenant sent to the Columbia, and who never would have been there had it not been for Captain Gray's information, performed, no doubt with fidelity, the mechanical duty of taking the soundings one hundred miles up its course. In that consists his sole merit; in the discovery he had not the slightest share. The important services rendered to navigation and to science by that officer and by Captain Vancouver are fully acknowledged; and their well-earned reputation cannot be increased by ascribing to them what belongs exclusively to another.

Louisiana having been acquired by the United States in 1803, an expedition was immediately ordered by Government to examine its western districts. In the course of this, Captains Lewis and Clark ascended the Missouri to its source, crossed the Rocky mountains, and explored the course of the Columbia from its most eastern sources to its mouth, where they arrived on the 6th of November, 1805. There they erected the works called Fort Clatsop, and wintered in 1805 and 1806. And thus was the discovery of the river commenced and completed by the United States before, as it is firmly believed, any settlement had been made on it, or any of its branches been explored by any other nation.

This is corroborated by the statement of the British plenipotentiaries. After having given, as the date of Lewis and Clark's exploration, not the year 1805, but the years 1805–'6, they assert that, if not before, at least in the same and subsequent years, Mr. Thompson had already established a post on the headwaters of the northern or main branch of the Columbia. Had that post been established in 1805, before Lewis and Clark's exploration, another and more distinct mode of expression would have been adopted. But it cannot be seriously contended that, if Mr. Thompson had in that year reached one of the sources of the Columbia north of the fiftieth degree of latitude, this, compared with the complete American exploration, would give to Great Britain "a title to parity at least, if not priority of discovery, as opposed to the United States."

In the year 1810 Mr. Astor, a citizen of the United States, fitted out two expeditions for the mouth of the Columbia—one by sea and the other by land, from the Missouri. In March, 1811, the establishment of Astoria was accordingly commenced near the mouth of the river before any British settlement had been made south of the forty-ninth parallel. From that principal post several other settlements were formed—one of them, contrary to the opinion entertained by the British plenipotentiaries, at the mouth of the Wanahata, several hundred miles up and on the right bank of the Columbia.

These establishments fell into the hands of the British during the war; and that of Astoria has since been formally restored, in conformity with the treaty of Ghent. On the circumstances of that restitution it is sufficient to observe, that with the various despatches from and to the officers of the British Government the United States have no concern; that it is not stated how the verbal communications of the British minister at Washington were received, nor whether the American Government consented to accept the restitution with the reservation as expressed in the despatches to that minister from his Government; and that the only written document affecting the restoration, known to be in possession of that of the United States, is the act of restoration itself, which contains no exception, reservation, or protest, whatever.

It has thus been established that the Columbia river was first discovered by the United States; that that first discovery was attended by a complete exploration of the river from its most easterly source to the mouth, before any such exploration had been made by any other nation, by a simultaneous actual occupation and possession, and by subsequent establishments and settlements made within a reasonable time, and which have been interrupted only by the casualties of war.

This, it is contended, gives, according to the acknowledged law and usages of nations, a right to the whole country drained by that river and by its tributary streams, which could have been opposed only by the conflicting claim derived from the possession of Louisiana. Both united, and strengthened by the other Spanish and American discoveries along the coast, (and without reference to the cession of the pretensions of Spain derived from other considerations,) establish, it is firmly believed, a stronger title to the country above described, and along the coast as far north at least as the forty-ninth parallel of latitude, than has ever at any former time been asserted by any nation to vacant territory.

Before the subject is dismissed, it may be proper to observe that the United States had no motive, in the year 1790, to protest against the Nootka convention, since their exclusive right to the territory on the Pacific originated in Gray's discovery, which took place only in 1792. The acquisition of Louisiana and their last treaty with Spain are still posterior.

On the formality called "taking possession," though no actual possession of the country is taken, and on the validity of sales of land and surrender of sovereignty by Indians, who are for the first time brought into contact with civilized men; who have no notion of what they mean by either sovereignty or property in land; who do not even know what cultivation is; with whom it is difficult to communicate even upon visible objects, the American plenipotentiary thinks that he may abstain from making any remarks.

Whilst supporting their claim by arguments, which they think conclusive, the United States have not been inattentive to the counter claims of Great Britain.

They, indeed, deny that the trading posts of the Northwest Company give any title to the territory claimed by America, not only because no such post was established within the limits claimed, when the first American settlement was made, but because the title of the United States is considered as having been complete before any of those traders had appeared on the waters of the Columbia. It is also believed that mere factories, established solely for the purpose of trafficking with the natives and without any view to cultivation and permanent settlement, cannot, of themselves, and unsupported by any other consideration, give any better title to dominion and absolute sovereignty than similar establishments made in a civilized country.

But the United States have paid due regard to the discoveries by which the British navigators have so eminently distinguished themselves, to those perhaps not less remarkable made by land from the upper lakes to the Pacific, and to the contiguity of the possessions of Great Britain on the waters of Hudson's bay to the territory bordering on that ocean. Above all, they have been earnestly desirous to preserve and cherish not only the peaceful but the friendly relations which happily subsist between the two countries. And, with that object in view, their offer of a permanent line of demarcation has been made, under a perfect conviction that it was attended with the sacrifice of a portion of what they might justly claim.

Viewed as a matter of mutual convenience, and with equal desire on both sides to avert, by a definitive line of delimitation, any possible cause of collision in that quarter, every consideration connected with the subject may be allowed its due weight.

If the present state of occupancy is urged on the part of Great Britain, the probability of the manner in which the territory west of the Rocky mountains must be settled belongs also essentially to the subject. Under whatever nominal sovereignty that country may be placed, and whatever its ultimate destinies may be, it is nearly reduced to a certainty that it will be almost exclusively peopled by the surplus population of the United States. The distance from Great Britain, and the expense incident to emigration, forbid the expectation of any being practicable from that quarter but on a comparatively small scale. Allowing the rate of increase to be the same in the United States and in the North American British possessions, the difference in the actual population of both is such that the progressive rate which would, within forty years, add three millions to these, would, within the same time, give a positive increase of more than twenty millions to the United States. And if circumstances, arising from localities and habits, have given superior facilities to British subjects of extending their commerce with the natives, and to that expansion which has the appearance and the appearance only of occupancy; the slower but sure progress and extension of an agricultural population will be regulated by distance, by natural obstacles, and by its own amount. The primitive right of acquiring property and sovereignty by occupancy alone, admitting it to be unlimited in theory, cannot extend beyond the capacity of occupying and cultivating the soil.

It may also be observed that, in reality, there were but three nations which had both the right and the power to colonize the territory in question—Great Britain, the United States, and Spain, or now the new American States. These are now excluded in consequence of the treaty of 1819. The United States, who have purchased their right for a valuable consideration, stand now in their place, and on that ground, in the view entertained of the subject by the British Government, are, on a final partition of the country, fairly entitled to two shares.

Under all the circumstances of the case, as stated on both sides, the United States offer a line which leaves to Great Britain by far the best portion of the fur trade, the only object at this time of the pursuit of her subjects in that quarter, and a much greater than her proportionate share of the country with a view to permanent settlement, if the relative geographical situation and means of colonizing of both parties are taken into consideration. From the 42° of north latitude to the Observatory inlet, in about 55° 30′, there is a front on the Pacific of almost fourteen degrees of latitude, which the forty-ninth parallel divides into two nearly equal parts. The mouth of the Columbia river, if accepted as a boundary, would leave less than one-third to the United States.

The offer of the free navigation of that river, when the whole territory drained by all its tributary streams, including the northernmost branches, might have been justly claimed, would have also given to Great Britain, in time of peace, all the commercial advantages which it can afford to the Americans.

In the case of a war, (which God forbid,) whatever might be the result on shore, the line proposed by Great Britain, even with the addition of the detached and defenceless territory she offered, would leave the sea border at her mercy, and the United States without a single port; whilst the boundary proposed by them might, during that period, deprive Great Britain only of the use of the port at the mouth of the Columbia, and would leave her in the secure possession of numerous seaports, perhaps less convenient, but still affording ample means of communication with the interior. That line, indeed, with such slight reciprocal modifications as the topography of the country may indicate, would establish the most natural and mutually defensible boundary that can be found, and for that reason the least liable to collision, and the best calculated to perpetuate peace and harmony between the two Powers.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 41.] LONDON, December 21, 1826.

SIR: You will find by the protocol of the fifth conference that there was some conversation on the subject of the northeast boundary, and there was also some on the renewal of the convention of 1815, though not mentioned in the protocol.

I think it probable that the convention will ultimately be renewed without alteration. The distress of the country is by many, though erroneously, in my opinion, ascribed to the removal of restrictions in the navigation laws, which Mr. Huskisson has already effected, and he is apprehensive that this is not the proper time to carry on further the system of enlargement. Much difficulty will also be experienced in agreeing on explanatory provisions, yet it is proper to be prepared for every contingency; and, although he was not yet ready to propose what he wished in an official form, I can state his views, so, I hope, as to enable the President to form his opinion, and to give me definitive instructions on that subject.

The alterations may consist of mere explanatory clauses, or embrace new provisions.

The British complain of two enactments, on account of which explanatory additional articles in the convention were desired. The first is that of South Carolina relative to seamen of color. I have observed that that law did not place British vessels on a worse footing than those of other nations or of the United States. They insist that, still, by the convention, British vessels navigated according to law, and having the requisite number of seamen, British subjects, are entitled to admission into our ports, although some may be either of color, (and if British subjects, no matter how many,) or subjects of another country. They feel, however, that this is a delicate and difficult subject, and do not seem disposed to insist.

The second is the law of Congress which imposes a different rate of duty on rolled than on hammered bar iron. I said that the distinction not applying to the country where, but to the manner in which manufactured, was not in opposition to the provisions of the convention. They insist that this is evasive, since the rolled iron is, it may be said exclusively, a British manufacture; and they say that they might retaliate on the article of cotton. If a difference of duties can be made on account of the different manner in which the article is manufactured or prepared for market, Great Britain may justly lay a higher duty on our clean upland cotton than on the unclean which comes from the Levant, from Egypt, or from India. These are precisely of the same species with the American upland, differing only in the kind of machinery or degree of attention with which they are cleaned or prepared for market. It is added that an extra duty would be much more justifiable in this than in the case of rolled iron, which is really worth less than the hammered, whilst the American upland cotton is, on account of the manner in which it is prepared, always worth more, and does sell for more than the corresponding species of India or the Levant.

The question, therefore, is, whether a clause will be admissible providing that the same articles shall not be liable to a higher rate of duty on account of a difference in the manner in which they may have been manufactured or prepared for market.

We have, on the other hand, some reason to complain of certain duties laid in London on foreigners, exclusively, under the name of scavage. It is a kind of exclusive privilege of packing goods vested in the city by some act of Edward III. In the cases of American produce imported in American vessels and some others, the Treasury pays the duties to the city which might be demanded from American owners. In other cases, not coming precisely within the words of the convention, the duty is demanded. I do not ask instructions on that point, as it is somewhat complex, and I will of course endeavor to obtain an explanatory or additional article, if it is not concluded to continue it without any alteration.

As to any new provisions, I proposed, though not in a formal way, that of a general admission without exception either as to the place of which the article was the produce, or as to that from which imported, or to which intended to be exported. Mr. Huskisson immediately said that we had a similar article in our treaty with Guatemala; and that, whatever might be his abstract opinions, he could by no means agree to such a condition. Colonies, and whatever was embraced by the East India Company monopoly, must be excluded. Nor would he extend the privilege to vessels other than those coming directly from the United States to Great Britain, and vice versa. The proposition he might make in its utmost latitude would be, that vessels of the United States coming from the United States should be permitted to bring into Great Britain, on the same terms with British vessels, articles not the produce or manufacture of the United States, excepting always the produce and manufacture of the British colonies and possessions abroad, (East Indies, &c.,) of China, and perhaps of all countries beyond the Cape of Good Hope. It is therefore on that proposal that you must decide. You will of course understand that precisely the same privileges are to be allowed, and precisely with the same exceptions to British vessels in the United States. Whatever may be the restrictions, provided they are precisely the same, I have not the least doubt that a provision to that effect will be comparatively more advantageous to our navigation than to that of Great Britain, and that nearly in the same proportion, as from experience has been found to be the case, with respect to the articles embraced by the existing convention.

We had also some conversation on the subject of the miscellaneous articles that in 1824 had been proposed by the British plenipotentiaries. On my asking whether they thought it peferable to add them to the convention of 1815, or to make them the subject of a distinct one, the answer was immediately given in favor of the latter mode. From what fell in conversation, I had an opportunity to state what I was instructed to ask respecting the surrender of runaway slaves. That they were no acquisition to Canada was acknowledged, and no objection was made to the principle; but several were suggested by Mr. Huskisson arising from the difficulties thrown in the way of everything of that kind by the courts and by the abolition British associations.

I fear that there will not be time to write you by this packet on what has passed concerning the northeast boundary.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State, Washington.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 47.] LONDON, December 30, 1826.

SIR: An agreement with this Government on the preliminary arrangements and mode of proceedings in the reference to an umpire of the discordant reports of the Commissioners appointed under the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent must embrace two objects—evidence and argument. Although I have not matured my own views of the subject, I proposed verbally to the British Commissioners the following outlines:

Evidence.

1. All the surveys, maps, reports, and documents ordered by the late commission to be filed, and all the documents recited by either of the two agents in their arguments, the authenticity and correctness of which were not questioned by the other agent, to be admitted and laid before the arbiter as undisputed evidence.

2. All the surveys and maps offered by either party to the late board, and all such additional documents as either party may wish to be given in evidence, to be examined within ——— by both Governments, and such as may be agreed on by both to be added to the admitted list.

3. All such said surveys, maps, and documents as may be objected to by either party to be likewise laid before the umpire, together with the written objections of the other party, leaving the umpire to make whatever use of the same he shall think proper, and without any further discussion by either party thereon unless called for by the umpire.

4. Each party to give authentic copies of such documents as have issued from his authority, or are exclusively in his possession, to the other party, whenever applied for, within ——— months.

Argument.

1. The two parties to communicate, one to the other, simultaneously their statement of the case. This to be done within ———; and within ——— thereafter each party shall substitute to his first statement another, containing no new matter save what is necessary to refute the argument of the other party.

2. These two last mutually-communicated statements shall be laid before the umpire either as the opening or as definitive arguments on both sides, as the two Powers may agree after such mutual communication, but in either case as a substitute to the reports of the late Commissioners, and to the arguments of the late agents.

3. If either Power disagree to the said statements being considered as definitive, each shall be at liberty to adduce new arguments, replies, &c., before the umpire, but not to adduce new evidence unless called for by said umpire.

4. If both Powers shall agree that the said statements be considered as definitive, no further discussion or argument shall take place; and the umpire shall decide on the evidence and statements as above stated, unless he should call for further explanations on any point.

5. In this last case the application of the umpire shall be communicated to both parties, who may, on such point, furnish evidence, reply and argue, in the manner that shall be prescribed by the umpire.

This first sketch will perhaps induce you to communicate your views on the subject. Special instructions in that complex business may not find their application; but I hope not to want any. For you will perceive that this projet of convention embraces only preliminary arrangements, leaving to each Government the power to offer and object to new evidence, to prepare the statements of the case, to correct them, and to agree or not whether they shall be definitive, which, in fact, embraces all that is essential.

There is no disposition on the part of the British plenipotentiaries either to attempt a compromise or to transfer the negotiation to Washington, but I will persevere in my efforts to obtain this object.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 79.] LONDON, May 29, 1827.

SIR: Our eighth conference took place on the 24th instant. The protocol is not yet agreed on.

I made the declaration reserving to my Government the right of contending for the full extent of the claims of the United States to the territory west of the Stony mountains, on which Mr. Huskisson said that they would, on their part, enter on the record a protest against those claims.

I then stated that the President could not agree to the provisions of the second article of the projet of convention for a joint occupancy of the territories in question, and that, after a deliberate examination of the subject, he was still of opinion that a simple renewal of the former agreement for a limited term of years was sufficient, and the most eligible course to be adopted for the present; it being of course understood that during that period the two Governments would, according to the former suggestion of the British plenipotentiaries, unite their endeavors to adjust their differences by the establishment of a permanent boundary in that quarter. This was taken ad referendum, Mr. Huskisson saying that he must consult his colleagues on that subject.

We had afterwards a long discussion on the contemplated agreement on the subject of the northeastern boundary, and which, as you are already informed, relates only to the manner of bringing fairly the case before an arbiter for his decision. As we came to no result on any one point, I will wait to give you a statement of the proceedings till something more definitive shall have taken place.

As we were going to adjourn, Mr. Huskisson having mentioned that he had yet some persons to consult before he could make any specific proposition on the subject of the renewal of the commercial convention, an informal conversation ensued, in the course of which I told him that we could not agree to his intended clause respecting rolled iron. He expressed himself very warmly on that point, and said that if we objected to this, the intercourse between the two countries might be left, like that with the colonies, to be regulated by mutual legislation. I told him the result, in that case, might eventually prove the same, and be prejudicial to both countries. As it was asserted on their part, as I understood them, that the Executive of the United States had actually acknowledged that the higher duty on rolled than on forged iron was inconsistent with the convention, I said that a discussion on this point not having been anticipated, I was not in possession of what they alluded to, and requested Mr. Addington, who must be acquainted with the circumstances, to communicate, in an unofficial way, the papers which might have passed on the occasion. He has accordingly sent me some memoranda and references, with which, and the eleventh volume of the State Papers and Niles' Register, I have the President's messages of 12th February, 1818, and 1st May, 1822, and letters from Messrs. Bagot, Antrobus, and G. Canning. But there may be other messages, and I have not been able to find either of Mr. Adams' letters alluded to in the correspondence, nor of the reports of the committees to whom the subject was referred, so that I am in possession of their argument and not of ours. In your despatch you only say, in reference to the past, that the complaint had been heretofore examined and shown to have no foundation. I will, when the subject is regularly taken up, avail myself of your subsequent observations on the merits of the case, and avoid any altercation on questions of fact.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

P. S.—I did not omit, in respect to the western territory, to remind the British plenipotentiaries of the act of Parliament by which Great Britain had actually extended her jurisdiction over it, and to say that it was a matter of surprise that any objection could have been made to the supposed intention of the United States to pursue the same course. All that could be said in answer by Mr. Huskisson was, that it was to the intention of establishing a custom-house and exacting duties that he had objected as contrary to the third article of the convention of 1818. So far he may be right.

A. G.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 82.] LONDON, June 5, 1827.

SIR: We have had no conference since that of the 24th ultimo, the protocol of which is not yet agreed on.

I found that our long discussion on the northeast boundary was, from the numerous points to be arranged, extremely desultory. There were, on the other hand, some principles which it would have been very desirable to settle before it was attempted to reduce the projet of convention to the form of articles, as the whole complexion would vary according as those principles might be settled. Finding it, however, necessary to bring the questions to some issue, I have pursued the mode of which the British plenipotentiaries had given the example, and I enclose the copy of a non-official projet which I sent to them as an informal paper, intended only to bring before us in a more definite shape all the points which had been the subject of verbal discussion. I stated in the private note accompanying the projet that it was not offered as definitive, not being in every respect satisfactory to myself, and, what is strictly true, that it had been my study to draw it in such manner that its operation might be perfectly equal on both parties.

The general maps alluded to are not yet agreed on, as I am obliged to dispute every inch of the ground to prevent any undue advantage being taken. It would be premature to attempt to give you the necessary explanations of some of the provisions of the projet.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

[Enclosed in No. 82.]

NOT OFFICIAL.

Projet of convention for the settlement of the 5th article of the Treaty of Ghent.

Whereas it is stipulated in the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent that, in case the Commissioners appointed under that article for the settlement of the boundary line therein described should not be able to agree upon such boundary line, a reference should be made of the point or points on which the said Commissioners differed to the decision of some friendly Sovereign or State, which decision should be considered by the contracting parties as final and conclusive: that case having now occurred, and it having, therefore, become expedient to proceed to and regulate the said reference, the President of the United States, &c., &c.

ART. 1. It is agreed that the points of difference which have arisen in the settlement of the boundary between the American and British dominions, as described in the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, shall be referred, as therein provided, to some friendly Sovereign or State, who shall be invited to investigate and make a decision upon such points of difference. The two contracting Powers engage to proceed in concert to the choice of such friendly Sovereign or State as soon as the ratifications of this convention shall have been exchanged, and to pray the arbiter thus chosen to give his (or "use their best endeavors to obtain a") decision, if practicable, within two years after he (or the arbiter) shall have signified his consent to act as such.

ART. 2. In order to establish in what the points of difference do consist, it is hereby declared, on the part of the United States, that they contend: 1st. That the northwest angle of Nova Scotia, mentioned in the treaty of 1783, is to be found at a point of the highlands lying due north, and about —— miles from the source of the river St. Croix, which divides a certain river that empties itself into the river St. Lawrence, and designated in the surveys executed under the late commission by the name of river Beaver, from the tributary streams of the river Restigouche, which last river falls into the Bay des Chaleurs, an arm of the Gulf St. Lawrence, which said Gulf, as the United States contend, is part of the Atlantic Ocean. 2dly. That the boundary line between the dominions of the two Powers, as described and intended by the treaty of 1783, extends due north from the source of the river St. Croix to the above described point, which, as the United States contend, is the northwest angle of Nova Scotia, and thence along the highlands which divide the rivers that empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence, from either the tributary streams of the river Restigouche and of the river St. John's, (which last river falls into Bay Fundy, and which bay, as the United States contend, is part of the Atlantic Ocean,) or the other rivers which fall into the Atlantic Ocean, to the northwesternmost head of the Connecticut river, so that the said line shall, through its whole extent, from the northwest angle of Nova Scotia, as above described, pass between the sources of the said rivers, leaving on the right hand, and within the dominions of Great Britain, the sources of all the rivers that empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence, and on the left hand, and within the dominions of the United States, the sources of the tributary streams of the rivers Restigouche and St. John's, as well as of all the other rivers which fall into the Atlantic Ocean. 3dly. That the northwesternmost source of the branch of Connecticut river, now known by the name of ——— stream, is the northwesternmost head of Connecticut river, described by the treaty of 1783, to which the boundary line aforesaid must extend, and thence proceed down the said branch to its junction with other branches of the said river, and down the said united branches, which, together, form the Connecticut river, to the place where it meets a line surveyed prior to the year 1776, under the authority of the then provinces or colonies of New York and Quebec, as being in the latitude of 45 degrees, and as the boundary line between the said provinces or colonies. 4thly. That so much of the last mentioned boundary line as had been actually thus surveyed prior to the year 1776, under the authority of the said provinces or colonies, was not by the treaty of Ghent intended to be again surveyed, but is and ought to remain, as heretofore, the boundary line between the dominions of the two Powers. And it is hereby declared, on the part of his Britannic Majesty, that—

ART. 3. The extracts of the reports of the late Commissioners which are annexed to this convention; two general maps of the surveys executed by direction of the said Commissioners, which maps have been signed by the plenipotentiaries at the same time with this convention, and are substituted to two conflicting general maps of the said surveys which had been laid before the said Commissioners; and the original map, published in the year 1755, called Mitchell's map, by which the framers of the treaty of 1783 are admitted to have regulated their proceedings, though other maps were consulted by them separately, shall be delivered to the minister or agent of the arbiter. But the boundary lines contended for by the two parties, respectively, and which are delineated in the two general maps of surveys aforesaid, so far as the maps extend, shall be taken and understood as described in the next preceding article, (or, if Art. 2 is omitted, "by each party, respectively, in the statements mentioned in the 5th article of this convention,") though the said lines and the several water courses should prove not to have been in every respect correctly set down in the said general maps.

ART. 4. Each of the contracting parties shall, within six months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, communicate to the other all the evidence intended to be brought in support of its claims, whether the same consists of public documents, books, maps, surveys, reports of surveyors, or is of any other nature, and whether it does or does not make part of the evidence which had been laid before the Commissioners aforesaid; which communication shall be made by the United States to his Britannic Majesty's minister or chargé at Washington, and by Great Britain to the minister or chargé of the United States at London.

Although such evidence may thereafter be contested as irrelevant, its authenticity shall not be questioned, such parts thereof only excepted as being offered only by one party shall be objected to by the other party, and the objections thereto delivered in writing by each Government, respectively, to the minister or chargé of the other party within twelve months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention.

No other evidence (unless as provided by the 7th article of this convention) shall be laid before the arbiter but such as may be deemed necessary by either party to rebut that produced by the other, and as shall likewise be communicated within twelve months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention; and such additional evidence shall also be deemed authentic unless objected to, and the objections communicated in writing, in same manner as aforesaid, within four months after such evidence shall have been communicated.

Each of the contracting parties shall be bound, on the application of the other party, to give authentic copies of such acts of a public nature, intended to be laid as evidence before the arbiter, as have been issued under his authority or are in his exclusive possession.

ART. 5. Each of the contracting parties shall, respectively, draw up a statement of his own case in such terms as he shall think expedient. These statements shall be mutually communicated to each other within six months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention; that is to say, the statement of the United States to his Britannic Majesty's minister or chargé at Washington, and that of Great Britain to the minister or chargé of the United States at London; and they shall be considered as a substitute to all the arguments of the agents of the two Powers under the late commission, and to such parts of the reports of the Commissioners as are not contained in the aforesaid extracts annexed to this convention.

ART. 6. All the documents, evidence, and statements above mentioned, as well as any additional statements which either of the contracting parties may deem necessary to lay before the arbiter on account of any new evidence produced, or of any new matter contained in the first statement of the other party, (such additional statements being likewise communicated to the other party,) shall be laid before the arbiter within twenty-four months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, unless the arbiter should not have within that time consented to act as such; in which case all the said documents, evidence, and statements shall be laid before him within six months after the time when he shall have consented to act, and shall in either case be considered thenceforward as definitive. But the contracting parties may, by mutual consent, previously agree to withdraw the first statements above mentioned, and to substitute others which shall be laid before the arbiter in lieu thereof, and shall, in the same manner, be considered, thenceforward, as definitive, and shall not undergo any alteration or amendment whatever.

ART. 7. In order, however, to facilitate the attainment of a just and equitable decision in the case so referred to the arbitrating Sovereign or State, it is agreed that, in the event of such Sovereign or State desiring further elucidation or explanation of any specific point contained in either of the said statements so submitted to him, the requisition for such elucidation shall be simultaneous to both parties, who shall, thereupon, be permitted to make each a written reply to the specific questions submitted by the said arbiter, but no further; and such replies shall be immediately communicated by each party to the other.

ART. 8. The decision of the arbiter shall be considered final and conclusive, and shall be carried into immediate effect by Commissioners appointed by the contracting Powers for that purpose.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 87.] LONDON, June 20, 1827.

SIR: Cabinet councils having been held on Saturday and Monday last, our conference did not take place till yesterday. The British plenipotentiaries expressed their assent to a renewal for ten years of the third article of the convention of 1818, but with a declaration, on the part of Great Britain, to be entered in the protocol, that, according to her understanding of the article, neither party could exercise exclusive jurisdiction in the territory in question. They further stated that they were willing to renew the commercial convention of 1815 for an indefinite time, but with a proviso that it might be annulled at any time on either party giving one year's notice, and with an additional article intended to prevent the laying a higher duty on rolled than on forged iron. In order that I might fully understand their intentions, they put in my hands (as non-official papers) the draughts of two conventions and of the intended declaration, copies of which are enclosed.

I replied, with respect to the declaration, that if entered in the protocol without a counter declaration on my part, it would be tantamount to an express article to the same effect, which I had explicitly stated could not be agreed to by the United States; and that, supposing I could frame such a counter declaration satisfactory to myself, it appeared to me that an agreement, accompanied by two such contradictory assertions of its true meaning and intention, would be nugatory and useless.

On the subject of the renewal of the commercial convention, I made some objections to the proposed mode of doing it, and said that, without discussing the interpretation heretofore put on the words "like articles" by either Government, we would now declare that that heretofore urged by Great Britain could not be acceded to without material injury to our domestic establishments, and that the United States could not, therefore, agree to the proposed additional article. I added, however, that I would take the papers into serious consideration, and not give my final answer till at the next conference. This answer cannot, indeed, materially differ from that I made verbally. But I wish for one opportunity more of discussing amicably both subjects, and that if, as according to present appearances, the negotiation should fail in both respects, no blame should attach to us for precipitancy or want of every endeavor to obtain a more favorable result.

With the same object in view, and to show the disposition of the United States to entertain favorably proposals that came from the British Government, I thought this to be the proper time to say that I was authorized to take into consideration the substance of the nine articles, which had been offered by the British plenipotentiaries at the 22d conference, of the negotiations of the year 1824. And pursuing the same course, of which Mr. Huskisson and Mr. Addington had given the example, I put in their hands, in the same manner, for their consideration, the paper C, of which copy is enclosed. Our next conference is appointed for Friday, 22d instant.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

The protocol of the eighth conference is enclosed in this despatch.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

[Enclosed in No. 87.]

Protocol of the eighth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 24th of May, 1824.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

The American plenipotentiary stated that, having submitted to his Government the protocols of the preceding conferences on the subject of the country west of the Stony mountains, he was instructed to express the regret of the President of the United States that the proposal of the boundary line in that quarter, which had been offered on their part, should have been declined, and, at the same time, to repeat, in the name of his Government, the declaration which he had already made, in substance, that the American Government does not hold itself bound hereafter, in consequence of any proposal which it has heretofore made, to agree to the line which has been so proposed and rejected, but will consider itself at liberty to contend for the full extent of the claims of the United States.

The American plenipotentiary further stated that the projet of convention for the renewal for a fresh term of years of the provision relative to the said country contained in the convention of 1818, which had been offered at the sixth conference by the British plenipotentiaries, had been taken into serious consideration by his Government; that, though animated by the same motives which had suggested the offer, they could not agree to the provisions of the second article of the projet; and that, after a deliberate examination of the subject, unable to propose any satisfactory modification, and persuaded that both Governments might confidently rely on the faithful execution of the former agreement, they still believed that, upon the whole, a simple renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818, for a limited term of years, as stated by the American plenipotentiary at the fourth conference, was, for the present, the most eligible measure that could be adopted. This renewed agreement would, as intimated by the British plenipotentiaries at the close of the fourth conference, be subject to the understanding that the two Governments should unite their endeavors, within the period assigned for its duration, to make a definitive settlement of the boundary to be drawn between them in the territories in question.

The British plenipotentiaries took the communication of the American plenipotentiary for reference to their Government; but declared that since the American plenipotentiary had reasserted, in the name of his Government, claims of an undefined extent to the territory on the Northwest Coast of America, they, equally on the part of Great Britain, hereby renewed the protest relative to the claims of Great Britain over that same territory which they had inserted in the protocol of their third conference.

The question of boundary under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent was then entered upon, and, after some general conversation, postponed for further consideration to a future conference.

Adjourned.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
W. HUSKISSON.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

CONVENTION RESPECTING THE NORTHWEST BOUNDARY.

His Britannic Majesty and the United States, being desirous of preventing the inconveniencies which might arise from the expiration of certain provisions in the convention between their respective countries, concluded at London on the 20th of October, 1818, which had for their object to regulate the relations between the two countries in respect to the territory of the western coast of North America, westward of the Rocky mountains, have, respectively, named plenipotentiaries, and given them full powers to treat concerning the same, namely: his Britannic Majesty, the Right Honorable William Huskisson, &c., &c., &c., and Henry Unwin Addington, Esq., &c., &c., &c.; and the United States, Albert Gallatin, &c., &c., &c., who, having exchanged their respective full powers, found in due and proper form, have agreed to and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. All the provisions of the third article of the convention between his Britannic Majesty and the United States of North America, concluded at London on the 20th October, 1818, are hereby further extended and continued, in full force and effect, for the term of ten years from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention, in the same manner as if the said article was herein recited word for word.

ARTICLE 2. The present convention shall be duly ratified, and the ratifications exchanged in six months from this time, or sooner, if possible. In witness whereof, &c., &c., &c.

C.

Answer of the American Plenipotentiary to certain proposals communicated by the British Plenipotentiaries in the course of the conferences with Mr. Rush of the year 1824, and concerning which they annexed the substance of nine articles to the protocol of the twenty-second conference.

ARTICLE 1. Agreed to in cases of murder and forgery only, and excepting the citizens or subjects natural born or naturalized of the party within whose dominions the criminals shall have taken refuge.

It is further proposed to extend the provisions of a mutual surrender: 1. To deserters from the military, naval, or merchant service of either party, with the same exception as aforesaid in respect of citizens or subjects of either. 2. To persons held to service or labor under the laws of either party taking refuge in any part of America within the dominions of the other.

ARTICLE 2. The courts are open, in respect of all claims, to all persons not lying under legal disabilities; but the United States cannot agree to afford any greater facilities for the settlement of the claims in question than are allowed by the laws of the land.

ARTICLE 3. The exemption from confiscation or sequestration in case of war or differences agreed to, provided that it shall be extended to every other species of private property (including vessels and cargoes, though yet on board) which may be within the dominions or jurisdiction of either party at the time when such war or differences shall take place or become known.

The same facilities for the recovery of debts being afforded by the laws of both countries to the citizens or subjects of either, the latter provision of the article appears unnecessary.

ARTICLE 4. Agreed to.

ARTICLE 5. Agreed to, provided such merchants may, nevertheless, be removed from their places of residence to the interior, if the party in whose dominions they are shall think it necessary.

ARTICLE 6. Agreed to.

ARTICLE 7. Agreed to.

ARTICLE 8. Agreed to.

This and the preceding articles, appearing mutually advantageous, will be agreed to, although it would have been more agreeable to the Government of the United States to have comprised in the same instrument an arrangement of all the subjects connected with belligerent and neutral rights, which, in their opinion, it is desirable to adjust by treaty; and though they therefore regret that some of those subjects were not favorably entertained by the British plenipotentiaries when brought forward by Mr. Rush in the course of the negotiations of the year 1824.

ARTICLE 9. Agreed to, as to the exemption from personal service, but not as to exemption from direct taxes.

It is further proposed that the exequatur should always be granted without charge or payment of any fee.

Project of Convention of Commerce between Great Britain and the United States.

The term for which the existing commercial convention between Great Britain and the United States was concluded being now about to expire, his Britannic Majesty and the United States, being desirous further to regulate the commerce and navigation between their respective countries in such a manner as to render the same reciprocally beneficial and satisfactory, have, respectively, named their plenipotentiaries, and given them full powers to treat concerning the same, namely: his Britannic Majesty, the Right Honorable William Huskisson, &c., &c., &c., and Henry Unwin Addington, Esq., &c., &c., &c.; and the United States, Albert Gallatin, &c., &c., &c., who, having exchanged their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed to and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. All the provisions of the convention of commerce and navigation between his Britannic Majesty and the United States of North America, concluded at London on the 3d day of July, 1815, (with the exception of the clause limiting its duration to five years, and excepting also, so far as the same was affected by the declaration of his Majesty respecting the island of St. Helena,) are hereby further indefinitely extended and continued, in full force, from the date of the signature of the present convention, in the same manner as if all the provisions of the said convention of the 3d July, 1815, were herein specifically recited.

ARTICLE 2. It is agreed, however, that it shall be competent to either of the contracting parties, in case he should think fit, at any time after the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention, on giving due notice of twelve months to the other contracting party, entirely to annul and abrogate the same; and it shall accordingly, after the expiration of the said term of notice, be entirely annulled and abrogated.

ARTICLE 3. For the better prevention of all future misunderstanding with respect to the sense and import of the term "like articles," as used in the convention of the 3d July, 1815, hereby renewed, it is agreed that, in respect to all manufactured articles, that term shall henceforward be construed and applied on both sides, without reference or respect being had to the peculiar process of manufacture of articles so designated.

ARTICLE 4. The present convention shall be duly ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in six months from this time, or sooner, if possible. In witness whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries, &c., &c., &c.

Declaration to be annexed to the renewal of the convention respecting the Northwest Boundary.

In renewing the third article of the convention of 1818, relative to the territory on the Northwest Coast of America, westward of the Rocky mountains, his Britannic Majesty hereby declares, that as his Majesty considers himself precluded by the provisions of that article, now renewed, from exercising, or assuming to himself the right to exercise, any exclusive sovereignty or jurisdiction over the territory mentioned in that article, so his Majesty, in like manner, holds that the United States are equally bound, on their part, also, to abstain from exercising, or assuming to themselves the right to exercise, any exclusive sovereignty or jurisdiction over the said territory during the continuance in force of the present convention.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 88.] LONDON, June 23, 1827.

SIR: I received from Mr. Addington on the 21st instant the draught of protocol of our next preceding conference, of which copy is enclosed. The mention made in it of the intended British declaration to be annexed to the renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818 would have had the same effect as the declaration itself. I said as much at our conference of yesterday, and that if the British plenipotentiaries insisted on having the protocol expressed in that manner I would decline altogether agreeing to the renewal. They agreed that the drawing of the protocol should be suspended until we had disposed of the subject.

I then stated at large my objections both to the declaration and to the proposed additional article of the commercial convention. And, in order that these might be duly considered and correctly communicated by Mr. Huskisson to his colleagues, I put in the hands of the plenipotentiaries two papers containing the substance of those objections, of which copies are also enclosed. They have taken these for consideration, and apparently with the intention of giving a definitive answer on both subjects at our next conference, which is to take place on Tuesday next, 26th instant.

We afterwards took up the subject of the northeast boundary and made some progress.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

I have just received your despatches of May 12 and 15, Nos. 28 and 29. The No. 24 is still missing.

A. G.

[Enclosed in No. 88.]

DRAUGHT OF PROTOCOL OF NINTH CONFERENCE, AS FIRST PROPOSED BY THE BRITISH PLENIPOTENTIARIES.

Protocol of the ninth conference, held at the Board of Trade, June 19, 1827.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The British plenipotentiaries informed the American plenipotentiary that they had taken into consideration the proposition made by him at the preceding conference for the simple renewal, during a further term of ten years, of the third article of the convention of 1818, including the additional article submitted by the British plenipotentiaries at the sixth conference, to the admission of which the American plenipotentiary had declared that his Government objected.

The British plenipotentiaries stated that they were willing to desist from pressing for the insertion of that article in the convention which it was now proposed to renew, and that they would consent to a simple renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818. In so doing, however, they would find it expedient to enter on the protocol a declaration explanatory of what they considered to be the true intent of that article, namely, that both parties were thereby restricted, during its continuance in force, from exercising, or assuming to themselves the right to exercise, any exclusive sovereignty or jurisdiction over the territory mentioned in that article.

The British plenipotentiaries intimated that at an early opportunity they would put formally into the hands of the American plenipotentiary a project of convention drawn up in the above sense, as well as of a declaration of the nature above described.

The subject of the further renewal of the commercial convention of 1815 between Great Britain and the United States was then taken up.

The British plenipotentiaries intimated their disposition to agree to the renewal, for an indefinite term, of the provisions of that convention; but that they would find it necessary to propose the addition to those provisions of two stipulations, the first having for its object to empower either party to renounce that convention whenever he might think fit, on giving due notice of twelve months to the other party; the second purporting to explain the sense and import of the term "like articles," as used in the convention of 1815, by which term they conceived to be understood in manufactures all articles of like substance, form, and general denomination, without reference to their peculiar process of manufacture.

The British plenipotentiaries declared that they would be prepared at an early opportunity also to submit to the American plenipotentiary a project of convention of the above description.

Observations on the projet of declaration to be annexed to the renewal of the convention respecting the territory west of the Stony mountains.

The American plenipotentiary explicitly stated at the eighth conference that his Government had taken into serious consideration the projet of convention which had been offered at the sixth conference by the British plenipotentiaries, and that they could not agree to the provisions of the second article of that projet.

One of those provisions was, that neither of the contracting parties should, during the term agreed on for the continuance of the former agreement, assume or exercise any right of exclusive sovereignty or dominion over any part of the country west of the Stony mountains.

By the proposed declaration his Britannic Majesty would declare that his Majesty considers himself, and in like manner holds that the United States are equally precluded by the provisions of the third article of the convention of 1818, now intended to be renewed, from exercising, or assuming to exercise, any exclusive sovereignty or jurisdiction over the territory in question.

To acquiesce in such declaration, whether annexed to the convention or inserted in the protocol, would be tantamount to the insertion in the convention of the same provision, to which, as part of the second article of the projet offered at the sixth conference, the United States have already declared their inability to accede.

The American plenipotentiary is not prepared to annex to the renewal a declaration on the part of the United States; and, indeed, with two such contradictory instruments, it would seem preposterous to make any agreement whatever.

He must therefore declare his inability to agree to a renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818, if accompanied with a declaration such as has been proposed, or such as is inserted in the draught of protocol for the last conference.

Any act of either party that would impede or impair the rights secured by the said third article to the vessels, citizens, and subjects of the two Powers would be in contravention of the article. In other respects it is silent on the subject of sovereignty and jurisdiction; and the inconveniences against which it may have been the object of the proposed declaration to provide are only apprehended, but have not been experienced.

By the act of Parliament of July 2, 1821, (1 and 2 Geo. IV, cap. 66,) entitled "An act for regulating the fur trade and establishing a criminal and civil jurisdiction within certain parts of North America," Great Britain has assumed such jurisdiction as suited her own purposes, leaving to a powerful company the general government of the country.

That act, taken literally and in the abstract, may be liable to objections on the part of the United States. It has not been critically examined with that view, because no practicable inconvenience has been felt from it, and in full confidence that it was not intended and would not be executed so as to contravene the compact between the two countries.

The United States, on their part, have not assumed or exercised any sovereignty or jurisdiction over the country. Whenever this may become necessary, they have the same right to do it in the manner most suitable to their institutions and to the pursuits of their subjects. The same reliance may be placed on their violating no existing agreement. It is also their wish to avoid, as far as practicable, any measures that might produce collisions.

That, so long as no permanent boundary shall have been agreed on, the subject will be attended with difficulties cannot be concealed. The United States have not believed that these would be removed by provisions expressed in such general terms as that proposed by Great Britain. Neither Government appears at this moment to be prepared for more specific conditions. It is submitted whether, as preparatory to a more definite arrangement, and in order to obviate the objections to which the renewal for as long a term as had been contemplated may be liable, the best course might not be to renew the former agreement for only four years, and thenceforth until one party shall give the other one year's notice of his desire to put an end to it.

Observations on the projet of Commercial Convention.

The third article would not, it is believed, prevent the misunderstanding as intended, as there would still be the same difficulty, whether certain articles were or were not alike. Thus the United States would still contend that rolled bar iron was in reality a different article from forged bar iron, in same manner as cut nails are a different article from forged nails, &c. And in such instances the distinction cannot be otherwise or better defined than by reference to the process of manufacture.

Without entering into the discussion of the interpretation of the existing provision, it may be stated, with reference to a renewal of the convention, that the United States cannot assent to a condition which would destroy or materially affect numerous domestic establishments.

The particular object in view, when compared with the amount of the whole trade between the two countries, is quite insignificant. There are at present three or four thousand tons of rolled bar iron imported from Great Britain into the United States. Supposing the amount should be twice as great, in consequence of an equalization of duty with that on forged bar iron, the value of the increase would be but thirty or forty thousand pounds.

In point of fact, although there is a difference of fifteen dollars a ton in the duty, rolled bar iron is still sold in the United States ten dollars cheaper per ton than forged bar iron. The quantity consumed does not appear to have been materially affected by the duty, and it is increasing. The average of the years 1818, 1819, was 2,650 tons; the year 1825 was 4,190 tons.

Considering the magnitude of the trade between the two countries, and that the convention has been in force for twelve years, it has caused as few and unimportant difficulties as could have been expected; and there does not appear sufficient cause for making any alteration.

Independent of the gross amount of that trade, it is important to observe that it is increasing.

According to the accounts laid before Parliament, the average of the official value of the exports from Great Britain and Ireland to the United States is, for the five years, 1816–1820, £6,410,000; and for the five years, 1821–1825, £7,167,000.

The imports from the United States into Great Britain and Ireland for the five years, 1816–1820, are stated at £3,290,000; and for the five years, 1821–1825, £4,740,000.

About one-fifth should be deducted from the official value of the exports, (on account of the overvaluation of cotton manufactures,) which would make their real value about five millions for the average of the first five years, and more than five millions and a half for the average of the last five years. Almost the whole of this consists of British manufactures, the value of foreign and colonial articles being but about £180,000 a year.

Thus the United States consume about one-sixth part of the exported manufactures of the United Kingdom, and Great Britain becomes the entrepôt for more than one-half of the exported produce of the United States. The commerce of the United States with the United Kingdom is nearly equal to their commerce with all the other parts of the world. The commerce of the United Kingdom with the United States is greater than its commerce with any other foreign nation.

As yet it is principally owing to the policy of Great Britain that this trade is not still greater. Her corn laws, with the exception of years of great scarcity, are tantamount to a prohibition. Salted provisions have heretofore been always prohibited. On other articles, rice and tobacco, the duties lessen materially the consumption. The United States consume as great a quantity of British merchandise as they can pay for; and they would of course consume more if their means of payment were not lessened by those restrictions. Of this no complaint is made: the fact is only stated.

As to the manner of renewing the convention, the American plenipotentiary, after maturely considering the subject, cannot but think it would be preferable to renew it for a certain, though, perhaps, shorter period than had been contemplated by his Government, and thenceforth until one year's notice shall have been given by either party of his desire to put an end to it.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 90.] LONDON, June 27, 1827.

SIR: We were employed at yesterday's conference in discussing the same subjects which had occupied us on the 22d, but without coming to any conclusion.

Mr. Huskisson suggested that an article might be framed respecting the meaning of the words "like articles" in the commercial convention which would not be inconsistent with the view I had taken of the subject. I said that I could not give any definitive answer until I had seen the proposal, but that I apprehended that none could be so expressed as to permit me to agree to it I added that if it was really believed that our discriminating duty between rolled and hammered iron was an infraction of the convention, it was extraordinary that the importers had never brought the case before the courts, which, as every body knew, they might have done at any time by refusing to pay the bonds given for securing the duty.

A new suggestion was also made respecting the renewal of the agreement for the joint occupancy of the territory west of the Stony mountains. The British plenipotentiaries had it in contemplation to insert in the protocol a declaration purporting either that, according to their understanding of the agreement, neither party had a right to take military possession of the country; or that if the United States did establish any military posts in the country Great Britain would do the same. They preferred the first mode, as the other might be construed by the United States as having the appearance of a threat. Great Britain, they said, had no wish to establish such posts, and would do it only in self-defence. But she could not acquiesce in acts on the part of the United States which would give sanction to their claim of absolute and exclusive sovereignty, and calculated also to produce collisions having a national character. Occasional disturbances between the traders of the two countries might be overlooked; but any question connected with the flag of either Power would be of a serious nature, and might commit them in a most inconvenient and dangerous manner.

I replied that I could not agree to the renewal of the agreement if accompanied with the insertion in the protocol of any declaration purporting to attach any construction or interpretation whatever to the agreement. As to a declaration not pretending to give such construction, but stating what the British Government intended to do in the event of a certain contingency, I would take it into consideration when made, and see whether it should or should not preclude me from agreeing to the renewal. But I would observe that the proper place of a declaration of this nature was not in the protocol. If it was the intention of the British Government to signify their determination of establishing military posts in that country in case it was done by the United States, such communication was equally necessary whether there was or was not a renewal of the agreement. And the most proper mode of making it was through the ordinary channels of diplomatic communications, through the British minister at Washington ; or, if done here, by a note from the British Secretary of State to the American minister. It did not appear to me to have any thing to do with our negotiations for a renewal of the agreement.

The contemplated renewal itself would be attended with no peculiar advantages to the United States. It was altogether a matter of mutual concern. There was no other object for it than that of preserving peace until a permanent boundary could be agreed on. As it now stood it provided only for one thing—that the traders of either party should not impede those of the other party. There was but one condition in the agreement, and that related exclusively to a free trade. Other conditions might be found necessary for the preservation of harmony. The Government of the United States was not at this time prepared to make a new agreement embracing such additional stipulations. The same observation seemed to apply to the British Government, since they had not been able to propose anything more than a clause expressed in such general terms as not at all to prevent collisions on the subject. From the exposition which Great Britain had now made of her claim, I was personally inclined to think that a more specific agreement, calculated to preserve peace in every respect, was not impracticable, and would be rather advantageous to the United States.

It appeared from that exposition that Great Britain denied, indeed, their exclusive right to any part of the territory in question, but made no exclusive claim herself, and considered it as open to the first occupant. Although the United States asserted and would not abandon their exclusive right, yet, in fact, the country must necessarily become ultimately theirs, even according to the British doctrine. In that view of the subject, all that the United States might want was the very object which Great Britain declared to be hers, viz., the preservation of peace until (if no arrangement for a permanent boundary should previously take place) the whole country was occupied ; and I had myself no doubt that it would be entirely occupied and settled by the citizens of the United States.

Difficulties would certainly occur in adjusting the stipulations necessary to preserve peace. I had already, in a former discussion, mentioned one relating to military occupancy. This was not wanted by Great Britain. The servants of her great Fur Company were numerous enough and so organized as to afford sufficient protection to persons and property against Indian aggressions, and at the same time under such restraints as prevented them from provoking such aggressions. It was otherwise with the United States; and experience had shown that a military force was necessary and sufficient to preserve peace with the Indians.

But however difficult in its details, and though not prepared at this moment to discuss them, the object in view was certainly of great importance to both parties. I was inclined to think that a simple renewal of the agreement, and nothing more, was practicable at present; was best calculated to keep the two Powers in a situation favorable to the success of a negotiation for that purpose. With the same object in view, if Great Britain thought it more eligible to have in the meanwhile no agreement whatever on that subject, it was left entirely at her option so to decide.

The British plenipotentiaries said that there was such an avowed intention on the part of the United States to establish a military post, that they thought they could not agree to a renewal of the former agreement without making at the same time some declaration on that point, but that they would again consider the subject before they came to a definitive determination.

We had afterwards a long conversation on the subject of the general map of the surveys of the northeastern boundary. But we have not yet begun to discuss any of the other topics embraced by the informal projet of convention. I only understand that they have prepared a counter projet.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 97.] "LONDON, July 20, 1827.

"SIR: I had enclosed in my despatch No. 88 the copy of the first draught by the British plenipotentiaries of the protocol of our ninth conference. This was withdrawn on my suggestion, my wish being that no premature commitment on their part should prevent them from abandoning the ground they intended to take. The consequence has been that the protocols of the 9th, 10th, and 11th conferences have not yet been adjusted and signed. Expecting that this would certainly be done at the 12th conference, I did not send you copies of the draughts since proposed and discussed. But this conference not having yet taken place, and Mr. Huskisson having left England, I now enclose them in order that the situation in which he left the negotiation may be fully understood.

"Mr. Addington wrote me on the 30th of June a private note, transmitting the draughts Nos. 1, 2, and 3, for my consideration. These consisted, in fact, only of the portions containing the statements of the British plenipotentiaries, blanks being left for my portion.

"In return I sent him the papers Nos. 4, 5, and 6; the first and last being notes on the protocols of the 9th and 11th conferences, and No. 6 being my draught of the protocol of the 10th conference, as ultimately delivered, having made some verbal corrections in my first draught I had sent to Mr. Addington.

"The verbal alteration I had proposed in the protocol of the 9th conference was agreed to. But Mr. Addington, in a private note of the 2d of July, stated that 'as it would be necessary that they should shape the protocol of the 11th conference entirely afresh, in consequence of the detailed observations respecting iron and other matters which I had inserted in my draught, to which they should of course find it expedient to throw in their counter observations at some length, he had not thought it necessary to alter that protocol as yet, according to my suggestions.'"

[Received with Mr. Gallatin's No. 97.]

No. 1.

DRAUGHT OF PROTOCOL OF THE NINTH CONFERENCE, AS PROPOSED BY MR. ADDINGTON.

Protocol of the ninth conference between the British and American Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 19th of June, 1827.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The British plenipotentiaries, in expressing their regret at the communication made to them by the American plenipotentiary at the preceding conference, that his Government had declined acceding to the additional article of the project of convention presented by them at the sixth conference for the settlement of the conflicting claims to the territory west of the Rocky mountains, declared themselves disposed to withdraw that project, and to acquiesce in the proposition submitted by the American plenipotentiary for the simple renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818.

In so doing, however, the British plenipotentiaries intimated that they would find it expedient to insert in the protocol a declaration explanatory of what they considered to be the true intent of that article, namely, that both parties were thereby equally restricted, during its continuance in force, from exercising, or assuming the right to exercise, any exclusive sovereignty or jurisdiction over the territory in question.

The British plenipotentiaries added that at an early opportunity they would be prepared to submit a project of convention and declaration drawn up in the above sense.

The American plenipotentiary expressed himself ready to pay every attention to any proposition which might come from the British plenipotentiaries, but doubted whether he would be able to sign any convention if accompanied by a declaration of the nature above mentioned.

The subject of the further renewal of the commercial convention of 1815, between Great Britain and the United States, was then taken up.

The British plenipotentiaries intimated their disposition to agree to the renewal of the provisions of that convention for a further indefinite term, liable, however, to abrogation at the will of either party on notice of twelve months being given by that party to the other.

Since great inconveniences, however, had occasionally arisen from what the British plenipotentiaries considered to be an erroneous interpretation on the part of the United States of the term "like articles," as employed in the convention of 1815, which term "like," when applied to manufactured articles, the British plenipotentiaries considered to refer to the similarity in substance, form, and general designation alone of such articles, be their peculiar process of manufacture what it might, they believed that they would deem it expedient to propose the introduction into the convention, if renewed, of an additional article giving a closer definition to the above-mentioned term "like articles" in the sense in which they, as they conceived, correctly interpreted it.

This point, however, they reserved for further consideration, and would, at a future opportunity, come prepared with a project of convention for the settlement of the matter.

No. 2.

DRAUGHT OF PROTOCOL OF TENTH CONFERENCE, AS PROPOSED BY MR. ADDINGTON.

Protocol of the tenth conference between the British and American Plenipotentiaries, at the Board of Trade on the 22d of June, 1827.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

In reference to the intimation made at the preceding conference by the British plenipotentiaries respecting the declaration which they expressed their intention to insert on the protocol, in renewing the third article of the convention of 1818, relative to the territory west of the Rocky mountains, the American plenipotentiary opened the conference by stating * * * * * * *

With respect to the intimation also made by the British plenipotentiaries of their having it in contemplation to propose the introduction of an additional article into the convention of commerce of 1815, if renewed, having for its object to give a closer definition to the term "like articles," as employed in that convention, the American plenipotentiary observed * * * * * * *

In consequence of the above declarations of the American plenipotentiary, the British plenipotentiaries took both the subjects in question for further consideration.

No. 3.

DRAUGHT OF THE PROTOCOL OF THE ELEVENTH CONFERENCE, BOARD OF TRADE, JUNE 26, 1827, AS PROPOSED BY MR. ADDINGTON.

Protocol of the eleventh conference between the British and American Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 26th of June, 1827.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

Some further general discussion took place between the plenipotentiaries on the subject of the convention for settling the claims to the territory west of the Rocky mountains, as well as on that for regulating the future commercial intercourse between Great Britain and the United States; but the views of the parties being found still to differ as to the mode of adjustment of both these questions, the further consideration of each of them was postponed to a future opportunity.

Some general conversation was held also on the subject of a map, which it would be expedient to annex to a convention for regulating the statement or statements of claims relative to the boundary line between the British provinces in North America and the United States, which the British might hereafter agree upon, in case it should be found expedient to refer those claims to arbitration, as provided by the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent.

The views of the plenipotentiaries on this subject not having yet been sufficiently matured, it was agreed to reserve all further discussion on it for their next meeting.

No. 4.

Notes on the draught of the protocol of the ninth conference, &c.

In first page, the projet of convention presented at the sixth conference is called "for the settlement of the conflicting claims to the territory west of the Rocky mountains."

This designation does not express the purport of the projet, which, at the sixth conference, was called a projet of convention "for the renewal for a fresh term, &c., of the provision, &c., which was contained in the convention of London of 1818."

This title may be abridged, but the substance should be retained.

At end of protocol, the blank may be filled as follows: "The American plenipotentiary said that he would take also that subject for consideration."

No. 5.

Protocol of the tenth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 22d of June, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read and signed.

In reference to the intimation made at the preceding conference by the British plenipotentiaries respecting the declaration which they expressed their intention to insert in the protocol, on renewing the third article of the convention of 1818 relative to the territory west of the Rocky mountains, the American plenipotentiary observed that the said article having only provided that the territory in question should be free and open to the vessels, citizens, and subjects of the two Powers, he could not admit that, according to its true meaning and intent, any other act of either party was thereby forbidden but such as, in contravention of the article, would impede or impair the rights secured by it.

To acquiesce in the declaration which the British plenipotentiaries had expressed their intention to insert in the protocol appeared to him tantamount to the insertion in the convention of the same provision to which, as part of the second article of the projet offered at the sixth conference, the United States had already declared that they could not accede.

He must therefore declare his inability to agree to a renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818, if accompanied by a declaration such as had been intimated, or purporting to explain the meaning or intent of the article.

The American plenipotentiary further observed that, although the claim of the United States was avowed by one of exclusive sovereignty over a considerable portion of the territory, and however their intentions on that subject might have been manifested, yet they had not, to this day, exercised or assumed any sovereignty or jurisdiction over the country; whilst Great Britain had, in the meanwhile, assumed, by the act of Parliament of July 2, 1821, entitled "An act for regulating the fur trade and establishing a criminal and civil jurisdiction within certain parts of North America," jurisdiction to the extent which suited her purpose. That act, if construed and executed literally, might be liable to strong objections on the part of the United States. And they had at least an equal right, whenever it became necessary for them to exercise any sovereignty or jurisdiction over the country, to do it in the manner most suitable to their institutions and to the pursuits of their citizens.

It was indeed to be apprehended that, so long as no permanent boundary was agreed on, the joint occupancy of the territory might be attended with serious difficulties. It was not believed that these would be removed by provisions expressed in general terms; and it might be desirable to add to the former agreement some specific conditions calculated to prevent collisions. For this the United States were not at this moment prepared. The American plenipotentiary would submit whether, as preparatory to a more definite arrangement; as providing, in the meanwhile, against the interruption of the pursuits of the citizens and subjects of either Power by those of the other, and as having, on the whole, a tendency to preserve harmony, it would not be more eligible to renew the former agreement for a short period rather than to suffer it to expire altogether.

With respect to the intimation also made by the British plenipotentiaries of their having it in contemplation to propose the introduction of an additional article into the convention of commerce of 1815, if renewed, having for its object to give a closer definition to the term "like articles," as employed in that convention, the American plenipotentiary observed that he did not perceive how the substitution of the words "similar in substance," or of any other such expressions, to the word "like," could better prevent occasional differences of opinion on what were or were not "like articles." The same difficulty would arise as to whether any two certain articles were similar in substance or not. And it might often happen that a real difference could not be otherwise or better defined than by reference to the process of manufacture.

As it was well understood that the different duty laid in the United States on rolled and hammered bar iron was the case alluded to, and which had been complained of, the American plenipotentiary must add that he could not agree to any article that would exclude the interpretation that had been put in that case on the words of the convention by the United States.

That interpretation was founded on the fact that rolled bar iron, though of the same genus, essentially differed from hammered bar iron. It was because considered as such, and not as being of British manufacture, that a different duty had been laid on it. This duty applied generally to rolled iron wherever manufactured; the process by which it was made could be adopted anywhere, and had already been introduced in several other countries besides Great Britain. In this case, as in many others, (such as between cut and forged nails, the several species of steel, &c.,) the difference in the article proceeded from that in the process of manufacture, and where no distinctive technical name had been adopted, must be designated by reference to that process.

The American plenipotentiary also observed that the value of that article of British export (even allowing the increase of which, under a similar duty with hammered iron, it might be suspectible) was unimportant when compared with the amount of the trade between the two countries; that, considering the magnitude of that commerce, and that the convention had been in force twelve years, the difficulties or questions arising out of it had been fewer in number and importance than could have been expected; and that, under such circumstances, there did not appear to him any sufficient cause for making any alteration in that agreement.

As to the manner of renewing the convention, the American plenipotentiary said that it appeared to him preferable to renew it for a certain period; and after the expiration of that term until one year's notice should have been given by either party of his desire to put an end to it.

In consequence of the above declarations of the American plenipotentiary, the British plenipotentiaries took both the subjects in question for further consideration.

No. 6.

Notes on the draught of the protocol of the eleventh conference, &c.

It is proposed to substitute in first page, to the words from convention to United States, the following: "Renewal of the third article of the convention of London of 1818, and on that of the renewal of the commercial convention." And in second page, to the words from the statement to Ghent, the following: "The manner of referring to arbitration, as provided by the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent, the claims relative to the boundary line between the United States and the British provinces in North America, in case it should be found practicable to conclude such convention."

It is also proposed to add at the end of the protocol the following words: "The American plenipotentiary submitted and annexed to the protocol the paper C, containing the substance of the answer of his government to certain proposals communicated by the British plenipotentiaries in the course of the conferences with Mr. Rush of the year 1824, and concerning which they annexed the substance of nine articles to the protocol of the twenty-second conference."

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 100.] LONDON, July 29, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose the protocols of the ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth conferences as finally adjusted, together with the papers thereto annexed, viz: the answer to the nine articles proposed in 1824 by the British plenipotentiaries, annexed to the eleventh protocol, and the projets of convention for the renewal of the fourth and third articles of the convention of 1818, respectively annexed to the twelfth and thirteenth protocols. These two projets, having, in fact, been discussed and agreed on before they were officially presented, are verbatim the same as definitively concluded. We had intended to sign the conventions yesterday; but the British plenipotentiaries found that it was an invariable rule at the Foreign Office to submit every convention or treaty to the King's advocate before it was signed. That officer being out of town, a delay of two or three days will ensue, and the conventions cannot be sent by the packet of 1st of August. Each will be accompanied by a letter, which, with the protocols, may be sufficient to explain the negotiation without reference to former despatches informing you of its progress. I will now only observe that, although the mode of renewing the commercial convention is not without its advantages, I would have preferred a renewal for a fixed term of years, but that, on the whole, the mode adopted appears to me preferable as relates to the agreement respecting the western territory.

The nine articles, so called, will soon be disposed of one way or another; and we will now enter seriously on the discussion of a convention having for object to prepare for trial the reference to a foreign State of the contested northeastern boundary. This has already been the subject of numerous informal conversations, some in conference, but principally with Mr. Addington alone. The subject is somewhat complex; and I have found him extremely difficult on all topics generally, and far more on this than on any other. Mr. Grant is very intelligent, and appears candid. His substitution for Mr. Huskisson is not to be regretted.

I omitted in my very hasty letter of yesterday to say that I had also conversed with Mr. Canning on the subject of the northeastern boundary. He appears sincerely desirous that the proceedings may be simplified, so as to have a chance to find a Sovereign who will consent to decide the question. He asked whether we could not so manage as to dispense with further surveys, as it appeared to him that, although the arbiter could decide on questions purely of law, and what was the true construction of certain expressions in a treaty, it was too much to expect that he should give an opinion on the contested topography of the country. To this suggestion I acquiesced the more cheerfully as it has been my constant object to come to that result; but I fear that Mr. Addington will render an agreement as to that point impracticable. Mr. Canning also suggested the propriety of abstaining on both sides, pending the suit, of any act of sovereignty over the contested territory. This, as the British are in possession, would be in our favor; but I apprehend that, if neither party should have jurisdiction, there would be no means to prevent the cutting and destruction of timber.

Mr. Canning is decidedly of opinion that the choice of an arbiter ought to be postponed till after the ratification of the proposed preliminary convention, and when both parties are ready for trial. This coincides with my view of the subject, and in one respect relieves me. If obliged to come to a choice at this time, I would have felt much embarrassed between my instructions and the present dubious state of the Republic of Colombia.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

Protocol of the ninth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 19th of June, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The British plenipotentiaries, in expressing their regret at the communication made to them by the American plenipotentiary at the preceding conference, that his Government had declined acceding to the additional article of the project of convention presented by them at the sixth conference for the renewal, for a fresh term of years, of the provisions respecting the territory on the Northwest Coast of America, west of the Rocky mountains, which was contained in the convention of the 20th of October, 1818, declared themselves disposed to withdraw that project, and to acquiesce in the proposition submitted by the American plenipotentiary for the simple renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818.

In so doing, however, the British plenipotentiaries intimated that they would find it expedient to insert in the protocol a declaration explanatory of what they considerd to be the true intent of that article, namely, that both parties were thereby equally restricted, during its continuance in force, from exercising, or assuming the right to exercise, any exclusive sovereignty or jurisdiction over the territory in question.

The British plenipotentiaries added that at an early opportunity they would be prepared to submit a project of convention and declaration drawn up in the above sense.

The American plenipotentiary expressed himself ready to pay every attention to any proposition which might come from the British plenipotentiaries, but doubted whether he would be able to sign any convention if accompanied by a declaration of the nature above mentioned.

The subject of the further renewal of the commercial convention of 1815, between Great Britain and the United States, was then taken up.

The British plenipotentiaries intimated their disposition to agree to the renewal of the provisions of that convention for a further indefinite term; liable, however, to abrogation, at the will of either party, on notice of twelve months being given by that party to the other.

Since great inconveniences, however, had occasionally arisen from what the British plenipotentiaries considered to be an erroneous interpretation on the part of the United States of the term "like articles," as employed in the convention of 1815, which term "like," when applied to manufactured articles, the British plenipotentiaries considered to refer to the similarity in substance, form, and general designation alone of such articles, be their peculiar process of manufacture what it might, they believed that they would deem it expedient to propose the introduction into the convention, if renewed, of an additional article, giving a closer definition of the above-mentioned term "like articles" in the sense in which they, as they conceived, correctly interpreted it.

This point, however, they reserved for further consideration, and would, at a future opportunity, come prepared with a project of convention for the settlement of the matter. The American plenipotentiary said that he would take also that subject for consideration.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
W. HUSKISSON.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Protocol of the tenth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 22d of June, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

In reference to the intimation, at the preceding conference, by the British plenipotentiaries, of the declaration which they expressed their intention to insert in the protocol, on renewing the 3d article of the convention of 1818, relative to the territory west of the Rocky mountains, the American plenipotentiary observed that the said article having only provided that the territory in question should be free and open to the vessels, citizens, and subjects of the two Powers, he could not admit that, according to its true meaning and intent, any other act of either party was thereby forbidden but such as, in contravention of the article, would impede or impair the rights secured by it.

To acquiesce in the declaration which the British plenipotentiaries had expressed their intention to insert in the protocol appeared to him tantamount to the insertion in the convention of the same provision, to which, as part of the 2d article of the projet offered at the sixth conference, the United States had already declared that they could not accede. He must therefore declare his inability to agree to a renewal of the convention of 1818, if accompanied by a declaration such as had been intimated, or purporting to explain the meaning or intent of the article.

With respect to the intimation also given by the British plenipotentiaries, that they believed that they would deem it expedient to propose the introduction into the commercial convention of 1815, if renewed, of an additional article giving a closer definition of the term "like articles," as employed in that convention, the American plenipotentiary stated that he could not agree to any article that would exclude the interpretation that had been put by the United States, and as they conceived correctly, on those words.

He further observed that he did not perceive how the substitution of the words "similar in substance," or of any other such expressions, for the word "like," would better prevent occasional differences of opinion on what were or were not "like articles," since the same difficulty would arise as to whether two certain articles were "similar in substance" or not. And it might often happen that, where no distinctive technical name had been adopted, a real difference could not be otherwise or better defined than by reference to the process of manufacture.

He thought, upon the whole, that, considering the magnitude of the trade carried on between the two countries, and that the convention had been in force twelve years, the differences of opinion arising out of it had been fewer and of less importance than might have been expected; and under such circumstances there did not appear to him sufficient cause for making any alteration in that compact.

As to the manner of renewing the convention, the American plenipotentiary said that it appeared to him preferable to renew it for a certain period, and, after the expiration of that term, until one year's notice should have been given by either party of his desire to put an end to it.

In consequence of the above declarations of the American plenipotentiary, the British plenipotentiaries took both the subjects in question for further consideration.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Protocol of the eleventh conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 26th of June, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Addington.

The British plenipotentiaries not being yet prepared with a definitive reply to the observations and propositions of the American plenipotentiary, inserted in the tenth protocol, the further consideration of the subjects to which those observations referred was reserved for a future opportunity.

The American plenipotentiary submitted and annexed to the protocol the paper (C) containing the answers of his Government to certain proposals communicated to Mr. Rush by the British plenipotentiaries in 1824, and by them annexed in the form of nine articles to the protocol of the twenty-second conference.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

C.

Substance of nine articles annexed by the British Plenipotentiaries to the protocol of the twenty-second conference, held on the 9th of July, 1824.	Answer of the American Plenipotentiary to certain proposals communicated by the British Plenipotentiaries in the course of the conferences with Mr. Rush of the year 1824, and concerning which they annexed the substance of nine articles to the protocol of the twenty-second conference.
1. Mutual delivery of criminals, the subjects or citizens of either party, taking refuge within the dominions of the other.	ART. 1. Agreed to in cases of murder and forgery only, and excepting the citizens or subjects, natural born or naturalized, of the party within whose dominions the criminals shall have taken refuge. It is further proposed to extend the provision of a mutual surrender—

1st. To deserters from the military, naval, or merchant service of either party, with the same exception as aforesaid, in respect of citizens or subjects of either.

2d. To persons held to service or labor, under the laws of either party, taking refuge in any part of America, within the dominions of the other.

2. Arrangement for the adoption of measures to facilitate and complete, in an equitable and satisfactory manner, the settlement of claims made by the subjects or citizens of either of the two parties to lands situated within the territories of the other in America, and arising out of grants heretofore made by authorities competent at the time to make such grants.

ART. 2. The courts are open, in respect of all claims, to all persons not lying under legal disabilities; but the United States cannot agree to afford any greater facilities for the settlement of the claims in question than are allowed by the laws of the land.

3. Agreement that on neither side shall debts due from individuals of the one nation to those of the other, or moneys which they may have in the public funds, or in public or private banks, ever be confiscated or sequestered, in case of war or differences between the two countries; and also, that every facility be mutually afforded for the recovery of debts.

ART. 3. The exemption from confiscation or sequestration, in case of war or differences, agreed to, provided that it shall be extended to every other species of private property (including vessels and cargoes, though yet on board,) which may be within the dominions or jurisdiction of either party at the time when such war or differences shall take place or become known.

The same facilities for the recovery of debts being afforded, by the laws of both countries, to the citizens or subjects or either, the latter provision of the article appears unnecessary.

4. Further, that no act of reprisal shall be ordered by the one party against the other, on complaint of injuries or damages, till after a statement of grievances shall have been given in, and the redress demanded either refused or unreasonably delayed.

ART. 4. Agreed to.

5. Further, that in case of rupture at any time between the two nations, the merchants of either party shall be allowed to remain and carry on the trade within the dominions of the other, so long as they behave peaceably and lawfully; and in case of their being sent away for misconduct, they shall have a reasonable time allowed before removal for the settlement of their affairs and necessary preparations.

ART. 5. Agreed to, provided that such merchants may, nevertheless, be removed from their places of residence to the interior, if the party in whose dominions they are shall think it necessary.

6. Further, that in case of any vessel belonging to the Government or individuals of one nation being wrecked on the coasts of the other, any property belonging to them recovered therefrom shall be restored, all practicable assistance rendered, and no more salvage claimed than in like cases from natives.

ART. 6. Agreed to.

7. Further, that vessels of either party, forced by distress into any port of the other, not being an open port, shall, nevertheless, be hospitably received, and allowed, if necessary, to victual, repair, unlade its cargo, and dispose of a part thereof under proper regulations.

ART. 7. Agreed to.

8. Further, that ships and merchandise belonging to either party, when rescued from pirates by the other, shall be restored to the original owners on the payment of salvage no higher than would be claimed in like case from the subjects or citizens of the rescuing party.

ART. 8. Agreed to.

This and the preceding articles appearing mutually advantageous, will be agreed to, although it would have been more agreeable to the Government of the United States to have comprised in the same instrument an arrangement of all the subjects connected with belligerent and neutral rights which, in their opinion, it is desirable to adjust by treaty; and though they therefore regret that some of those subjects were not favorably entertained by the British plenipotentiaries when brought forward by Mr. Rush in the course of the negotiations of the year 1824.

9. Finally, that the consuls and vice consuls of either party, having an exequatur in due form, shall be exempt from the payment of direct taxes, and from personal service of every kind, respectively, within the territories of the other.

ART. 9. Agreed to, as to the exemption from personal service, but not as to exemption from direct taxes.

It is further proposed that the exequatur should always be granted without charge or payment of any fee.

Protocol of the twelfth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 21st July, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

The protocols of the two preceding conferences were read over and signed.

In consequence of the retirement from the commission of one of the former British plenipotentiaries, and the appointment of a successor in his place, the plenipotentiaries again examined and exchanged their full powers.

In reference to the observations and declaration made at the 10th conference by the American plenipotentiary, with respect to the renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818, if accompanied by the declaration proposed at the 9th conference by the British plenipotentiaries, the latter stated that they conceived that the main benefit resulting from that article was, that it kept in abeyance, during the term of its existence, all conflicting rights to the territory to which it related. That benefit, however, considering the difference of opinion which prevailed on the true intent of that article, the British plenipotentiaries apprehended could no longer be expected to result from its renewal.

Since, therefore, the American plenipotentiary had declared his inability to agree to such a declaration as that proposed by the British plenipotentiaries, the latter were compelled to decline accepting the proposal of the American plenipotentiary for renewing, for a further fixed term of years, the third article of the convention of 1818.

In case, however, the American plenipotentiary should so far modify that proposal as to offer the renewal of that article merely as a temporary act, intended to prevent collision between the parties while measures were maturing for effecting a more permanent settlement of their respective claims, the British plenipotentiaries would, in that case, be ready to take such a proposition into consideration.

They, however, expressly stated that, in agreeing to such a proposal, Great Britain in nowise receded from any claim previously urged on her part to the territory west of the Rocky mountains, or admitted any claim advanced by the United States with respect to the same territory.

With respect to that part of the observations of the American plenipotentiary which had reference to the additional article which the British plenipotentiaries had intimated their probable intention of proposing to insert in the convention of commerce of 1815, if renewed, they observed that, notwithstanding the observations of the American plenipotentiary, they could not recede from the opinion which they had already expressed, that the definition assigned by them to the term "like," as applied in the treaty to manufactured articles, was correct, namely, that that term denoted similarity in substance, form, and denomination, and was totally independent of any particular process of manufacture. Waiving, however, all argument on this point, the plain fact was, that a very essential term employed in the convention which it was now proposed to renew tale quale was liable to a wide difference of construction between the parties to that compact; and that with such difference of construction, neither party would have any other remedy, in case of actual disagreement, than retaliation under the treaty, or a forcible dissolution of it—two alternatives to be equally deprecated and avoided.

This being the case, the British plenipotentiaries, being sincerely desirous of continuing a treaty under which both parties had derived great advantages, and which Great Britain was happy to consider as a strong bond of union between the two countries, were willing to waive bringing forward the proposition respecting an additional article at which they had before hinted, and offered to renew the convention of 1815, not however for any fixed term of years, but as if the 4th article of the convention of 1818 had originally stipulated for its further continuation, without lapse, until renounced by either party on twelve months' notice being given to the other.

This arrangement would enable either party, if he felt himself aggrieved by the operation of the treaty, the natural and immediate remedy of withdrawing himself from its pressure, and, in so doing, would prevent painful contentions and ill-blood between the two nations.

A project of convention drawn up in the above sense the British plenipotentiaries accordingly now submitted and annexed to the protocol.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHA. GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy. W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Project of Convention of Commerce.

His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the United States of America, being desirous of continuing in force the existing commercial regulations between the two countries which are contained in the convention concluded between them on the third of July, 1815, and further renewed by the fourth article of the convention of the twentieth of October, 1818, have, for that purpose, named their respective plenipotentiaries, that is to say: His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Honorable Charles Grant, a member of his said Majesty's most honorable Privy Council, a member of Parliament, and Vice President of the Committee of Privy Council for Affairs of Trade and Foreign Plantations, and Henry Unwin Addington, Esq.; and the President of the United States of America, Albert Gallatin, their Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to his Britannic Majesty: who, after having communicated to each other their full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. All the provisions of the convention concluded between his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the United States of America on the third of July, 1815, and further continued for the term of ten years by the fourth article of the convention of the twentieth of October, 1818, are hereby further indefinitely extended and continued in force, from the date of the expiration of the said ten years, in the same manner as if all the provisions of the said convention of the third of July, 1815, were herein specifically recited.

ARTICLE 2. It shall be competent, however, to either of the contracting parties, in case either should think fit, at any time after the expiration of the said ten years, that is, after the twentieth of October, 1828, on giving due notice of twelve months to the other contracting party, to annul and abrogate this convention; and it shall, in such case, be accordingly entirely annulled and abrogated after the expiration of the said term of notice.

ARTICLE 3. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in nine months, or sooner, if possible. In witness whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have affixed thereto the seals of their arms.

Done at London, the ——— day of ——— in the year of our Lord 1827.

Protocol of the thirteenth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade the 26th of July, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

Protocol of the last conference was read over and signed.

The American plenipotentiary stated that he had conceived the principal advantage resulting from the 3d article of the convention of 1818 to consist in that it prevented collisions and disputes between the citizens and subjects of the two parties. But he coincided entirely in the opinion of the British plenipotentiaries, that, in whatever shape renewed, it must be with a mutual understanding that neither party thereby in anywise receded from any claim previously urged on its part, or admitted any claim advanced by the other party to the territory west of the Rocky mountains.

With that understanding, and believing also that a temporary renewal was necessary and would be sufficient to afford time to mature measures having for their object a more definite settlement of the claims of each party to the said territory, the American plenipotentiary would modify his former proposal and submit a renewal of the article for an indefinite time, but liable to be rescinded at the will of either party.

He accordingly submitted the project of convention hereto annexed, which was taken by the British plenipotentiaries for consideration.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHA. GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Project of Convention relative to the Northwest Boundary.

The United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being equally desirous to prevent, as far as possible, all hazard of misunderstanding between the two nations, with respect to the territory on the Northwest Coast of America, west of the Stony or Rocky mountains, after the expiration of the third article of the convention concluded between them on the twentieth of October, 1818, and also with a view to give further time for maturing measures which shall have for their object a more definite settlement of the claims of each party to the said territory, have, respectively, named their plenipotentiaries to treat and agree concerning a temporary renewal of the said article, that is to say: The President of the United States of America, Albert Gallatin, their Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to his Britannic Majesty; and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Right Honorable Charles Grant, a member of his said Majesty's most honorable Privy Council, a member of Parliament, and Vice President of the Committee of Privy Council for Affairs of Trade and Foreign Plantations, and Henry Unwin Addington, Esquire: who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. All the provisions of the third article of the convention concluded between the United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland on the twentieth of October, 1818, shall be, and they are hereby, further indefinitely extended and continued in force, in the same manner as if all the provisions of the said article were herein specifically recited.

ARTICLE 2. It shall be competent, however, to either of the contracting parties, in case either should think fit, at any time after the twentieth of October, 1828, on giving due notice of twelve months to the other contracting party, to annul and abrogate this convention; and it shall, in such case, be accordingly entirely annulled and abrogated after the expiration of the said term of notice.

ARTICLE 3. Nothing contained in this convention, or in the third article of the convention of the twentieth of October, 1818, hereby continued in force, shall be construed to impair or in any manner affect the claims which either of the contracting parties may have to any part of the country westward of the Stony or Rocky mountains.

ARTICLE 4. The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in nine months, or sooner, if possible.

In witness whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and have affixed thereto the seals of their arms.

Done at London, the —— day of ———, in the year of our Lord 1827.

Protocol of the fourteenth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade the 27th of July, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the last conference was read and signed.

The British plenipotentiaries having expressed their willingness to acquiesce in the project of convention, submitted by the American plenipotentiary for the renewal of the third article of the convention of 1818, the said project was accordingly discussed and agreed to.

The American plenipotentiary, in reference to the observations and proposal of the British plenipotentiaries, with respect to the renewal of the commercial convention, observed, that whilst waiving all argument on the subject of the construction of the term "like," as used in that convention, he must repeat his conviction that the interpretation of the United States was correct, and declare that he could not allow that any such act of either party, as might have arisen from such difference of construction as had been alluded to, would have justified a dissolution of the compact. But although he did not think it necessary to guard against such an alternative, and although he had expressed a preference in favor of a renewal for a fixed term of years, he would agree to the proposition of the British plenipotentiaries, which, though of a less permanent nature, was founded on perfect reciprocity.

The project of the convention submitted by the British plenipotentiaries at the twelfth conference was accordingly discussed and agreed to.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHA. GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 102.] LONDON, August 6, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a convention* extending indefinitely, but liable to be rescinded at the will of either party, the commercial convention of 1815 between the United States and Great Britain. The convention was signed this day, and I beg leave to refer to the protocols of the 5th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, and 14th conferences for the progress of the negotiation.

Some conversation took place, in the first instance, on the mutual advantages which might be derived from an extension of the exemption from discriminating duties to articles not the produce of either country, and from whatever country imported. To this proposition I declared my readiness to agree, provided that, in conformity with your instructions, and in accordance with the spirit of the navigation act of the United States, it was general and without exceptions. But the British plenipotentiaries were not prepared for such a general provision; they could not, indeed, on account of the exclusive privileges of the East India Company, extend it to the produce of countries within its charter, since such produce, if from China, can be imported into Great Britain only in the company's ships, and if from the East Indies and other British possessions in that quarter, only in such ships or in British vessels. It appearing impracticable, with that exception, to make any satisfactory and equal arrangement on that subject, the attempt to enlarge the provisions of the former convention was not pursued.

The proposal on the part of the United States was to renew the convention for a fixed term of years, and after the expiration of that term indefinitely, but liable to be annulled by either party on giving due notice of its intention.

The British plenipotentiaries proposed, first, that the convention should, from the time when it expired (October 20, 1828,) be prolonged indefinitely in the manner proposed by the United States. Second. That an additional article should be inserted, giving a closer definition of the term "like articles," as employed in the convention. They insisted that an erroneous interpretation of those words had been adopted by the United States, and that the term "like" ought to be considered as referring to the similarity in form, substance, and general designation of the article, without reference to the process by which it had been manufactured.

The higher duty laid by the United States on rolled than on hammered bar iron is, as is well known, the only case in which the British Government had complained of the construction put by that of the United States on the term "like." And the discussion in the course of our conferences turned principally on that point.

It was insisted, on the part of the British plenipotentiaries, that rolled and hammered bar iron were substantially the same article; that, if substantially the same, a different process in the manufacture was no reason why a difference should be made in the rate of duty; that the process of making bar iron by rolling being a British improvement and peculiar to Great Britain, the higher duty was, in fact, one on a British article, operated in favor of a similar article the produce of another foreign country, and was contrary to the spirit of the convention; and that the several recommendations of the President to Congress on that subject proved that the Government of the United States had themselves considered the construction implied in the act laying the duty in question as erroneous.

I contended that in the particular case in question there was a substantial difference between the two articles; that, though belonging to the same genus, rolled bar iron was a different species from hammered iron, and distinguishable as such by every person who worked it or used it; that castings, bar iron, and steel were but modifications or varieties of the same metal, and yet in practice almost everywhere liable to different rates of duty; that every Government had a right, in fixing those duties, to distinguish and make such subdivisions amongst articles of the same family as suited its policy; that there was no breach of compact, provided the regulation was general, and that the process of rolling iron was, neither from its nature nor in point of fact, peculiar or exclusively belonging to Great Britain. I also appealed to her own acts in support of the principle on which the construction on the part of the United States was founded.

The convention had provided against prohibitions in the same manner as against higher duties. Neither were permitted, unless general and applying to the like articles of every other country. Indeed, the agreement was still more important in reference to prohibitions than with respect to higher duties, since a total prohibition was more injurious to the country to which it applied than admission on payment of a higher duty.

Now, Great Britain did permit the importation of stock-fish, viz: cod, cured by a process peculiar to the Dutch, and prohibited altogether that of every other species of codfish, and, of course, American codfish. She also permitted the importation of hams and bacon, and had, till within a few days, forbidden that of salted or pickled pork. In both cases she had made a distinction similar to that of which she complained, distinguishing between the same species of fish and between the meat of the same animal, and considering both as different articles, according to the mode by which each was cured or prepared. The last instance was quite in point, pickled pork being inferior in value to hams; and the true reason why Great Britain complained of the duty on rolled bar iron being that, in that case, the higher duty was laid on that species of iron which was the cheapest and inferior in value. In all those cases the prohibition and the higher duty operated principally to the injury of either America or Great Britain. No foreign country, except the United States, could import any considerable quantity of pork or codfish into Great Britain. No other country but Great Britain would import large quantities of rolled iron into the United States. But in all those cases the restriction was general, and on that account not inconsistent with the convention. Nor had it in any case been laid with an intention to do an injury to the other party and to favor some other foreign nation, but solely for the purpose of protecting the domestic produce or manufacture of each country respectively against injurious importations.

* See the convention following the President's message at the beginning of this number.

As to the designation of the articles, it was clear that where no distinctive technical term was in common use they could not be better or, perhaps, otherwise designated than by reference to the process of manufacture, it being always understood that the difference in that process had made a real difference in the article.

I further observed that the additional provision which had been suggested would be quite useless, unless so expressed as to have a direct bearing on the question already at issue. The mere substitution of "similar in substance," or of any such general expressions, for "like" would be nugatory, since the same difference of opinion would exist, whether certain articles were or were not similar in substance.

The messages of the President to Congress which had been alluded to were, I said, only sent in performance of a duty. Congress had laid a certain duty of which a foreign Power complained as contravening a treaty, and that complaint was submitted to their consideration. If those messages were considered as implying a recommendation, this was at most from a spirit of accommodation, and nothing was to be found in them indicating an opinion that the construction put by Congress on the convention was erroneous. But that body had, in consequence of those messages, repeatedly had the subject under consideration; and their refusal to alter the rate of duties proved not only that they adhered to their construction, but that they judged a repeal incompatible with the protection and preservation of the American iron establishments. Under those circumstances I could not accede to any article that would exclude the construction heretofore put on the term alluded to by the United States, and, if insisted on, I must decline renewing the convention.

The discussion of this point alone occupied a considerable portion of three long conferences, and I was rather surprised that so much importance should be attached to it by the British plenipotentiaries. I represented that the value of the rolled iron which might be imported into the United States under a lower rate of duty bore no kind of proportion to the trade carried on between the two countries, or even to the amount of British manufactures of iron and steel imported into the United States. These amounted annually to about four millions of dollars. The importation of rolled iron was about five thousand tons; and supposing this to be doubled in consequence of a lower rate of duty, the increase would be less than three hundred thousand dollars.

Considering the magnitude of the trade carried on between the United States and Great Britain, a trade exceeding twelve millions sterling a year, and which had gradually been increasing since the convention was in force, it must be acknowledged that the differences of opinion which must necessarily arise out of so many commercial operations had been fewer and less important than might have been anticipated. There did not, therefore, appear any sufficient reason for making any alteration in a compact which had been attended with mutual advantages, without producing any serious inconvenience to either party.

The British plenipotentiaries ultimately desisted from their intention of proposing the additional article, but persisted in their declarations that the construction put by Great Britain on the word "like" was correct. And they assigned the difference of opinion in that respect as the reason why they should insist on the renewed convention being made liable to be annulled at the will of either party from the time when that now in force shall expire, that is to say, from the 20th of October, 1828. Although the rejection of the suggested article may have been an additional cause for preferring that mode, it must be observed that the proposal of renewing the convention in that manner, and the intimation of an intention to propose the additional article, were both made at the same time, as will appear by the protocol of the ninth conference. And it had appeared to me from the beginning, though I may be mistaken on that point, that the British plenipotentiaries had made up their minds not to renew the convention otherwise than according to that first proposal of theirs.

Although I should have preferred a renewal for a fixed term of years, the mode proposed being founded in perfect reciprocity, and, under certain circumstances, not being without its advantages, I agreed to it.

That portion of the convention on which the discussion principally turned is perhaps that of least importance to the United States. The East India article would have been of no use prior to the time when the trade of the British possessions in that quarter was opened to private British traders. Till then the incompetency of the East India Company to carry on the trade of the East Indies rendered the commerce of the United States so essential to the prosperity of the country that there was not the slightest danger of their vessels being excluded. Since the admission of British private ships the circumstances are totally different. The trade of the United States is useful, but not necessary to India, and the article secures it against a prohibition, which would not be more contrary to what appears to be a mutual advantage than the exclusion from the West Indies, and for which there might be the same motive.

But the principal advantage of the convention consists in the repeal of the discriminating duties on the navigation of the two countries. It is not at all improbable that if there was no compact to prevent it an attempt again to lay such duties would be made here. This would prove so injurious to both countries that I have no doubt of their ultimately reverting to an agreement similar to that now existing. But the intervening struggle would not only be prejudicial to both parties; it cannot be carried on, without much difficulty, on equal terms, by the United States. They are precluded by the Constitution from retaliating in the most simple and efficient manner, viz: by laying an export duty on the produce of the United States exported in British (or other foreign) ships precisely equal to the discriminating duty which may be laid by Great Britain (or any other foreign nation) on similar produce therein imported in American ships. The retaliating duty must be laid either on the foreign tonnage, and this will be immediately countervailed by a similar one, or on the foreign articles imported in foreign vessels. This operates and affects the navigation of each country in proportion to the bulk of its exported produce, and, therefore, in the ratio of three to one against the United States. This difficulty was felt previous to the arrangement with France; it now exists in the commercial relations with the Netherlands. It is that consideration which affords the strongest motive for any commercial convention on the part of the United States; and, as it was my principal reason for wishing that that with Great Britain should have been of a more permanent nature, it is perhaps there also that may be found the true cause of her preferring the mode of renewing it which has been agreed on.

On the other hand, the commercial policy of Great Britain is not at this moment perfectly settled. Innovations, perhaps, indeed, more nominal than real, have taken place. Symptoms of a retrograde movement have since appeared, and none that are favorable to the United States. It may, under certain circumstances, prove advantageous that they also should have, at any time, the right of annulling the present compact.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

P. S.—The reference to the exception respecting St. Helena, and the provision for continuing in force the former convention without that exception, have been inserted for greater caution, and in order to remove any doubt as to the right of American vessels touching at that island.

A. G.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 103.] LONDON, August 7, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose a convention* concluded yesterday with the British plenipotentiaries, renewing indefinitely, but liable to be annulled at the will of either party, the third article of the convention of 1818.

The negotiation for establishing a permanent boundary between the United States and Great Britain west of the Rocky mountains failed altogether. The protocols of the three first conferences exhibit the proposals made on both sides, and the arguments urged by each party are embodied in the exposition of their claims, as annexed by each respectively to the sixth and seventh protocols.

The renewal of the temporary agreement contained in the third article of the convention of 1818 was then discussed, and the British plenipotentiaries offered at the sixth conference (of 16th December, 1826) a projet of convention, proposing a renewal of the said article for fifteen years, but with the condition, amongst others, that neither party should, during that term, exercise any right of exclusive sovereignty or dominion over any part of the country in question.

This projet having been referred to my Government, your answer declining the proposed condition was received before the month of April. But the negotiations, which it had been intended to resume in February, had been suspended on account of Mr. Huskisson's state of health; and the unsettled situation of the British Cabinet prevented a renewal of the conferences till the 24th of May.

After it had been declared, on my part, that the United States could not accede to the restrictive condition proposed by the British plenipotentiaries, they intimated an intention of agreeing to the renewal of the former agreement without condition, but of inserting in the protocol a declaration that they considered both parties, according to the true intent of that agreement, to be restricted, during its continuance, from exercising any exclusive sovereignty or jurisdiction over the territory in question.

I stated that, considering an acquiescence to such declaration as tantamount to an acceptance of the same article which the United States had thought inadmissible, I could not agree to the renewal of the agreement if accompanied by the insertion in the protocol of the suggested declaration, or of any purporting to explain the intent or meaning of the article intended to be continued in force.

Various other proposals were suggested, though not presented in an official shape, having the same object in view—such as that neither Power should establish any military post in the territory in question, and that the citizens and subjects of either country should, for any offences or acts done in that territory, be amenable only to the tribunals of their own country. To all these I gave, as a general answer, that I could not entertain any such proposals, their object being, in my opinion, to preclude, in another form, the exercise of exclusive sovereignty—a provision which I was not authorized to admit, and to which the United States were pot prepared to accede.

The reasons assigned by the British plenipotentiaries for this provision were, that, according to their view of the subject, it was the true intent or object of the former agreement to keep in abeyance, during its continuance, all conflicting rights to the territory to which it related; that the Government of the United States had manifested an intention to enforce the rights they claimed by assuming exclusive sovereignty, as appeared by a bill which had passed one of the branches of the Legislature for extending to that territory legislative, executive, and judicial jurisdiction, and by the recommendation of the President to establish there a military post; and that it would be utterly impossible to prevent collisions of a national character if the two parties should proceed to such acts of absolute sovereignty.

It was denied, on my part, that anything more was meant or intended by the former agreement than what appeared on the face of it; and that all that was provided for by that compact was to leave the country open to the commerce of the citizens or subjects of both parties, without hindrance either from the Government or from the subjects or citizens of either party.

I observed that whatever might be the presumed intentions of the American Government, they had not as yet done a single act assuming jurisdiction of any kind over the territory west of the Rocky mountains; and that it was rather singular that the mere apprehension of such acts should have brought forth the proposal which had been made by the British plenipotentiaries at the very time when Great Britain had herself assumed that jurisdiction which she considered dangerous to the peace of the two countries.

The act of Parliament (1 and 2 George IV, ch. 66) of July 2, 1821, entitled "An act for regulating the fur trade, and establishing a criminal and civil jurisdiction within certain parts of North America," authorized the King to grant to any company or persons the exclusive privilege of trading with the Indians in all parts of North America, not being part of the territories of the Hudson's Bay Company, of his Majesty's provinces in North America, or of any lands or territories belonging to the United States of America. But a special exception was made by the fourth section of the act, expressly founded on the convention between Great Britain and the United States, and declaring that nothing in the act contained should be construed to authorize any such persons or company to exercise such exclusive trade to the prejudice or exclusion of any citizens of the United States who might be engaged in the said trade.

* See this convention following the President's message at the beginning of this number.

No such exception was made in relation to the provisions of the act establishing jurisdiction. The courts of Upper Canada were, by those provisions, declared to have the same civil jurisdiction, in all respects, within the parts of America not within the limits of Lower or Upper Canada, or of any civil Government of the United States, as they had within the limits of Upper Canada. The King was authorized to appoint persons to act as justices of the peace within the aforesaid parts of America, and to constitute courts composed of such justices, and having an inferior civil and criminal jurisdiction. All capital and other high offences, and all civil suits above a certain amount, were to be tried in the courts of Upper Canada. No provision was inserted excepting citizens of the United States from that jurisdiction. And this extended precisely to the country in question—to the whole territory west of the Stony mountains, since the territories of the Hudson's Bay Company did not reach beyond those mountains, and the British Government denied that any part of the said territory was within the limits of the United States.

It was therefore evident that Great Britain had given to the temporary agreement of 1818 the same construction for which I contended; that she had considered it as securing the citizens and subjects of the two countries in the enjoyment of a free trade within the limits of the territory in question, but not as imposing any other restrictions on either Government.

The United States might, indeed, have a right to complain of some of the provisions of the act of Parliament, not as being a breach of the compact, but generally as an infraction of the right of sovereignty claimed by them over a considerable part of the territory. If no such complaint had been made, it was probably because the act had not been literally executed. But Great Britain, having assumed, in fact, as much jurisdiction as was necessary for the protection of her subjects and for the maintenance of order in the country, so far as she was concerned, could not, at all events, complain if the United States should, on their part, adopt such measures as were necessary for the same object, even if these were not precisely the same which had been deemed sufficient by Great Britain.

A powerful incorporated company, to the exclusion of private British traders, was in itself a territorial Government. Even the extensive and populous regions of the East had, for a long period, been governed through the same means. In the American territories inhabited by the native tribes, experience had shown that whenever private British traders had been admitted, or even when the competition was only between two companies, intestine contentions and bloodshed could not be prevented. But when there was but one exclusive company, its agents were the governors; all the other British subjects in the territory were the servants of that company; they might be and were kept under perfect subordination, restrained from committing any outrages on the Indians, and forming a force sufficient for protection against them. Peace and order had, through those means, been effectually preserved. Nothing was wanting to complete the system but the establishment of proper tribunals for deciding civil suits and trying offences. This was precisely what had been done by the act of Parliament of 1821. Taking all its provisions together, it answered every purpose which Great Britain had in view. But in order to attain the same object the United States would be obliged to resort to different means.

The establishment of an exclusive company appeared incompatible with their habits and institutions. They could not govern the country and preserve peace through that medium. So far as related to the administration of justice, Great Britain could not deny their right of doing what she had done herself, of establishing proper tribunals; and it was immaterial whether the superior courts sat within or without the limits of the territory. But the executive authority, as it could not be vested in the agents of a company, must be exercised by officers of the United States. And, again, not having the numerous servants of a company under their control, they had no other means to preserve peace than a military force. This was, indeed, altogether unnecessary, and never resorted to for that purpose, in the interior parts of the United States; but experience had also proved that in what was called Indian territories, and along their borders, such a force was necessary, and a small one was sufficient to protect the white inhabitants against Indian depredations, and the Indians themselves against the aggressions of lawless individuals. Peace had thus, for a number of years, been preserved with the Indians and amongst the Indians. It had been found impracticable to do it without such means.

I admitted, at the same time, that there was, if not imminent, at least ultimate danger of collisions, as long as no permanent boundary was agreed on in that quarter, and that it was extremely desirable that some arrangement might be made which should, in the meanwhile, prevent any serious differences arising from that cause between the two countries. This object would not be attained by simply agreeing to a condition expressed in terms so general and vague as that which had been proposed on the part of Great Britain, and which, if acceded to, would, without providing for what she had in view, give occasion to new discussions respecting its true meaning. Thus, for instance, she was desirous that neither party should establish any military post in the country, and if both should happen to do it, the act could not, on either side, be considered as one of exclusive sovereignty. The only agreement that could answer the end proposed must be one containing specific provisions, enumerating the acts which each party might do, and those from which each must abstain during its continuance. But this subject had not yet been taken into consideration by my Government. Both the utility and the difficulty of such an arrangement had, for the first time, been brought distinctly into view in the course of this negotiation. The various proposals or suggestions of the British plenipotentiaries, not always according with each other in principle, showed that the views of neither party were yet matured. I had no doubt that my Government would be disposed to enter into an agreement calculated to prevent disputes, provided this was found practicable; that they would entertain any proposals having that object in view, and which should neither affect the rights claimed by the United States, nor impede the pursuits of their citizens and the progress of their settlements in the territory west of the Rocky mountains. But this must be the subject of a subsequent negotiation. There was no pressing immediate necessity for such an agreement; at all events, I was not authorized to conclude, or, indeed, the subject being quite new, to discuss its details. I could only agree to a simple renewal of the third article. The United States had no particular interest in its continuance; it was a matter of mutual concern; if there was any advantage in not suffering that agreement to expire, it was common to both parties. Without attaching a very great importance to it, the Government of the United States, seeing no inconvenience in its renewal for a term not exceeding ten years, had instructed me to that effect, because, the country being as yet used only for the purpose of trading with the natives, there appeared a mutual advantage that the subjects and citizens of neither party should be disturbed in that pursuit by those of the other party. The course which the discussion had taken suggested another reason in favor of the renewal. The dissolution of the existing agreement, whilst the boundary remained unsettled, would have an unfavorable moral effect on the relations between the two countries. They would be left in almost a hostile attitude in that quarter. A temporary renewal would give time to mature measures of a more permanent nature, and leave both parties in a better temper to enter into the discussion of those measures. All these were general considerations, not more applicable to the United States than to Great Britain, and it was now for her to decide; but it was the only option left, whether she would agree to a temporary renewal, without any additional condition or explanatory declaration.

The British plenipotentiaries did not admit that the act of Parliament of July, 1821, was susceptible of the strict literal construction I had put upon it. They declared explicitly that it had no other object but the maintenance of order amongst British subjects, and had never been intended to apply to citizens of the United States. That such was not the intention of Great Britain was evident from the various proposals now made on her part, having all for object to prevent both parties from assuming an exclusive jurisdiction.

They expressed their regret that I was not authorized or even prepared to enter into a discussion of the measures necessary to prevent most serious differences taking place. An arrangement to that effect, though attended with difficulties, did not appear to them impracticable. There was no intention on the part of Great Britain to colonize the country, or to impede the progress of our settlements. They would be disposed, if such an arrangement as they contemplated could be effected, to assign to it a longer duration than had been at first mentioned, (perhaps twenty-five years,) and to leave the further occupation and settlement of a country which they considered as equally open to all to take its own course. But Great Britain owed protection to her subjects in that quarter, and could not admit that they should, so long as the permanent boundary was not settled, be liable to a foreign jurisdiction. Nor would her interest, or a due regard to national character, permit her to acquiesce in an exclusive military occupation of the country on the part of the United States. The necessary consequence of such an occupation on their part would be the establishment also of military posts on the part of Great Britain. There was a great difference between the national flag and that of a private company; and they apprehended that the erection of the first by either party would render the final adjustment of the boundary line more difficult, and the preservation of peace more precarious.

The British plenipotentiaries added that, considering the nature of the claim to the country as set up by each party, Great Britain would hardly be placed on equal terms if the agreement was renewed without inserting in it, in some shape, the condition they had suggested, the United States asserting a claim of absolute sovereignty and a latitude for the construction of that compact which Great Britain denied to herself. They could not, therefore, agree to a simple renewal for a fixed term of years, but they would not object to a temporary continuance, with the intention of preventing collisions while measures were maturing for a more permanent arrangement.

To this overture I acceded without hesitation, and proposed, as had been done by the British plenipotentiaries in relation to the commercial convention, that each party should be at liberty to rescind the agreement on giving twelve months' notice to the other party. This, indeed, appeared to me, upon the whole, a more eligible mode than that of a renewal for ten years, it being quite as probable that the United States may find it expedient to annul the compact before the expiration of that term as that it will suit the convenience of Great Britain to do it.

I beg leave here to observe that some of the most cogent motives for having made the agreement in 1818 have now ceased to operate. The country is still now, as it was then, almost exclusively occupied by the British traders. But the claim of the United States had not at that time been strengthened by the acquisition of that of Spain. The British plenipotentiaries, unable for that very reason to sustain the British claim against the United States by the Nootka convention, did then assert a right of absolute sovereignty, founded, as they said, on prior discoveries and Indian purchases, but which is no longer affirmed. They had also declared that the order given by the British Government, but not yet carried into effect for the restitution of Astoria, had issued, under an erroneous impression, that that establishment had been captured instead of having been, as they asserted, voluntarily transferred. For all those reasons it appeared necessary that, in a convention which established the 49th parallel of latitude as the boundary between the two countries as far as the Stony mountains, some provision should be inserted recognizing the existence of the claims of the United States to the territory west of those mountains. As there was no apparent reason why that boundary should not, as the northern limit of Louisiana, have been extended to the Pacific Ocean, absolute silence with respect to that territory might, under all the circumstances of the case, have had a tendency to weaken the claim of the United States.

A renewal of the agreement is no longer necessary for that object. But, in addition to the reasons that were assigned in the course of the negotiation in favor of continuing it in force, there is still one peculiar to the United States. They claim exclusive sovereignty over a territory, a considerable portion of which is occupied by British traders whom they could not dispossess without engaging in a war—whom, from their distance and other causes, they are not at this time prepared to remove. It is certainly more eligible that those persons should remain on the territory of the United States by virtue of a compact and with their consent than in defiance of their authority.

Although the prospect of paving the way for a more complete and satisfactory agreement has been one of the motives for concluding this convention, no commitment has taken place in that respect. And the further observations which I have to submit on that topic, having no immediate connexion with the temporary continuance of the existing agreement, will be the subject of a separate despatch.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 104.] LONDON, August 9, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose the protocols of the 15th and 16th conferences, which, in addition to some other matter, complete all that passed on the subject of the commercial convention and of the territory west of the Rocky mountains.

I was unexpectedly invited by the British plenipotentiaries on Monday, the 16th instant, to meet them that afternoon. It was for the purpose of signing the two conventions prior to Mr. Canning's death, then every moment expected, although he survived until yesterday morning. He had seen and approved those two instruments. The British plenipotentiaries, whom I met again this morning in an informal way, and only to sign the last protocol, have declined to meet again in conference until after the new administration shall have been formed.

Protocol of the fifteenth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 2d August, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The subject of an agreement for regulating the manner of referring to arbitration, as provided by the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, the points of difference relative to the boundary line between the United States and the British provinces in North America, was taken up and generally discussed at considerable length.

The views of the plenipotentiaries on this subject not being yet sufficiently matured, its further consideration was postponed to their next meeting.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHA. GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

Protocol of the sixteenth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 6th August, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The convention for continuing in force the commercial convention of 1815, and the convention for continuing in force the third article of the convention of 1818, having been engrossed, were compared and respectively signed by the American and British plenipotentiaries.

The discussion of the intended agreement for regulating the proceedings under the arbitration of the points of difference respecting the boundary line, in conformity with the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent, was further postponed till a future meeting of the plenipotentiaries.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHA. GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 105.] LONDON, August 10, 1827.

SIR: I now proceed to lay before you the observations on a more specific agreement with Great Britain respecting the territory west of the Rocky mountains, to which I alluded in my despatch No. 103.

Whatever change may hereafter take place in the views of the British Government concerning that country, I may with confidence say that there is not at present any wish to colonize it; that they view it rather with indifference; that they do not believe that it will, when once settled, long remain either a British colony or a part of the United States; that they do not think it, therefore, a matter of great importance whether it shall receive its inhabitants from Great Britain, Canada, or the United States; and that they are willing to let the settlement of the country take its natural course. But they are not, and will not probably for some time be, prepared to agree to such a division of it between the two Powers as the United States do ask and have a right to claim. They would not be supported in such a measure at this time by public opinion; and, although events may take place which will accelerate the settlement of a permanent boundary line, it is not probable that it can be done in a satisfactory manner until the citizens of the United States shall have acquired a respectable footing in the country. In the meanwhile, this Government feels itself bound to protect the existing establishments which have been created by British capital and enterprise; and the Fur Company, though not perhaps as popular and favored as formerly, has still sufficient influence not to be disregarded. Of the monopolizing, rapacious, and unfriendly disposition of that company you are well apprised, and that it has been and will continue to be the principal bar to a definitive settlement of differences in that quarter. But recollections of the high, though not very tenable ground assumed by this country towards Spain in the affair of Nootka, have also their influence. National pride prevents any abrupt relinquishment of her pretensions; but Great Britain does not seem indisposed to let the country gradually and silently slide into the hands of the United States; and she is anxious that it should not, in any case, become the cause of a rupture between the two Powers.

It has been under the influence of these motives that, in their exposition of the claims of Great Britain, the British plenipotentiaries, resorting to the principles asserted during the negotiations which terminated in the Nootka convention, have considered the country as unoccupied, and equally open to all, but have sedulously avoided to set up a claim of absolute and exclusive sovereignty to any part of it. And I beg leave here to observe that this exposition of the nature of the claim of Great Britain is, in relation to the measures which either country may hereafter adopt or agree to, far more important than the arguments adduced in support of it. To the same disposition must be ascribed the proposal in the projet of convention offered at the sixth conference, that no settlement then existing, or to be formed during the fifteen ensuing years, should be adduced in support of any claim by either party to the exclusive sovereignty of the country—a proposal which, considering that the United States never had had but one settlement within its limits, was, on the whole, favorable to them; but the principal object of which was, that Great Britain should not hereafter be prevented from adjusting the permanent boundary by settlements acknowledged by her to have been made with her sanction, and under an expectation of support and protection on her part

My opinion that the country must necessarily be settled by the United States, and ultimately fall in their hands, provided that the natural course of events is not prevented, and merely by suffering them to take their course, has already been expressed in the view of the claim of the United States attached to the protocol of the seventh conference. It is under this impression, and that which I have of the views of Great Britain, that I have been induced thus to call the attention of the President to the consideration of those measures which may be deemed necessary for the preservation of harmony in that quarter. Most of those which were suggested in the course of the discussion have been mentioned in my former despatches. But it may be convenient to bring them together before you, observing that, in all that was said, it was explicitly understood that I had no instructions on that branch of the subject, and that our conversation must be considered as informal and intended to prepare both parties for a subsequent and distinct negotiation.

The exercise of sovereign authority, which at first was most objected to by the British plenipotentiaries, was the establishment of a territorial government on the part of the United States. But the explanations given and the comparison made between that form of extending jurisdiction and that adopted by the act of Parliament of July, 1821, have, I think, removed those objections in a great degree; at least among the conditions afterwards suggested there was none bearing directly on that point; and I should think that an understanding might take place in that respect without agreeing to any specific condition. The erection of a territory, having for its eastern boundary a line within the acknowledged boundaries of the United States, and describing the country over which the jurisdiction was to extend, generally, or in terms similar to those used in the act of Parliament, might perhaps answer every purpose. The three restrictive conditions which were ultimately urged or suggested are the following:

1. That no custom-house should be erected, nor any duties or charges on tonnage, merchandise, or commerce, be raised by either party in the territory west of the Rocky mountains. This is the only condition proposed which appeared to me to have any necessary connexion with the existing agreement. It may be urged, as fairly implied in the obligation, that the country shall be free and open to the vessels, citizens, and subjects of the two Powers. The extension of the revenue laws of the United States to that quarter is not immediately wanted. The settlement of the country would be rather promoted by not raising the duties. Indeed, if exacted on merchandise intended for the Indian trade, the citizens of the United States could not compete with the British company. The exception is not liable to the constitutional objection, so long as the boundary line remains unsettled and the country is not within the acknowledged limits of the United States.

2. That the citizens and subjects of the two Powers residing in or resorting to the territory in question should be amenable only to the jurisdiction of their own country, respectively. Every other subject might, perhaps, rest on a mutual understanding without a formal agreement. But it seems indispensable that the respective jurisdiction of the courts of justice should be determined by a positive compact. It would otherwise be hardly possible to avoid collisions. The principle of the condition suggested, as above, appears to be the only one that can be resorted to. And, had it not been for your observations respecting Astoria, I might have been almost tempted to accede to the condition with some explanatory modifications. The power to arrest should, at least for high offences, be given to either party. Should each have also the power to try offences committed within the precincts of a post in his actual occupation? This would have covered the case of Astoria; but, as this condition must be reciprocal, it might have been altogether more injurious than useful.

Permit me, however, to observe that the settlement and restitution of Astoria may be forcibly urged as strengthening the claim of the United States to the whole territory; but that it would be dangerous to adduce those incidents, as giving a stronger claim to the absolute sovereignty over that spot than on any other part of the territory. As there can be no higher title or right than that of such sovereignty, the argument could not be pressed without acknowledging that the right of the United States to the residue of the territory was something less than one of absolute sovereignty.

3. That no military post should be established by either party in the territory. This is the most difficult part of the whole subject. The reasons why Great Britain may dispense with a military force in that country and why it may be wanted by the United States were repeatedly stated to the British plenipotentiaries, and, as I had thought at first, with some effect. But when the conferences were resumed in June last, it appeared to me to be the point of which they were the most tenacious. They seemed to consider military posts as a formal national occupation of the country, and as one of such notoriety that, if it was done by the United States, Great Britain could not suffer it without at least following the same example. They explicitly declared that this would indubitably take place if the United States should carry into effect their intention in that respect; and they intimated that they would enter in the protocol a declaration to that effect. This suggestion was abandoned, partly on my observing that such communication ought rather to be made through the usual organ to my Government; partly, perhaps, because they did not wish to commit themselves so entirely on that question. Its real difficulty consists in that Great Britain, having a much larger military establishment than the United States, may, with no greater inconvenience, make larger detachments for any service of this kind; and that if she once takes possession in that way, independent of the collisions it may occasion, it will render an ultimate relinquishment of that portion she would naturally occupy much more difficult on her part. Whether any mode to reconcile the conflicting interests on that point can be found must be left to further consideration. It may, perhaps, prove necessary to let this part of the subject rest on a mutual understanding instead of a positive agreement. Or, if made an express condition, it would be an inducement for continuing to make the whole agreement liable to be rescinded at the will of either party. The British plenipotentiaries had expressed a decided preference for a compact of twenty or twenty-five years' duration, if the two last mentioned conditions made part of it.

I have, in the course of the conversations on the subject-matter of this despatch, suggested to the British plenipotentiaries (and had also to Mr. Canning) that it would be eligible that any negotiation for that object should be carried on at Washington; and that it should not be pressed immediately, as, the subject being under several aspects of new impression, some time was necessary to take it under serious consideration and to mature the views of the Government of the United States respecting it.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 122.] LONDON, September 30, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a convention* with Great Britain for the regulation of the reference to arbitration of the northeast boundary question, which, after a long, protracted, and arduous negotiation, was concluded yesterday.

Our attention was, in the first instance, drawn to the necessity of supplying the want of a general map of the contested territory, those which had been prepared by the principal surveyors of the two Governments respectively having been objected to, and neither of them admitted to be filed amongst the records of the late commission. We anticipated from the beginning that, as eventually happened, we would be unable to agree respecting the highlands, this being one of the main questions at issue. But there was a great advantage to have, if practicable, a map, mutually agreed on, which should connect together the partial surveys made under the late commission, and to which all the arguments drawn from those surveys and from the relative situation of all the rivers and water courses might refer. The work proved to be one of great labor and considerable difficulty. It was the subject of several informal conferences and communications, and occupied a great part of last spring, whilst our official conferences were suspended. The map, with the exception of some details but lately settled, was completed towards the end of June. As we were unable to agree on the highlands and some other points, it was from that time understood, and has been made one of the provisions of the convention, that each party might, on a transcript of the map, delineate the highlands and other features of the country according to its own view of the subject, and that the transcripts might be laid before the arbiter, each being subject to the objections and observations of the other party.

It was also agreed that "Mitchell's map" should, according to the evidence of the American negotiators of the treaty of 1783, be acknowledged as that by which the framers of that treaty had regulated their joint proceedings. The arbiter will therefore be enabled to compare the topography of the country, such as it was understood by the framers of the treaty of 1783, with what, from subsequent exploration, it actually appears to be. It fortunately happens that all the great features of the country, and specially the position of the river St. John's and other waters, are so nearly similar in both that map and the new one (A) which has been agreed on, that the arguments drawn from the intention of the parties are not at all affected by the particulars in which those two maps differ. To this there is but one exception. It appears, by Mitchell's map, that the point of intersection of the north line drawn from the source of the river St. Croix and of the highlands, as contended for by the United States, (in other words, the northwest angle of Nova Scotia,) must have been presumed to be on the dividing ridge which divides the rivers falling into the river St. Lawrence from the tributary streams of the river St. John's. It has been found by the survey of that north line that the river Restigouche, which empties into the Bay des Chaleurs, penetrates further inland or westwardly than had been supposed by Mitchell, so that the said line crosses several of the upper branches of that river, and that the northwest angle of Nova Scotia, contended for by the United States, is on the dividing ridge which divides the rivers emptying into the river St. Lawrence from those which fall into the Gulf St. Lawrence.

When I say that this is the only discrepancy that may affect the argument to be found between the two maps or between the presumed intentions of the parties, and what has turned out to be the fact, I must always be understood as excepting the question which has been raised by Great Britain respecting the highlands. If, as she contends, (most erroneously in my opinion,) a continuous chain of conspicuous mountains was meant by the term "highlands," neither Mitchell's map nor that on which we have agreed throws any light on the subject. Whether such was the intended meaning of that expression, and, if it was, (which we deny,) whether the ground along which either of the two conflicting lines extends answers that description, will be questions for the arbiter to decide. The separate transcripts of the map agreed on, which will be prepared by each party, are intended, as already stated, to enable each to delineate those highlands as he may think proper.

After our conferences had been resumed in May, I found that our discussions in relation to the manner of regulating the proceedings under the reference were, from the numerous points to be arranged, very desultory. There were many principles which it would have been desirable to settle before an attempt was made to draw a projet of articles, since the whole complexion might vary according as those principles might be settled. Still it appeared necessary to bring the questions to some issue; and, with that object in view, I gave, early in June, to the British plenipotentiaries, but as an informal paper, a projet of convention; stating for what purposes it was offered, and that it must not be considered as definitive on my part, there being several points on which my own opinion was not conclusively made up.

We were at that time more immediately, though not exclusively, engaged in the discussion of the renewal of the commercial convention and of the agreement relative to the territory west of the Rocky mountains. But, although the progress of the negotiations was for a while arrested by the substitution of Mr. Grant for Mr. Huskisson as one of the Commissioners, and although the British plenipotentiaries had not yet prepared any projet, they had, previous to Mr. Canning's death, stated at large their objections to mine and their views of the subject. Our conferences were suspended nearly a month on account of that event, and during that interval I addressed, on the 18th of August, a letter to them, pointing out the modifications which, in consequence of the discussions upon it, I was disposed to make to my informal projet. When we met again, they desired that both this and the letter might be considered as official. To this I assented, and they are both annexed to the protocol of the 17th conference, held on the 12th of September. The British plenipotentiaries presented at the same time their counter projet, to which so many amendments were necessary that I found it expedient to offer at the ensuing conference an entire, new-amended projet, which was ultimately agreed to in substance at the 19th conference. The alterations which are chiefly verbal, will be seen by comparing it with the convention itself. I will now proceed to give such explanations of the various provisions as seem necessary, dwelling chiefly on the points which were contested, and commencing with what relates to evidence.

* See this convention following the President's message at the beginning of this number.

That which was laid before the late commission consisted of the reports of surveyors, with the maps or draughts of surveys annexed thereto, and of a variety of documents, most of which are included in an appendix; but many, however, were only quoted by the agents, and are incorporated in their arguments. It was, without difficulty, agreed that, with the exception of the maps, the whole of that evidence might be laid before the arbiter. It is principally in order that every part may thus be used by either party that the clause was introduced at the end of the third article, which authorizes either to annex to its statement any portion it may think fit, not only of the papers annexed to the reports of the Commissioners, but of the other written documents laid before them. It will also result from the same provision that the arbiter will not be encumbered with such parts of the evidence heretofore adduced as, in the opinion of both parties, are altogether irrelevant.

The British plenipotentiaries objected to the maps or draughts of surveys annexed to the reports of the surveyors employed under the late commission being laid before the arbiter. Their objection applied almost exclusively to one of those maps, that by Mr. Johnston, No. 3, which they represented as being rather a general map of the country than an actual draught of his surveys, as giving an erroneous delineation of highlands which he had not seen, and as having been filed by the Commissioners through inadvertence. It is true, that, a few days after it had been thus filed, the British agent had objected to it, and moved that it should be withdrawn. But there were maps on file of the British surveyors quite as objectionable. I insisted that we ought not to make ourselves judges of the validity or irrelevancy of any part of the evidence reported by the Commissioners; that a part of the report of the surveyors would be unintelligible without the maps; and that all that was necessary, on account of their supposed inaccuracies and imaginary delineations of what the surveyors had not seen or explored, was to provide that, like the separate transcript of the map A, they should be adduced for the purposes of illustration, and be subject to the objections of either party.

Incorrect and contradictory as those maps really are, there were important reasons on the part of the United States why they should not have been suppressed. They contain, after all, the only evidence yet obtained of the elevation of various parts of the country along which the two conflicting lines respectively extend. They afford, therefore, the only chance there is of dispensing with new surveys in a most difficult and impenetrable country, and where the season for operations is extremely short. Although these may perhaps become necessary, if the British construction of the word "highlands" should prevail, nothing should be omitted by which the delays attending such work may be avoided. I am inclined to think that there is enough in the British surveys to disprove altogether the inferences they have tried to establish; and there are valuable facts in those of the American surveyors to which no solid objection can be made.

The British plenipotentiaries, though after some hesitation and change of opinion, objected also to the admission of any fresh evidence; and they tried to sustain the objection by that provision in the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent which declares that, in case one of the Commissioners should make no report, the arbiter should decide on the report alone of the other Commissioner. I answered that this provision was intended for that case alone, and for the purpose of preventing one of the Commissioners from defeating the object of the convention; that the case thus provided for had not taken place; and that the stipulation was inapplicable to the present state of things. The object now was to carry into effect the reference contemplated by the treaty of Ghent. It was acknowledged to be necessary for that purpose to modify the original stipulations connected with the proceedings of the commission; and if the intention was, as it ought to be, to secure a just and sound decision, the propriety of permitting both parties to adduce such additional evidence as might have been heretofore omitted was unquestionable.

The fact that the State of Maine had lately directed the Governor to collect new evidence was alone sufficient to have induced me to make this provision a sine qua non. Independent of this, I had ascertained that there was evidence necessary to establish some important points which had not yet been adverted to. Some of this I had collected, and I could point out other that may be obtained. Without entering into details at this time, I will only say that the evidence to which I allude will prove or tend to prove—

1st. That there was a special reason for designating in the treaty of 1783 the river St. Croix as having its mouth in the Bay Fundy, instead of using in that clause the more general expression of Atlantic Ocean, which will effectually repel the assertion on the part of Great Britain that Bay Fundy was thereby intended to be distinguished from the Atlantic Ocean for all the purposes of the treaty.

2d. That as late at least as the year 1783 it was the universal understanding that the highlands contemplated by the proclamation of 1763, and by the Quebec act, were precisely in that position, and on the ground along which the boundary line contended for by the United States does extend; which fact, if fully established, would be conclusive, since it is easily demonstrated, and has been explicitly admitted by the British agent and Commissioner, that it was the intention of the framers of the treaty of 1783 to make the highlands, contemplated by the proclamation of 1763, the boundary between the United States and the British dominions in that quarter.

3d. That the province of New Brunswick, by grants of land and various other acts, has exercised and continues to exercise jurisdiction (both east and west of the line drawn north from the source of the St. Croix) far north of what must have necessarily been the northern boundary of Nova Scotia, had Mars Hill, as it is contended, been the northwest angle of that province, which fact may certainly be proved, and will be also conclusive, unless the British shall be able to establish that the limits of New Brunswick have, by some subsequent act of the Crown, been extended north of the ancient boundaries of Nova Scotia, as laid down by the proclamation of 1763 and the Quebec act.

4th. That although it may be true that the branch of Connecticut river for which the British contend was, when the surveys under the late commission were executed, generally and alone known by the name of Connecticut river, this was not the case in 1783; that no one of the branches was thus exclusively designated at that time; and that if any was then considered as the main branch, it was not that for which the British now contend.

I will here observe that all engraved maps heretofore published are enumerated amongst those which may, subject to the objections of the other party, be laid before the arbiter, and that ex parte surveys by either party, other than those filed with the late Commissioners, are with great propriety excluded. But power has been reserved by the sixth article to the arbiter to order new surveys, and to call for further evidence if he shall think it necessary.

I also asked as a matter of right, and it was not agreed to without difficulty, that each party should be bound to give authentic copies of such acts of a public nature, issued under its authority, as the other party might apply for, but which he must specify. This is a clause necessary, as it relates not only to new evidence, but also to part of that laid before the Commissioners, the authenticity of which might perhaps be contested. Confining myself to the new evidence, I may mention, as acts of the kind alluded to, and of which authentic copies should be demanded, the grant of Sagadahock to the Duke of York; the act by which Nova Scotia was withdrawn from Massachusetts and erected into a regal province; that by which Nova Scotia was divided and New Brunswick erected into a separate province; the commissions of the Governors of those two provinces, and other acts that may have affected their limits; the grants by the Crown or Nova Scotia of Campo Bello; Governor Bernard's tract and Grand Menan; several grants and other acts under the authority of New Brunswick, &c.

The time for producing new evidence, which the British plenipotentiaries wished to limit to three, has been extended to nine months after the exchange of ratifications. This, considering also that which will elapse before that exchange takes place, will afford sufficient time for the purpose. Six months only are allowed for applying to the other party for authentic copies of acts in his possession, in order to enable him to bring counter evidence within the time limited.

After having settled what related to evidence, the next consideration was how to get rid of all the other proceedings under the late commission, it being obvious that they were so voluminous and complicated as to render it extremely improbable that any Sovereign or State should be found who would be willing or able to investigate and arbitrate upon them.

The first suggestion of a joint statement of facts and of the case was necessarily abandoned as impracticable. It was at once agreed that separate statements, drawn by each party, might with great advantage be substituted to the several arguments and memorials laid by the respective agents before the late board, and that the minutes of the proceedings of the Commissioners might be altogether dispensed with. The only difficulty was about their reports, which, according to the treaty of Ghent, ought to have been laid before the arbiter. But the British Commissioner had incorporated in his report, which extends to more than three hundred pages, exclusively of the appendix, no inconsiderable part of the arguments of the agents. The report of the American Commissioner, short, and drawn with great ability, contained but little extraneous matter, but referred to the arguments of the American agent.

I proposed, in the first instance, that extracts only of the reports should be submitted to the arbiter, meaning thereby that all the quotations of or references to the arguments of the agents, as well as every other extraneous matter, should be excluded, and nothing preserved but the opposite decisions of the two Commissioners, with their respective reasons in support thereof. This selection it would not have been very easy to make, so far at least as related to the British report; and the proposal was rejected by the British plenipotentiaries, who proposed on their part to suppress the reports altogether.

To this I had two objections. It appeared to me, in the first place, desirable that the points of difference should be clearly stated; and as the British plenipotentiaries had refused to describe, in the body of the convention, the line for which they contended, the description as given in the decisions might be supposed to be worth preserving. On further examination, I was satisfied that very little would be gained by preserving the designation adopted by the British Commissioner, inasmuch as he had confirmed the British line in no other manner than by reference to its delineation on a certain map, and this the very map of Mr. Odell, which had been rejected, and was not therefore before the board. Whether this was intended to bring before the arbiter that map, contrary to the vote of the board, it is not now necessary to inquire. But the contending lines having been delineated on the map A, now agreed on, the reference to it made in the convention will be sufficient to prevent the parties from shifting their ground, and to guide the arbiter. As it is, however, obvious that the lines, whenever surveyed, will agree neither as to courses nor distances with those on the map A, it has been expressly provided that the said map was agreed on as a delineation of the water courses, and of the conflicting boundary lines in reference to the said water courses. In order to avoid any cavil in the execution of the decision which the United States have a right to expect will be made in their favor, it will be proper to insert in the "statement" a description of the line contended for by them. Such a description will be found, though somewhat differing in terms, in the report of the American Commissioner and in the first American projet attached to the protocol of the seventeenth conference.

The second objection to the total suppression of the reports consisted in the advantage to be derived from various admissions by the British Commissioner, of which, perhaps, the most important consists in his having strongly insisted that the designation of boundaries in the proclamation of 1763 was the prototype of that adopted in the treaty of 1783; which is perfectly true, and precisely what it most imports the United States to establish.

This objection was removed by the provision already alluded to, which authorizes either party to annex to its statements any portion of the reports of the Commissioners which it may think fit. With that clause, the suppression of the reports, being attended with no inconvenience, was agreed to. There is, indeed, some advantage to be derived from it in two respects:

1. The British Commissioner had given a peremptory decision in favor of Great Britain, in relation to the boundary line along the 45th degree of latitude from Connecticut river to St. Regis. The American Commissioner, who throughout acted as a judge and not as a partisan, had, for reasons stated in his report, declined giving an opinion on that question. The unavoidable consequence, had both reports been laid as such before the arbiter, would have been that he must confirm the British decision. As the case now stands, the United States will not be deprived of the opportunity of availing themselves of the equitable considerations that may be urged in favor of the old line, and there is a chance of having it confirmed.

2. The American Commissioner having decided in favor of "Indian Stream" as the branch of Connecticut river, the head spring of which was the true northwesternmost head of that river designated by the treaty of 1783, it would also have been impossible, had the reports been laid before the arbiter, to have contended for "Hall's Stream." This question will now be still open; but I beg leave to observe, that I think not only that the decision of the American Commissioner was correct, but that it will be for the interest of the United States to contend for "Indian Stream" only. There is a defect in the argument in favor of "Hall's Stream," which, if it is urged, might prove fatal to the question and induce a decision in favor of the branch contended for by the British. I did not think myself, however, authorized to decide on that question, and I have, in the line traced on the map A, assumed "Hall's Stream" as the proper branch, which will leave Government to select either that or "Indian Stream" as the branch to be contended for in their statement. This was the only doubtful point for me to decide on in designating the line contended for by the United States. It cannot, in any other respect, in conformity with their construction of the treaty, vary from that traced on the map A.

Having analyzed, with minute attention, all the reports and arguments under the late commission, I must say that there is such an evident superiority in those of the American Commissioner and agent, that the principal reason for substituting to them the intended statements of the parties is that which has been mentioned, but which is indeed conclusive, the impossibility of finding a Sovereign or State who would undertake, and, if undertaking it, would be able to investigate and comprehend such voluminous documents. But the labors of those officers will not be lost to the United States. The principal materials for preparing a condensed and perspicuous statement will be found in what has already been done by them. I think, however, that there are some important views of the subject which may be rendered more forcible and conclusive, and that, as already stated, new light will be thrown on it from evidence which had not yet been adverted to.

It having been agreed that separate statements, prepared by each party respectively, should be substituted to both the reports and arguments under the late commission, there was but one point of difference between us in that respect.

I was desirous that both Governments should be unrestrained as to the number of replies and rejoinders each might think fit to make to the statements of the other party. The British plenipotentiaries contended that this would defeat the object in view, and that with that unlimited permission either party might harass the other, and those argumentative replies be so multiplied as to render the subject as complex and difficult for the arbiter to decide on as if presented to him in its present shape. They also represented it as highly desirable, if not essential, that the ministers or agents of the contracting parties should not appear before the arbiter in the character of counsel, but that the whole of the evidence and arguments on which the parties relied should be laid before him at once and as definitive, unless he should himself think it necessary to call for further evidence or elucidations. A compromise of opinions took place, each party being allowed by the convention to make a reply, but which must be definitive, to the statement of the other party. This, I am confident, will be amply sufficient to obtain a just decision, the whole of the evidence permitted to be adduced, being in conformity to the convention, to be communicated twelve months before the date of the definitive reply or statement. Indeed, had it been a matter of personal concern, I would not have hesitated to accede to the proposal of limiting each party to one statement without the faculty of making any reply. But this is only a matter of opinion, on which I would not have been justified to act, even if that course had been warranted by my instructions and consistent with justice to both parties.

On two points I would have wished the provisions of the convention to have remained as I had proposed.

The British plenipotentiaries insisted that the acts of a public nature, of which authentic copies might be demanded by either party, should be individually specified. It would have been more convenient in some instances to have been permitted to make the application in general terms. But as we really could not ask that the British should find out for us evidence against themselves which we were not able to specify, I could not insist on that point.

I had at first proposed that, after the new evidence should have been mutually communicated, each party might bring counter evidence to rebut it, but no other. This, it is true, was calculated to throw embarrassment in the execution of the convention, as it might become a subject of dispute whether the counter evidence thus adduced was simply such as was permitted. And as a time must be fixed beyond which the process of mutually bringing forth counter evidence should terminate, there might, at all events, be ultimately the same reason to complain that all that was found to be necessary was not yet produced. Still, I would have preferred my original proposition; but, after ample discussion, there remained no choice between the exclusion of any fresh evidence and the provision as it now stands. I do not fear, however, that it will be injurious to the United States. I have carefully examined all the documents produced by both parties during the long contest between France and England respecting the limits of Nova Scotia, and am confident that there is none that bears on the pending question to our disadvantage. And, after examining the subject under all its aspects, I do not think that there can have issued, at any time, any public act of Great Britain, as yet unknown to us, which can affect the question, or which, if brought forth in order to embarrass it, may not be repelled without any counter evidence. It is not impossible, on the other hand, that the British may find themselves aggrieved by the provision on which they have insisted. The stipulation is, at all events, equal in its operation on both parties.

I believe that the same observation will apply to the convention generally. From the numerous difficulties I had to encounter to bring it to a conclusion, I should think that there is no other alternative but to adopt it, or a reference of the reports of the Commissioners, and of all the papers thereto annexed, such as they are. In either case, I am of opinion that there is nothing to apprehend so far as relates to the most important question—that of the northwest angle of Nova Scotia, and of the line thence along the highlands. It is barely possible, though very improbable, that the arbiter should adopt the British construction of the word "highlands," and decide that the line claimed by the United States does not accord with that construction. But there is no proposition in mathematics more conclusively demonstrated than that the line contended for by Great Britain is altogether inconsistent with the treaty of 1783. The only danger is that the arbiter may decide that the conditions of that treaty are contradictory, and that it cannot be executed. It is morally impossible that he should give a decision in favor of Great Britain. This view of the subject had better, however, be kept out of view, as it might induce the arbiter to do that to which he may be but too much inclined, viz: to abstain from giving a decision in favor of either party. I also beg leave to observe, generally, that I have been unable to give explanations which seemed necessary without entering into details which, for the present, should not be made public. We are under no obligation to make Great Britain prematurely acquainted with the tendency of our evidence and the manner in which it may be applied.

I enclose the copy of the protocols of our five last conferences, and of the map A. The original of this map, and of that of Mitchell, procured here, being both intended to be laid before the arbiter, will remain in the archives of this legation, subject to your orders, according to the quarter of the world in which the arbiter that will be selected may reside.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

Protocol of the seventeenth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade on the 12th of September, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

The question of boundaries, under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, as one of reference to foreign arbitration, as therein provided, was opened by the British plenipotentiaries.

They referred to a letter addressed to them on the 18th of August by the American plenipotentiary, and to the projet of a convention for the regulation of that reference which had, on a previous day, been submitted informally by him; both of which were, by his consent, annexed to this protocol, (A, B.)

A discussion of some length on the contents of those papers took place, in which the British plenipotentiaries stated some objections which they had conceived to some points set forth in the projet of the American plenipotentiary, to obviate which they presented the counter projet of convention, hereto annexed, for his consideration, (A.)

It was then mutually agreed to defer all further discussion of the subject until the American plenipotentiary should have had time to reflect upon the contents of the said counter projet.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHA. GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

A.

[Annexed to the protocol of seventeenth conference.]

62 UPPER SEYMOUR STREET, August 18, 1827.

GENTLEMEN: I have reflected on your observations, and what passed at our last conference on that subject, concerning the informal projet of convention which I had previously submitted for regulating the manner of referring to arbitration, as provided by the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, the points of difference relative to the boundary line between the United States and the British provinces in North America. And I think that the further discussion of this subject may be facilitated by communicating to you how far I feel authorized, as at present advised, to meet your views, such as I have understood them from our conversation.

I beg leave to premise that, in submitting that projet as unofficial, my only motive was to avoid any premature commitment, and entering in our protocol propositions not yet matured, and which I was quite disposed to modify after having heard your objections. But you may, for the purpose of consulting your Government, consider that projet and the contents of this letter as an official communication.

My first proposal, though not so in point of order, was to dispense with all the arguments of the agents under the late commission, and that, as a consequence thereof, abstracts only of the reports of the Commissioners should be submitted to the arbiter; meaning thereby, that so much of those reports as consisted of such arguments, or made a general reference to them, should be left out.

I understood you to prefer that those reports should be suppressed altogether.

To this I feel disposed to acquiesce. But it seems to me necessary that, in that case, 1st, the points of difference should be stated in the convention, but without adhering to the particular manner in which they are stated, on the part of the United States, in the first article of the projet; 2d, that both parties should be at liberty to quote, in their statements, such parts of the said reports as they may think proper.

I do not see that I can feel at liberty to accede to your proposal, or rather suggestion, that no new evidence should be adduced; but I coincide entirely in the opinion that no ex parte surveys, by either party, subsequent to such of that description as have been filed by the late Commissioners, should be admitted.

With respect to the statement by each party, although I am not permitted to agree that there should be but one on each side, I will go as far as I can to meet your views in that respect, and will consent that their number be limited to two: that is to say, that each party shall be permitted in addition to his first statement, to present observations on the statement of the other party, and that' this will close the controversy.

These are details which must be left for discussion at our next conferences. I would only suggest that it would be proper that all new evidence should be mutually communicated as soon as possible after the exchange of the ratifications of the intended convention; that the parties should bind themselves to proceed in the choice of the arbiter as soon, also, as possible; and that the respective statements should not be communicated till after that choice has been made. The time within which those statements should be communicated and submitted, and the controversy closed, would then be regulated in reference to the time when an arbiter should have been selected, and signified his assent to act as such.

There remains the most difficult question—that of the surveys. The two maps, on which we have nearly agreed, will be so far useful that they will prevent differences respecting water courses and the relative position of the surveys executed under the commission, and enable the arbiter, so far as that goes, to compare the geography of the country, as it is, with what it was supposed to be, according to Mitchell's map, or any other, (for I think that they are all substantially alike,) by the negotiators of the treaty of 1783. But those maps decide nothing as to the question of highlands.

It is clear that if we do not agree on that point we run the risk of delays in making not only surveys, but in taking sections of a very impenetrable country, and the still greater danger of not being able to find any other Sovereign or State who will undertake to investigate a subject depending, not on argument or the construction of a compact, but on contested topographical details. But how is this to be avoided? I have revolved the subject in my mind in every possible way, and can see no other that would avoid the danger above stated but to agree that our respective lines extend both along highlands generally, and that the only question is, what are the highlands contemplated by the treaty? If you can suggest any other mode, I will most cheerfully receive the proposal, and wish it may be found to answer.

But if we cannot agree on that point the fault is not ours, but partly of the defective surveys executed under the late commission, principally of the subject-matter of difference. We must, in that case, after having arranged in the most simple manner we can the other points, let this take its own course. The reports of the surveyors, and their accompanying maps or sketches, must be submitted to the arbiter, subject, respectively, to the objections of each party, and reserving to the arbiter the power to order additional surveys to be made if he shall think it necessary.

Hoping that you may soon be prepared to meet again in conference, I pray you to accept the assurances of the high consideration with which I have the honor to be, &c.,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Right Hon. CHARLES GRANT and HENRY U. ADDINGTON, Esq., &c., &c., &c.

B.

Project of convention for the settlement of the fifth article of the Treaty of Ghent.

Whereas it is stipulated in the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent that, in case the Commissioners appointed under that article for the settlement of the boundary line therein described should not be able to agree upon such boundary line, a reference should be made of the point or points on which the said Commissioners differed to the decision of some friendly Sovereign or State, which decision should be considered by the contracting parties as final and conclusive: that case having now occurred, and it having therefore become expedient to proceed to and regulate the said reference, the President of the United States &c., &c.

ARTICLE 1. It is agreed that the points of difference which have arisen in the settlement of the boundary between the American and British dominions, as described in the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent, shall be referred, as therein provided, to some friendly Sovereign or State, who shall be invited to investigate and make a decision upon such points of difference. The two contracting Powers engage to proceed in concert to the choice of such friendly Sovereign or State as soon as the ratifications of this convention shall have been exchanged, and to pray the arbiter thus chosen to give his [or use their best endeavors to obtain a] decision, if practicable, within two years after he [the arbiter] shall have signified his consent to act as such.

ARTICLE 2. In order to establish in what the points of difference do consist, it is hereby declared, on the part of the United States, that they contend, first, that the northwest angle of Nova Scotia, mentioned in the treaty of 1783, is to be found at a point of the highlands lying due north, and about — miles from the source of the river St. Croix, which divides a certain river that empties itself into the river St. Lawrence, and designated in the surveys executed under the late commission by the name of river Beaver, from the tributary streams of the river Restigouche, which last river falls into the Bay des Chaleurs, an arm of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, which said Gulf, as the United States contend, is part of the Atlantic Ocean. Secondly. That the boundary line between the dominions of the two Powers, as described and intended by the treaty of 1783, extends due north from the source of the river St. Croix to the above described point, which, as the United States contend, is the northwest angle of Nova Scotia, and thence along the highlands which divide the rivers that empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence, from either the tributary streams of the river Restigouche and of the river St. John's, (which last river falls into Bay Fundy, and which bay, as the United States contend, is part of the the Atlantic Ocean,) or the other rivers which fall into the Atlantic Ocean, to the northwesternmost head of the Connecticut river, so that the said line shall, through its whole extent, from the northwest angle of Nova Scotia, as above described, pass between the sources of the said rivers, leaving on the right hand, and within the dominions of Great Britain, the sources of all the rivers that empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence, and on the left hand, and within the dominions of the United States, the sources of the tributary streams of the rivers Restigouche and St. John's, as well as of all the other rivers which fall into the Atlantic Ocean. Thirdly. That the northwesternmost source of the branch of Connecticut river, now known by the name of —— stream, is the northwesternmost head of Connecticut river, described by the treaty of 1783, to which the boundary line aforesaid must extend, and thence proceed down the said branch to its junction with other branches of the said river, and down the said united branches, which together form the Connecticut river, to the place where it meets a line surveyed prior to the year 1776, under the authority of the then provinces or colonies of New York and Quebec, as being in the latitude of forty-five degrees, and as the boundary line between the said provinces or colonies. Fourthly. That so much of the last mentioned boundary line as had been actually thus surveyed prior to the year 1776, under the authority of the said provinces or colonies, was not, by the treaty of Ghent, intended to be again surveyed, but is and ought to remain, as heretofore, the boundary line between the dominions of the two Powers. And it is hereby declared, on the part of his Britannic Majesty, that—

ARTICLE 3. The extracts of the reports of the late Commissioners, which are annexed to this convention, two general maps of the surveys executed by the direction of the said Commissioners, which maps have been signed by the plenipotentiaries at the same time with this convention, and are substituted to two conflicting general maps of the said surveys which had been laid before the said Commissioners, and the original map, published in the year 1755, called Mitchell's map, by which the framers of the treaty of 1783 are admitted to have regulated their proceedings, though other maps were consulted by them, separately, shall be delivered to the minister or agent of the arbiter. But the boundary lines contended for by the two parties, respectively, and which are delineated in the two general maps of surveys aforesaid, so far as the said maps extend, shall be taken and understood as described, (in the next preceding article,) though the said lines and the several water courses should prove not to have been, in every respect, correctly set down in the said general maps. Or, if article two is omitted " by each party, respectively, in the statements mentioned in the fifth article of this convention."

ARTICLE 4. Each of the contracting parties shall, within six months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, communicate to the other all the evidence intended to be brought in support of its claim, whether the same consists of public documents, books, maps, surveys, reports of surveyors, or is of any other nature, and whether it does or does not make a part of the evidence which has been laid before the Commissioners aforesaid; which communication shall be made by the United States to his Britannic Majesty's minister or chargé at Washington, and by Great Britain to the minister or chargé of the United States at London.

Although such evidence may thereafter be contested as irrelevant, its authenticity shall not be questioned; such parts thereof only excepted, as being offered only by one party, shall be objected to by the other party, and the objections thereto delivered in writing by each Government, respectively, to the minister or chargé of the other party within twelve months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention.

No other evidence (unless as provided by the seventh article of this convention) shall be laid before the arbiter but such as may be deemed necessary by either party to rebut that produced by the other, and as shall likewise be communicated within twelve months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention. And such additional evidence shall also be deemed authentic, unless objected to, and the objections communicated in writing, in same manner as aforesaid, within four months after such evidence shall have been communicated.

Each of the contracting parties shall be bound, on the application of the other party, to give authentic copies of such acts of a public nature, intended to be laid as evidence before the arbiter, as have been issued under his authority, or are in his exclusive possession.

ARTICLE 5. Each of the contracting parties shall, respectively, draw up a statement of his own case in such terms as he shall think expedient. These statements shall be mutually communicated to each other within six months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention: that is to say, the statement of the United States to his Britannic Majesty's minister or chargé at Washington, and that of Great Britain to the minister or chargé of the United States at London; and they shall be considered as a substitute to all the arguments of the agents of the two Powers under the late commission, and to such parts of the reports of the Commissioners as are not contained in the aforesaid extracts annexed to this convention.

ARTICLE 6. All the documents, evidence, and statements above mentioned, as well as any additional statements which either of the contracting parties may deem necessary to lay before the arbiter, on account of any new evidence produced, or of any new matter contained in the first statement of the other party, (such additional statements being likewise communicated to the other party,) shall be laid before the arbiter within twenty-four months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, unless the arbiter shall not have, within that time, consented to act as such; in which case, all the said documents, evidence, and statements shall be laid before him within six months after the time when he shall have consented to act, and shall, in either case, be considered thenceforward as definitive. But the contracting parties may, by mutual consent, previously agree to withdraw the first statements above mentioned, and to substitute others, which shall be laid before the arbiter in lieu thereof, and shall, in the same manner, be considered thenceforward as definitive, and shall not undergo any alteration or amendment whatever.

ARTICLE 7. In order, however, to facilitate the attainment of a just and equitable decision in the case so referred to the arbitrating Sovereign or State, it is agreed that, in the event of such Sovereign or State desiring further elucidation or explanation of any specific point contained in either of the said statements so submitted to him, the requisition for such elucidation shall be simultaneous to both parties, who shall thereupon be permitted to make each a written reply to the specific questions submitted by the said arbiter, but no further, and such replies shall be immediately communicated by each party to the other.

ARTICLE 8. The decision of the arbiter shall be considered final and conclusive, and shall be carried into immediate effect by Commissioners appointed by the contracting Powers for that purpose.

C.

Projet of convention for the regulation of the reference to arbitration of the Northeast Boundary Question.

Whereas it is provided by the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent that, in case the Commissioners appointed under that article for the settlement of the boundary line therein described should not be able to agree upon such boundary line, the report or reports of those Commissioners, stating the points on which they had differed, should be submitted to the arbitration of some friendly Sovereign or State, and that the award given by such Sovereign or State on such points of difference should be considered by the contracting parties as final and conclusive: that case having now arisen, and it having, therefore, become expedient to proceed to and regulate the reference to arbitration as above described, his Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the United States of America have, for that purpose, named their respective plenipotentiaries, that is to say: his Majesty, on his part, has appointed the Right Honorable Charles Grant, &c., &c., &c., and Henry Unwin Addington, Esq., &c., &c., &c.; and the President of the United States has appointed Albert Gallatin, &c., &c., &c.: who, after having exchanged their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed to and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. It is agreed that the points of difference which have arisen in the settlement of the boundary between the British and American dominions, as described in the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, shall be referred, as therein provided, to some friendly Sovereign or State, who shall be invited to investigate and make a decision upon such points of difference. The two contracting Powers engage to proceed in concert to the choice of such friendly Sovereign or State as soon as the ratification of this convention shall have been exchanged, and to use their best endeavors to obtain a [pray the arbiter thus chosen to give his] decision, if practicable, within two years after he [the arbiter] shall have signified his consent to act as such.

ARTICLE 2. The reports and documents thereunto annexed of the Commissioners appointed to carry into execution the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent being so voluminous and complicated as to render it improbable that any Sovereign or State should be willing or able to undertake the office of investigating and arbitrating upon them, it is hereby agreed to substitute for those reports a new and separate statement of claims, severally drawn up by each of the contracting parties in such form and terms as each may think fit.

ARTICLE 3. The said statements, when prepared, shall be mutually communicated to each other by the contracting parties within six months after the exchange of ratifications of the present convention; and, within six months further after such communication, each party shall have the power of drawing up a second or supplementary statement, if it thinks fit so to do, in reply to the statement of the other party already communicated to it, subject, however, to the restrictions and conditions hereinafter described.

ARTICLE 4. Each of the contracting parties shall, within three months after the exchange of ratifications of this convention, communicate to the other all the evidence intended to be brought in support of its claim beyond that which is contained in the reports and other written documents of the Commissioners under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent; but it is hereby expressly agreed that no maps, surveys, or hydrographical evidence of any description shall be adduced by either party beyond that which is hereinafter stipulated, nor shall any fresh evidence of any description be adduced or adverted to by either party after the mutual communication of evidence above described. Each party, however, shall have full power to incorporate in or annex to either its first or second statement any portion of the written reports or papers of the Commissioners under the 5th article of the treaty of Ghent, or of the other evidence mutually communicated, as above provided, which it may think fit.

ARTICLE 5. Within —— months after the mutual communication between the contracting parties of the last of the above mentioned statements, all the statements, papers, maps, and documents, of whatever nature, which may form the cases destined to be referred by the contracting parties to arbitration, shall be jointly and simultaneously delivered in to the arbitrating Sovereign or State; and thenceforth no addition, subtraction, or alteration whatsoever, shall be made by either of the contracting parties in the papers so delivered in.

ARTICLE 6. In order, however, to facilitate the attainment of a just and equitable decision on the part of the arbiter, it is agreed that, in case the said arbiter should desire further elucidation or explanation of any specific point contained in either of the statements submitted to him, he shall have the power of calling upon either of the contracting parties for such elucidation; and the party so called upon shall make a written reply to the specific questions so put to him, but no further. And a copy of the requisition so made, and of the reply of the party so called upon, shall be forthwith communicated by that party to the other.

ARTICLE 7. For the purpose of guiding the decision of the arbitrating Sovereign or State upon the points of difference submitted to him, the map A, hereto annexed, as well as a correct copy of the map called Mitchell's map, by which the framers of the treaty of 1783 regulated their proceedings, shall alone be annexed as authentic documents to the statements of the contracting parties; but it shall be lawful for either party to annex to its respective statement or statements, for the purposes of general illustration, a separate section of the said map A transcribed from that annexed to this convention, in which section each party may lay down the highlands or other features of the country as it shall think fit, the water courses remaining as laid down in the said map, subject, however, to such observations as the other contracting party may deem it expedient to attach, whether marginally or otherwise, to any portion of the said section so laid down. In case, however, the arbiter should find this hydrographic evidence insufficient for the purposes of a sound and just arbitration, he shall have the power of ordering fresh surveys to be made by surveyors, appointed by himself, of any portions of the disputed boundary lines or territory, and such surveys shall be considered as authentic by the contracting parties.

ARTICLE 8. The decision of the arbiter, when given, shall be taken as final and conclusive, and it shall be carried, without reserve, into immediate effect by Commissioners appointed for that purpose by the contracting parties.

Protocol of the eighteenth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade, September 14, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The American plenipotentiary having considered the counter projet of convention presented by the British plenipotentiaries at the last conference, and having found therein several points to which he either could not assent in principle, or of which the form and disposition appeared to him susceptible of improvement, submitted the amended projet hereto annexed, (D.)

After some conversation thereupon, the British plenipotentiaries having intimated their wish to reflect further upon the whole subject before they came to a final decision upon any of the proposed amendments, the matter was postponed to the next conference.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHARLES GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

[Annexed to protocol of eighteenth conference.]

D.

Counter projet of convention for the regulation of the reference to arbitration of the northeast boundary question.

Whereas it is provided by the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent that, in case the Commissioners appointed under that article for the settlement of the boundary line therein described should not be able to agree upon such boundary line, the report or reports of those Commissioners, stating the points on which they had differed, should be submitted to some friendly Sovereign or State, and that the decision given by such Sovereign or State on such points of difference should be considered by the contracting parties as final and conclusive: that case having now arisen, and it having, therefore, become expedient to proceed to and regulate the reference as above described, the President of the United States of America and his Majesty the King of the United Kindom of Great Britain and Ireland have, for that purpose, named their respective plenipotentiaries, that is to say: the President of the United States, on his part, has appointed Albert Gallatin, &c., &c., &c., and his Majesty has appointed the Right Honorable Charles Grant, &c., &c., &c., and Henry Unwin Addington, Esq., &c., &c., &c.: who, after having exchanged their respective full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed to and concluded the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. It is agreed that the points of difference which have arisen in the settlement of the boundary between the American and British dominions, as described in the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent, shall be referred, as therein provided, to some friendly Sovereign or State, who shall be invited to investigate and make a decision upon such points of difference. The two contracting Powers engage to proceed in concert to the choice of such friendly Sovereign or State as soon as the ratifications of this convention shall have been exchanged, and to use their best endeavors to obtain a decision, if practicable, within two years after the arbiter shall have signified his consent to act as such.

ARTICLE 2. The reports and documents thereunto annexed of the Commissioners appointed to carry into execution the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent being so voluminous and complicated as to render it improbable that any Sovereign or State should be willing or able to undertake the office of investigating and arbitrating upon them, it is hereby agreed to substitute for those reports new and separate statements of each party's case, severally drawn up by each of the contracting parties in such form and terms as each may think fit. The said statements, when prepared, shall be mutually communicated to each other by the contracting parties, that is to say, by the United States to his Britannic Majesty's minister or chargé at Washington, and by Great Britain to the minister or chargé of the United States at London, within fifteen months after the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention. Each party shall have the power of drawing up a second or supplementary statement, if it thinks fit so to do, in reply to the statement of the other party already communicated to it, which supplementary statements shall also be mutually communicated in the same manner to each other by the contracting parties within twenty-one months after the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention.

ARTICLE 3. Each of the contracting parties shall, within nine months after the exchange of ratifications of this convention, communicate to the other, in the same manner as aforesaid, all the evidence intended to be brought in support of its claim beyond that which is contained in the reports and other written documents of the Commissioners under the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent. Each of the contracting parties shall be bound, on the application of the other party, made within six months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, to give authentic copies of such acts of a public nature, intended to be laid as evidence before the arbiter, as have been issued under his authority or are in his exclusive possession. No maps, surveys, or topographical evidence of any description shall be adduced by either party beyond that which is hereinafter stipulated; nor shall any fresh evidence of any description be adduced or adverted to by either party, other than that mutually communicated or applied for as aforesaid. Each party shall have full power to incorporate in or annex to either its first or second statement any portion of the written reports or papers of the commission under the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent, or of the other evidence mutually communicated, as above provided, which it may think fit.

ARTICLE 4. The map called Mitchell's map, by which the framers of the treaty of 1783 are admitted to have regulated their proceedings, though other maps were consulted by them separately, and the map A, which has been agreed on by the contracting parties as a delineation of the water courses, and of the boundary lines in reference to the said water courses, as contended for by each party respectively, and which has, accordingly, been signed by the above named plenipotentiaries at the same time with this convention, shall be annexed to the statement of the contracting parties, and be the only maps that shall be considered as indisputable evidence of the topography of the country. It shall, however, be lawful for either party to annex to its respective first statement, for the purposes of general illustration, any of the maps, surveys, or topographical delineations which were filed with the Commissioners under the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent, any engraved map heretofore published, and also a transcript of the above mentioned map A, or of a section thereof, in which transcript each party may lay down the highlands or other features of the country as it shall think fit, the water courses and the boundary lines, as claimed by each party, remaining as laid down in the said map A. But this transcript, as well as all the other maps, surveys, or topographical delineations, other than the map A and Mitchell's map, intended to be thus annexed by either party to his statements, shall be communicated to the other party, in the same manner as aforesaid, within nine months after the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, and shall be subject to such objections and observations as the other contracting party may deem it expedient to make thereto, and shall annex to his first statement, either in the margin of such transcript, map or maps, or otherwise.

ARTICLE 5. All the statements, papers, maps, and documents above mentioned, and which shall have been mutually communicated, as aforesaid, shall, without any addition, subtraction, or alteration whatsoever, be jointly and simultaneously delivered in to the arbitrating Sovereign or State within two years after the exchange of ratifications of this convention, unless the arbiter should not, within that time, have consented to act as such; in which case, all the said statements, papers, maps, and documents shall be laid before him within six months after the time when he shall have consented to act.

ARTICLE 6. In order, however, to facilitate the attainment of a just and sound decision on the part of the arbiter, it is agreed, in case the said arbiter should desire further elucidation or evidence in regard of any specific point contained in either of the statements submitted to him, the requisition for such elucidation or evidence shall be simultaneous to both parties, who shall thereupon be permitted to bring further evidence if required, and to make, each, a written reply to the specific questions submitted by the said arbiter, but no further; and such evidence and replies shall be immediately communicated by each party to the other. And in case the arbiter should find the topographical evidence laid, as aforesaid, before him insufficient for the purposes of a sound and just decision, he shall have the power of ordering additional surveys to be made of any portions of the disputed boundary line or territory as he may think fit; which surveys shall be made at the joint expense of the contracting parties, and be considered as authentic by them.

ARTICLE 7. The decision of the arbiter, when given, shall be taken as final and conclusive; and it shall be carried, without reserve, into immediate effect by Commissioners appointed for that purpose by the contracting parties.

ARTICLE 8. This convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in —— months, or sooner, if possible.

Protocol of the nineteenth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade, September 18, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The amended projet of convention submitted at the last conference by the American plenipotentiary was taken up for consideration.

The British plenipotentiaries declared that, although on the first proposal of some of the provisions suggested by the American plenipotentiary for the regulation of the question of boundaries under the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent, they had demurred to admit them into the convention, yet, having further reflected on their nature and tendency, and believing that, upon the whole, the projet, such as it now stood, was calculated to attain its principal objects, namely, those of placing both parties on a footing of perfect equality before the arbiter, and of securing from him a just and sound decision on the differences submitted to him, they had determined to forego the partial opposition which they had offered to some of the propositions of the American plenipotentiary, and to admit, with a few immaterial variations, the projet of convention now before them.

That projet, with the alterations suggested by the British plenipotentiaries, was accordingly read and finally agreed to.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHAS. GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Protocol of the twentieth conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade, September 24, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The British plenipotentiaries then adverted to the nine articles of conventional arrangement which had been brought forward, on the part of Great Britain, in July, 1824, and to which, at the eleventh conference between the plenipotentiaries on the 26th of June last, the American plenipotentiary had made a reply in the name of his Government, and inserted it in the protocol of that conference.

The British plenipotentiaries intimated that, since the opinions of the two Governments appeared to be divided on several of the articles in question, and particularly as the British Government could not accede to the proposal made by the American plenipotentiary for the mutual delivery of persons held to service or labor under the laws of either party, it seemed to them advisable to waive for the present all further consideration of the subject. This, they apprehended, might be done without inconvenience, since none of the articles in question were of such importance as to render the immediate adoption of them a matter of urgent necessity, or to call for the formation of a separate convention on their account alone.

The British plenipotentiaries accordingly proposed to postpone the further discussion of that question, to which proposal the American plenipotentiary assented.

The American plenipotentiary stated that, having satisfied himself that there was no probability of forming, at the present moment, any arrangement with respect to the free navigation of the river St. Lawrence on the principles heretofore and still urged by the United States, he would abstain from submitting, as he had intended, any proposal on that subject.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHAS. GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Protocol of the twenty-first conference between the American and British Plenipotentiaries, held at the Board of Trade, September 29, 1827.

Present: Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Grant, and Mr. Addington.

The protocol of the preceding conference was read over and signed.

The convention, as agreed to at the nineteenth conference, was finally concluded and signed by the plenipotentiaries, who also, at the same time, apposed their signature to the map mutually agreed on, and designated in the said convention under the title of the map A.

The subjects of negotiation upon which the plenipotentiaries had been appointed to treat being now exhausted, they agreed to consider the present meeting as their last official conference.

The plenipotentiaries mutually expressed their sincere satisfaction at the cordial and friendly manner in which, whatever might have been their occasional differences of opinion, the discussions arising out of those differences had been conducted; and they parted with a reciprocal assurance that they could not but indulge the hope that the result of their labors, although not altogether equal to what they could have desired, might yet tend in no inconsiderable degree to uphold the friendly relations which at present so happily subsist between the two nations.

ALBERT GALLATIN.
CHAS. GRANT.
H. U. ADDINGTON.

True copy.

W. B. LAWRENCE, Secretary of Legation.

Mr. Gallatin to Mr. Clay.

No. 124.] LONDON, October 2, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith an atlas, containing several maps, intended to be laid before the arbiter on the northeast boundary, two engraved and six manuscript copies of engraved maps enclosed in the atlas, the Annual Register for 1763, with a map, and Pownall's topographical account, all intended for the same purpose, and the particular object of which will be explained hereafter.

Duplicates of all the engraved maps, and of Dunn's and Bouchette's maps, are left in the archives of the legation, those sent to you being intended to enable you to make the necessary communications to the British minister, in conformity with the convention. I have not been able to obtain the engraved original maps of the four other manuscript ones sent to you. The books to which they are attached belong to Mr. Aspinwall, and may probably be purchased from him. There is another map in the archives of the legation, (D'Anville's,) of which the copy is not yet prepared, and will be sent to you when it is ready.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

ALBERT GALLATIN.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

The following was submitted by Mr. Benton, December 24, 1827, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed :

Mr. Ashley to Mr. Benton.

ST. LOUIS, November 12, 1827.

DEAR SIR: Your letter making inquiries of me concerning trade and intercourse with Indians west of the Rocky mountains, &c., is at hand. In reply, I will remark that I have no knowledge of any of our citizens being west of the Rocky mountains, upon the territory of the United States, except those employed or equipped by me; and, having a pretty correct idea of the bounds of their operations, can, with certainty, say that in no instance have they advanced north of the 49th degree of north latitude, the supposed boundary between the United States and Great Britain. We believe that, in extending our operations north of that boundary, we should greatly endanger our property and lives, inasmuch as we should be exposed to numerous hostile Indians, who are under the immediate influence of British traders, as well as those traders themselves. I have been creditably informed that the Hudson Bay Company will not even allow the men in their service to trap beaver north of the 49th degree of latitude, west of the Rocky mountains. The policy of this regulation must be obvious to all, that they intend to make the best use of the privilege granted them by the treaty of 1818, allowing British subjects free trade and intercourse upon the territory claimed by the United States south of that degree of latitude. The British have extended their trapping excursions as far south as the Mexican territory; and appearances justify the belief that they have been so engaged, between the 39th and 49th degrees of latitude, for the last ten or fifteen years. I have no criterion by which to estimate the probable amount of furs taken by them in that time but by the products of the labor of men employed or equipped by me in the same business, and upon the same grounds, for the last three years, and from information derived from men who have been in the service of the Hudson Bay Company for many years. The products of the American hunters, (about one hundred in number,) for the three years before mentioned, average about six hundred dollars annually, each; making the sum of $180,000 for that period; they collected those furs from streams that had been previously, and in many instances repeatedly, trapped by the British. That the same water courses did, when first trapped, furnish double the quantity of furs in the same time, with the same labor, I have not the least doubt. In the winters of 1824 and 1825 Mr. Jedediah S. Smith, with a small party of Americans, visited one of the British establishments at the mouth of Flathead river, a branch of the Columbia. Mr. Ogden, who had charge of that post, informed Mr. Smith, rather exultingly, that his party, composed of about sixty men, had taken, during their operations in the district of country claimed by the Snake Indians, (a small portion of our territory west of the Rocky mountains,) eighty-five thousand beaver, equal to £150,000, worth say $600,000. The time employed in collecting those furs, as well as I now recollect, was between two and three years. A considerable portion of our territory west of the Rocky mountains being as yet unexplored, the extent of our fur region is uncertain; it, however, would not be an extravagant estimate to include half of the whole of our territory west of the 30th degree of longitude, (counting from Washington city,) under that denomination; and such is the peculiar situation of the country that, under suitable regulations, it would probably afford a great quantity of furs for centuries to come. I have been brought to this conclusion from the opinions of the most experienced hunters, and in some degree from my own observations, that, after trapping beaver where they were considered plenty, until they became so diminished in numbers as not to justify the hunter's continuing his operations at the same place, leaving the streams undisturbed for five or six years, they will, at the expiration of that time, be found as numerous as when first trapped. The beaver is a shy, sagacious animal; they become, after being pursued for some time, to understand their enemies, and avoid the traps set for them; consequently a sufficient number is left to produce their original number in the course of five or six years. I have been informed that the British have three or four posts established south of the 49th degree of latitude, but do not know the location of but one, that is at the mouth of Flathead river, a branch of the Columbia, and about the centre of our territory west of the Rocky mountains. I have not in every instance answered the questions contained in your communication, but have stated circumstances which would govern me in my opinions, and which will lead you to such conclusions as those circumstances deserve. Putting aside the impropriety of suffering foreigners to enter upon our territory and gather its wealth without any advantage whatever to our Government, and to the great inconvenience and injury of our own citizens engaged in the same pursuits, the serious consequences that may arise from the influence of foreigners among our western Indians should be a sufficient objection to exclude them. In relation to this matter Missouri has the greatest cause to complain. We see our Government locating upon the western borders of our State numerous savages, whose minds have been already poisoned against us by British influence. If the same influence is suffered to be exercised among the savages in the region of the Rocky mountains, what a numerous savage foe may we expect at some period perhaps not very far distant !

Your very obedient servant,

W. H. ASHLEY.

Hon. THOMAS H. BENTON.

20TH CONGRESS.] No. 459. [1ST SESSION.

TREATY OF COMMERCE AND NAVIGATION WITH THE KINGDOM OF SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

COMMUNICATED TO THE SENATE DECEMBER 12, 1827.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit to the Senate, for their advice with regard to its ratification, a treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States and the Kingdom of Sweden and Norway, signed at Stockholm by the plenipotentiaries of the two Governments on the fourth day of July last.

A copy of the treaty, with a translation, and the instructions and correspondence relating to the negotiation, are also communicated.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, December 11, 1827.

TREATY OF COMMERCE AND NAVIGATION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND SWEDEN.

[Translation.]

In the name of the Most Holy and Indivisible Trinity.

The United States of America and his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, equally animated with the desire of extending and consolidating the commercial relations subsisting between their respective territories, and convinced that this object cannot better be accomplished than by placing them on the basis of a perfect equality and reciprocity, have, in consequence, agreed to enter into negotiation for a new treaty of commerce and navigation, and, to this effect, have appointed plenipotentiaries, to wit: The President of the United States of America, John James Appleton, Chargé d'Affaires of the said States at the Court of his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway; and his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, the Sieur Gustave Count de Wetterstedt, his Minister of State and of Foreign Affairs, Knight Commander of his Orders, Knight of the Orders of St. Andrew, St. Alexander Newsky, and St. Ann, of the first class, of Russia; Knight of the Order of the Red Eagle, of the first class, of Prussia; Grand Cross of the Order of Leopold, of Austria; one of the eighteen of the Swedish Academy: who, after having exchanged their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. The citizens and subjects of each of the two high contracting parties may, with all security for their persons, vessels, and cargoes, freely enter the ports, places, and rivers of the territories of the other, wherever foreign commerce is permitted. They shall be at liberty to sojourn and reside in all parts whatsoever of said territories; to rent and occupy houses and warehouses for their commerce; and they shall enjoy, generally, the most entire security and protection in their mercantile transactions, on condition of their submitting to the laws and ordinances of the respective countries.

ARTICLE 2. Swedish and Norwegian vessels, and those of the island of St. Bartholomew, arriving, either laden or in ballast, into the ports of the United States of America, from whatever place they may come, shall be treated on their entrance, during their stay, and at their departure, upon the same footing as national vessels coming from the same place, with respect to the duties of tonnage, light-houses, pilotage, and port charges, as well as to the perquisites of public officers, and all other duties or charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishments whatsoever.

And reciprocally, the vessels of the United States of America arriving, either laden or in ballast, in the ports of the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway, from whatever place they may come, shall be treated on their entrance, during their stay, and at their departure, upon the same footing as national vessels coming from the same place, with respect to the duties of tonnage, light-houses, pilotage, and port charges, as well as to the perquisites of public officers, and all other duties or charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishments whatsoever.

ARTICLE 3. All that may be lawfully imported into the United States of America in vessels of the said States may also be thereinto imported in Swedish and Norwegian vessels, and in those of the island of St. Bartholomew, from whatever place they may come, without paying other or higher duties or charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishments whatsoever, than if imported in national vessels.

And reciprocally, all that may be lawfully imported into the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway in Swedish and Norwegian vessels, or in those of the island of St. Bartholomew, may also be thereinto imported in vessels of the United States of America, from whatever place they may come, without paying other or higher duties or charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishments whatsoever, than if imported in national vessels.

ARTICLE 4. All that may be lawfully exported from the United States of America in vessels of the said States may also be exported therefrom in Swedish and Norwegian vessels, or in those of the island of St. Bartholomew, without paying other or higher duties or charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishments whatsoever, than if exported in national vessels.

And reciprocally, all that may be lawfully exported from the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway in Swedish and Norwegian vessels, or in those of the island of St. Bartholomew, may also be exported therefrom in vessels of the United States of America without paying other or higher duties or charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishments whatsoever, than if exported in national vessels.

ARTICLE 5. The stipulations contained in the three preceding articles are, to their full extent, applicable to the vessels of the United States of America proceeding, either laden or not laden, to the colony of St. Bartholomew, in the West Indies, whether from the ports of the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway or from any other place whatsoever; or proceeding from the said colony, either laden or not laden, whether bound for Sweden or Norway, or for any other place whatsoever.

ARTICLE 6. It is expressly understood that the foregoing second, third, and fourth articles are not applicable to the coastwise navigation from one port of the United States of America to another port of the said States; nor to the navigation from one port of the Kingdoms of Sweden or of Norway to another, nor to that between the two latter countries, which navigation each of the two high contracting parties reserves to itself.

ARTICLE 7. Each of the two high contracting parties engages not to grant, in its purchases or in those which might be made by companies or agents acting in its name or under its authority, any preference to importations made in its own vessels, or in those of a third Power, over those made in the vessels of the other contracting party.

ARTICLE 8. The two high contracting parties engage not to impose upon the navigation between their respective territories, in the vessels of either, any tonnage or other duties of any kind or denomination which shall be higher or other than those which shall be imposed on every other navigation, except that which they reserved to themselves, respectively, by the sixth article of the present treaty.

ARTICLE 9. There shall not be established in the United States of America, upon the products of the soil or industry of the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway, or of the island of St. Bartholomew, any prohibition or restriction of importation or exportation, nor any duties of any kind or denomination whatsoever, unless such prohibitions, restrictions, and duties shall likewise be established upon articles of like nature, the growth of any other country.

And reciprocally, there shall not be established in the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway, nor in the island of St. Bartholomew, on the products of the soil or industry of the United States of America, any prohibition or restriction of importation or exportation, nor any duties of any kind or denomination whatsoever, unless such prohibitions, restrictions, and duties be likewise established upon articles of like nature the growth of the island of St. Bartholomew, or of any other place, in case such importation be made into or from the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway, or of the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway, or of any other place, in case such importation or exportation be made into or from the island of St. Bartholomew.

ARTICLE 10. All privileges of transit, and all bounties and drawbacks which may be allowed within the territories of one of the high contracting parties upon the importation or exportation of any article whatsoever, shall likewise be allowed on the articles of like nature, the products of the soil or industry of the other contracting party, and on the importations and exportations made in its vessels.

ARTICLE 11. The citizens or subjects of one of the high contracting parties arriving with their vessels on the coasts belonging to the other, but not wishing to enter the port, or after having entered therein not wishing to unload any part of their cargo, shall be at liberty to depart and continue their voyage without paying any other duties, imposts, or charges whatsoever for the vessel and cargo than those of pilotage, wharfage, and for the support of light-houses, when such duties shall be levied on national vessels in similar cases. It is understood, however, that they shall always conform to such regulations and ordinances concerning navigation and the places and ports which they may enter as are, or shall be, in force with regard to national vessels; and that the custom-house officers shall be permitted to visit them, to remain on board, and to take all such precautions as may be necessary to prevent all unlawful commerce as long as the vessels shall remain within the limits of their jurisdiction.

ARTICLE 12. It is further agreed that the vessels of one of the high contracting parties, having entered into the ports of the other, will be permitted to confine themselves to unlading such part only of their cargoes as the captain or owner may wish, and that they may freely depart with the remainder without paying any duties, imposts, or charges whatsoever, except for that part which shall have been landed, and which shall be marked upon and erased from the manifest exhibiting the enumeration of the articles with which the vessel was laden; which manifest shall be presented entire at the custom-house of the place where the vessel shall have entered. Nothing shall be paid on that part of the cargo which the vessel shall carry away, and with which it may continue its voyage to one or several other ports of the same country, there to dispose of the remainder of its cargo, if composed of articles whose importation is permitted, on paying the duties chargeable upon it, or it may proceed to any other country. It is understood, however, that all duties, imposts, or charges whatsoever, which are or may become chargeable upon the vessels themselves, must be paid at the first port where they shall break bulk or unlade part of their cargoes; but that no duties, imposts, or charges, of the same description, shall be demanded anew in the ports of the same country which such vessels might afterwards wish to enter, unless national vessels be, in similar cases, subject to some ulterior duties.

ARTICLE 13. Each of the high contracting parties grants to the other the privilege of appointing, in its commercial ports and places, consuls, vice consuls, and commercial agents, who shall enjoy the full protection and receive every assistance necessary for the due exercise of their functions; but it is expressly declared that, in case of illegal or improper conduct with respect to the laws or Government of the country in which said consuls, vice consuls, or commercial agents shall reside, they may be prosecuted and punished conformably to the laws, and deprived of the exercise of their functions by the offended Government, which shall acquaint the other with its motives for having thus acted; it being understood, however, that the archives and documents relative to the affairs of the consulate shall be exempt from all search, and shall be carefully preserved under the seals of the consuls, vice consuls, or commercial agents, and of the authority of the place where they may reside.

The consuls, vice consuls, or commercial agents, or the persons duly authorized to supply their places, shall have the right, as such, to sit as judges and arbitrators in such differences as may arise between the captains and crews of the vessels belonging to the nation whose interests are committed to their charge, without the interference of the local authorities, unless the conduct of the crews, or of the captain, should disturb the order or tranquillity of the country, or the said consuls, vice consuls, or commercial agents should require their assistance to cause their decisions to be carried into effect or supported. It is however understood that this species of judgment or arbitration shall not deprive the contending parties of the right they have to resort, on their return, to the judicial authority of the country.

ARTICLE 14. The said consuls, vice consuls, or commercial agents are authorized to require the assistance of the local authorities for the arrest, detention, and imprisonment of the deserters from the ships of war and merchant vessels of their country; and for this purpose they shall apply to the competent tribunals, judges, and officers, and shall, in writing, demand said deserters, proving, by the exhibition of the registers of the vessels, the rolls of their crews, or by other official documents, that such individuals formed part of the crews; and on this reclamation being thus substantiated, the surrender shall not be refused.

Such deserters, when arrested, shall be placed at the disposal of the said consuls, vice consuls, or commercial agents, and may be confined in the public prisons at the request and cost of those who claim them, in order to be sent to the vessels to which they belonged, or to others of the same country. But if not sent back within the space of two months, reckoning from the day of their arrest, they shall be set at liberty, and shall not be again arrested for the same cause.

It is understood, however, that, if the deserter should be found to have committed any crime or offence, his surrender may be delayed until the tribunal before which the case shall be depending shall have pronounced its sentence, and such sentence shall have been carried into effect.

ARTICLE 15. In case any vessel of one of the high contracting parties shall have been stranded or shipwrecked, or shall have suffered any other damage on the coasts of the dominions of the other, every aid and assistance shall be given to the persons shipwrecked or in danger, and passports shall be granted to them to return to their country. The shipwrecked vessels and merchandise, or their proceeds if the same shall have been sold, shall be restored to their owners, or those entitled thereto, if claimed within a year and a day, upon paying such costs of salvage as would be paid by national vessels in the same circumstances; and the salvage companies shall not compel the acceptance of their services, except in the same cases, and after the same delays, as shall be granted to the captains and crews of national vessels. Moreover, the respective Governments will take care that these companies do not commit any vexatious or arbitary acts.

ARTICLE 16. It is agreed that vessels arriving directly from the United States of America at a port within the dominions of his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, or from the territories of his said Majesty in Europe, at a port of the United States, and provided with a bill of health granted by an officer having competent power to that effect, at the port whence such vessel shall have sailed, setting forth that no malignant or contagious diseases prevailed in that port, shall be subjected to no other quarantine than such as may be necessary for the visit of the health officer of the port where such vessels shall have arrived; after which said vessels shall be allowed immediately to enter and unload their cargoes: provided, always, that there shall be on board no person who, during the voyage, shall have been attacked with any malignant or contagious diseases; that such vessels shall not, during their passage, have communicated with any vessel liable itself to undergo a quarantine; and that the country whence they came shall not at that time be so far infected or suspected that, before their arrival, an ordinance had been issued in consequence of which all vessels coming from that country should be considered as suspected, and consequently subject to quarantine.

ARTICLE 17. The second, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, twenty-first, twenty-second, twenty-third, and twenty-fifth articles of the treaty of amity and commerce, concluded at Paris on the third of April, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three, by the plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and of his Majesty the King of Sweden, together with the first, second, fourth, and fifth separate articles, signed on the same day by the same plenipotentiaries, are revived and made applicable to all the countries under the dominion of the present high contracting parties, and shall have the same force and value as if they were inserted in the context of the present treaty. It being understood that the stipulations contained in the articles above cited shall always be considered as in no manner affecting the conventions concluded by either party with other nations during the interval between the expiration of the said treaty of one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three, and the revival of said articles by the treaty of commerce and navigation concluded at Stockholm by the present high contracting parties on the fourth of September, one thousand eight hundred and sixteen.

ARTICLE 18. Considering the remoteness of the respective countries of the two high contracting parties, and the uncertainty resulting therefrom with respect to the various events which may take place, it is agreed that a merchant vessel belonging to either of them which may be bound to a port supposed, at the time of its departure, to be blockaded, shall not, however, be captured or condemned for having attempted, a first time, to enter said port, unless it can be proved that said vessel could and ought to have learned during its voyage that the blockade of the place in question still continued. But all vessels which, after having been warned off once, shall, during the same voyage, attempt a second time to enter the same blockaded port during the continuance of said blockade, shall then subject themselves to be detained and condemned.

ARTICLE 19. The present treaty shall continue in force for ten years, counting from the day of the exchange of the ratifications; and if, before the expiration of the first nine years, neither of the high contracting parties shall have announced, by an official notification, to the other its intention to arrest the operation of said treaty, it shall remain binding for one year beyond that time, and so on until the expiration of the twelve months which will follow a similar notification, whatever the time at which it may take place.

ARTICLE 20. The present treaty shall be ratified by the President of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and by his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Washington within the space of nine months from the signature, or sooner, if possible.

In faith whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present treaty by duplicates, and have affixed thereto the seals of their arms. Done at Stockholm, the fourth of July, in the year of Grace one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven.

J. J. APPLETON. [L. S.]
G. COUNT DE WETTERSTEDT. [L. S.]

SEPARATE ARTICLE.

Certain relations of proximity and ancient connexions having led to regulations for the importation of the products of the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway into the Grand Duchy of Finland, and that of the products of Finland into Sweden and Norway, in vessels of the respective countries, by special stipulations of a treaty still in force, and whose renewal forms, at this time, the subject of a negotiation between the Courts of Sweden and Norway and Russia, said stipulations being in no manner connected with the existing regulations for foreign commerce in general, the two high contracting parties, anxious to remove from their commercial relations all kinds of ambiguity or motives of discussion, have agreed that the eighth, ninth, and tenth articles of the present treaty shall not be applicable either to the navigation and commerce above mentioned, nor, consequently, to the exceptions in the general tariff of custom-house duties, and in the regulations of navigation resulting therefrom, nor to the special advantages which are, or may be, granted to the importation of tallow and candles from Russia, founded upon equivalent advantages granted by Russia on certain articles of importation from Sweden and Norway.

The present separate article shall have the same force and value as if it were inserted, word for word, in the treaty signed this day, and shall be ratified at the same time.

In faith whereof, we the undersigned, by virtue of our respective full powers, have signed the present separate article, and affixed thereto the seals of our arms.

Done at Stockholm, the fourth of July, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven.

J. J. APPLETON. [L. S.]
G. COUNT DE WETTERSTEDT. [L. S.]

[Original.]

Au nom de la très Sainte et Indivisible Trinité.

Les Etats Unis d'Amérique, et sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, également animés du désir d'étendre et de consolider les relations commerciales qui subsistent entre leurs territoires respectifs, et convaincus que ce but ne saurait être mieux rempli, qu'en les plaçant sur la base d'une parfaite égalité et réciprocité, sont convenus, en conséquence, d'entrer en négociation pour un nouveau traité de commerce et de navigation, et ont nommé, à cet effet, des plénipotentiaires, savoir: le President les Etats Unis d'Amérique, John James Appleton, Chargé d'Affaires desdits Etats à la Cour de sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège; et sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, le Sieur Gustave, Compte de Wetterstedt, son Ministre d'Etat et des Affaires Etrangères, Chevalier Commandeur de ses Ordres, Chevalier des Ordres de Russie, de St. André, de St. Alexandre Newsky, et de Ste. Anne de la premiere classe, Chevalier de l'Ordre de l'Aigle Rouge de Prusse de la premiere classe, Grand' Croix de l'Ordre de Léopold d'Autriche, un des Dix-huit de l'Académie Suédoise, lesquels, après avoir echangé leurs pleins pouvoirs, trouvés en bonne et due forme, ont arrêté les articles suivans:

Article 1. Les citoyens et sujets de chacune des deux hautes parties contractantes, pourront avec toute sureté, pour leurs personnes, vaisseaux et cargaisons, aborder librement dans les ports, places et rivieres des territoires de l'autre, partout où le commerce étranger est permis. Ils pourront s'y arrêter et résider dans quelque partie que ce soit desdits territoires, y louer et occuper des maisons, et des magasins pour leur commerce, et jouiront, généralement de la plus entiere sécurité et protection pour les affaires de leur négoce, à charge de se soumettre aux lois et ordonnances des pays respectifs.

Article 2. Les bâtimens Suèdois et Norvégiens et ceux de l'ile de St. Barthelemy qui arriveront sur leur les ou chargés dans les ports des Etats Unis d'Amérique, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, seront traités à leur entrée, pendant leur séjour et à leur sortie, sur le même pied que les bâtimens nationaux venant du même lieu, par rapport aux droits de tonnage, de fanaux, de pilotage, et de port, ainsi qu'aux vacations des officiers publics, et à tout autre droit ou charge, des quelque espèce vu dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom vu au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales, ou d'establissemens particuliers quelconques.

Et réciproquement, les bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique qui arriveront sur leur lest ou chargés dans les ports des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, seront traités à leur entrée, pendant leur séjour et à leur sortie, sur le même pied que les bâtimens nationaux venant du même lieu, par rapport aux droits de tonnage, de fanaux, de pilotage et de port, ainsi qu'aux vacations des officiers publics et à tout autre droit ou charge, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom, ou au profit, du Gouvernement, des administrations locales, ou d'establissemens particuliers quelconques.

Article 3. Tout ce qui pourra légalement être importé dans les Etats Unis d'Amérique, par bâtimens desdits Etats, pourra également y être importés par bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, ou de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom, ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales, ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'importation avait lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

Et réciproquement, tout ce qui pourra légalement être importé dans les Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, par bâtimens Suédois ou Norvégiens, ou de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, pourra également y être importé par bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom, ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales, ou d'etablissemens particuliers, quelconques, que si l'importation avait lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

Article 4. Tout ce qui pourra légalement être exporté des Etats Unis d'Amérique, par bâtimens desdits Etats, pourra également en être exporté par bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, ou de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que se soit perçus au nom, ou au profit, du Gouvernement, des administrations locales, ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'exportation avait eu lieu bâtimens nationaux.

Et réciproquement, tout ce qui pourra légalement être exporté des Royaumes de Suèda et de Norvège, par bâtimens Suédois et Novégiens, ou de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, pourra également en être exporté par bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom, ou au profit, du Gouvernement, des administrations locales, ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'exportation avait lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

Article 5. Les stipulations des trois articles précédens sont dans toute leur plénitude, applicables aux bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique qui se rendront charges, ou non chargés dans la colonie de St.

Barthelemy, aux Indes Occidentales, soit des ports des royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, soit de tout autre lieu quelconque, ou qui sortiront de la dite colonie, chargés ou non chargés, pour se rendre, soit en Suède ou en Norvège, soit en tout autre lieu quelconque.

Article 6. Il est expressément entendu que les articles précédens, deux, trois, et quatre, ne sont point applicables à la navigation de côte ou de cabotage d'un port des Etats Unis d'Amérique, à un autre port desdits Etats, ni à la navigation d'un port des royaumes de Suède ou de Norvège à un autre, ou a celle entre ces deux derniers pays, navigation que chacune des deux hautes parties contractantes se réserve.

Article 7. Chacune des deux hautes parties contractantes s'engage à ne donner dans ses achats, ou dans ceux qui seraient faits par des compagnies ou des agens agissant en son nom ou sous son autorité, aucune préférence aux importations faites par ses bâtimens ou par ceux d'une nation tierce, sur celles faites dans les bâtimens de l'autre partie contractante.

Article 8. Les deux hautes parties contractantes s'enagent à ne pas établir sur la navigation entreleurs territoires respectifs, pâr les bâtimens de l'une ou de l'autre, des droits de tonnage ou autres, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, plus hauts ou autres que ceux qui seront établis sur toute autre navigation, excepté celle qu' elles se sont respectivement reservée par le sixieme article du present traité.

Article 9. Il ne pourra pas être établi dans les Etats Unis d'Amérique, sur les productions du sol ou de l'industrie des royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, et de l'île de St. Barthelemy, aucune prohibition ou restriction d'importation ou d'exportation, ni aucuns droits, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, qu' autant que ces prohibitions, ces restrictions et ces droits seraient également établis sur les objets de même nature provenant de toute autre contrée.

Et réciproquement, il ne pourra pas être établi dans les royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, ni dans l'île de St. Barthelemy, sur les productions du sol ou de l'industrie des Etats Unis d'Amérique, aucune prohibition ou restriction d'importation ou d'exportation, ni aucuns droits, de quelques espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, qu' autant que ces prohibitions, ces restrictions et ces droits, seraient également etablis sur les objets de même nature provenant, dans le cas où l'importation ou l'exportation aurait lieu dans ou hors des royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, de l'île de St. Barthelemy ou de tout autre endroit; et, dans le cas où l'importation ou l'exportation aurait lieu dans ou hors l'île de St. Barthelemy, des royaumes de Suède et de Norvège ou de tout autre endroit.

Article 10. Toute faculté d'entrepôt et toutes primes et remboursemens de droits, qui seroient accordés dans les territories d'une des hautes parties contractantes, à l'importation ou à l'exportation de quelque objet que ce soit, seront également accordés aux objets de même nature produits du sol ou de l'industrie de l'autre partie contractante, et aux importations et exportations faites dans ses bâtimens.

Article 11. Le citoyens ou sujets de l'une des hautes parties contractantes, arrivant avec leurs bâtimens à l'une des côtes appartenant à l'autre, mais ne voulant pas entrer dans le port, ou, après y être entrés, ne voulant décharger aucune partie de leur cargaison, auront la liberté de partir et de poursuivre leur voyage, sans payer d'autres droits, impôts ou charges quelconques, pour le bâtiment ou la cargaison, que les droits de pilotage, de quayage, et d'entretien de fanaux, quand ces droits sont perçus sur les nationaux dans les mêmes cas. Bien entendu, cependant, qu'ils se conformeront toujours aux règlemens et ordonnances concernant la navigation et les places ou ports dans lesquels ils pourront aborder, qui sont, ou seront ed vigueur pour les nationaux, et qu'il sera permis aux officiers des doûanes de les visiter, de rester à bord, et de prendre telles précautions, qui pourraient être necessaires pour prévener tout commerce illicite, pendant que les bâtimens resteront dans l'enceinte de leur jurisdiction.

Article 12. Il est aussi convenu que les bâtimens de l'une des hautes parties contractantes, étant éntres dans les ports de l'autre, pourront se borner à ne décharger qu'une partie de leur cargaison, selon que le capitaine ou propriétaire le desirera, et qu'ils pourront s'en aller librement avec le reste, sans payer de droits, impôts ou charges quelconques, que pour la partie qui aura été mise à terre, et qui sera marquée et biffée sur le manifeste, qui contiendra l'enumeration des effets dont le bâtiment était chargé, lequel manifeste devra être présenté en entier à la douane du lieu où le bâtiment dura abordé. Il ne sera rien payé pour la partie de la cargaison que le bâtiment remportera, et avec la quelle il pourra continuer sa route pour un ou plusieurs autres ports du même pays, et y disposer du reste de sa cargaison, si elle est composée d'objets dont l'importations est permise, en puyant les droits qui y sont applicables, ou bien il pourra s'en aller dans tout autre pays. Il est cependant entendu que les droits, impôts ou charges quelconques, qui sont ou seront payables pour les bâtimens même, doivent être acquittés au premier port où ils romproient le chargement, ou en dechargeroient une partie, mais qu'aucuns droits, impôts ou charges parcils ne seront demandés de nouveau dans les ports du même pays où lesdits bâtimens pourroient vouloir entrer après, à moins que les nationaux ne soient sujets à quelques droits ultériéur dans le même cas.

Article 13. Chacune des hautes parties contractantes à l'autre la faculté d'entretenir dans ses ports et places de commerce, des consuls, vice consuls, ou agens de commerce, qui jouiront de toute la protection, et recevront toute l'assistance nécessaire pour remplir duement leurs fonctions; mais il est expressément déclaré que dans le cas d'une conduite illégale ou impropre envers les lois ou le Gouvernement du pays dans lesquels lesdits consuls, vice consuls, ou agens de commerce, résideroient ils pourron être poursuivis et punis conformément aux lois, et privés de l'exercice de leurs fonctions par le Gouvernement offensé qui fera connoitre à l'autre ses motifs pour avoir agi ainsi, bien entendu cependant que les archives et documens relatifs aux affaires du consulat seront à l'abri de toute recherche, et devront être soigneusement conservés sous le scellé des consuls, vice consuls, ou agens commerciaux, et de l'autorité de l'endroit où ils résideroient.

Les consuls, vice consuls, et agens commerciaux, ou ceux qui seroient duement autorisés à les suppléer, auront le droit, comme tels, de servir de juges et d'arbitres dans les differens qui pourroient s'elever entre les capitaines et les équipages des bâtimens de la nation dont ils soignent les intérèts, sans que les autorités locales puissent y intervenir, à moins que la conduite des équipages ou du capitaine ne troublât l'ordre ou la tranquillité du pays, ou que lesdits consuls, vice consuls, ou agens commerciaux ne réguissent leur intervention pour faire exécuter ou maintenir leurs décisions. Bien entendu que cette espèce de jugement ou d'arbitrage ne saurait pourtant priver les parties contendantes du droit qu'elles ont, à leur retour de recourir aux autorités judiciaires de leur patrie.

Article 14. Les dits consuls, vice consuls, ou agens commerciaux, seront autorisés à requérir l'assistance des autorités locales pour l'arrestation, la détention, et l'emprisonnement de déserteurs des navires de guerre et marchands de leur pays, et ils s'adresseront, pour cet objet, aux tribunaux, juges et officiers compétens, et reclameront, par écrit, les deserteurs sus mentionnés, en prouvant, par la communication des régistres des navires, ou rôles de l'équipage, ou par d'autres documens officiels, que de tels individus ont fait partie desdits équipages, et cette reclamation ainsi prouvée, l'extradition ne sera point refusée.

De tels déserteurs, lorsqu'ils auront été arrêtés, seront mis à la disposition desdits consuls, vice consuls, ou agens commerciaux, et pourront être enfermés dans les prisons publiques, à la réquisition et aux frais de ceux qui les reclament, pour être envoyé saux navires auxquels ils appartenoient, ou à d'autres de l même nation. Mais s'ils ne sont pas renvoyés dans l'espace de deux mois, à compter du jour de leur arrestation, ils seront mis en liberté et ne seront plus arrêtés pour la même cause.

Il est entendu, toutefois, que si le déserteur se trouvoit avoir commis quelque crime ou délit, il pourra être sursis à son extradition, jusqu, à ce que la tribunal nanti de l'affaire aura rendu sa sentence, et que celle-ci ait reçu son exécution.

ARTICLE 15. Dans le cas où quelque bâtiment de l'une des hautes parties contractantes, aura échoué, fait naufrage, ou souffert quelqu' autre dommage sur les côtes de la domination de l'autre, il sera donné toute aide et assistance aux personnes naufragées, ou qui se trouveraient en danger, et il leur sera accordé des passeports pour retourner dans leur patrie. Les bâtimens et les marchandises naufragés, ou leur produit, s'ils ont été vendus, seront restitués à leurs propriétaires ou ayant cause, s'ils sont réclamés dans l'an et jour, en payant les frais de sauvetage que payeroient les nationaux dans les mêmes cas. Et les compagnies de sauvetage ne pourront faire accepter leurs services que dans les mêmes cas, et après les mêmes délais qui seraient accordés aux capitaines et aux equipages nationaux. Les Gouvernemens respectifs veilleront d'ailleurs à ce que ces compagnies ne se permettent point de vexations ou d'actes arbitraires.

ARTICLE 16. Il est convenu que les bâtimens qui arriveront directement des Etats Unis d'Amérique, à un port de la domination de sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, ou des territoires de sa dite Majesté en Europe, à un port des Etats Unis, et qui seroient pourous d'un certificat de santé, donné par l'officier compétent à cet égard du port d'ou les bâtimens sont sortis, et assurant qu'aucune maladie maligne ou contagieuse n'existait dans ce port, ne seront soumis à aucune autre quarantaine que celle qui sera nécessaire pour la visite de l'officier de santé du port où les bâtimens servient arrivés, après laquelle il sera permis a ces bâtimens d'entrer immédiatement, et de discharger leurs cargaisons, bien entendu, toutefois, qu'il n'y ait eu personne à leur bord, qui ait été attaqué pendant le voyage d'une maladie maligne ou contagieuse, que les bâtimens n'aient point communiqué dans leur traverseé avec un bâtiment qui seroit lui même dans les cas de subir une quarantaine, et que la contrée d'où ils viendroient ne fut pas, à cette épogue si généralement infectée ou suspecte, qu'on ait rendu, avant leur arrivée, une ordonnance, d'après laquelle tous les bâtimens venant de cette contrée seroient regardés comme suspects, et en conséquence assusettis à une quarantaine.

ARTICLE 17. Les articles deux, cinq, six, sept, huit, neuf, dix, onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize, dix-sept, dix-huit, dix-neuf, vingt-un, vingt-deux, vingt-trois, et vingt-cinq, du traité d'amitié et de commerce conclu à Paris le trois Avril, mil sept cent quatre-vingt-trois, par les plénipotentiaires des Etats Unis d'Amerique et de sa Majesté le Roi de Suède, ainsi que les articles séparés un, deux, quatre et cinq, qui furent signés le même jour par les mêmes plénipotentiaires, sont remis en vigueur en rendus applicables à tous les pays sous la domination des hautes parties, actuellement contractantes, et auront la même force et valeur que s'ils etaient insérés textuellement dans le présent traité. Bien entendu que les stipulations contenues dans les articles précités seront toujours censés ne rien changer aux conventions conclues de part et d'autre, avec d'autres nations dans l'intervalle ecoulé entre l'expiration dudit traite de mil sept-cent quatre-vingt-trois, et la remise en vigeur des dits articles par le traité de commerce et de navigation, conclu par les hautes parties actuellement contractantes, à Stockholm, le quatre Septembre, mil-huit-cent seize.

ARTICLE 18. Vû l'éloignement des pays respectifs des deux hautes parties contractantes, et l'incertitude qui en résulte sur les divers événemens qui peuvent avoir lieu, il est convenu qu'un bâtiment marchand appartenant à l'une d'elles, qui se trouverait destiné pour un port supposé bloqué au moment du départ de ce bâtiment, ne sera cependant pas capturé ou no condamné pour avoir essayé une premiere fois d'entrer dans ledit port, à moins qu'il ne puisse être prouvé que ledit bâtiment avait pû et dû apprendre en route que l'état de blocus de la place en question duroits encore: mais les bâtimens qui après avoir été renvoyés une fois, essayeroient pendant le même voyage d'entrer une seconde fois dans le même port bloqué, durant la continuation de ce blocus, se trouveront alors sujets à être détenus et condamnés.

ARTICLE 19. Le présent traité sera en vigueur pendant dix années, à partir du jour de l'échange des ratifications, et, si avant l'expiration des neuf premieres années, l'une ou l'autre des hautes parties contractantes n'avait pas annoncé à l'autre, par une notification officielle, son intention d'en faire cesser l'effet, ce traité restera obligatoire une anneé au delà, et ainsi de suite jusqu' à l'expiration des douze mois qui suivront une semblable notification, à qu'elqu épogue quelle ait lieu.

ARTICLE 20. Le présent traité sera ratifié par le Président des Etats Unis d'Amérique, par et avec l'avis et le consentement du Sénat, et par sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, et les ratifications en seront echangées à Washington, dans l'espace de neuf, mois après la signature, ou plutôt, si faire se peut.

En foi de quoi les plénipotentiaires respectifs ont signé le présent traité en duplicata, et y ont apposé le cachet de leurs armes. Fait à Stockholm, le quartre Juillet, l'an de Grâce mil huit cent vingt-sept.

J. J. APPLETON. [L. S.]
G. COMTE DE WETTERSTEDT. [L. S.]

ARTICLE SÉPARÉ.

Des rapports de proximité et d'anciennes relations ayant fait regler l'importation des productions des Royaumes des Suède et de Norvège dans le Grand Duché de Finlande, et celle des productions de la Finlande en Suède et en Norvège sur les bâtimens des pays respectifs, par des stipulations spéciales d'un traité encore en vigueur, et dont le renouvellement forme un objet de négociation actuelle, entre les cours de Suède et de Norvège et de Russie, sans que lesdites stipulations soient liées aux règlemens existans pour le commerce étranger en général, les deux hautes parties contractantes voulant écarter de leurs relations commerciales toute espèce d'équivoque ou de motif de discussion, sont tombées d'accord que les articles huit, neuf et dix du présent traité, ne seront point applicables ní à la navigation et au commerce susmentionnés, et par conséquent aux exceptions dans les tarifs generaux des douanes, et dans les reglemens de navigation qui en résultent, ni aux avantages speciaux qui sont ou pourroient être donnés à l'importation du suif et des chandelles de Russie, motivés par des avantages equivalens accordés en Russie à des articles d'importation de Suède et de Norvège.

Le present article separé aura la même force et valeur que s'il etait inséré mot à dans le traité signé aujourd'hui, et sera ratifié en même tems.

En foi de quoi, nous soussignés, en vertu de nos pleins pouvoirs respectifs, avons signé le present article séparé, et y avons apposé le cachet de nos armes.

Fait à Stockholm, le quatre Juillet, mil huit cent vingt-sept.

J. J. APPLETON. [L. S.]
G. COMTE DE WETTERSTEDT. [L. S.]

TREATY WITH SWEDEN.

[Translation.]

A Treaty of Amity and Commerce, concluded between his Majesty the King of Sweden and the United States of North America.

The King of Sweden, of the Goths and Vandals, &c., &c., &c., and the thirteen United States of North America, to wit: New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, the counties of Newcastle, Kent, and Sussex, on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, desiring to establish, in a stable and permanent manner, the rules which ought to be observed relative to the correspondence and commerce which the two parties have judged necessary to establish between their respective countries, States, and subjects, his Majesty and the United States have thought that they could not better accomplish that end than by taking for a basis of their arrangements the mutual interest and advantage of both nations, thereby avoiding all those burdensome preferences which are usually sources of debate, embarrassment, and discontent, and by leaving each party at liberty to make, respecting navigation and commerce, those interior regulations which shall be most convenient to itself.

With this view, his Majesty the King of Sweden, has nominated and appointed for his plenipotentiary Count Gustavus Philip de Creutz, his Ambassador Extraordinary to his most Christian Majesty, and Knight Commander of his Orders; and the United States, on their part, have fully empowered Benjamin Franklin, their Minister Plenipotentiary to his most Christian Majesty; the said plenipotentiaries, after exchanging their full powers, and after mature deliberation in consequence thereof, have agreed upon, concluded, and signed the following articles:

ARTICLE 1. There shall be a firm, inviolable, and universal peace, and a true and sincere friendship between the King of Sweden, his heirs, and successors, and the United States of America, and the subjects of his Majesty and those of the said States, and between the countries, islands, cities, and towns, situated under the jurisdiction of the King and of the said United States, without any exception of persons or places; and the conditions agreed to in this present treaty shall be perpetual and permanent between the King, his heirs, and successors, and the said United States.

ARTICLE 2. The King and the United States engage, mutually, not to grant hereafter any particular favor to other nations, in respect to commerce and navigation, which shall not immediately become common to the other party, who shall enjoy the same favor freely, if the concession was freely made, or on allowing the same compensation, if the concession was conditional.

ARTICLE 3. The subjects of the King of Sweden shall not pay in the ports, havens, roads, countries, islands, cities, and towns of the United States, or in either of them, any other nor greater duties or imposts, of what nature soever they may be, than those which the most favored nations are or shall be obliged to pay; and they shall enjoy all the rights, liberties, privileges, immunities, and exemptions in trade, navigation, and commerce, which the said nations do or shall enjoy, whether in passing from one port to another of the United States, or in going to or from the same, from or to any port of the world whatever.

ARTICLE 4. The subjects and inhabitants of the United States shall not pay in the ports, havens, roads, islands, cities, and towns, under the dominion of the King of Sweden, any other or greater duties or imposts of what nature soever they may be, or by what name soever called, than those which the most favored nations are or shall be obliged to pay; and they shall enjoy all the rights, liberties, privileges, immunities, and exemptions in trade, navigation, and commerce, which the said nations do or shall enjoy, whether in passing from one port to another of the dominion of his said Majesty, or in going to or from the same, from or to any part of the world whatever.

ARTICLE 5. There shall be granted a full, perfect, and entire liberty of conscience to the inhabitants and subjects of each party, and no person shall be molested on account of his worship, provided he submits, so far as regards the public demonstration of it, to the laws of the country. Moreover, liberty shall be granted, when any of the subjects or inhabitants of either party die in the territory of the other, to bury them in convenient and decent places, which shall be assigned for the purpose; and the two contracting parties will provide, each in its jurisdiction, that the subjects and inhabitants respectively may obtain certificates of the death, in case the delivery of them is required.

ARTICLE 6. The subjects of the contracting parties in the respective States may freely dispose of their goods and effects, either by testament, donation, or otherwise, in favor of such persons as they think proper; and their heirs, in whatever place they shall reside, shall receive the succession, even ab intestato, either in person or by their attorney, without having occasion to take out letters of naturalization. These inheritances, as well as the capitals and effects, which the subjects of the two parties, in changing their dwellings, shall be desirous of removing from the place of their abode, shall be exempted from all duty called "droit de détraction" on the part of the Government of the two States respectively. But it is at the same time agreed that nothing contained in this article shall in any manner derogate from the ordinances published in Sweden against emigrations, or which may hereafter be published, which shall remain in full force and vigor. The United States, on their part, or any of them, shall be at liberty to make, respecting this matter, such laws as they think proper.

ARTICLE 7. All and every the subjects and inhabitants of the Kingdom of Sweden, as well as those of the United States, shall be permitted to navigate with their vessels, in all safety and freedom, and without any regard to those to whom the merchandises and cargoes may belong, from any port whatever; and the subjects and inhabitants of the two States shall likewise be permitted to sail and trade with their vessels, and with the same liberty and safety to frequent the places, ports, and havens of Powers enemies to both or either of the contracting parties, without being in anywise molested or troubled, and to carry on a commerce not only directly from the ports of an enemy to a neutral port, but even from one port of an enemy to another port of an enemy, whether it be under the jurisdiction of the same or of different Princes. And as it is acknowledged by this treaty, with respect to ships and merchandises, that free ships shall make merchandise free, and that everything which shall be on board of ships belonging to subjects of the one or the other of the contracting parties shall be considered as free, even though the cargo or a part of it should belong to the enemies of one or both, it is, nevertheless, provided that contraband goods shall always be excepted, which, being intercepted, shall be proceeded against according to the spirit of the following articles. It is likewise agreed that the same liberty be extended to persons who may be on board a free ship, with this effect, that although they be enemies to both or either of the parties, they shall not be taken out of the free ship unless they are soldiers in the actual service of the said enemies.

ARTICLE 8. This liberty of navigation and commerce shall extend to all kinds of merchandises, except those only which are expressed in the following article, and are distinguished by the name of contraband goods.

ARTICLE 9. Under the name of contraband or prohibited goods shall be comprehended arms, great guns, cannon balls, arquebuses, muskets, mortars, bombs, petards, grenadoes, saucisses, pitch balls, carriages for ordnance, musket rests, bandoliers, cannon powder, matches, saltpetre, sulphur, bullets, pikes, sabres, swords, morions, helmets, cuirasses, halberts, javelins, pistols and their holsters, belts, bayonets, horses with their harness, and all other like kinds of arms and instruments of war for the use of troops.

ARTICLE 10. These which follow shall not be reckoned in the number of prohibited goods, that is to say: all sorts of cloths, and all other manufactures of wool, flax, silk, cotton, or any other materials; all kinds of wearing apparel, together with the things of which they are commonly made; gold, silver, coined or uncoined; brass, iron, lead, copper, latten, coals, wheat, barley, and all sorts of corn or pulse; tobacco; all kind of spices; salted and smoked flesh, salted fish, cheese, butter, beer, oil, wines, sugar; all sorts of salt and provisions which serve for the nourishment and sustenance of man; all kinds of cotton, hemp, flax, tar, pitch, ropes, cables, sails, sail-cloth, anchors, and any parts of anchors, ship-masts, planks, boards, beams, and all sorts of trees, and other things proper for building or repairing ships; nor shall any goods be considered as contraband which have not been worked into the form of any instrument or thing for the purpose of war by land or by sea, much less such as have been prepared or wrought up for any other use, all which shall be reckoned free goods, as likewise all others which are not comprehended and particularly mentioned in the foregoing article, so that they shall not by any pretended interpretation be comprehended among prohibited or contraband goods; on the contrary, they may be freely transported by the subjects of the King and of the United States even to places belonging to an enemy, such places only excepted as are besieged, blocked, or invested; and those places only shall be considered as such which are nearly surrounded by one of the belligerent Powers.

ARTICLE 11. In order to avoid and prevent on both sides all disputes and discord, it is agreed that, in case one of the parties shall be engaged in a war, the ships and vessels belonging to the subjects or inhabitants of the other shall be furnished with sea-letters or passports expressing the name, property, and port of the vessel, and also the name and place of abode of the master or commander of the said vessel, in order that it may thereby appear that the said vessel really and truly belongs to the subjects of the one or the other party. These passports, which shall be drawn up in good and due form, shall be renewed every time the vessel returns home in the course of the year. It is also agreed that the said vessels, when loaded, shall be provided not only with sea-letters, but also with certificates containing a particular account of the cargo, the place from which the vessel sailed, and that of her destination, in order that it may be known whether they carry any of the prohibited or contraband merchandises mentioned in the 9th article of the present treaty; which certificates shall be made out by the officers of the place from which the vessel shall depart.

ARTICLE 12. Although the vessels of the one and of the other party may navigate freely and with all safety, as is explained in the 7th article, they shall, nevertheless, be bound at all times when required to exhibit, as well on the high sea as in port, their passports and certificates above mentioned; and not having contraband merchandise on board for an enemy's port, they may freely and without hindrance pursue their voyage to the place of their destination. Nevertheless, the exhibition of papers shall not be demanded of merchant ships under the convoy of vessels-of-war, but credit shall be given to the word of the officer commanding the convoy.

ARTICLE 13. If, on producing the said certificates, it be discovered that the vessel carries some of the goods which are declared to be prohibited or contraband, and which are consigned to an enemy's port, it shall not, however, be lawful to break up the hatches of such ships, nor to open any chest, coffers, packs, casks, or vessels, nor to remove or displace the smallest part of the merchandises, until the cargo has been landed in the presence of officers appointed for the purpose, and until an inventory thereof has been taken; nor shall it be lawful to sell, exchange, or alienate the cargo or any part thereof until legal process shall have been had against the prohibited merchandises, and sentence shall have passed declaring them liable to confiscation, saving, nevertheless, as well the ships themselves as the other merchandises which shall have been found therein, which, by virtue of this present treaty, are to be esteemed free, and which are not to be detained on pretence of their having been loaded with prohibited merchandise, and much less confiscated as lawful prize. And in case the contraband merchandise be only a part of the cargo. and the master of the vessel agrees, consents, and offers to deliver them to the vessel that has discovered them, in that case the latter, after receiving the merchandises which are good prize, shall immediately let the vessel go, and shall not by any means hinder her from pursuing her voyage to the place of her destination. When a vessel is taken and brought into any of the ports of the contracting parties, if upon examination she be found to be loaded only with merchandises declared to be free, the owner, or he who has made the prize, shall be bound to pay all costs and damages to the master of the vessel unjustly detained.

ARTICLE 14. It is likewise agreed, that whatever shall be found to be laden by the subjects of eith e of the two contracting parties on a ship belonging to the enemies of the other party, the whole effects, although not of the number of those declared contraband, shall be confiscated as if they belonged to the enemy, excepting, nevertheless, such goods and merchandises as were put on board before the declaration of war, and even six months after the declaration, after which term none shall be presumed to be ignorant of it; which merchandises shall not in any manner be subject to confiscation, but shall be faithfully and specifically delivered to the owners, who shall claim or cause them to be claimed before confiscation and sale, as also their proceeds, if the claim be made within eight months, and could not be made sooner after the sale, which is to be public; provided, nevertheless, that if the said merchandises be contraband it shall not be in anywise lawful to carry them afterwards to a port belonging to the enemy.

ARTICLE 15. And that more effectual care may be taken for the security of the two contracting parties, that they suffer no prejudice by the men-of-war of the other party, or by privateers, all captains and commanders of ships of his Swedish Majesty and of the United States, and all their subjects, shall be forbidden to do any injury or damage to those of the other party; and if they act to the contrary, having been found guilty on examination by their proper judges, they shall be bound to make satisfaction for all damages and the interest thereof, and to make them good under pain and obligation of their persons and goods.

ARTICLE 16. For this cause, every individual who is desirous of fitting out a privateer shall, before he receives letters patent, or special commission, be obliged to give bond, with sufficient sureties, before a competent judge, for a sufficient sum, to answer all damages and wrongs which the owner of the privateer, his officers, or others in his employ, may commit during the cruise, contrary to the tenor of this treaty, and contrary to the edicts published by either party, whether by the King of Sweden or by the United States, in virtue of this same treaty, and also under the penalty of having the said letters patent and special commission revoked and made void.

ARTICLE 17. One of the contracting parties being at war, and the other remaining neuter, if it should happen that a merchant ship of the neutral Power be taken by the enemy of the other party, and be afterwards retaken by a ship-of-war or privateer of the Power at war, also ships and merchandises of what nature soever they may be, when recovered from a pirate or sea rover, shall be brought into a port of one of the two Powers, and shall be committed to the custody of the officers of the said port, that they may be restored entire to the true proprietor as soon as he shall have produced full proof of the property. Merchants, masters, and owners of ships, seamen, people of sorts, ships and vessels, and, in general, all merchandises and effects of one of the allies or their subjects, shall not be subject to any embargo, nor detained in any of the countries, territories, islands, cities, towns, ports, rivers, or domains whatever, of the other ally, on account of any military expedition, or any public or private purpose whatever, by seizure, by force, or by any such manner; much less shall it be lawful for the subjects of one of the parties to seize or take anything by force from the subjects of the other party without the consent of the owner. This, however, is not to be understood to comprehend seizures, detentions, and arrests made by order and by the authority of justice, and according to the ordinary course for debts or faults of the subject, for which process shall be had in the way of right according to the forms of justice.

ARTICLE 18. If it should happen that the two contracting parties should be engaged in a war at the same time with a common enemy, the following points shall be observed on both sides:

1. If the ships of one of the two nations, retaken by the privateers of the other, have not been in the power of the enemy more than twenty-four hours, they shall be restored to the original owner on payment of one-third of the value of the ship and cargo, If, on the contrary, the vessel retaken has been more than twenty-four hours in the power of the enemy, it shall belong wholly to him who has retaken it.

2. In case, during the interval of twenty-four hours, a vessel be retaken by a man-of-war of either of the two parties, it shall be restored to the original owner on payment of a thirtieth part of the value of the vessel and cargo, and a tenth part if it has been retaken after the twenty-four hours, which sums shall be distributed as a gratification among the crew of the men-of-war that shall have made the recapture.

3. The prizes made in the manner above mentioned shall be restored to the owners, after proof made of the property, upon giving security for the part coming to him who has recovered the vessel from the hands of the enemy.

4. The men-of-war and privateers of the two nations shall reciprocally be admitted with their prizes into each other's ports; but the prizes shall not be unloaded or sold there until the legality of a prize made by Swedish ships shall have been determined according to the laws and regulations established in Sweden, as also that of the prizes made by American vessels shall have been determined according to the laws and regulations established by the United States of America.

5. Moreover, the King of Sweden and the United States of America shall be at liberty to make such regulations as they shall judge necessary respecting the conduct which their men-of-war and privateers, respectively, shall be bound to observe with regard to vessels which they shall take and carry into the ports of the two Powers.

ARTICLE 19. The ships-of-war of his Swedish Majesty, and those of the United States, and also those which their subjects shall have armed for war, may, with all freedom, conduct the prizes which they shall have made from their enemies into the ports which are open in time of war to other friendly nations; and the said prizes, upon entering the said ports, shall not be subject to arrest or seizure, nor shall the officers of the places take cognizance of the validity of the said prizes, which may depart and be conducted freely and with all liberty to the places pointed out in their commissions, which the captains of the said vessels shall be obliged to show.

ARTICLE 20. In case any vessel belonging to either of the two States, or to their subjects, shall be stranded, shipwrecked, or suffer any other damage on the coasts or under the dominion of either of the parties, all aid and assistance shall be given to the persons shipwrecked, or who may be in danger thereof, and passports shall be granted to them to secure their return to their own country. The ships and merchandises wrecked, or their proceeds, if the effects have been sold, being claimed in a year and a day by the owners or their attorney, shall be restored on their paying the costs of salvage, conformably to the laws and customs of the two nations.

ARTICLE 21. When the subjects and inhabitants of the two parties, with their vessels, whether they be public and equipped for war, or private, or employed in commerce, shall be forced by tempest, by pursuit of privateers and of enemies, or by any other urgent necessity, to retire and enter any of the rivers, bays, roads or ports of either of the two parties, they shall be received and treated with all humanity and politeness, and they shall enjoy all friendship, protection, and assistance, and they shall be at liberty to supply themselves with refreshments, provisions, and everything necessary for their sustenance, for the repair of their vessels, and for continuing their voyage; provided, always, that they pay a reasonable price; and they shall not in any manner be detained or hindered from sailing out of the said ports or roads, but they may retire and depart when and as they please, without any obstacle or hindrance.

ARTICLE 22. In order to favor commerce on both sides as much as possible, it is agreed that in case a war should break out between the said two nations, which God forbid, the term of nine months after the declaration of war shall be allowed to the merchants and subjects, respectively, on one side and the other, in order that they may withdraw with their effects and movables, which they shall be at liberty to carry off or to sell where they please, without the least obstacle; nor shall any seize their effects, and much less their persons, during the said nine months; but, on the contrary, passports, which shall be valid for a time necessary for their return, shall be given them for their vessels, and the effects which they shall be willing to carry with them. And if anything is taken from them, or if any injury is done to them by one of the parties, their people, and subjects during the time above prescribed, full and entire satisfaction shall be made to them on that account. The above mentioned passports shall also serve as a safe conduct against all insults or prizes which privateers may attempt against their persons and effects.

ARTICLE 23. No subject of the King of Sweden shall take a commission or letters of marque for arming any vessel to act as a privateer against the United States of America, or any of them, or against the subjects, people, or inhabitants of the said United States, or any of them, or against the property of the inhabitants of the said States, from any Prince or State whatever with whom the said United States shall be at war. Nor shall any citizen, subject, or inhabitant of the said United States, or any of them, apply for or take any commission, or letters of marque, for arming any vessel to cruise against the subjects of his Swedish Majesty, or any of them, or their property, from any Prince or State whatever with whom his said Majesty shall be at war. And if any person of either nation shall take such commissions or letters of marque he shall be punished as a pirate.

ARTICLE 24. The vessels of the subjects of either of the parties coming upon any coast belonging to the other, but not willing to enter into port, or being entered into port, and not willing to unload their cargoes or to break bulk, shall not be obliged to do it; but, on the contrary, shall enjoy all the franchises and exemptions which are granted by the rules subsisting with respect to that object.

ARTICLE 25. When a vessel belonging to the subjects and inhabitants of either of the parties, sailing on the high sea, shall be met by a ship-of-war or privateer of the other, the said ship-of-war or privateer, to avoid all disorder, shall remain out of cannon shot, but may always send their boat to the merchant ship, and cause two or three men to go on board of her, to whom the master or commander of the said vessel shall exhibit his passport, stating the property of the vessel; and when the said vessel shall have exhibited her passport, she shall be at liberty to continue her voyage, and it shall not be lawful to molest or search her in any manner, or to give her chase, or force her to quit her intended course.

ARTICLE 26. The two contracting parties grant mutually the liberty of having each in the ports of the other, consuls, vice consuls, agents, and commissaries, whose functions shall be regulated by a particular agreement.

ARTICLE 27. The present treaty shall be ratified on both sides, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in the space of eight months, or sooner, if possible, counting from the day of the signature.

In faith whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the above articles, and have thereto affixed their seals.

Done at Paris, the third day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three.

GUSTAV. PHILIP, [L. S.]
Comte de Creutz.

SEPARATE ARTICLE.

The King of Sweden and the United States of North America agree that the present treaty shall have its full effect for the space of fifteen years, counting from the day of the ratification, and the two contracting parties reserve to themselves the liberty of renewing it at the end of that term.

Done at Paris, the third day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three.

GUSTAV. PHILIP, [L. S.]
Comte de Creutz.

SEPARATE ARTICLES.

ARTICLE 1. His Swedish Majesty shall use all the means in his power to protect and defend the vessels and effects belonging to citizens or inhabitants of the United States of North America, and every of them, which shall be in the ports, havens, roads, or on the seas near the countries, islands, cities, and towns of his said Majesty, and shall use his utmost endeavors to recover and restore to the right owners all such vessels and effects which shall be taken from them within his jurisdiction.

ARTICLE 2. In like manner, the United States of North America shall protect and defend the vessels and effects belonging to the subjects of his Swedish Majesty which shall be in the ports, havens, or roads, or on the seas near to the countries, islands, cities, and towns of the said States, and shall use their utmost efforts to recover and restore to the right owners all such vessels and effects which shall be taken from them within their jurisdiction.

ARTICLE 3. If in any future war at sea the contracting Powers resolve to remain neuter, and, as such, to observe the strictest neutrality, then it is agreed that if the merchant ships of either party should happen to be in a part of the sea where the ships-of-war of the same nation are not stationed, or if they are met on the high sea, without being able to have recourse to their own convoys, in that case, the commander of the ships-of-war of the other party, if required, shall, in good faith and sincerity, give them all necessary assistance; and in such case, the ships-of-war and frigates of either of the Powers shall protect and support the merchant ships of the other; provided, nevertheless, that the ships claiming assistance are not engaged in any illicit commerce contrary to the principles of neutrality.

ARTICLE 4. It is agreed and concluded that all merchants, captains of merchant ships, or other subjects of his Swedish Majesty, shall have full liberty in all places under the dominion or jurisdiction of the United States of America to manage their own affairs, and to employ in the management of them whomsoever they please; and they shall not be obliged to make use of any interpreter or broker, nor to pay them any reward unless they make use of them. Moreover, the masters of ships shall not be obliged, in loading or unloading their vessels, to employ laborers appointed by public authority for that purpose; but they shall be at full liberty themselves to load or unload their vessels, or to employ in loading or unloading them whomsoever they think proper, without paying reward under the title of salary to any other person whatever; and they shall not be obliged to turn over any kind of merchandises to other vessels, nor to receive them on board their own, nor to wait for their lading longer than they please; and all and every of their citizens, people, and inhabitants of the United States of America shall reciprocally have and enjoy the same privileges and liberties in all places under the jurisdiction of the said realm.

ARTICLE 5. It is agreed that when merchandises shall have been put on board the ships or vessels of either of the contracting parties they shall not be subjected to any examination, but all examination and search must be before lading, and the prohibited merchandises must be stopped on the spot before they are embarked, unless there is full evidence or proof of fraudulent practice on the part of the owner of the ship, or of him who has the command of her; in which case only he shall be responsible and subject to the laws of the country in which he may be. In all other cases, neither the subjects of either of the contracting parties, who shall be with their vessels in the ports of the other, nor their merchandises, shall be seized or molested on account of contraband goods which they shall have wanted to take on board; nor shall any kind of embargo be laid on their ships, subjects, or citizens of the State whose merchandises are declared contraband, or the exportation of which is forbidden; those only who shall have sold or intended to sell or alienate such merchandise being liable to punishment for such contravention.

Done at Paris, the third day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three.

GUSTAV. PHILIP, [L. S.]
Comte de Creutz.
B. FRANKLIN. [L. S.]

Mr. Clay to Mr. Appleton.

No. 2.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, January 12, 1827.

SIR: Having just indirectly heard of your arrival at Stockholm, I am directed by the President to call your immediate attention to the subject of the treaty which was concluded in that capital and signed on the 4th day of September, 1816. The treaty expired on the 25th of last September. It had been the President's wish, by a new negotiation, and by engrafting some further regulations upon it, to prevent the event which has occurred. The illness and subsequent death of your predecessor, and your engagement on another public service, together with the incidental delay in your arrival at Stockholm, have prevented, on our part, the opening of the negotiation there. We had, moreover, some reason to believe that the Baron de Stackelberg would have been provided with instructions to negotiate on that subject here. It was not until about the time of the expiration of the treaty that we were disappointed in the fulfilment of these expectations. On the 26th day of September last a note was received from the Baron, of which a copy, together with a copy of the answer which was returned to it, is herewith transmitted.

As he announced in that note the determination of the Government of Sweden to continue to observe the rule of the treaty, notwithstanding it should expire without being renewed, he was informed that the President would recommend to Congress to provide by law for its observance on our part until the issue should be known of the intended negotiation. He has accordingly, in his message to Congress* on the opening of its present session, (a copy of which accompanies this despatch,) recommended to that body the enactment of the necessary law to secure to the navigation and commerce of Sweden the benefit of the treaty until the result of the negotiation is known. A bill has been introduced into the House of Representatives (of which a copy is herewith sent) to admit the vessels of Sweden upon the terms stipulated in the treaty, and making provision to refund any discriminating duties, should any such have been collected from Swedish vessels or their cargoes between the 25th of September last and the date of the law. No doubt is entertained of the passage of the bill prior to the adjournment of Congress, nor is any inconvenience anticipated before the renewal of the treaty from the limitation of the law to the single object of the discriminating duties. The bill would have been shaped so as to comprehend all the regulations of the treaty but for doubts which were felt by some members of Congress as to the competency of the legislative power to extend to some of the stipulations which were believed to appertain strictly to the treaty-making power. As it is hoped that the interval will not be long before the treaty is renewed, and that no intermediate prejudice will arise to Sweden, it was not considered important to press a decision on those doubts. Your knowledge of our Constitution will enable you to explain the reasons of the President's being unable, without the concurrence of Congress or of the Senate, to direct the enforcement of the provisions of the treaty in the same summary manner as has been done in the ports of Sweden. By the act of the 7th day of January, 1824, the vessels of Norway will continue, without any interruption, to enjoy an exemption in our ports from the payment of the discriminating duties.

You are now authorized to propose the renewal of all the articles of the treaty, with the exception of the third, fourth, and sixth, to which the Senate, when it was submitted to them for their advice and consent to its ratification, objected, and with which exception it was untimately ratified by both parties. The third and fourth articles related to the reciprocal introduction into the ports of the two Powers of the produce of the Baltic and the West Indies in the vessels of each, and providing a discrimination of ten per cent. more on the duties when paid by the foreign than the national vessel. The sixth specified the evidence which should be taken as conclusive of the fact of origin of the produce of the two countries. The same considerations which formerly induced the Senate to object to those three articles would, probably, still prevail if they should be again inserted in a new treaty. In lieu, and as entirely superseding the necessity of them, you will propose a stipulation of a more liberal and comprehensive character—that is, that whatever can by law be imported from or exported to any foreign country, place, or possession, including the colonies of either party in the vessels of one party, may be in those of the other, the foreign vessel and her cargo paying no higher or other duties or charges of any kind than the national vessel. A model of an article to that effect, which may serve as your guide, you will find in the fourth article of a treaty which was concluded at Washington on the 5th day of December, 1825, between the United States and the Federation of Central America, of which a copy is now transmitted. If this article be agreed to, the vessels of the United States will be entitled to navigate between the ports of Sweden and Norway and the Swedish colony of St. Bartholomew, as well as between those ports and all other foreign countries and places; but the vessels of neither party will be entitled to share in the coasting trade of the other. It is possible that it will be insisted that the intercourse between Sweden and Norway and that colony should be reserved exclusively to the parent country. The President being very anxious to secure the adoption of the general principle without qualification, and that it should ultimately be extended to all the colonial Powers, you will oppose the reservation as long as there is any prospect of your prevailing on the Swedish Government to yield the point. You may urge that the inconsiderable trade of the colony can render the monopoly of no importance to Sweden; that she is equally with the United States interested in the universal adoption of the general principle, without any exception; that the uncertainty of her continuing to hold the island, in events of such frequent occurrence in Europe, should induce her to concur in the introduction of a liberal rule of permanent duration, not likely to be affected by those events, rather than adhere to a monopoly which might be lost upon the first occurrence of any one of them; that she will gain more, by her example, in her intercourse with other colonial Powers, as well as those which are without colonies, than by contending for the retention of a worthless monopoly; and, finally, that, considering the relative amount of the commerce and navigation of the two countries, the United States manifest a liberality, in the offer of this proposal, which ought to be reciprocated.

* See antecedent No. 457.

Should your efforts to induce a waiver of the monopoly be unsuccessful, you are then authorized to agree to an article similar to the before mentioned fourth article in the treaty with the Federation of the Centre of America, with an exception like that which is contained in the sixth article of a treaty lately concluded between the United States and Denmark, (of which a copy is herewith transmitted,) to the following effect: "But it is further agreed that this treaty is not to extend to the direct trade between Sweden and Norway and the island of St. Bartholomew; but in the intercourse with that colony it is agreed that whatever can be lawfully imported into or exported from the said colony in vessels of one party from or to ports of the United States, or from or to the ports of any other foreign country, may, in like manner, and with the same duties and charges applicable to vessel and cargo, be imported into or exported from the said colony in vessels of the other party."

According to one so framed Sweden will retain the monopoly, but the vessels of the United States will be allowed to trade between the island and any other country or place, Sweden and Norway only excepted.

If the Swedish Government should decline agreeing to an article in either of the two forms suggested, you are then at liberty to agree to a simple renewal of the treaty of 1816, with the exception of the third, fourth, and sixth articles before mentioned. The duration of any treaty on which you may finally agree, according to the preceding instructions, may be fixed to any term of between eight and fifteen years, to which you will propose a clause to guard against the event of its expiration of similar import with the 11th article of our treaty with Denmark.

A power authorizing you to open and conclude the negotiation is now also transmitted.

As the law which is at present before Congress will probably be limited to the end of the next session, it is advisable that you should transmit the treaty which it is expected you will be able to conclude in time to be laid before the Senate at the next session of Congress.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. CLAY.

J. J. APPLETON, Chargé d'Affaires at Stockholm.

P. S.—JANUARY 20, 1827. Since the preceding letter was written, your despatch, under date the 1st November, has been received, with its accompaniments. Considering the tenor of the treaty which you state to have been lately concluded between Denmark and Sweden, no difficulty is anticipated in your prevailing upon the Swedish Government to accede to the broad principle of our treaty with the Republic of the Federation of the Centre of America, by which Swedish vessels and those of the United States would be reciprocally allowed to import into or export from the ports of the respective countries whatever national vessels could import or export from or to any foreign country. To that rule, as we understand you, there is but one exception, which is confined to the article of salt, the importation of which is, as it respects Sweden and Denmark, limited to national vessels. But this limitation does not apply to Denmark and Norway. If the Government of Sweden should insist upon making the same exception of the article of salt, you are authorized to agree to it, taking care that the stipulation be mutual.

Perhaps it may be urged that the 10th article of the treaty lately concluded between Sweden and Great Britain disables the former from agreeing to the above mentioned principle—that article providing that "salt, hemp, flax, oil of all kinds, grain of all kinds, wine, tobacco, salt or dried fish, wool, and stuffs of all kinds," shall be imported into Sweden only in vessels of Sweden and Norway, or in vessels of the country of which such articles were the produce. But if it formed no obstacle to the subsequent conclusion of the above mentioned stipulation between Denmark and Sweden, it is presumed it can form none to the proposed stipulation with the United States. We suppose, also, that the stipulation in that 10th article was not intended to abridge the liberty of Sweden to contract whatever engagements it might deem proper with any other foreign Power upon proper equivalents, but was designed to limit the right of British vessels to import the specified articles into the ports of Sweden.

Information has been received at this Department that there are certain advantages enjoyed by Swedish, and now by British vessels, (under the late treaty concluded between Great Britain and Sweden,) as regards vessels arriving under distress on the coasts of Norway and Sweden, as also in pilotage and harbor dues, which are not enjoyed by vessels of the United States. You will inquire and ascertain if that information be correct, in which case you will propose an article securing to our vessels the same advantages.

In order to prevent any evasion of the principle of equality between the vessels of the two countries, which forms the basis on which the Government of the United States offers to treat with that of Sweden, you will propose the following article: "No priority or preference shall be given, directly or indirectly, by the Government of either country, or by any corporation, company, or agent, acting in its behalf, or under its authority, in the purchase of any article imported into the other on account of or in reference to the character of the vessel in which such article was imported, it being the true intent and meaning of the contracting parties that no distinction or difference whatever shall be made in this respect."

Should you be unable to prevail on the Government of Sweden to agree to the principle of our Guatemala treaty, with or without the exception of the article of salt, as above mentioned, or to that of our treaty with Denmark, you will understand that your authority extends to a renewal of the expired treaty.

Mr. Clay to Mr. Appleton.

No. 3.] DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, April 11, 1827.

SIR: Herewith you will receive the copy of a note which I addressed to Baron de Stackelberg on the 16th ultimo, communicating to him the copy of an act passed at the last session of Congress entitled "An act to exempt Swedish and Norwegian vessels from the payment of discriminating duties of import and tonnage for a limited time, and for other purposes," a transcript of which is also transmitted to you. You will take some fit occasion to make known to the Government of Sweden and Norway, and turning to the best account, in your negotiations for a permanent arrangement, the provisions of this act, which suspends, in behalf of Swedish and Norwegian vessels arriving in the United States, the discriminating duties which are levied in our ports on foreign vessels, and directs the refunding of such as may have been collected from the vessels of Sweden and Norway during the interval between the period of the expiration of the late treaty between the United States and Sweden and that of the passage of the act.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. CLAY.

JOHN J. APPLETON, Chargé d'Affaires to Sweden.

Mr. Appleton to Mr. Clay.

No. 15.] STOCKHOLM, April 7, 1827.

SIR: In a postscript of my letter of the 3d instant I had the honor to announce to you the safe arrival of your letter of the 12th (20th) January, (No. 2,) with the various enclosures to which it refers. I have now further to inform you that, under date of the 5th instant, I addressed a letter to the Count of Wetterstedt, in which I made known to him my being furnished with full powers to negotiate and to conclude a treaty of commerce and navigation with the Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway, and enclosed him a copy of the bill before the House of Representatives for the exemption of Swedish and Norwegian vessels from the payment of alien duties and charges in our ports, giving him, at the same time, the explanations contemplated by your letter in reference to the course which the President has pursued to secure to the subjects of Sweden and Norway advantages equal to those which we derive from the continued enforcement of the treaty here. The enclosure (A) is a copy of my letter to the Count of Wetterstedt.

In reference to the information received at the Department, that there are certain advantages enjoyed by Swedish, and now by British vessels, under the treaty concluded between Great Britain and Sweden, as regards arrivals in distress on the coast of Norway and Sweden, I hasten to state that, from inquiries made previous to the receipt of your letter, I had ascertained that these advantages consist in the faculty of availing themselves of other aid than that of the "Diving and Saving Company" during the first sixty hours after stranding. A liberal construction of the tenth article of our treaty would certainly have placed us in this respect upon a footing of equality with the Swedes. But it is a fact that, while by a decision of the year 1821, had in the case of an American vessel stranded on the island of Gotland, the inequality in the salvage-money to which the company is entitled by the first and third sections of its regulations between Swedish and foreign vessels has disappeared in relation to us, that which results from the faculty above mentioned, accorded to the Swedes and denied to foreigners, still affects us. It is founded upon the tenth section of the company's regulations, which, under pretence of better guarding the interest of foreign merchants and ship-owners, obliges the captains employed by them to avail themselves exclusively of the aid of the company when in distress upon the coast. The injury resulting from this obligation is considerable in every case where the assistance required is small, and yet cannot be dispensed with, for the foreigner is then liable to pay six, eight, or ten per cent. upon ship and cargo as salvage money to the company, when, perhaps, he might, like the Swede, have obtained the same aid elsewhere at a very moderate expense. By the third paragraph of the second declaration annexed to the British treaty it is stipulated: "Que les bâtimens de commerce Anglais seront également assimilés aux bâtimens nationaux par rapport aux droits de sametage sans aucune restriction ou difference." The construction given to this stipulation had, I am informed, done away, in the case of British vessels, the inequality. It shall be my object to have the corresponding article in the treaty to be negotiated so worded as to admit no evasion from the observance of that perfect equality which it is intended to secure.

You have also received information that a difference existed between the pilotage and harbor dues collected upon Swedish and American vessels. I am happy to have it in my power to lay before you two documents that will show you where and to what extent that difference exists.

The first of these documents (marked B) is an extract of a letter from Mr. Murray, our consul at Gottenburg, in which, in answer to inquiries made by me on the 30th of January last, he states explicitly the existence of a perfect equality in the duties and charges paid by the Americans and Swedes. This, I presume, will be considered satisfactory in relation to the port where that consul resides, which, of all the Swedish ports, is that most frequented by our vessels. In that of Stockholm the result of my researches has produced a different result; a result which, as you will see by the enclosure, (C,) certified by the respective brokers as a correct statement of the charges and fees upon American, English, and Swedish vessels, establishes the existence of a difference of $11 27 against the American vessel when compared to the Swede, and of less than $2 when compared to the British. Upon what particular charges and fees the difference falls, the statement and the notes thereunto subjoined will show. You will remark that in the essential charges of tonnage, pilotage, and light-money, no difference whatever exists. It is to be sought in the charge made by the broker for his services, which is double upon a foreign vessel in consequence of the greater trouble which attends the management of the foreigner's business, and in the small fees and douceurs, the amount of which has been rather fixed by usage than established by any competent authority, and remains as before the treaty, unequal, because the parties more immediately interested either have not been aware of the inequality, or, knowing it, have preferred overlooking it, as a matter of small importance, to making it a subject of altercation with persons whose good or ill will is not indifferent to them. If the broker's account wears upon its face a general appearance of fairness, it is passed, as a matter of course, and the more readily as the charge for his own personal trouble, though twice as high upon a foreign as upon a national vessel, is still, when taken by itself, considered but as an inadequate compensation for all the services which are officially and officiously rendered by him. When everything, therefore, shall have been done to secure to our countrymen equal terms with the Swedes, the equality will still, in the smaller fees, be only nominal—so deeply rooted is the disposition to overcharge foreigners, not here only, but in all the countries which I have visited on public service. I shall, as it is my duty, struggle constantly against this evil, and do what is possible for its correction in the impending negotiation.

It will not escape your notice that the only instance in which, by the paper C, British captains appear to be treated better than ours, the inequality is satisfactorily accounted for by the difference in the price of freight to the United States and to Great Britain, respectively.

After giving you the assurance that I shall, in the negotiation intrusted to me by the President, spare no exertions to procure the accomplishment of his wishes, such as they are explained by your instructions, I have only to add the request that you would honor me with directions respecting the eventual transmission of the treaty to the United States. Should I receive nothing from you on the subject before it is necessary to act, I shall forward it by my friend and inmate, Mr. Cucheval, whom I will at the same time beg leave to recommend for the compensation usually allowed to the bearers of public despatches of the United States.

I have the honor to be, sir, respectfully, your very obedient and humble servant,

J. J. APPLETON.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

A.

STOCKHOLM, April 5, 1827.

I have the honor to inform your excellency that my Government has carried into effect the intention which it made known to that of his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway on the 31st of October last, through his Chargé d'Affaires at Washington, by conferring upon me its full powers to negotiate and to conclude a treaty of commerce and navigation with such a person or persons as shall be similarly empowered on the part of his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway. In making this communication to your excellency, it is also my duty to add that, animated by the same sentiments that induced his Majesty to extend to the citizens of the United States the benefit of the expired treaty beyond the time fixed for its duration, the President would, to the full extent of the principle of reciprocity, have made the subjects of his Majesty the object of a similar measure, if the Constitution of the United States had invested him with the necessary power. But as this power, which, in fact, would be no other than that of enforcing in the United States the provisions of their public treaties beyond the time for which they had been advised and consented to by the Senate, had not been conferred upon him, the immediate reciprocation on the part of the United States of the continuance of the treaty was rendered impossible. Such were the circumstances under which the United States Secretary of State informed his Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington that the President would recommend to Congress the enacting of a law for the temporary observance of the treaty on the part of the United States; and, as your excellency has already learned by the copy of the President's message which I had the honor of presenting to you on the 5th of February last that this was one of the earliest recommendations to that body, it only remains that I should inform your excellency that in consequence thereof a bill (of which a copy is enclosed) was actually introduced in the House of Representatives which provides for the admission of the vessels and cargoes of Sweden and Norway in the ports of the Union on paying the same duties and charges as previous to the 25th of September last, and for the immediate reimbursement of any discriminating duties or charges which may have been collected from them between that date and that of the enactment. Owing to doubts which were felt by members of the House as to the competency of the legislative power to extend to some of the stipulations of the treaty, believed to appertain strictly to the treaty-making power, the bill has not been made to comprehend all the regulations of the treaty; it is, however, confidently expected that what it enacts, with what is in addition provided for by other laws of the Union, will suffice to insure, as it is the wish of the President, to his Majesty's subjects a reciprocation of the advantages which the citizens of the United States enjoy in Sweden and Norway. The duration of the bill is limited to the end of the ensuing session of Congress, under an impression that the intervening time will be sufficient for the conclusion of the new treaty.

I hope that your excellency will see in the preceding statement satisfactory evidence that the friendship and liberality evinced by his Majesty towards the United States are fully reciprocated by them, and that you will also anticipate with me the happiest results from the negotiations that have been determined on under such auspices.

I avail myself, with great pleasure, of this occasion to renew to your excellency the assurance of my most distinguished consideration.

J. J. APPLETON.

His Excellency the COUNT OF WETTERSTEDT,
Minister of State and of Foreign Affairs of his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway.

Extract of a letter from Mr. C. A. Murray, American Consul at Gothenburg, to J. J. Appleton, under date of the 10th of February, 1827.

"The American vessels have, ever since the ratification of the treaty, enjoyed a perfect equality as to the payment of all duties and charges to Government. Even the local charges which captains use to disburse themselves through the broker are on a footing of perfect similarity. At present there exists, therefore, to my knowledge, no room for complaint in this respect.

"Truly extracted. J. J. APPLETON."

Account of port charges for a vessel of 100 Swedish lasts.

THE BROKER'S DISBURSEMENTS.

	Swedish.	American.	English.
For a ballast-note, with ballast charges, &c	4 08	4 08	4 08
Pilotage and light money, expedition and ring money; 11 inwards, 14 outwards	75 22	75 22	75 22
Copy of the incoming entering *	32	40	40
Measuring the ship with expedition, and certificate of the said measurement and stamp paper, &c.†	14 36	17 40	17 40
Two copies of the said certificate	36	36	36
Ship's charges or tonnage duty, with pass money	52 05	52 05	52 05
Town's duty, last and bridge money, with navigation school money	18 05	18 05	18 05
Cooking room ‡	.....	2 32	2 32
Pass money for the custom-house and Great Governor's pass; stamp paper on the custom-house and Great Governor's pass	5 24	5 24	5 24
Men's pass and sailor's house mustering money and stamp paper, about *	8 40	11 00	11 00
Collector and comptroller, with the incoming bridge comptroller and cask collector	5 16	5 16	5 16
British poor money	.....	.....	.....
Wood and deal note, &c*	16	1 16	1 16
Bridge inspector and comptroller §	1 16	1 32	1 32
Iron bridge inspector and comptroller §	1 16	1 32	1 32
Iron weigh inspectors and comptrollers §	2 16	3 20	3 20
Tolags (wharf) book-keeper and comptroller §	32	1 00	1 00
Brokerage ‖	16 32	33 16	33 16
Inwriting money at iron bridge and iron weigh	2 24	2 24	2 24
Incoming searcher and at the freight chamber, (Swedish captains pay themselves) ¶	.....	2 00	2 00
Stamp paper on the outward freight for the cargo from hence, and commission 	12 42	12 42	8 04
Paid your incoming pilots foy (fees) and above day's and drink's money, about	8 00	8 00	8 00
Paid your incoming clearing money	3 00	3 00	3 00
Paid the harbor master	1 16	1 16	1 16
Paid the commander at Dalarö castle *	1 16	2 00	2 00
Pay day wages to custom-house officer, about	7 00	7 00	7 00
Expenses in the river, about	26 00	26 00	26 00
Custom-house officer from Dalarö	3 00	3 00	3 00
Banco R.	273 18	303 42	299 04
At the exchange of 2.33-10 for a dollar	$101 07	$112 34	$110 57

* No reason is assigned for the difference except usage.

† One skilling banco (one cent nearly) more per ton is taken for the measurement of foreign than of Swedish vessels; the certificate of measurement also costs one dollar banco (40 cents nearly) more than for a Swedish vessel.

‡ The cooking house is city property, and the use of it is granted gratuitously only to the crews of the vessels belonging to citizens.

§ For the difference existing in these four charges I have been able to obtain no satisfactory reason. It is probable that the amount of this difference upon the four charges, viz: 2 dollars and 4 skillings banco, is an overcharge.

‖ By ancient regulation foreign vessels pay double brokerage. Brokers assign as a reason the greater trouble which they have with foreign than with native captains. In the former case having to serve as interpreters, guides, &c.—services for which they receive no special compensation.

¶ The charge is discretionary, as the Swedish captain generally pays it himself; it is omitted as one of the broker's charges against the Swedish ship.

 Freight to the United States being higher than to England, the stamp paper used is also of a higher price; and the same of the commission for procuring it.

Signed for the charges and fees upon a Swedish vessel by—

G. S. FLYGERFELL.

STOCKHOLM, March 28, 1827.

Signed for the charges and fees upon an American and an English vessel by—

A. E. THORELL.

STOCKHOLM, January 27, 1827.

A true copy.

J. J. APPLETON.

Mr. Appleton to Mr. Clay.

No. 16.] STOCKHOLM, April 23, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose to you a copy (marked A) of a letter from the Count of Wetterstedt, of the 21st instant, and another (marked B) of my answer thereto, under date of yesterday.

The Count's letter announces to me that he has been charged with his Majesty's full powers to negotiate and to sign the new treaty of commerce, and that he intends to invite me at an early day to confer with him on the business; mine is merely an acknowledgment of the receipt of his letter, expressive of my readiness to meet him.

The length of time which has elapsed between my first letter to the Count and his answer will not fail to surprise you. It would have made a like impression upon me had I not, in the interval, received the most satisfactory assurances. At the Count's ordinary conference, on the 9th instant, he informed me that the King had charged him with the negotiation of the treaty, and that the information would soon be conveyed to me officially. Understanding from this that the Count was to be sole negotiator, I hastened to express my pleasure at it, and said that the presence of a third person would have been more fit to impede than to facilitate the progress of the negotiation. The Count's reply was, that he did not yet know with certainty whether he would be the sole negotiator, but that he would assure me that if any one was joined to him it would be a person not likely to embarrass us. At the Count's preceding conference, on the 16th instant, he apologized for not having yet answered my letter, and promised that he would do it very shortly, for he was anxious that we should enter upon the work of the treaty, in which, he added, he hoped I was authorized to extend the basis of that expired. I answered that I had instructions to that effect, but that my Government was not disposed to stop at halfway measures if it left the basis of the ancient treaty.

Lord Bloomfield, the English Minister at this Court, will leave this for England on the 27th instant, having obtained permission to absent himself from his post for the space of a year. He appears to be generally regretted. His son will remain charged with the affairs.

I have the honor to be, sir, respectfully, your very humble and obedient servant,

J. J. APPLETON.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

A.—[With Mr. Appleton's No. 16.]

STOCKHOLM, le 21 Avril, 1827.

MONSIEUR: J'ai mis sous les yeux du Roi, monsieur, la lettre que vous m'avez fait l'honneur de m'adresser en date du 5 de ce mois.

Sa Majesté a appris avec une véritable satisfaction que le Président des Etats-Unis etoit animé des mêmes dispositions qu'elle pour la conclusion du nouveau traité de commerce entre les deux pays, dispositions qui viennent de se manifester en dernier lieu par la resolution provisoire du Congrès.

Le Roi m'ayant muni de ses pleins pouvoirs pour négocier et signer avec vous, le traité en question, je ne manquerai pas, au première jour, de vous inviter à commencer ce travail.

Je vous prie, monsieur, de recevoir les assurances de ma considèration très distinguée.

LE CTE. DE WETTERSTEDT.

Mr. APPLETON, Chargé d'Affaires, &c.

A true copy.

J. J. APPLETON

B.—[With Mr. Appleton's No. 16.]

STOCKHOLM, April 22, 1828.

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the letter which your excellency addressed to me, under date of yesterday, informing me that his Majesty had conferred upon you his full powers to negotiate and to sign with me a new commercial treaty between our respective countries, and that, in consequence, you would, at an early day, invite me to enter with you on the business.

I hasten to express the pleasure I have received from this communication, and to say that I shall hold myself ready to wait upon your excellency whenever you shall think it convenient to express to me your wish to confer with me on the subject to which it relates.

I also improve the occasion to renew to your excellency the assurance of my most distinguished consideration.

J. J. APPLETON.

His Excellency the COUNT OF WETTERSTEDT, Minister of State and of Foreign Affairs of His Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway.

A true copy.

J. J. APPLETON.

No. 17.] STOCKHOLM, May 15, 1827.

Contents.

§ 1. Treaty of commerce and navigation between Sweden and Norway and Prussia.

§ 2. Beginning of the negotiations for a treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States and Sweden and Norway.

Enclosure.

A copy of a treaty of commerce and navigation between Sweden and Norway and Prussia.

No. 17.] STOCKHOLM, May 15, 1827.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose to you a copy of a treaty that has lately been concluded between this country and Prussia. It was sent to me this day by the Count of Wetterstedt. Though it is entitled a treaty of commerce and navigation, you will see that it is only a treaty of navigation, framed, however, upon principles of great liberality.

I have, since the date of my last letter, waited on the Count of Wetterstedt every day on which he held his official conferences, in hopes of reminding him by my presence of the promise contained in his letter of the 21st ultimo. Wishing at the same time not to betray too great an impatience to begin the negotiation, I avoided alluding to the subject. He never, however, suffered me to depart without holding out the expectation that he might soon be able to take up the business, and he yesterday told me that the cause which had prevented his doing so until now having ceased, he would be glad to see me at his office to-morrow to talk over the matter with me. As I understand that he intends paying, in a few days, a visit to his estate in the country, I do not flatter myself with the hope that much progress will be made in the negotiation before his departure. An opportunity will, however, be offered for a disclosure of the views of my Government, which, having been before that of his Majesty during his absence, will enable him to act at once upon them after his return.

Nothing has occured here since my last, a communication of which would prove of the least interest on your side of the Atlantic. I have therefore only to add that I am, with great respect, sir, your very obedient and humble servant,

J. J. APPLETON.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

[With Mr. Appleton's No. 17, of May 15, 1827.]

Traité de commerce et de navigation entre sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, d'une part, et sa Majesté le Roi de Prusse, de l'autre, fait et conclu à Stockholm le 14 Mars, 1827, et ratifié à Stockholm le 14 Avril, et à Berlin le 4 Avril de la même année.

Nous Charles Jean, par la Grace de Dieu, Roi de Suède, de Norvège, des Goths et des Vandales, Savoir faisons: que nous et le Sérénissime et très Puissant Prince et Seigneur Frederic Guillaume III, Roi de Prusse, ayant jugé à propos, pour l'avantage réciproque de nos sujets respectifs, d'entrer en négociation, afin de regler, d'une manière plus précise, les relations commerciales qui existent entre la Suède et la Norvège, d'une part, et les Etats de sa Majesté Prussienne, de l'autre, et ayant nommé, à cet effet, nos plénipotentiaires respectifs, savoir: Nous, de notre côté, nos amés et féaux le Sieur Gustave Comte de Wetterstedt, notre Ministre d'Etat et des Affaires, Etrangères, Chevalier Commandeur de nos Ordres, Chevalier des Ordres de Russie de St. André, de St. Alexandre Newsky et de St. Anne de la Première Classe, Chevalier de l'Ordre de l'Aigle Rouge de Prusse de la Première Classe, et Grand' Croix de celui de Leopold d'Autriche, Un des Dix Huit de l'Academie Suédoise, et le Sieur Paul Chretien Holst, notre Conseiller d'Etat dans le Royaume de Norvège, Commandeur de notre Ordre de l'Etoile Polaire; et sa Majesté le Roi de Prusse, de son côté, le Sieur François Frederic Louis de Tarrach, son Conseiller intime d'Ambassade, Envoyé Extraordinaire et Ministre Plénipotentiaire près notre Cour, Commandeur de notre Ordre de l'Etoile Polaire, Chevalier de l'Ordre de l'Aigle Rouge de Prusse de la Seconde Classe; lesquels, après avoir échangé leurs plein pouvoirs, trouvés en bonne et dûe forme, ont dressé, conclu, signé et scellé à Stockholm, le quatorze Mars de l'année courante, un traité, portant, mot pour mot, ce qui suit:

Au nom de la très Sainte et Indivisible Trinité!

Sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, et sa Majesté le Roi de Prusse, également animés du désir d'étendre et de consolider, pour le bien réciproque de leurs sujets, les relations commerciales, qui subsistent entre leurs Etats respectifs, et convaincus, que ce but salutaire ne saurait être mieux rempli, que par l'adoption d'un système de parfaite réciprocité, basé sur des principes équitables, sont convenus, en conséquence, d'entrer en négociation pour la conclusion d'un traité de commerce, et ont nommé, pour cet effet, des plénipotentiaires, savoir: Sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, le Sieur Gustave Comte de Wetterstedt, son Ministre d'Etat et des Affaires Etrangères, Chevalier Commandeur de Ses Ordres, Chevalier des Ordres de Russie de St. André, de St. Alexandre Newsky et de St. Anne de la Première Classe, Chevalier de l'Ordre de l'Aigle Rouge de Prusse de la Première Classe, Grand' Croix de l'Ordre de Leopold d'Autriche, Un des Dix Huit de l'Académie Suédoise et le Sieur Paul Chretien Holst, son Conseiller d'Etat du Royaume de Norvège, Commandeur de son Ordre de l'Etoile Polaire; et sa Majesté le Roi de Prusse le Sieur François Frederic Louis de Tarrach, son Conseiller intime d'Ambassade, son Envoyé Extraordinaire et Ministre Plénipotentiaire près sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège Chevalier de son Ordre de l'Aigle Rouge de la Seconde Classe, Commandeur de celui de l'Etoile Polaire de Suède, lesquels, après avoir échangé leurs plein pouvoirs respectifs, trouvés en bonne et dûe forme, sont convenus des articles suivans:

ARTICLE 1. Les bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, qui arrivent sur leur lest ou chargés dans les ports du Royaume de Prusse, de même que les bâtimens Prussiens, qui arrivent dans les ports des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, sur leur lest ou chargés, seront traités, tant à leur entrée qu'à leur sortie sur le même pied que les bâtimens nationaux, par rapport aux droits de port, de tonnage, de fanaux, de pilotage, et de sauvetage, ainsi qu'à tout autre droit ou charge, de quelle espéce ou dénomination que se soit, revenant à la Couronne, aux villes, au à des établissemens particuliers quelconques.

ARTICLE 2. Toutes les marchandises et objets de commerce, soit productions du sol ou de l'industrie des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège soit de tout autre pays, dont l'importation dans les ports du Royaume de Prusse est légalement permise dans des bâtimens Prussiens, pourront également y être importées sur des bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, sans être assujetties à des droits plus forts ou autres, de quelle dénomination que ce soit, que si les mêmes marchandises ou productions avaient été importées dans des bâtimens Prussiens; et, réciproquement, toutes les marchandises et objets de commerce, soit productions, du sol ou de l'industrie du Royaume de Prusse, soit de tout autre pays, dont l'importation dans les ports des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège est légalement permise dans des bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, pourront également y être importées sur des bâtimens Prussiens, sans être assujetties à des droits plus forts ou autres, de quelle dénomination que ce soit, que si les mêmes marchandises ou productions avaient été importées dans des bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens.

Les stipulations de l'article précédent et de celui-ci, sont, dans toute leur plénitude, applicables aux navires Suédois et Norvégiens, qui entreront dans les ports du Royaume de Prusse, ainsi qu'aux navires Prussiens, qui entreront dans les ports des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, alors même, que ces navires respectifs, sans venir directement des ports des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, ou bien de ceux de la Monarchie Prussienne, arriveraient en droiture des ports d'une domination tierce ou étrangère.

Article 3. Toutes les marchandises et objets de commerce, soit productions du sol ou de l'industrie des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, soit de tout autre pays, dont l'exportation des ports des dits Royaumes, dans leurs propres bâtimens, est légalement permise, pourront, de même, être exportées des dits ports sur des bâtimens Prussiens, sans être assujetties à des droits plus forts ou autres, de quelle dénomination que ce soit, que si l'exportation avait été faite en des bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens. Une exacte réciprocité sera observée dans les ports du Royaume de Prusse, de sorte, que toutes les marchandises et objets de commerce, soit productions du sol ou de l'industrie du Royaume de Prusse, soit de tout autre pays, dont l'exportation des ports du dit Royaume, dans ses propres bâtimens, est légalement permise, pourront, de même, être exportées des dits ports sur des bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, sans être assujetties à des droits plus forts au autres, de quelle dénomination que ce soit, que si l'exportation avait été faite en des bâtimens Prussiens.

Article 4. Les stipulations générales des articles 1, 2, et 3, inclusivement, seront, de même, appliquées aux navires de la colonie de St. Barthelémy de sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège aux Indes Occidentalis, qui entreront dans les ports de la Monarchie Prussienne, et aux navires Prussiens, qui entreront dans les ports de la dite colonie.

Article 5. Il ne sera donné, ni directement, ni indirectement, ni par l'un des deux Gouvernemens, ni par aucune compagnie, corporation, ou agent, agissant en son nom ou sous son autorité, aucune préférence quelconque pour l'achât d'aucune production du sol ou de l'industrie, soit d'lun des deux Etats, soit de tout autre pays, importée dans le territoire de l'autre, à cause ou en considération de la nationalité du navire, qui aurait transporté cette production légalement permise, l'intention bien positive des deux hautes parties contractantes étant, qu'aucune difference ou distinction quelconque n'ait lieu à cet égard.

Article 6. Les bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, ainsi que les bâtimens Prussiens, ne pourront profiter des immunités et avantages, que leur accorde le présent traité, qu'autant qu'ils se trouveront munis des papiers et certificats, voulûs par les règlemens existans des deux côtés, pour constater leur port et leur nationalité.

Les hautes parties contractantes se réservant d'échanger des déclarations, pour faire une énumeration claire et précise des papiers et documens, dont l'un et l'autre Etat exigent, que leurs navires soient munis. Si, après cet échange, qui aura lieu, au plus tard, deux mois après la signature du présent traité, l'une des hautes parties contractantes se trouverait dans le cas de changer ou modifier ses ordonnances à cet égard, il en sera fait à l'autre une communication officielle.

Article 7. Les stipulations de l'article XI, du traité conclu à Vienne le sept Juin mil huit cent quinze, entre les deux hautes parties contractantes, sont maintenues dans toute leur intégrité.

Article 8. Le présent traité sera en vigueur pendant huit années, à compter du première Avril de la présente année et si, douze mois avant l'expiration de ce terme, l'une ou l'autre des deux hautes parties contractantes n'aura point annoncé à l'autre son intention d'en faire cesser l'effet, ce traité restéra encore obligatoire une année au de là, et ainsi de suite, jusqu'á l'expiration des douze mois, qui suivront l'annonce officielle, faite par l'une des deux hautes parties contractantes à l'autre, pour qu'il soit annullé.

Article 9. Le présent traité sera ratifié par les hautes parties contractantes, et les ratifications en seront échangées à Stockholm, dans l'espace de quatre sémaines après la signature, ou plutôt si faire se peut.

En foi de quoi, nous soussignés, en vertu de nos plein pouvoirs, avons signé le présent traité, et y avons apposé le cachet de nos armes. Fait à Stockholm de quartorze Mars, l'an de Grace mil huit cent vingt sept.

G. COMTE DE WETTERSTEDT. [L. S.]
F. DE TARRACH. [L. S.]
P. C. HOLST. [L. S.]

A ces causes, nous avons voulu accepter, approuver, confirmer et ratifier ce traité, avec tous ses articles, points, et clauses, comme étant en tous points conforme à notre volonté, tout comme par la présente, nous l'acceptons, approuvons, confirmons et ratifions de la manière la plus efficace que faire se peut; voulons et promettons de tenir et de remplir sincèrement, fidèlement et loyalement, ce que contient le dit traité et tous ses articles, points, et clauses. En foi de quoi, nous avons signé la présente de notre propre main, et y avons fait attacher notre grand sceau royal. Fait au Chateau de Stockholm, le quartorzième jour du mois d'Avril, l'an de grace mil huit cent vingt sept.

CHARLES JEAN. [L. S.]

Gustave de Wetterstedt.

Ratification de sa Majesté le Roi de Prusse du Traité susmentionné.

Nous Frederic Guillaume III, par la Grace de Dieu Roi de Prusse savoir faisons par les présentes: qu'ayant lu et examiné la convention, conclue entre nous et sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, et signée par nos plénipotentiaires respectifs á Stockholm le 14 Mars 1827, convention, dont la teneur suit ici de mot á mot.

Fiat insertio:

Nous l'avons trouvée, en tous ses points et articles, conforme à notre volonté:

En consequence de quoi, nous avons accepté, approuvé, confirmé et ratifié la dite convention, comme nous l'acceptons, l'approuvons, la confirmons et la ratifions par les présentes, pour nous et nos successeurs, promettant, sur notre parole royale, d'en faire exactement et fidèlement exécuter le contenu.

En foi de quoi, nous avons signé ces présentes de notre main, et y avons fait apposer notre sceau Royal.

Fait à Berlin, le quatre Avril l'an de Grace mil huit cent vingt sept et de notre règne le trentième.

FREDERIC GUILLAUME, [L. S.]

Bernstorff.

Mr. Appleton to Mr. Clay.

No. 18.] STOCKHOLM, June 22, 1827.

SIR: I had, on the 27th ultimo, the honor to receive your letter of the 11th of April, No. 3, enclosing copies of the act of Congress entitled "An act to exempt Swedish and Norwegian vessels from the payment of discriminating duties of import and tonnage for a limited time, and for other purposes," and of the letter by which you had communicated this act to the Baron of Stackelberg. The transmission of these papers was accompanied with instructions to turn them to the best account in the negotiation with which I was charged. Having, as you will have seen by my despatch No. 15, fully anticipated these instructions, I acted no further upon them in the interview I had, immediately after their receipt, with the Count of Wetterstedt, than by inquiring whether he had heard anything from the Baron of Stackelberg on the subject; and I then learned that the act of Congress had been received through him. Indeed, the Count presumed that the act thus received was the original document, for it was executed on parchment, and had apparently the autograph signatures of the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and that of the President of the United States. He inquired whether it was our practice to send similar documents in that form, and dwelt so much upon the circumstance that I was forced to conclude that this Government had not been more pleased with the act itself than with the form in which they had received it. I now advert to the circumstance only as a proof of the importance attached here to forms.

I have now the honor of enclosing to you copies of a letter from the Count of Wetterstedt, under date of the 18th instant, announcing to me the birth of another son to the Prince Royal, and of my congratulatory answer thereto. The Princess and her child are doing well. This event, which has given much pleasure here, will, as I have been informed this day, be formally announced to the President by the King; notices of this kind have heretofore been made "to the President and Senate of the United States." I believe, however, that, in consequence of some suggestions they have received from the Baron of Stackelberg, they will so far deviate this time from their former practice as to address the letter to the President alone. My opinion having been asked, it was unhesitatingly given in favor of the change.

I had sought the interview of this day with the Count of Wetterstedt to hand him some remarks upon a counter project of a treaty of commerce which I had received from him on the 20th instant. This was the eighth conference which I had held with the Count on the subject of the treaty since the 15th ultimo, the date of my last despatch. In the absence of a trusty conveyance for my letters, I abstained from writing to you, at the time, what had passed at these conferences. This being intended to go by mail, I am still constrained to suppress all details, and to say merely that a perfect understanding has now been established between the Count and myself, in the sense of your instructions, on the points on which you were desirous that the old treaty should be extended, with an exception, however, in relation to the article of salt, about which we are still at variance. Should I succeed in carrying this last point, the signature of the treaty will suffer no further delay. Should I fail, a reference to the instructions with which you have honored me will apprise you of the course which it is my duty to pursue.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient and humble servant,

J. J. APPLETON.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

[With Mr. Appleton's No. 18.]

STOCKHOLM, le 18 Juin, 1827.

MONSIEUR: C'est avec la plus vive satisfaction que je m'empresse de vous informer, monsieur, que son Altesse Royale Madame la Princesse Royale est accouchée au Château de Haga, aujourd hui à midi 11 minutes d'un Prince, qui recevra, sur les fonts de baptême, les noms de François Gustave Oscar et le titre de Duc d'Uplande.

En vous invitant, monsieur, deporter cette nouvelle à la connoissance de votre Gouvernement, le Roi connoit trop bien d'avance les sentimens d'amitié que lui porte le Gouvernement des Etats Unis d'Amérique, et qui correspondent entièrement aux siens, envers lui, pour ne pas être persuadé de l'intérêt sincère, qu'il prendra à un événément, qui offre une nouvelle garantie au bonheur à venir des deux Royaumes-Unis.

Je vous prie, monsieur, d'agréer les assurances de ma considèration très distinguée,

LE CTE. DE WETTERSTEDT.

M. APPLETON, Chargé d'Affaires, &c.

[Answer.]

STOCKHOLM, le 18 Juin, 1827.

MONSIEUR LE COMPTE: J'ai l'honneur d'accuser la réception de la lettre par laquelle votre excellence vient de m'informer que son Altesse Royale Madame la Princesse Royale est heureusement accouchée d'un Prince qui portera le nom de François Gustave Oscar et le titre de Duc d'Uplande.

Je m'empresse d'offrir à votre excellence mes felicitations les plus vives sur cet heureux événement, et de l'assurer que mon Gouvernement, fidèle aux sentimens d'amitié qu'il à toujours portés à sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, prendra une part bien sincère à la satisfaction que sa Majesté en éprouve.

Je profite aussi de cette occasion pour renouveler à votre excellence l'assurance de ma considèration la plus distinguée.

J. J. APPLETON.

A Son Excellence Monsieur le COMTE DE WETTERSTEDT, &c., &c., &c.

Mr. Appleton to Mr. Clay.

No. 20.] STOCKHOLM, July 11, 1827.

SIR: It is with great pleasure that I have the honor to announce to you that the negotiation with which I was charged has resulted in the signature of a new treaty of navigation and commerce between the United States and his Majesty the King of Sweden and Norway, which you will receive herewith.

You will see that this new treaty secures all the interests for which you had instructed me to provide. By it the vessels of the United States are placed, in the ports of Sweden, Norway, and the island of St. Bartholomew, on a footing of perfect equality with the vessels of those countries, with reference to the general faculty of importing and exporting, and to the duties and charges of all kinds payable in such cases on the vessels and their cargoes; the trade between Sweden and Norway and their West India colony is opened to the citizens of the United States on the same footing as to natives of those countries; and the produce of the United States are admitted in Sweden, Norway, and St. Bartholomew on the same terms as similar produce from any other foreign country; and, moreover, in Sweden and Norway on the same terms as similar produce from their West India colony, and in the colony as similar produce from the mother country.

The only exceptions to these principles that have been recognized are the following:

1. As regards vessels, the reserve made by each State of its own coasting trade.

2. As regards both vessels and produce, the reserve made by Sweden and Norway of their trade with Finland.

3. As regards produce alone, the reserve made by Sweden and Norway of particular advantages to the tallow and tallow candles of Russia.

In the account of the conferences which accompanies this, you will see the reasons which have operated with me for the admission of the 2d and 3d exceptions, which already existed under the former treaty, although not mentioned by it. If, in the treaties lately concluded between this Court and those of Denmark and Prussia, there are no reserves of this kind, it is not because they do not actually exist in reference to them, but because the trade to which they relate having always been the object of regulations distinct from those applicable to the foreign trade of Sweden, was not considered by the parties as affected by those treaties. The same course might have been adopted by me, but I deemed it more regular that the exceptions should be specially mentioned providing this against any pretension which this Government might hereafter set up to a right of multiplying such exceptions, founded upon our silent acquiescence in those existing at the formation of the treaty. The anxiety of the Swedes to procure markets for their iron might, it was feared, induce them to make, sooner or later, tariff treaties with France and the Netherlands to the detriment of the principles established in their treaty with us, and every care was taken to keep out of the treaty whatever was calculated to countenance such a deviation from its spirit.

You will observe that, agreeably to your instructions, an article has been introduced in the treaty which provides that the two Governments shall give no preference in their purchases with reference to the character of the vessel in which the goods were imported. In the same spirit I have obtained the insertion of an article which interdicts the laying of any higher or other duties on vessels employed in the trade between the two countries than upon vessels employed in the trade between either of them and any other country; the importance of such an article was proved to me by what had lately occurred between France and England. By the convention of 1825 it had been agreed that the vessels of each of these Powers should not, when employed in the direct trade between the two countries, pay in the ports of the other higher tonnage duties than were paid by national vessels. But no provision in that convention having been made of the nature of that to which I now refer, the French Government, with a view to favor its distant navigation at the expense of that employed between France and England, suddenly raised the tonnage duty payable by her own vessels coming from England to the par of that payable by foreign vessels, and defeated all the hopes which the English ship-owners had built upon the convention.

In addition to the articles in which the above mentioned interests are generally provided for, I have inserted several others in the treaty of a more special nature, taken almost verbatim from that lately expired. Although a liberal application of the principles already established might have insured nearly all, if not all, the facilities and exemptions which are guaranteed by these additional articles, still I did not think it expedient to omit them. They were retained as useful specifications of rights better calculated to the intelligence of the parties immediately interested than general principles, the application of which to particular cases might not be equally obvious. These articles have, however, been carefully revised, and, where it was required, changed so as to harmonize as much as possible with our own custom-house and local regulations, and with the phraseology of the other articles. What was superfluous has been retrenched; what was thought susceptible of being better expressed has been altered. The most important change has been made in the 10th article of Mr. Russel's treaty, which, as stated by your instructions, had failed to insure to our shipwrecked countrymen all the advantages it contemplated. This article has become the 15th of the new treaty, with the insertion of a clause that the saving companies are not to compel an acceptance of their services but under such circumstances and after such delays as are applicable to native captains and crews. The 12th article of the late treaty, which re-enacts a great portion of the treaty made by Franklin, required some change to make it applicable to Norway as well as to London. Such a change was made, and the last clause altered so as to show more distinctly what were the other treaties concluded by the two Powers to which its provisions were rendered subordinate. I have admitted, as you will see, an article stipulating the mutual delivery of deserters. Although I had no special instructions in relation to this point, I thought that the introduction of a similar provision in our treaty with Central America having settled the question of principle, I ought not to be detered from consenting to it, by the idea that it might prove more advantageous to the other party than to us. I would not have suggested the article, but when it was proposed to me I could not refuse it without departing from the spirit of enlarged liberality which had presided at the negotiation. After all, the greater inducement to desert from the Swedish and Norwegian vessels may be compensated by the greater number of American vessels engaged in the trade between the two countries.

I have enclosed with this a succinct account of all that has occurred at the twelve conferences which preceded the conclusion of the treaty, as also copies of my original project; of the Count's counter project; of a note sent to the Count in support of my proposal to retrench the exception relative to salt from the 2d article of his project; of the additional act of the treaty of jurisdiction; of a private correspondence with the Count of Wetterstedt in relation to the invocation at the head of the treaty, and of two articles originally prepared by the Count in lieu of the separate article. All these papers, and an additional one containing the basis of the negotiation, are numbered with reference to their connexion with the conferences.

The treaty which I carried to the conference of the 4th of July for signature having at that conference required some alterations to make it agree with that which the Count had prepared, not to lose the opportunity of signing it that day, we signed it, notwithstanding its erasures and interlineations, intending subsequently to sign fairer copies without altering the date. The preparation of these copies, which I had committed to my secretary, Mr. Cucheval, was not completed until the 9th instant. On that day the document already signed was cancelled, and the new exemplifications signed and sealed. These two originals are intrusted to Mr. Cucheval, with directions to take charge of one to Washington, and to leave the other with our consul at Liverpool, to be forwarded by the packet succeeding that in which Mr. Cucheval will embark. I have advanced to Mr. Cucheval, on account of the United States, three hundred and ninety-four dollars and seventy cents, in part payment of the sum of thirteen hundred and twenty dollars which I have promised him for his expenses and time in going to Washington with the treaty and returning here; subjecting, however, the arrangement, as it was my duty, to your approbation. In making him this allowance, I have calculated his travelling expenses to Washington and back to Stockholm at six hundred dollars, and his compensation for four months, at six dollars a day, at seven hundred and twenty. If you should think fit to allow him something for copying during the negotiation, he will have well deserved it by his industry, fidelity, and intelligence. My confidence in him rests upon a friendship dating back more than twenty years. The Count of Wetterstedt has requested that my messenger might take charge of despatches for the Baron of Stackelberg. I have reasons to believe that the ratification of the King will be forwarded with those papers.

Hoping that, in the negotiation which has just ended, I have not misunderstood your instructions, and that its result will be advantageous to our dear country, I have the honor to be, with great respect, your most obedient and humble servant,

J. J. APPLETON.

Hon. HENRY CLAY, Secretary of State.

Journal of the conferences between J. J. Appleton and the Count of Wetterstedt, Plenipotentiaries for the conclusion of a new treaty of navigation and commerce between the United States of America and the King of Sweden and Norway, in 1827.

On the 16th of May I called at the Cabinet, in compliance with an invitatiom from the Count of Wetterstedt, and had with him a long and free conversation on the subject of the treaty we were charged to negotiate. He stated, in substance, that this Government was disposed to place its commercial relations with all foreign Powers upon the most liberal footing, and in proof thereof referred to the treaties it had lately concluded with Denmark and Prussia. I stated, on my side, that the policy of my Government was not, in this respect, different from that of Sweden, as he would see by our latest treaties, which had fixed the principles on which we were willing to enter into commercial arrangements with other States. After these mutual declarations it appeared easy to find a basis for the incipient negotiation. The Count proposed at once that we should start from the principle that whatever might be imported from or exported to a foreign country in the territories of either party in its own vessels might also be imported from or exported to such foreign country in the vessels of the other party without paying any other or higher duties on the vessel or cargo than were payable by natives in the same case. I agreed to this proposal, provided it should apply to the colony of St. Bartholomew as well as to Sweden and Norway, and place the trade between that colony and Sweden and Norway upon the footing of a foreign trade, in which, as such, we could, under his proposition, participate on a footing of equality with the subjects of his Majesty in the two hemispheres. These provisoes opened a wide field of discussion between the Count and myself, in which it was his object to show that the trade between the mother country and its colony was in fact a coasting trade, which he supposed it was the intention of both parties to reserve for their own navigation, and mine to prove that the trade in question had none of the features of a coasting trade, but all those of a foreign one, in which, therefore, we might be allowed to participate without departing from the principle he had offered as a basis. At last the Count declared that he had no authority to extend the principle mentioned to the width for which I contended, and must, therefore, before going further, consult the King. He promised, however, to give me an early answer. Anxious that my provisoes should not appear at the King's council in the light of exceptions to the principle proposed by the Count, I left with him a memorandum of two bases which I proposed for his acceptance: the first containing, in its generality, both the Count's proposal and the provisoes with which I offered to accept it, and the second, relative to the produce of the soil or industry of either country, so elastically worded as to adapt itself to the ground which might be gained in the discussion of the first, without, however, furnishing prima facia reasons against its adoption. For these bases I beg leave to refer you to the enclosed paper, No. 1.

Second Conference.

On the 18th of May the Count of Wetterstedt declared himself ready to negotiate with me upon the two bases which I had left him in memorandum at our last interview, and it was agreed between us that each should prepare a project of a treaty for the next conference, fixed for the 28th of May.

Third Conference.

On the 28th of May I had, agreeably to appointment, a meeting with the Count of Wetterstedt. The Count had not yet had time to prepare his project; mine was ready, but I did not communicate it.

Fourth Conference.

On the 4th of June I again waited on the Count of Wetterstedt, and learned that his project was in the hands of the Council of State. Conceiving from these delays that it was the Count's desire to see my project before he communicated his, I offered him frankly the perusal of it. He said he would now receive it as a confidential communication, and so it was left with him. This project is herewith enclosed, No. 2.

Fifth Conference.

On the 11th of June I had a new interview with the Count of Wetterstedt, at which he opened my project and examined with me its various stipulations. He questioned the practicability of admitting my first article, as it secured here to American citizens certain rights which were not conceded to the King's subjects generally, but were a matter of privilege attached to localities. He also questioned the propriety of making a separate mention of the island of St. Bartholomew in the second, third, fourth, and seventh articles. He thought that all we claimed in relation to that island might, in each case, be expressed in the second paragraph, beginning with "Et reciproquement," by adding "dans l'ile," or "de l'ile de St. Barthelemy," after "Suède et Norvège." I answered that I would also have preferred this mode of introducing the island of St. Bartholomew if it had not been liable to the objection of leaving in doubt our right to navigate between the mother country and the colony on the same terms as the natives, and to introduce our produce in either upon as favorable footing as the same produce from one of them into the other. That if he could find any other manner of stating what I wished distinctly, I would readily give up my own. As to the changes which had been made in the articles adopted from the late treaty, the Count considered them as improvements upon the ancient text. To the additional provision in favor of such of our vessels as might be shipwrecked on the coasts of Sweden and Norway, he gave a ready assent, as also to what is stipulated in the fifth, sixth, eighth, fourteenth, and sixteenth articles of my project. When this review was terminated, I inquired what would be the effect of the new treaty upon the privileged navigation and commerce between Sweden and Finland. The Count replied that this navigation and commerce would of course be left unaffected by the general provisions of the treaty. Sweden and Finland, formerly under the same Government, were still bound together in the most intimate manner by their mutual wants. It was from Finland, as I well knew, that the markets of Stockholm were supplied with the necessaries of life, including even fuel. Finland was equally dependent upon Stockholm for articles it could not as well procure elsewhere. This mutual dependence had been recognized by treaties made with Russia since the cession, where the intercourse between them had been left nearly what it was before. No tonnage duties were exacted on either side, and the articles of produce or manufacture in exchange between the two countries were subjected to a very low rate of duty when compared with those established in the tariff affecting the trade with foreign countries. The trade between Sweden and Finland was considered by the Powers with whom Sweden had lately made treaties so much out of the sphere of those treaties that it had not even occurred to them to have it excepted from their operation; and that the United States considered this trade in the same light might be inferred from the fact that they had never asked, under the expired treaty, that their produce should be admitted in Sweden on the footing of those of similar nature coming from Finland. He hoped that these considerations, while they show the propriety of excepting the trade in question from the operation of the new treaty, would dispense with the necessity of referring to it in the treaty, even to withdraw it from the mass of foreign trade which it would throw in common. I answered that the reasons he had assigned appeared to me conclusive in favor of assimilating the trade between Sweden and Finland to the coasting trade of the former, yet, as it was a trade with a foreign territory, in which, as such, we were called, by the general provisions of the treaty, to participate, it ought, I conceived, to avoid all doubt in future, to be nominally excepted. The Count declared that he had no objection to comply, in this respect, with my wishes, and there the subject was dropped to be resumed in its proper place.

Sixth Conference.

Having, agreeably to appointment, called again at the Count's office, on the 17th of June, I was requested by the Count to call again the next day, when he would communicate to me his "project." Before the hour assigned for our meeting I received, on the 18th, a billet from the Count, announcing that an "august birth" put it out of his power to comply with his promise, but that he would certainly see me on the 20th.

Seventh Conference.

At the conference of the 20th I had at last a view of the long-promised "project." This "project" was in fact a counter project, for, considering the request that I had made that the communication of mine should be deemed confidential as absolete, (as he well might from the tenor of our intervening conversations,) he had, after submitting it to the Council of State, transferred most of its articles into his own. This "counter project" is enclosed, No. 3. In reading it over with him I made upon it such observations as then occurred to me, which I will not now repeat, as they were made the subject of a "memorandum" which I left with him at the succeeding conference. Before leaving the Count, I was informed that it was his wish that an article should be added to those he had handed to me providing for the mutual delivery of deserters from the Navy and the merchant service of the two countries. I said that though I had no special instructions on this subject, which was not necessarily connected with a treaty of commerce, I would not refuse to introduce some dispositions in the treaty in relation to it after we had come to an understanding respecting what was already before us.

Eighth Conference.

On the 22d of June I delivered to the Count of Wetterstedt a memorandum containing my remarks upon his "project." In the copy of the project, which you will find enclosed, No. 3, these remarks are noted in the margin. In favor of the restoration of the first article of my project in its new form, I laid everything which a desire to secure to our citizens settling in Sweden and Norway all the rights, privileges, and immunities in commerce which are enjoyed by the natives could dictate. Having referred, among other topics, to the last treaty, where these rights had been recognized, the Count observed that he presumed there could be no objection to the re-insertion of the article of that treaty referring to these rights. I said that I had made no other change in that article than that which was required to secure its harmony with the other articles of my project; rather, however, than to leave these rights unprovided for, I would take the old article in question, retrenching from it the expression of "the most favored nations," which sounded strangely to my ears in a treaty founded on the principle of "equality." My next remarks fell upon the restriction he had introduced in the second article of his project in relation to the importation of salt. Their substance is embodied in a note I subsequently addressed to the Count on the subject, and to which I beg leave to refer you. It is herewith enclosed, under No. 4. The Count thought me rather unreasonable in insisting upon the retrenchment of the proposed restriction. The concessions that were already made to our navigation had not been obtained from the Chamber of Commerce without some difficulty. We had almost exclusively the navigation between the two countries; the faculty of importing salt, if extended to us, would, he feared, throw also into our hands this branch of navigation, on which the Swedes had heretofore relied for their homeward freights. The claim had been resisted in the case of Denmark, with whom competition was much less feared than with us, and was so repugnant to the long-established policy of this country that the Swedish merchants would, one and all, prefer a simple renewal of the expired treaty to the conclusion of a new one threatening their navigation with the loss of this article of importation. The Count then inquired whether I was authorized to consent to a simple renewal of the former treaty. I replied that the discussion of this point appeared to be now premature; that it would be time to seek for a new basis for the negotiation when it was shown that I was insisting upon anything that could not fairly be derived from those to which we had already agreed; that I considered my proposition as strictly within the range of these bases; and that I could not persuade myself that he would persist in rejecting it, after having again taken into mature consideration the reasons I had urged in its favor, which I would beg leave to submit to him in the form of a note, that he might make such use of them as he should judge proper. The Count said that if I addressed him a note on the subject it would receive all due attention. Passing, then, from the second article of his project to the fourth, we agreed to make the fate of the retrenchment I had therein proposed dependent upon that which had just been discussed. As regards the eighth article, the Count could with difficulty be brought to see the necessity of the addition I had proposed. Upon my persisting, he, however, consented to its admission, with such a change in the order of my phraseology as he supposed was necessary for the clearness of the sense. All the other alterations I had proposed in the remaining articles were readily admitted.

On the 24th of June I sent in my note (enclosure No. 4) relating to the proposed retrenchment from the second article of the Count's project.

Ninth Conference.

In a short interview I had with the Count on the 28th of June I learned that my note had produced a favorable effect in the Council of State. I then ventured to express a wish that, if the obstacle against which the note was directed should be removed, the treaty might be signed on the 4th of July, the double anniversary of my country's independence and of the birth of the Prince Royal. The suggestion appeared to strike the Count agreeably. Before leaving him, I said that I would wish so to restrict the seventh article of the treaty of 1783 as to bind the two parties only in relation to property belonging to the subjects of States who recognized the principle on which that article was founded, and entered into explanations tending to show that it was the policy of our two Governments only to adopt the principle in question with such a restriction. My observations appeared to him just, but he was very unwilling to do anything that was calculated to bring the principles of the old treaty in discussion continued in force by the treaty of 1816. He had not objected to their being again mentioned in the same manner, for this seemed to be done as a matter of course; but if any provision were now made respecting the application of these principles, the whole subject would assume a character of importance inviting comments, and imposing the necessity of explanations in their relations with other Powers which it was the wish of Sweden to avoid. He would, however, mention the subject in council and let me know the result.

Tenth Conference.

On the 30th, having again met the Count of Wetterstedt according to appointment, I was informed that the King, anxious for the happy conclusion of the negotiation, had consented to the withdrawal of the restriction on the second article of the Count's project. I also received a new draught of an article in substitution of the first article of my project. This article is the one inserted in the treaty; it varies but little from the first article of Mr. Russel's treaty. The subject of deserters having again been brought on the carpet, the Count presented me an article respecting them, copied almost verbatim from a similar arrangement made a few weeks since with the Netherlands. It conceded the delivery of deserters to consuls upon their simple application, unsupported by the production of any documentary evidence proving the connexion of the persons claimed with the vessel to which they were alledged to belong, and regarding only seamen not of the country from which their extradition was asked. Deriving my authority to stipulate on this subject only from the thirty-first article of our late treaty with Central America, I had determined to confine myself within the limits it had traced. After pointing out, therefore, to the Count the particulars in which his projected article differed from that precedent, I proposed that it should be changed so as to agree with it. He agreed to the proposal so far as it related to the obligation to produce documentary evidence of the connexion of the deserters with the vessels in behalf of which they were claimed, but was not equally ready to grant the extradition of deserters generally without any reference to the country to which they belonged. The Norwegians, he said, were particularly anxious that the ground of extradition should not apply to natives. I replied that such a limitation would render the article of no value whatever to the United States. The article, even changed as I wished it, would still be greatly in favor of Sweden and Norway, for, owing to the high wages paid in our service, desertion from it was of rare occurrence, while the contrary cause acted as a permanent inducement to desertion from Swedish and Norwegian vessels. The Count yielded the point, and he promised to send me the next day a new article modelled upon the thirty-first article of our treaty with Central America, with the only addition of a clause providing that if the deserters had committed any crimes or misdemeanors their extradition was to be stayed until the tribunal charged with their case should have given its sentence and the sentence been executed. After having thus disposed of the subject of deserters, we discussed that of quarantine. To the article treating of it the Count wished the addition of a paragraph somewhat to this effect: "That the provisions of this article were not to be so understood as to exempt vessels from the effect of the other health regulations in force in the countries where they arrive." Seeing that such a clause would render the whole article a useless appendage to the treaty, I expressed an opinion to that effect. The Count said that the addition had been asked by the deputies of Norway in consequence of the difference which existed between the quarantine regulations of their country and those of Sweden. I inquired in what consisted the difference; and on learning that, besides the conditions imposed upon vessels by our article, the Norwegians further required that the vessels should not on the passage have communicated with a vessel from an infected place, I proposed to supersede the necessity of the desired paragraph, that this additional condition should be inserted in the body of the article. The Count consented to this, and the life of the article was saved. On coming to the fifteenth article of the Count's project, which continues in vigor certain articles of the treaty of 1783, I handed to the Count the draught of a clause which I was desirous, in conformity to the views developed at the last conference, should be appended to that article: "Mr. Appleton propose que le 15e article finisse par les mots suivans: Et que les dispositions de l'article sept du traité de Paris du trois Avril, 1783, mentionné ci-dessus, ne seront point applicables aux propriétés appartenant à des citoyens ou sujets de Puissances qui ne reconnoitroient pas les principes sur lequel il est basé." I hoped, I said, that so cursory a notice of the article which we wished to restrict would not be liable to the objections he alluded to at our last meeting. The Count looked at me with an air of incredulity, and said it would not do. On reflecting upon the subject, he was more and more confirmed in the ideas he had expressed. The gentlemen (meaning Counsellor Wirsen and the president of the Board of Trade, Scogman, who have been his advisers during the negotiation,) he added, shared all his repugnance to touch the old treaty; he would frankly own to me that on subjects of this kind Sweden could not be too cautious. It was to no purpose that I repeated that caution had dictated my proposal as much as a desire that the principle of "free ships making free goods" should not be perverted to its own destruction by operating in favor of those who opposed it. The determination of this Government appeared to be made up to leave things as they were, and we proceeded to another subject. Having omitted, in the article of ratification furnished in my first project, to allude to the advice and consent of the Senate, the corresponding article in the Count's project was now, at my request, so altered as to make the President's ratification depend upon the advice and consent of the Senate, as it does in all our treaties. Nothing now remained but to arrange an article for the exception of the trade with Finland from the general provisions of the treaty. The project of one was presented by the Count. It is herewith enclosed, (No. 5.) It did not altogether please me, but might still have been admitted had it not left a lacune for which the Count proposed to provide by the insertion in the treaty of a new article of a general nature, which I thought it my duty to refuse. A copy of this article is also enclosed, (No. 6.) As both of these articles were grounded upon the stipulations of the additional act of the treaty of Fredricshamn, I have thought it proper to furnish you also with a copy of the said act under No. 7. You will see that, besides reserving special advantages to the trade between Sweden and Finland in vessels of the two countries, it secures to the tallow and candles of Russia a preference over like articles brought to Sweden from any other place, in compensation of a similar favor accorded to the herring, stockfish, and red lead of Sweden and Norway in Russia. The Count of Wetterstedt stated that it was the intention of this Government to obtain in the treaty now negotiating with Russia a renewal of these reciprocal advantages. Russia had already proposed that the favor accorded to her tallow and candles should be extended to her hemp and duck. It was to save the faculty of granting respectively such favors, founded upon proper equivalents, that he had now proposed the new article by which each of the contracting parties engaged not to grant any special advantages in commerce and navigation to any other nation which should not be made common to the other contracting party freely, if the grant was free, or on giving an equivalent, if the grant was conditional. To this I replied, that from the beginning, recognizing a particular character in the trade between Sweden and Finland, I had been willing to save from the general operation of the treaty all the ground already covered by the additional act to the treaty of Fredricshamn; but that I had no inclination to go a single step further. I deemed it my duty to oppose any exception to the general principles of the treaty, not commanded, as these were, by necessity, as tending to destroy, so far as it went, the equality which it was the function of those principles to establish. How much more must I resist the introduction of an article which was to open wide the door to all kind of exceptions, and which, if used to its full extent, would leave all the remaining general provisions of the treaty a dead letter. To grant or to seek favors in their commercial intercourse with other nations had heretofore been no part of the policy of the United States, and I would not suppose them disposed to change their course of conduct in order to exercise themselves the faculty implied in that article, or to qualify themselves to receive under it. Considering, therefore, that in its bearing upon the other parts of the treaty it could only prove injurious to the principle on which it was founded, and that it could not in itself be of the least practical benefit to my country, I proposed to supersede its necessity by adding to the exception already recognized in the separate article another, of which the tallow and candles of Russia should be the object. The Count yielded up his point, and it was agreed that he should produce a new separate article draughted in the sense of that to which I had already consented, but containing further a reserve in favor of the tallow and candles of Russia. At the close of this conference, in which all the difficulties in the way of a conclusion of the treaty had been surmounted, I expressed a wish that the invocation of the "Holy and Indivisible Trinity," placed at the head of Mr. Russel's treaty, might in the present be retrenched, as no longer suited to the great variety of religious opinions existing in my country in relation to the dogma which it consecrates. The Count did not approve of the change, but still promised to reflect upon it and to let me know the result. The next day I received a letter from him, a copy of which you will find enclosed, (No. 8,) inviting me to withdraw my proposal in relation to the invocation. Persuaded that this letter had not been written until after the Count had consulted the King upon the subject of it, and that it was therefore the personal wish of the King that it expressed, I thought it due to the spirit displayed by the King and his minister during the negotiation not to show myself inflexible upon a point to which, from respect to the prevailing opinion here, they were disposed to attach much importance, and I accordingly yielded, as you will see by the answer enclosed, (No. 9,) which I sent to the Count. With the Count's private letter I had received the new article he had promised me on the subject of deserters. Finding it conformable to the views I had expressed, it was, without any further change, inserted in the treaty.

Eleventh Conference.

On the 2d of July I had another conference with the Count to agree upon a new draught of the separate article. He produced an article which was still liable to some objections. Changes were made, and at last the article was adopted such as it is now inserted after the treaty.

Twelfth Conference.

At this conference, which took place on the 4th of July, we compared our copies of the treaty, and, after exchanging our full powers, signed and sealed the treaty.

J. J. APPLETON.

No. 1.

Memorandum handed to the Count of Wetterstedt on the 16th of May, 1827.

1°. Que la grande navigation (c'est à dire celle qui n'est point de cabotage) des deux parties contractantes sera traitée dans les ports lu'ne de l'autre, et dans ceux de leurs colonies, sur le même pied que la navigation nationale, tant pour la faculté générale d'importation et d'exportation, que pour les droits à payer sur les navires et les cargaisons dans l'un et l'autre cas.

2°. Que les produits du sol et de l'industrie de chacune des parties contractantes ne seront point assujéttis dans les territoires de l'autre ni dans ses colonies, à des droits plus hauts ou autres que ceux qui seront prélevés sur les produits de même nature venant de partout ailleurs.

No. 2.

Projet du Plenipotentiaire des Etats Unis d'Amérique.

Les Etats d'Amérique et sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège également animés du désir d'étendre et de consolider les relations commerciales qui subsistent entre leurs territoires respectifs, et convaincus que ce but ne sauroit être mieux rempli qu'en les plaçant sur la base libérale d'une parfaite egalité et réciprocité, sont convenus en conséquence d'entrer en négociation pour un nouveau traité de commerce et de navigation, et ont nommé à cet effet des plenipotentiaires savoir:

* * * * * * * * * * * *

Lesquels, après avoir échangé leurs pleins pouvoirs respectifs trouvés en bonne et due forme, ont arrêté les articles suivans:

ARTICLE 1. Les citoyens et sujets de chacune des deux hautes parties contractantes pourront librement fréquenter toutes les côtes et territoires de l'autre, y résider et commercer en toute espèce de produits et de marchandises, y former des établissemens industriels et autres, et y jouiront de tous les droits, privilèges et exemptions relativement au commerce, à la navigation et à l'industrie dont jouissent ou jouiront les nationaux, à charge de se soumettre aux lois et aux reglemens auxquels ceux-ci sont assujétis.

Il est entendu, cependant, que le présent article n'est point applicable à la navigation de côte ou de cabotage d'un port des Etats Unis à un autre port desdits Etats, ni à la navigation d'un port de Suède ou de Norvège à un autre, ni à celle entre ces deux derniers pays, que chacune des deux hautes parties contractantes se réserve.

ARTICLE 2. Les bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens et ceux de l'ile St. Barthelemy qui arriveront sur leur lest ou chargés dans les ports des Etats Unis d'Amérique, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, seront traités à leur entrée, pendant leur sejour et à leur sortie sur le même pied que les bâtimens nationaux venant du même lieu, par rapport aux droits de tonnage, de fanaux, de pilotage et de port, ainsi qu'aux vacations des officiers publics et à toute autre droit ou charge de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques.

Et réciproquement les bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique qui arriveront sur leur lest ou chargés dans les ports de Suède et de Norvège, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, seront traités, à leur entrée, pendant leur séjour et à leur sortie sur le même pied que les bâtimens nationaux venant du même lieu, par rapport aux droits de tonnage, de fanaux, de pilotage et de port, ainsi qu'aux vacations des officiers publics ou à tout autre droit ou charge de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques.

Il en sera de même à l'ile St. Barthelemy où les bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique qui y arriveront sur leur lest ou chargés, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, seront traités sur le même pied que les bâtimens nationaux venant du même lieu par rapport aux droits de tonnage, de fanaux, de pilotage et de port, ainsi qu'aux vacations des officiers publics ou à tout autre droit ou charge de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques.

ARTICLE 3. Tout ce qui pourra légalement être importé dans les Etats Unis d'Amérique par bâtimens desdits Etats pourra également y être importé par bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens ou de l'ile St. Barthelemy, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'importation avoit lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

Et réciproquement tout ce qui pourra légalement être importé dans les Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège par bâtimens Suédois ou Norvégiens ou de l'ile St. Barthelemy pourra également y être importé par bâtimens des Etats Unis, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, sans payer d'autres ou de plus hauts droits ou charges de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'importation avoit lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

Il en sera de même à l'ile St. Barthelemy où tout ce qui pourra être légalement importé par bâtimens Suédois ou Norvégiens ou de l'ile pourra l'être également par bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'importation avoit lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

ARTICLE 4. Tout ce qui pourra légalement, être exporté des Etats Unis d'Amérique par bâtimens desdits Etats, pourra également en être exporté par bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens ou de l'ile St. Barthelemy, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques que si l'exportation avoit lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

Et réciproquement tout ce qui pourra être légalement exporté des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège par bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens ou de l'ile St. Barthelemy pourra également en être exporté par bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, sans payer d'aûtres ou plus hauts droits ou charges de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit perçus au nom du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'exportation avoit lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

Il en sera de même à l'ile St. Barthelemy où tout ce qui pourra en être exporté par bâtimens Suédois ou Norvégiens ou de l'ile pourra également en être exporté par bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens, particuliers quelconques, que si l'exportation avoit lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

ARTICLE 5. Chacune des deux hautes parties contractantes s'engage à ne donner dans ser achats, ou dans ceux qui seroient faits par des compagnies ou des agens agissant en son nom ou sous son autorité aucune préférence aux importations faites par ses bâtimens ou par ceux d'une nation tierce, sur celles faites dans les bâtimens de l'autre partie contractante.

ARTICLE 6. Les deux hautes parties contractantes s'engagent à ne pas établir sur la navigation entre leurs territoires respectifs, par les bâtimens de l'une ou de l'autre, des droits de tonnage ou autres de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, plus hauts ou autres que ceux qui seront établis sur toute autre navigation, excepté celle qu'elles se sont respectivement réservée par le premier article du présent traité.

ARTICLE 7. Il ne pourra pas être établi dans les Etats Unis d'Amérique sur les produits du sol ou de l'industrie des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège et de l'ile St. Barthelemy aucune prohibition ou restriction d'importation ou d'exportation ni aucuns droits de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, qu'autant que ces prohibitions, ces restrictions et ces droits seroient également établis sur les objets de même nature provenant de toute autre contrée.

Et réciproquement il ne pourra pas être établi dans les Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège sur les productions du sol ou de l'industrie des Etats Unis d'Amérique aucune prohibition ou restriction d'importation ou d'exportation ni aucuns droits de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit qu'autant que ces prohibitions, ces restrictions et ces droits seroient également établis sur les objets de même nature provenant de toute autre contrée.

Il en sera de même à l'ile St. Barthelemy où il ne pourra pas être établi sur les productions du sol ou de l'industrie des Etats Unis d'Amérique aucune prohibition ou restriction d'importation ou d'exportation ni aucuns droits de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit qu'autant que ces prohibitions, ces restrictions et ces droits seroient également établis sur les objets de même nature provenant de toute autre contrée.

ARTICLE 8. Toute faculté d'entreposer et toutes primes et remboursemens de droits qui seroient accordés dans les territoires d'une des hautes parties contractantes à l'importation ou à l'exportation de quelque objet que ce soit seront également accordés aux objets de même nature produits du sol ou de l'industrie de l'autre partie contractante et aux importations et exportations faites dans ses bâtimens.

ARTICLE 9. Les citoyens ou sujets de l'une des hautes parties contractantes arrivant avec leurs bâtimens à l'une des côtes appartenantes à l'autre, mais ne voulant pas entrer dans le port, ou, aprés y être entrés ne voulant décharger aucune partie de leur cargaison auront la liberté de partir et de poursuivre leur voyage sans payer d'autres droits, impôts ou charges quelconques pour le bâtiment ou la cargaison, que les droits de pilotage, de quayage et d'entre tien des fanaux quand ces droits seront perçus, sur les nationaux dans les nêmes cas. Bien entendu cependant qu'ils se conformeront toujours aux réglemens et ordonnances concernant la navigation et les places ou ports dans lesquels ils pourront aborder, que seront en vigueur pour les nationaux, et qu'il sera permis aux officiers des douânes de les visiter, de rester à bord et do prendre telles précautions qui pourroient être nécessaires pour prévenir tout commerce illicite pendant que les bâtimens resteront dans l'enceinte de leur jurisdiction.

ARTICLE 10. Il est aussi convenu que les bâtimens de l'une des hautes parties contractantes, étant entrés dans les ports de l'autre, pourront se borner à ne décharger qu'une partie de leur cargaison selon que le capitaine ou propriétaire le desirera et qu'ils pourront s'en aller lebrement avec le reste sans payer de droits, impôts ou charges quelconques, que pour la partie qui aura été mise à terre et qui sera marquée et biffée sur le manifeste qui contrendra tourjours l'énumération des effets dont le bâtiment etoit chargé; lequel manifeste devra être présenté en entier à la douâne du lieu où le bâtiment aura abordé. Il ne sera rien payé pour la partie de la cargaison que le bâtiment remportera et avec laquelle il pourra continuer sa route pour un ou plusieurs autres ports du même pays, et y disposer du reste de sa cargaison, si elle est composée d'objets dont l'importation est permise, en payant les droits qui y sont applicables, ou bien il pourra s'en aller dans tout autre pays. Il est cependant entendu que les droits, impôts ou charges quelconques qui sont ou seront payables pour les bâtimens mêmes doivent être acquittés au premier port ou ils romproient le chargement ou en déchargeroient une partie, mais qu'aucuns droits, impôts ou charges pareils ne seront demandés de nouveaux dans les ports du même pays, ou, lesdits bâtimens pourroient vouloir entrer après, à moins que les nationaux ne soient sujets à quelques droits ultérieurs pour le même cas.

ARTICLE 11. Chacune des deux hautes parties contractantes accorde à l'autre la faculté d'entretenir dans ses ports et places de commerce, des consuls, vice-consuls, ou agens de commerce qui jouiront de toute la protection et recevront toute l'assistance nécessaires pour remplir duément leurs fonctions, mais il est expressément déclaré, que dans le cas d'une conduite illégale ou impropre envers les lois ou le Gouvernement du pays dans lequel lesdits consuls, vice-consuls, ou agens commerciaux résideroient, ils pourront être poursuivis et punis conformément aux lois, et privés de l'exercise de leurs fonctions par le Gouvernement offensé qui fera connaitre à l'autre ses motifs pour avoir agi ainsi; bien entendu cependant que les archives et documens relatifs aux affaires du consulat, seront à l'abri de toute recherche être soigneusement conservés, sous le scellé des consuls, vice-consuls, ou agens commerciaux, et de l'autorité du lieu ou ils resideroient.

Les consuls, vice-consuls, et agens commerciaux ou ceux qui seroient dûmens autorisés à les suppléer auront le droit comme tels de servir de juges et d'arbitres dans différens qui pourroient s'élever entre les capitaines et les equipages des bâtimens de la nation dont ils soignent les intérêts, sans que les autorités locales puissent y intervenir, à moins que la conduite des équipages ou du capitaine ne troubleroit l'ordre ou la tranquillité du pays, ou que lesdits consuls, vice consuls, ou agens commerciaux ne requerroient leur intervention pour faire éxécuter ou maintenir leurs décisions. Bien entendu que cette espèce de jugement ou d'arbitrage ne sauroit pourtant priver les parties contendantes du droit qu'elles ont à leur retour de recourir aux autorités judiciaires de leur patrie.

ARTICLE 12. Dans le cas où quelque bâtiment de l'une des hautes parties contractantes aura échoué, fait naufrage, ou souffert quelqu'autre dommage sur les côtes de la domination de l'autre, il sere donné toute aide et assistance aux personnes naufragées ou qui se trouveront en danger, et il leur sera accordé des passeports pour retourner dans leur patrie. Les bâtimens et les marchandises naufragés ou leur produit s'ils ont été vendus seront restitués à leurs propriétaires ou ayant cause s'ils sont reclamés dans l'an et jour, en payant les frais de sauvetage que payeroient les nationaux dans les mémes cas. Et les compagnies de sauvetage ne pourront faire accepter leurs services que dans les mémes cas et après les mémes délais qui seroient accordés aux capitaines et aux équipages nationaux.

Les Gouvernmens respectifs veilleront d'ailleurs à ce que ces compagnies ne se permettent point de vexations ou d'actes arbitraires.

ARTICLE 13. Il est convenu que les bâtimens qui arriveront directement des Etats Unis à un port de la domination de sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège, ou des ports de sa dite Majesté en Europe, à un port des Etats Unis, et qui seroient pourvus d'un certificat de santé donné par l'officier compétent à cet égard du port d'où les bâtimens sont sortis et assurant qu'aucune maladie maligne ou contagieuse n'existoit dans ce port, ne seront soumis à aucune autre quarantaine que celle qui sera nécessaire pour la visite de l'officier de santé du port où les bâtimens seroient arrivés après laquelle il sera permis à ces bâtimens d'entrer immédiatement et de décharger leurs cargaisons; bien entendu toutefois qu'il n'y ait en personne à bord qui ait été attaqué pendant le voyage d'une maladie maligne ou contagieuse, et que la contrée d'où lesdits bâtimens viendroient ne fût pas à cette époque si généralement infectée ou suspecte, qu'on ait rendu, avant leur arrivée, une ordonnance d'après laquelle tous les bâtimens venant de cette contrée seroient regardés comme suspects et en conséquence assujéttis à une quarantaine.

ARTICLE 14. Les articles deux, cinq, six, sept, huit, neuf, dix, onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize, dix-sept, dix-huit, dix-neuf, vingt-un, vingt-deux, vingt-trois, et vingt-cinq du traité d'amitié et de commerce conclu à Paris le trois Avril, 1783, par les plenipotentiaires des Etats Unis d'Amérique et de sa Majesté le Roi de Suède, ainsi que les articles séparés un, deux, quatre, et cinq, qui furent signés le même jour par les mêmes plenipotentiaires sont remis en vigueur et rendus applicables à tous les pays sous la domination des hautes parties actuellement contractantes, et auront la méme force et valeur que s'ils etoient insérés textuellement dans le present traité. Bien entendu que les stipulations contenues dans les articles précités seront toujours censées ne rien changer aux conventions conclues, de part et d'autre, avec d'autres nations dans l'intervalle écoulé entre l'expiration dudit traité de 1783, et la remise en vigueur desdits articles par le traité de commerce et de navigation conclu par les hautes parties actuellement contractantes à Stockholm le 4 Septembre, 1816.

ARTICLE 15. Vu l'elorgnement des pays respectifs des deux hautes parties contractantes et l'incertitude qui en résulte sur les divers événemens qui peuvent avoir lieu, il est convenu qu'un bâtiment marchand appartenant à l'une d'elles qui se trouveroit destiné pour un port supposé bloqué au moment du départ de ce bâtiment ne sera cependant pas capturé ou condamné pour avoir essayé une première fois d'entrer dans ledit port, à moins qu'il ne puisse être prouvé que ledit bâtiment avoit puet dû apprendre en route que l'état de blocus de la place en question duroit encore: mais les bâtimens qui, après avoir été renvoyés une fois essayeroient pendant le méme voyage d'entrer une seconde fois dans le méme port bloqué durant la continuation de ce blocus se trouveront, alors sujets à être détenus et condamnés.

ARTICLE 16. Le présent traité sera en vigueur pendant années a partir du jour de l'échange des ratifications qui aura lieu à Washington dans l'espace de neuf mois ou plutôt s'y faire se peut, et si avant l'expiration de —— années l'une ou l'autre des hautes parties contractantes n'avoit pas annoncé à l'autre, par une notification officielle, son intention d'enfaire cesser l'effet, ce traité restera obligatoire une année ou delà, et ainsi ensuite, jusqu' à l'expiration des douze mois qui suivront une semblable notification à quelqu' époque qu'elle ait lieu.

Modifications proposées par le Plénipotentiaire des Etats Unis d'Amérique à la conference du 22 Juin, 1827.

ARTICLE 1.

Les citoyens et sujets de chacune des deux haute parties contractantes pourront librement fréquenter les territoires de l'autre, y résider et commercer en toute espèce de produits et marchandises et y jouiront de tous les droits privilèges et exemptions relativement au commerce dont jouissent ou jouiront

Contre-projet de Traité présenté le 20 Juin, 1827, par le Plénipotentiaire de sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège.

Sa Majesté le Roi de Suède et de Norvège et les Etats Unis d'Amérique, également animés du désir d'étendre et de consolider les relations commerciales, qui subsistent entre leurs territoires respectifs, et convaincus, que ce but ne saurait étre mieux rempli, qu'en les plaçant sur la base d'une parfaite égalité et réciprocité, sont convenus, en conséquence, d'entrer en négociation pour un nouveau traité de commerce et de navigation, et ont nommé, à cet effet des plenipotentiaires, savoir:

* * * * * *
* * * * * *

lesquels, après avoir échangé leurs pleins pouvoirs, trouvés en bonne et dûe forme, ont arrété les articles suivans:

les nationaux, à charge de se soumettre aux lois et aux réglemens auxquels ceux-ci sont ou seront assujétis.

ARTICLE 2.

ARTICLE 1. Les bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, qui arriveront sur leur lest ou chargés dans les ports des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, serent traités à leur entrée, pendant leur séjour et à leur sortie, sur le même pied que les bâtimens nationaux venant du méme lieu, par rapport au droit de tonnage, de fanaux, de pilotage et de port, ainsi qu'aux vacations des officiers publics, ou à tout autre droit au charge, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques.

Et réciproquement, les bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens et ceux de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, qui arriveront sur leur lest ou chargés dans les ports des Etats Unis d'Amérique, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, seront traités à leur entrée, pendant leur séjour et à leur sortie, sur le méme pied que les bâtimens nationaux, venant du méme lieu, par rapport aux droits de tonnage, de fanaux, de pilotage et de port, ainsi qu'aux vacations des officiers publics et à tout autre droit ou charge, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques.

ARTICLE 3.

* Supprimer le mot des

ARTICLE 2. Tout ce qui pourra légalement étre importé dans les Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège par *des bâtimens Suédois ou Norvégiens ou de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, pourra également y étre importé par bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent, sans payer d'autres ou de plus hauts droits ou charges, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'importation avait lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

Et réciproquement, tout ce qui pourra légalement étre importé dans les Etats Unis d'Amérique, par bâtimens desdits Etats, pourra également y ètre importé par bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, ou de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, de quelque lieu qu'ils viennent sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales, ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'importation avoit lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

†Supprimer ce paragraphe.

† Il est entendu toute fois, que par exception spéciale l'importation du sel sur des bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, dans les ports du Royaume de Suède, et réciproquement dans ceux des Etats Unis d'Amérique sur des bâtimens Suédois ne jouira pas des avantages généraux, ci-dessus mentionnés, et restera assujetie aux réglemens jusqu'ici existans.

ARTICLE 4.

ARTICLE 3. Tout ce qui pourra légalement étre exporté des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, par bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, ou de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, pourra également en étre exporté par bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom ou au profit du Gouvernement, des administrations locales, ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'exportation avoit lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

Et réciproquement, tout ce qui pourra légalement étre exporté des Etats Unis d'Amérique, par bâtimens desdits Etats, pourra également en étre exporté par bâtimens Suédois et Norvégiens, ou de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, sans payer d'autres ou plus hauts droits ou charges, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, perçus au nom, ou au profit, du Gouvernement, des administrations locales, ou d'etablissemens particuliers quelconques, que si l'exportation avoit lieu en bâtimens nationaux.

ARTICLE 5.

* Ometre le reste de l'article.

ARTICLE 6.

Substituer 2, 3, et 4, à 1, 2, et 3.

ARTICLE 7.

ARTICLE 8.

Mettre 6e article.

ARTICLE 9.

†Ometere les mots souliguér et y substituer les suivans: de la colonie de St. Barthelemy ou de tout autre endroit, quand l'importation ou exportation aura lieu dans ou hors les Royaumes de Suèdes et de Norvège; ou provenant de ces Royaumes ou de tout autre endroit quand l'importation ou l'exportation aura lieu dans hors la colonie de St. Barthelemy.

Placer les restrictions après les prohibitions.

ARTICLE 10.

ARTICLE 11.

ARTICLE 4. Les stipulations des trois articles précédens, sont dans toute leur plénitude, applicables aux bâtimens des Etats Unis d'Amérique, qui serendront, chargés ou non chargés, dans la colonie de St. Barthelemy aux Indes Occidentales, soit des ports des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, soit de tout autre lieu quelconque, ou qui sortiront de la dite colonie, chargés ou non chargés pour se rendre, soit en Suède ou Norvège soit en tout autre lieu quelconque; et * il est expressement entendue que l'exception stipulée, dans l'article 2 du présent traité à l'égard de l'importation du sel, dans les ports du Royaume de Suède ne s'etendra point à l'ile de St. Barthelemy.

ARTICLE 5. I'l est expressément entendu, que les articles précedens 1, 2, et 3, ne sont point applicables à la navigation de côte ou de cabotage d'un port des Royaumes de Suède ou de Norvège à un autre, ou à celle entre ces deux derniers pays; ni à la navigation d'un port des Etats Unis d'Amérique à un autre port desdits Etats, navigation que chacune des deux hautes parties contractantes se réserve.

ARTICLE 6. Chacune des deux hautes parties contractantes s'engage à ne donner dans ses achats, ou dans ceux, qui seraient faits par des compagnies ou des agens agissant en son nom, ou sous son autorité, aucune préférence aux importations faites par ses bâtimens ou per ceux d'une nation tierce, sur celles faites dans les bâtimens de l'autre partie contractante.

ARTICLE 7. Les deux hautes parties contractantes s'engagent à ne pas établir sur la navigation entre leurs territoires respectifs, par les bâtimens de l'une ou de l'autre, des droits de tonnage ou autres, de quelque espèce ou dénomination, que ce soit, plus hauts ou autres, que ceux que seront établis sur toute autre navigation, excepté, celle qu'elles se sont respectivement reservée, par le 5e article du présent traité.

ARTICLE 8. Il ne pourra pas étre établi dans les Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège, ni dáns l'ile de St. Barthelemy sur les productions du sol ou de l'industrie des Etats Unis d'Amérique, aucune prohibition ou restriction d'importation ou d'exportation, ni aucuns droits, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, qu'autant que ces prohibitions, ces restrictions et ces droits seraient également établis sur les objets de méme nature provenant† de toute autre contrée.

Et réciproquement, il ne pourra par étre établi dans les Etats Unis d'Amérique sur les productions du sol ou de l'industrie des Royaumes de Suède et de Norvège et de l'ile de St. Barthelemy, aucune prohibition ou restriction d'importation ou d'exportation ni aucuns droits, de quelque espèce ou dénomination que ce soit, qu'autant que ces restrictions ces prohibitions et ces droits seraient également établis sur les objets de méme nature provenant de toute autre contrée.

ARTICLE 9. Toute faculté d'éntrépôt, et toutes primes et remboursemens de droits, qui seraient accordés dans les territoires d'une des hautes parties contractantes, à l'importation ou à l'exportation de quelque objet que ce soit, seront également accordés aux objets de méme nature, produits du sol ou de l'industrie de l'autre partie contractante et aux importations et exportations, faites dans ses bâtimens.

ARTICLE 10. Les sujets ou citoyens de l'une des hautes parties contractantes arrivant avec leurs bâtimens à l'une des côtes appartenant à l'autre, mais ne voulant pas entrer dans le port, ou après y étre entrés, ne voulant décharges aucune partie de leur cargaison, auront la liberté departir et de poursuivre leur voyage sans payer d'autres droits, impôts ou charges quelconques pour le bâtiment ou la cargaison, que les droits de pilotage, de quayage et d'entretien de fanaux, quand ces droits sont perçus sur les nationaux dans les mémes cas. Bien entendu cependant qu'ils se conformeront toujours and regle-mens et ordonnances concernant la navigation et les places ou ports dans lesquels ils pourront aborder, qui sont ou seront en vigueur pour les nationaux, et qu'il sera permis aux officiers des douánes de les visiter, de rester à bord et de prendre telles precautions, qui pourraient étre necessaires pour prévenir tout commerce illicite pendant que les bátimens resteront dans l'enceinte de leur jurisdiction.

ARTICLE 12.

ARTICLE 11. Il est aussi convenu que les bátimens de l'une des hautes parties contractantes, ètant entrés dans les ports de l'autre, pourront se borner à ne décharger qu'une partie de leur cargaison selon que le capitaine ou propriétaire le désirera, et qu'ils pourront s'en aller librement avec le reste sans payer de droits, impôts ou charges quelconques, que pour la partie, qui aura été mise à terre, et qui sera marquée et biffée sur le manifeste, qui contiendra l'énumération des effets, dont le bátiment étoit chargé, lequel manifeste devra étre présenté en entier à la douáne du lieu où le navire aura abordé. Il ne sera rien payé pour la partie de la cargaison, que la bátiment remportera et avec laquelle il pourra continuer sa route pour un ou plusieurs autres ports du méme pays, et y disposer du reste de sa cargaison, si elle est composée d'objets, dont l'importation est permise, en payant les droits, qui y sont applicables, ou bien il pourra s'en aller dans tout autre pays. Il est cependant entendu que les droits, impôts ou charges quelconques, qui sont ou seront payables pour les bátimens méme, doivent étre acquittés au premier port où ils rompraient le chargement, ou en déchargeraient une partie, mais qu'aucuns droits, impôts ou charges pareils ne seront demandés de nouveau dans les ports du mème pays, où lesdits bàtimens pour raient vouloir entrer après, à moins que les nationaux ne sorent sujets à quelques droits ultérieurs dans le méme cas.

ARTICLE 13.

ARTICLE 12. Chacune des hautes parties contractantes accorde à l'autre la faculté d'entretenir dans ses ports et places de commerce, des consuls, vice consuls, ou agens de commerce, qui jouiront de toute la protection et recevront toute l'assistance nécessaire pour remplir duement leurs fonctions; mais il est expressement déclaré, que, dans le cas d'une conduite illégale ou impropre envers les lois ou le Gouvernement du pays, dans lequel lesdits consuls, vice consuls, ou agens commerciaux résideraient, ils pourront étre poursuivis et punis conformément aux lois, et privés de l'exercice de leurs fonctions par le Gouvernement offensé, qui fera connoitre à l'autre ses motifs pour avoir agi ainsi, bien entendu cependant, que les archives et documens relatifs aux affaires du consulat seront à l'abri de toute recherche, et devront étre soigneusement conservés sous le scellé des consuls, vice consuls, ou agens commerciaux et de l'autorité de l'endroit où ils résideraient.

